“The owners have claimed 15% solatium on the amount which may be awarded to them on the basis of agreed rate between them and the Bombay Municipal Corporation. It appears that the rate agreed to is inclusive of 15% solatium and, therefore, no solatium can be allowed on the agreed rate i.e. Rs. 4.25 per sq. yard. This rate is inclusive of 15% solatium.”

The Special Land Acquisition Officer, on the basis of this conclusion, rejected the claim of the claimants for solatium on the amount awarded to them. It may be mentioned here that the total compensation awarded by the Special Land Acquisition Officer was Rupees 6,34,713.10 ps. exclusive of solatium, regarding which the claim of the claimants was negatived as aforesaid.

3. In the reference before me, the only claim made by the claimants is that in addition to the compensation which has been awarded to them, they are entitled to the solatium at 15% as provided under sub-section (2) of S. 23 of the said Act. It was urged by Mr. Bhat that the agreement between the claimants and the acquiring body, namely, the Bombay Municipal Corporation, only pertained to what was the fair market value of the land acquired and in addition to the said market value, the Special Land Acquisition Officer was bound to award solatium to the claimants at the statutory rate of 15%. It was submitted by him in the alternative, that the aforesaid agreement could not, in law, be regarded as binding on the Special Land Acquisition Officer in fixing the compensation for the land acquired and it could, at best, only furnish good evidence as to what was the market value of the said land. It is submitted by Mr. Bhat that the agreement showed that the fair market value was Rs. 4.25 per sq. yard and in addition to this, the Special Land Acquisition Officer was bound to award solatium at 15%. It was, on the other hand, contended by Mr. Kanuga, the learned Government Pleader that under the agreement, the claimants had given up their claim for solatium and agreed to accept Rs. 4.25 per sq. yard as the compensation for the acquisition of the said land and, in view of this, the Special Land Acquisition Officer was justified in awarding the compensation to them only at the rate of Rs. 4.25 per sq. yard and rejecting the claim of the claimants to solatium. In order to appreciate these contentions, certain provisions of the Act and certain decisions have to be taken note of. Section 4 of the said Act deals with the publication of a notification declaring that the land in any locality is needed or is likely to be needed for any public purpose. Section 6 deals with the declaration of intended acquisition. Section 11 deals with the making of an award and provides for the inquiry into the measurements, value and claims and the award by the Collector. Section 23 deals with the matters to be taken into consideration in the determination of compensation by the Collector. A perusal of clause 1 of sub-section (1) of S. 23 shows that the market value of the land at the date of the publication of the notification under Sec. 4, sub-section (1) is one of the factors which goes into the determination of the compensation payable to the claimants, whose land has been acquired. Sub-section (2) of Section 23 runs as follows:

"In addition to the market value of the land as above provided, the Court shall in every case award a sum of fifteen per cent on such market value in consideration of the compulsory nature of the acquisition."

4. In M. Samiullah v. Collector of Aligarh, AIR 1946 PC 75, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council held that the Land Acquisition Officer, in awarding the amount of compensation under S. 11, is performing a statutory duty, a duty the exercise of which, in cases where land is to be acquired for a public purpose, concerns the public, since it affects the expenditure of public money. In assessing compensation, he is bound to exercise his own judgment as to the correct basis of valuation and his judgment cannot be controlled by an agreement between the parties interested. This principle laid down by the Privy Council has been cited with approval by the Supreme Court in Mathura Prosad v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1971 SC 465 (see para 18 of the report). The Supreme Court, in this decision, after approving the aforesaid principle, has held that an agreement formally reached between the acquiring authority and the claimant agreeing to a certain amount to be paid as compensation for the land acquired is good evidence of the market value of the land. The correct position would thus be that an agreement, such as the one before me, although it cannot be regarded as binding upon the Land Acquisition Officer in determining the compensation for the land acquired, can be regarded as good evidence of the market value of the land acquired at the relevant time.

5. I next come to the case of Surendra Nath v. State of Bihar, AIR 1962 Pat 406. One Indian Aluminium Production Company on 20-2-1944, entered into an agreement with the claimants to purchase several acres of land in the Ranchi District. The interest of that Company passed to the Indian Aluminium Company which repudiated the agreement and requested the Government for the acquisition of the said land. A notification under S. 4 of the said Act was issued in August 1944 and the land ultimately was acquired. It was held by a Division Bench of the Patna High Court that the prior private agreement, in respect of the land proposed to be acquired, between the parties, should carry more weight in determining the market value of the land under Section 23 of the said Act than a value calculated somewhat arbitrarily on the basis of the deeds of transfer in respect of pieces of land which show highly varying sale rates. The Division Bench further held that the Court is bound to allow the statutory compensation of fifteen per cent on the market value of the land under S. 23 (2) of the L. A. Act, in consideration of the compulsory nature of the acquisition.

6. Keeping in mind the principles laid down in the aforesaid decisions, it appears to me quite clear that the Spl. Land Acquisition Officer has definitely proceeded on an unwarranted basis in determining the compensation in respect of the acquisition of the land in question. It seems to be the settled legal position that an agreement, such as the one before me, although it furnishes good evidence of the market value of the said land, should not be regarded as binding on the Special Land Acquisition Officer in the determination of the market value. Curiously enough, in the present case, notwithstanding the said agreement, the Special Land Acquisition Officer has considered other sale instances and held that, taking into account all relevant aspects, the reasonable market value of the said land would be Rs. 5.50 per sq. yard; but, thereafter, he went on to hold that the value as agreed would have to be paid, namely, Rs. 4.25 per sq. yd. It may be pointed out that once he came to the conclusion that the market value of the said land was Rs. 5.50 per sq. yard, one fails to see how he could then hold that the value which would have to be paid was Rs. 4.25 per sq. yard. The award is, therefore, clearly erroneous. However, in the present case, the dispute is very narrow, because the claimants have not claimed any higher value than Rs. 4.25 per sq. yard in respect of the land in question, but merely claimed 15% solatium on the amount awarded to them. The question then is that, even if the agreement is to be regarded as best evidence of the market value of the land, what is market value as stated in the said agreement. In this connection, clause 2, the material portion of which I have already set out earlier, clearly shows that the market value of the said land including all interests therein has been computed at Rs. 4.25 per sq. yard. It is true that in the earlier recitals to which I have referred to Rs. 4.25 per sq. yard has been stated to be the value of the said land inclusive of all interests. Specific provisions of clause 2 of the said agreement leave no doubt that the value which was referred to in the recitals was intended to be "the market value inclusive of all interests in the said land". It is beyond dispute that a claim to solatium cannot be regarded as an interest in the land at all. In view of this, the submission of Mr. Kanuga that the figure of Rs. 4.25 per sq. yard included solatium, must be rejected. If that were intended, there was no reason to use the expression "market value" in clause 2 of the said agreement, which deals with the question of price. It could easily have been said that the compensation would be computed in respect of the said land at Rs. 4.25 per sq. yard or it could have been made clear that by the term "market value", what was meant was the market value inclusive of the claim to solatium. No such thing has been done in the present agreement. Hence the term "market value" can be regarded as no more than the fair market value exclusive of solatium. It was next contended by Mr. Kanuga that under the agreement, the claimants have waived their claim to solatium and hence they are not entitled to claim the same in this reference. In my view, this contention also must fail. As I have already pointed out, there is nothing in the agreement to show that the question of solatium was one of the items dealt with in the agreement at all. There is nothing, in my view, in the said agreement which, on a correct construction thereof, can amount to giving up or waiving the claim of solatium.

7. In the result, the claimants succeed in the reference. It is common ground that the figure payable to the claimants by way of solatium would be Rs. 95,667/-, if they are held entitled to solatium.

8. There will, therefore, be an order directing the Special Land Acquisition Officer to pay to the claimants a sum of Rs. 95,667/- as solatium.

9. The next question which has to be considered is whether the claimants are entitled to interest at 4 per cent per annum as claimed by them and from what date. Section 34 of the said Act states that interest is to be awarded at 4 per cent per annum from the time of taking possession of the land acquired, until it shall have been so paid or deposited. In the present case, the possession was handed over by the claimants to the Bombay Municipal Corporation even before the award was made. It is not in dispute before me that, normally speaking, possession would have been taken by the Special Land Acquisition Officer only after the award was made. The taking of possession referred to in Sec. 23 must be construed as the taking of possession by the authorities referred to therein. In these circumstances, I direct the Special Land Acquisition Officer to pay to the claimants the interest at 4 per cent per annum on the amount of solatium from 5-12-1970, being the date of the award, until payment or realisation whichever is earlier.

10. The Special Land Acquisition Officer to pay to the claimants costs of the reference. The fees of the claimants' advocates to be calculated in accordance with R. 606 of the High Court Rules (Original Side) irrespective of any work which might have been done in the reference prior to 1st Jan., 1977. Costs to be on the basis of one advocate.

Order accordingly.

ORDER:— This writ petition is filed by the tenant against whom a decree for eviction has been passed concurrently by both the Courts below on identical grounds.

2. The facts, though very few, are of quite a tell-tale character. For the sake of convenience, the parties will be referred to hereafter as the 'landlord' and 'tenant'.

(a) The suit premises consists of two rooms in a building called 'Sri Nivas' situate at 29, Prarthana Samaj Road, Vile Parle (East), Bombay. They admeasured 369 sq. ft. The premises were let out by the original landlord to the tenant about 40 years ago. The building in which the premises are situate is a ground plus one floor structure. The tenant had been paying Rs. 40/- per month as rent to the landlord.

(b) In the year 1969, the tenant booked a flat admeasuring 450 sq. ft. in a building being constructed by the 'Archis Co-operative Housing Society', at Mahant Road Extension, Vile Parle. The flat was booked by the tenant in the name of his son, who was admittedly a minor at the time of the booking. Admittedly, the amount of money for the purchase of flat was paid entirely by the tenant himself. It is admitted by the tenant that he got even the possession of the said flat in June, 1970.

(c) On 25-6-1970, original landlord Shri J. N. Belsare gave a notice to the tenant terminating his tenancy and demanding possession of the suit premises mainly on the ground that the suit premises were required by him bona fide for his personal occupation. On 8-7-1970, a reply was given by the tenant to the said notice denying the landlord's claim. On 26-7-1970, a letter was written by the landlord to the tenant almost by way of a rejoinder to his reply and in the said rejoinder, he mentioned the fact that the tenant had acquired suitable alternate accommodation, viz. the above mentioned flat in the Co-operative Society building where he could conveniently shift. It was stated in the said rejoinder that in the eviction suit that the landlord proposed to file against the tenant, the said fact would be relied upon as an additional ground for eviction. To this rejoinder-letter, a reply was sent by the tenant on 24-8-1970. What is stated in the reply is of some significance and relevance in this case. In the said reply, he did not deny the fact that he had acquired suitable alternate accommodation. Further, he did not deny the fact that the flat was, in fact, purchased by him. All that he stated was that the flat was meant for his son and not for himself. Having given this reply on 24-8-1970 after receipt of the second notice-cum-rejoinder dated 26-7-1970, the tenant hit upon a device which he no doubt thought to be extremely ingenious. On 12-10-1970, he made an application to the Society for transfer of the flat from his son's name to the name of his daughter and son-in-law. There is some dispute as to whether the application for transfer was made by the tenant himself or whether it was made technically by his son in whose name the flat was supposed to be standing. However, I will assume that the actual application for transfer was made not by the tenant himself but by his son. The tenant has, however, made no secret about the fact that after the construction of the building was completed in the year 1970, he himself got possession of the flat in June 1970. This clearly means that his son was a mere benamidar and the real owner of the flat was he himself. If that is the position, then the mere fact that the actual application for transfer was made by his son and not by himself is of no legal consequence whatsoever. The fact thus stands out that after receiving the notice for delivery of possession on the ground mentioned in S. 13 (1) (i) of the Rent Act, the tenant managed to have the flat in the society transferred to the name of his son-in-law. The actual transfer, however, has taken place as late as on 4-2-1973. This means that the transfer had been effected during the pendency of the litigation.

(d) The present suit was filed by the original tenant (landlord?) on 28-1-1971. The grounds for eviction mentioned were the landlord's bona fide personal requirement contemplated by S. 13 (1) (g) of the Rent Act and the fact that the tenant had secured suitable alternative accommodation, the ground mentioned by S. 13 (1) (l) of the Rent Act. After the filing of the suit, original landlord Shri J. N. Belsare died and his widow and two sons were brought on record as his heirs and legal representatives. The tenant filed his written statement (by way of points of defence) on 22-9-1971. The relevant point of defence consisted of a mere denial of the plaintiff's claim u/ss. 13 (1) (g) and 13 (1) (l) of the Rent Act.

(e) To complete the chronology of the event, it may be mentioned that it is long after filing of the written statement that the flat in question situate in the Co-operative Society Building was transferred by the Society to the tenant's daughter and son-in-law on 4-3-1973. It may be mentioned here further that although the flat now stands technically in the name of Gautams, the defendant's daughter and son-in-law, the entire consideration in respect of the flat has flown from the pockets of the defendant-tenant. It follows that either it is a case of benami transaction or it is a gift by the tenant to his daughter and son-in-law after he received the notice of eviction.

3. It is in the context of these admitted fact or facts found on record that the trial Court held that the defendant-tenant was liable for eviction having regard to the provisions of S. 13 (1) (l) of the Rent Act. The trial Court also found no reason to reject the evidence led by the plaintiff showing that the plaintiff had the first floor admeasuring 778 sq. ft. of area in his possession which was extremely inadequate for his grown-up and growing family. The Court, therefore, found that the plaintiff had established the bona fide character of his requirement vis-a-vis the suit premises. Further, having regard to the fact that the defendant-tenant had acquired the said flat in the Co-operative Society, the learned Judge also held that the question of balance of convenience had got to be decided in favour of the plaintiff-landlord. The plaintiff's suit for eviction was, therefore, decreed by the trial Court.

4. In appeal, filed by the tenant, the Appellate Bench of the Small Causes Court found it impossible to find any fault, legal or factual, in the judgment of the trial Court.

The decree passed by the trial Court was, therefore, confirmed by the Appeal Court and the tenant's appeal was dismissed by him. That's why the tenant has approached this Court in its jurisdiction under Art. 227 of the Constitution of India.

5. I have narrated the facts above and have mentioned that they are of a tell-tale character. The facts leave no room for doubt that it was precisely with a view to get over the difficulty about the provisions of Section 13 (1) (l) of the Rent Act that the tenant had managed to get a transfer of his own flat in the Co-operative Society's Building and put it into the possession of his daughter and son-in-law. His reply to the notice dated 8-7-1970 shows that he had purchased the flat for the sake of his son. This means that the flat belonged to himself, but he had proposed to keep it at the disposal of his son; but it is evident that he had a guilty mind and hence what he has actually done is that he forgot everything about the future needs of his growing son. The moment he received notice from his landlord on 26-7-1970, he stealthily managed to have the flat transferred to the name of his daughter and son-in-law. He has admitted that he himself got possession of the flat in June 1970, but still he manoeuvred to transfer the possession to his daughter and son-in-law. It cannot be contended, and, in fact, it has not been contended, that his son-in-law and his married daughter, were ever the members of the petitioner's family as such. It is, therefore, nobody's case that now the flat in the Co-operative Society's Building is being occupied by any bona fide members of the tenant's family. Even assuming that it was in possession of a bona fide member of the family, the fact remains that it belongs to the tenant himself. The legal title of the flat does not transfer itself by this convenient device of transfer of the flat in the name of some other person. This is what is noticed by the Courts below and hence both the Courts have held that so far as the conditions contemplated by S. 13 (1) (l) were concerned, they stand fully fulfilled in favour of the landlord in the instant case. Both the Courts have further found that the landlord's family is a growing family. Further, it is the tenant's own contention that the landlord's family is quite an affluent family. If that is so, their need for additional premises can hardly be construed to be devoid of bona fides. Both the Courts have recorded concurrent findings of fact in this behalf and I find no reason whatsoever to interfere with the same.

6. The only question then remains is as to whether the question of balance of convenience can be said to be tilting in favour of the tenant. Both the Courts have held that since the tenant is the owner of the other premises in the Co-operative Society's Building, it would not lie in his mouth to contend that balance of convenience should be seen in favour of the tenant and not in favour of the landlord. The suit premises admeasures 369 sq. ft. It just consists of 2 rooms. It is doubtful whether it is a self-contained flat. In any event, the other premises admeasures 450 sq. ft. and admittedly that is a self-contained flat. If that is so and if the fact stands established that the legal title of the flat vests in the defendant-tenant, it could hardly lie in his mouth to contend that greater hardship would be caused to him by virtue of a decree against him, than would be caused to the landlord by refusal to pass any such decree.

7. Mr. Morje, the learned Advocate for the petitioner-tenant, however, advanced a four-fold argument before me to contend that the concurrent decrees passed by both the Courts below are vitiated in Law. His first contention was that Issue No. 3 framed by the trial Court was framed in an erroneous manner. Issue No. 3 runs as follows :

"Does plaintiff prove that the defendant has acquired a suitable residence?"

According to Mr. Morje the wording of Section 13 (1) (i) does not admit of such wording for the issue.

I fail to see any justification for such contention. In the first place, substance of the ground relied upon by the landlord provided for him by S. 13 (1) (i) of the Rent Act has been sufficiently stated in the issue. It does not at all appear that the defendant-tenant ever made any grievance about the phraseology of the issue. My attention was not invited to any prejudice being caused to the tenant by virtue of the said phraseology of the issue. I repeatedly called upon Mr. Morje to point out to me as to when and where he had urged the said point in either of the Courts below. He was unable to throw any light upon that aspect. The point is nothing but a figment of his own imagination stemming from the inspiration dawning upon him at the time of the hearing of this petition in this Court. It is hardly necessary to deal with the point any further.

8. Next, it was argued by Mr. Morje that the lower Courts have misread the provisions of S. 13 (1) (i). According to Mr. Morje, the flat in the Co-operative Society's Building belonged either to the tenant's son or tenant's son-in-law. In either of the events it did not belong to the tenant and in any event it was not in his possession. If that was so, the provisions of S. 13 (1) (i), according to him, did not come into operation at all. In this connection, Mr. Morje tried to invite my attention to the other provisions of S. 13 (1) of the Act where, according to him, distinction is made between the requirements of the tenant himself and the requirement of the members of the tenant's family in addition or in the place of the requirements of the tenant. According to Mr. Morje if Sec. 13 (1) (i) refers to the acquisition of tenant alone, the acquisition by or possession of any member of his family of the alternative flat is of no relevance at all.

To my mind, this argument stems from the presumption that the flat in the Co-operative Society's Building booked by the tenant himself did not belong to him. Both the lower Courts have recorded the concurrent findings that the flat was, in fact, purchased by the tenant with his own monies. In fact, it is not disputed before me at all that the entire amount of the consideration of the flat came from the pockets of the defendant-tenant. All that is sought to be urged is that initially it was purchased in the name of the son and that subsequently it was transferred to his son-in-law. Nothing was brought on record to show even that the son-in-law has paid any consideration for the transfer of the flat. I do not for a moment suggest that even if such transfer of consideration was proved, the tenant's case would have been on a higher level of justification. But the absence of any such plea or proof takes the case beyond any pale of doubt. Fact just stares in the face that the legal title in the other alternative flat vested in the tenant at the relevant time. He tried to mislead the Court after the receipt of the notice dated 26-7-1960 by engineering the transfer of the flat to the name of his daughter and son-in-law. The contention of Mr. Morje, therefore, must be rejected.

9. Another feeble attempt was made to satisfy me that the flat, in fact, belongs to the tenant's son-in-law. But in view of the position stated above, I find it impossible to take the view that at the relevant time the legal title in the alternative flat vested in the son-in-law. Even the possession of the flat was with the tenant at all the relevant time, it was he himself who went into possession of the flat in June 1970 and evidently he delivered the possession of the flat to his daughter and son-in-law after he received the notice for delivery of possession from the landlord.

10. This brings me to the last contention urged by Mr. Morje inspired by the belief that it was supported by the judgment of a learned single Judge of this Court in Special Civil Appln. No. 299 of 1967 decided by Bal J. on 31st July, 1968. In that case, the tenant had purchased certain other flat which he subsequently sold. He thereafter received a notice from the landlord presumably on the ground of bona fide personal requirements as also on the ground mentioned in Section 13 (1) (i) of the Act. It was in the context of these facts that it was argued before this Court that the premises acquired by the tenant must be available to him for occupation at the date of the notice and on the date of the suit and must be continued to be available till the date of the decree. It appears that his contention was accepted by this Court with certain qualifications. Mr. Morje would want me to hold that the decision was applicable to the facts of this case; but what he forgot to notice in the said judgment is that while broadly accepting the above mentioned legal proposition, the learned Judge observed in so many words as follows:

"I may make it clear that different consideration may arise if a tenant had acquired possession of a suitable residence when the landlord gave him notice terminating his tenancy or when the suit was filed but dishonestly parts with the possession thereof with a view to defeat the landlord's claim." Evidently, it would not lie in the mouth of the tenant in such a case to say that the premises acquired by him are no longer in his possession. This is what Bal J. was driving at when he made the above observation. That observation squarely covers the facts of the present case. The decision relied upon by Mr. Morje is thus squarely against him so much so that the decision perhaps could have been said to have been given with the specific facts of the present case in mind.

11. Moreover, I have no doubt that the defendant-tenant has indulged in manoeuvring evidently with a view to throw dust in the eyes of the Court. I have my own doubt as to whether this Court should entertain his petition in exercises of its jurisdiction under Art. 227 of the Constitution. This jurisdiction is after all analogous to the equity jurisdiction and one who comes to equity must come with clean hands. It is difficult to find any cleanliness in the hands of the petitioner-tenant. I will, however, make it clear that I am restricting my decision not to the above aspect at all. I find that no defect is brought to my notice either in the conclusion arrived at by both the Courts below or in the reasoning of the Courts upon which the conclusion is based.

The petition, therefore, fails and the same is dismissed with costs. The rule earlier issued stands discharged.

Petition dismissed.

(A) Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act (24 of 1961), S. 91 — Dispute touching the business of society — Co-operative Housing Society — Bye-laws contemplating possession of flats by members except for temporary period due to some exigencies — Member required to leave Bombay due to exigencies of her husband's employment letting out flat on leave and licence basis — Dispute raised by member against licensee for possession of flat on husband's retirement — Is a dispute touching the business of the society, notwithstanding that the Society has joined the dispute on the member's undertaking to bear all litigation expenses. Where the Society constructs a building for housing its members, and the flats therein are intended for their occupation only, the Society is recipient of several concessions in the matter of allotment of plots, securing of the controlled building materials, stamp duty etc. The builders constructing buildings and selling flats as part of their business may not be recipient of all such benefits even though they are under a statutory obligation to form a co-operative society of such purchasers of the flats, to ensure achievement of the same object. The ownership of the flats in such cases vests partly in the society and partly in the members, who are entitled to the possession of the flats as an incidence of their membership and shareholding in accordance with the scheme of the bye-laws of such Society. The business of the Society in all such cases does not come to an end merely on construction of the building and putting the members in possession of the flats therein. The common problems created by co-existence of several members in a Society's building make the continuance of the supervision and intervention by the Society indispensable as also the assertion of its ownership whenever it becomes necessary in terms of the bye-laws. The provisions of the bye-laws requiring the members to remain in possession of the flats and permitting possession thereof by non-members only with the permission of the Society for a limited period, require constant supervision and interference by the Society to prevent their evasion. (Para 7)

Held, no doubt the plaint did not contain any express averment about the occupation of the licensee being in breach of any bye-laws. It was, however, expressly pleaded that the flats in the Society were intended (1) for the occupation of the members and (2) that the flat was given by the member to the licensee for occupation due to exigencies of employment of her husband. These averments, if found true, at the trial, could not but make the Society an interested disputant in the same manner in which the member seeking possession for her own occupation could be said to be ensuring possession of the flat by the member and eviction of the non-member could not but be held to be touching the business of the Society. The Society joining the dispute on the member's undertaking to bear the expenses by itself could not run counter to the existing interest of the Society in the flat and its obligation to ensure compliance and observation of the bye-laws and regulations in this behalf. The fact thus that a member happened to be a co-disputant or non-disputant turned out to be a beneficiary thereof even when he happened to be himself guilty of the breach of the bye-laws, could not make any difference whatsoever. The averments in the present case showed that occupation by the licensee was necessitated due to the exigencies of the employment of the member's husband and that such occupation was with the permission of the Society. This implied that the member herself was not guilty of any breach of the bye-laws. Breach by the member also could not be said to be an ingredient of the cause of action in every such case. AIR 1980 SC 374, Rel. on. (Para 12)

(C) Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act (24 of 1961), Ss. 93 (1), 152 (4) — Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Rules (1961), R. 76 — Decision in regard to 'satisfaction' u/s. 93 (1) about existence of dispute is of a prima facie nature — No notice to non-disputants is necessary at this stage — Such decision is neither final nor can it prevent the Co-operative Court from trying any issue as to dispute being covered by S. 91 or not. 1982 (1) Bom CR 186, Overruled.

Section 93 (1) consists of two parts: The first part requires the Registrar's "satisfaction" as to the dispute being covered by Section 91, by reference to the subject-matter and the parties involved. The second part requires him to decide if he would dispose of the dispute himself or refer it for disposal to the Co-operative Court. The decision on this point is always in favour of reference as he and his assistants can hardly get time even to read the plaint raising dispute for the first part of satisfaction. The section itself does not contemplate any notice to the non-disputants at this stage. The required "satisfaction" thus does not contemplate any trial of any issue as such, the disposal of the entire dispute with all its requirements and trappings being reserved for the subsequent stage. The stage of "satisfaction", on the face of it, is preliminary and contemplated "satisfaction" is of a prima facie nature. The next stage being of the decision either to try the dispute himself or refer the same for trial to the Co-operative Court, every aspect of the dispute remains untried at the stage of satisfaction including the truth of the averments made, which ultimately go to determine the jurisdiction. Requirement under R. 76 of recording decision and reasons for satisfaction is aimed merely at ensuring the application of mind by the Registrar and elimination of casual approach. Ordinarily, trial of the "dispute" should include trial of every aspect thereof including the issue of jurisdiction. This indeed is the rule, splitting of one case into two stages and trial thereof by two different persons being an exception. The section does not contain clearer words to that effect and it cannot be a matter of ready inference.

(Para 16)

Such a satisfaction and following the decision to refer the dispute for disposal, themselves not affecting anybody's rights in the same way in which affecting of rights is understood in the legal sense, any question of implying obligation to hear the "affected" parties cannot arise. The absence of provision of notice also is reflective of the same legislative intent. It is, therefore, difficult to see why any obligation to issue notice at this stage should be implied, when such satisfaction is not intended to affect anyone in any real sense, and issues involved therein ordinarily can be tried by the Co-operative Court as part of the trial of the dispute. Such notice is implied in the absence of express provision when there is a danger of a person being affected unheard. Any contrary view would involve trial within trial, resulting in unnecessary prolonging of the life of the litigation without any corresponding benefit and service to the cause.

(Para 17)

No doubt, under Rule 76, the word 'decision' and also the obligation to record the reasons under R. 76 do create an impression as if the "satisfaction" required under the first part of Sec. 93 involves the regular trial. However, a close examination of the Rule and its object would demonstrate how this could not be the intendment. In the first place, no rule can enlarge the scope of any section. The rule, therefore, cannot be understood to require any trial of any part of the dispute when the section, for the working out of which the rule is framed, itself does not contemplate it. The words "decision" and "reasons" in R. 76 shall have to be read down to bring them in conformity with the requirements of S. 93. Secondly, the recording of reasons and decision of "satisfaction" is intended to furnish proof of the Registrar having applied his mind. This is what the last sentence of the rule itself expressly indicates. Such a rule of proof or evidence can never be exalted to any substantive provision to require trial and override the provision of the section itself.

(Para 18)

Again the wording of S. 152 (4) is wide enough to suggest as if the "decision" as to "satisfaction" of the Registrar required before any reference u/s. 93 and recorded in compliance with R. 76, also is so final and immune from reconsideration by the Co-operative Court. Two factors, however, militate against any such conclusion. Firstly, the nature of the order is also a determining factor, in ascertaining if the legislature could have intended to make it so final. Under the scheme of the Act contemplated "satisfaction" is of a prima facie nature intended to be recorded at a preliminary ex parte stage merely by reference to the plaint raising dispute. An order made at this stage, on averments open to disproof at the trial of the dispute, could never have been intended to be final. Secondly, Section 91 (2) and S. 152 (4) co-existed in the statute for a long time. The legislature could not have felt the need to declare the Registrar's order u/s. 93 to be final u/s. 91 (2), had it intended to cover the same by sub-section (4) of Sec. 152. This is a conclusive answer to the reliance on S. 152 (4). Deletion of sub-section (2) from S. 91 by Act 27 of 1969 is clearly aimed at stripping "satisfaction" of its finality.

(Para 21)

To sum up, the "decision" in regard to "satisfaction" u/s. 93 is of a prima facie nature. No notice to the non-disputants is necessary at this stage. Such "decision" is neither final nor can it prevent the Co-operative Court from trying any issue as to dispute being covered by S. 91 or not. 1979 Bom CR 79 and ILR (1975) Bom 849, Refd.; 1982 (1) Bom CR 186, Overruled.

D. R. Dhanuka with J. P. Devadhar, for Appellants; V. K. Punwani (for No. 1) and A. R. Shinde (for No. 2), for Respondents.

DESHPANDE, C. J. :— Respondent No. 1 (hereinafter referred to as "the licensee") filed a Miscellaneous Petition in this Court under Art. 226 of the Constitution of India challenging the validity of "reference" of the dispute made by respondent No. 2, Deputy District Registrar, u/s. 91 of the Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act, 1960 (hereinafter referred to as "the Act") to respondent No. 3, the Co-operative Court, raised jointly by appellant No. 1, a Co-operative Housing Society and appellant No. 2 its member.

2. The disputant raised this dispute on 15th Sept., 1975, for possession of Flat No. 6, held by the member in the building owned by the Society, and compensation for its use against the licensee. The flat was purchased by the member from the builders in or about the year 1964 before the Society was incorporated in 1965 and conveyance of the building was executed in its favour. The member was required to leave Bombay due to the exigencies of her husband's employment and the flat came to be occupied by the licensee on leave and licence basis under an agreement dated 1st Sept., 1972. It was initially for 11 months with option to the licensee to renew it for further periods of eleven months twice. The husband retired from the service and the member required the flat in dispute for her and her family's occupation. The application raising the dispute did aver how the flats in building were intended for the occupation of members and how the restoration of possession was necessary for this purpose. This dispute was referred, as indicated above, on 17th Sept., 1975.

3. The licensee submitted her written statement before the Co-operative Court. Amongst other defences, she challenged its jurisdiction on two points. She firstly claimed to be the tenant of the member (1) on the true interpretation of the agreement and also (2) because of the licensee having become tenant with effect from 1st Feb., 1973 on the amendment of the Rent Act under Act No. 17 of 1973. The dispute thus was alleged to be triable by the Court under the Rent Act. She secondly alleged that the dispute, essentially being between the member and her licensee, did not touch the business of the Society to attract Section 91 of the Act. It was also alleged that the Society was an idle party, it having no interest in the possession of the flat and it having lent its name to the dispute merely to attract the jurisdiction of the Co-operative Court under Section 91 of the Act. It was also indicated that the standard rent fixation application was already filed by the licensee in the Court of Small Causes under the Bombay Rent Act.

4. At the instance of the licensee the question of jurisdiction was tried by the Co-operative Court as a preliminary issue without recording any evidence. The Co-operative Court held that on averments, the Society cannot be held to be an idle party, and as such the dispute did touch its business to attract S. 91 of the Act and it had jurisdiction to try the dispute.

5. The validity of this order was challenged in the Miscellaneous Petition in this Court. By an order dated 23rd April, 1980, Mody J. upheld the contention of the licensee and quashed the reference. The learned Judge held that the business of the Society to construct building and allot the flats therein to its members came to an end with the members being put into the possession thereof. The subsequent act of restoration of possession from the licensee to the member could not touch its business. Merely lending the name by the Society without indicating any breach of the bye-laws cannot touch its business to attract S. 91 of the Act.

6. Mr. Dhanuka, the learned advocate appearing for the appellants, contends that under the bye-laws, the Society is as much interested in the restoration of possession to its member, as the member himself or herself can be. It is a part of the business of the Society to ensure that flats in its building are occupied by the members, excepting when due to certain exigencies, the same are permitted to be occupied by strangers for some limited period. He drew our attention to para 12 of the plaint raising the dispute and expressly pleading that the building of the Society "is meant to house the members of the disputant No. 1 Society and no others". Mr. Dhanuka therefore, contends that mere omission to plead breach of bye-laws expressly should not be so fatal.

7. In our opinion, Mr. Dhanuka's contention is well founded. A dispute between a member of a Society and his licensee does not touch the business of the Society and does not, therefore, attract S. 91. A Division Bench of this Court in Kalawati Ramchand v. Shankerrao Patil (1974-76 Bom LR 718) holding so and the Full Bench judgment in Leong v. Smt. Jinabai G. Gulrajani (1981-83 Bom LR 299) : (AIR 1981 Bom 244) affirming the same deal with several points involved in such a case including when the Society can or cannot be held to be an idle party. Disputes filed after Kalawati's case are invariably raised by the Society and the member jointly against the licensee excepting cases where the Society feels that even the member is liable to be evicted. The disputants have not made any secret of the fact that the Society has become a co-disputant on the member agreeing to bear all the expenses of the litigation. This, to our mind, cannot make any difference whatsoever to the Society's interest in the dispute, if, in fact, it has such an interest. It is not disputed that the bye-laws of the Society do contemplate possession of the flats by members except for temporary period due to some exigencies. In all such cases, where the Society constructs a building for housing its members, and the flats therein are intended for their occupation only, the Society is recipient of several concessions in the matter of allotment of plots, securing of the controlled building materials, stamp duty etc. The builders constructing buildings and selling flats as part of their business may not be recipient of all such benefits even though they are under a statutory obligation to form a co-operative society of such purchasers of the flats, to ensure achievement of the same object. The ownership of the flats in such cases vests partly in the Society and partly in the members, who are entitled to the possession of the flats as an incidence of their membership and shareholding in accordance with the scheme of the bye-laws of such Society. The business of the Society in all such cases does not come to an end merely on construction of the building and putting the members in possession of the flats therein. The common problems created by co-existence of several members in a Society's building makes the continuance of the supervision and intervention by the Society indispensable as also the assertion of its ownership whenever it becomes necessary in terms of the bye-laws. The provisions of the bye-laws requiring the members to remain in possession of the flats and permitting possession thereof by non-members only with the permission of the Society for a limited period, require constant supervision and interference by the Society to prevent their evasion.

8. In a Division Bench judgment (decided by myself and Mody J.) dated 5th Feb., 1980 in Contessa Knit Wear v. Udyog Mandir Co-operative Housing Society (AIR 1980 Bom 374) this Court had an occasion to refer to this dual ownership of the society and the members, in such flats of the building owned by the Society, and its incidence. This is what is observed in paragraph 10:

"The occupation of flats (or blocks as the case may be) by several holders in one building held by such Societies raises some problems of such 'co-existence' inevitably giving rise to certain mutual rights and obligations requiring a machinery to regulate and enforce the same. Bye-laws to the above effect, involving some mechanism for enforcement are framed as a part of the process of the registration of such Societies. This necessarily involves an abridgement of their property rights in such flats. One such incidence of such 'co-existence' is the indispensable dual ownership; management and authority to enforce the obligation being vested in the Society, while right of occupation subject to the Bye-laws being vested in the member. Another incidence is the indispensability of restricting the right of occupation to the member himself, for whose occupation it is intended from its very inception and who alone is liable to comply with such obligations and as a corollary thereto, his disability to induct any third person therein, excepting with the permission of the society, in case of any temporary urgency. Yet another incidence is the restriction on his right of transfer of his interest in the society including the incidental right of occupation."

Para 10A of the judgment indicates how even the builders are under an obligation to form a society of the purchasers of the flats and execute a conveyance in respect of the building in favour of such society.

9. Earlier, another Division Bench of this Court had also an occasion to highlight the role of such a society in the affairs of the occupants of the Society building even after the flats are allotted to such members. In I. R. Hingorani v. Pravinchandra (1965-67 Bom LR 306), this is what the Division Bench (Chainani, C. J. and Gokhale, J.) has observed at page 311:

"The Regulations of both the societies, to which the buildings in question belong, contain a similar Regulation. Consequently the flats now in occupation of the petitioner could not have been given to them for occupation without the permission of the societies. The object of a co-operative housing society being to provide housing accommodation to its members, it is the business of the society to see that such accommodation is occupied by its members or by persons approved by it and not by unauthorised persons. Every member is bound by the rules, bye-laws and regulations of the society. In respect of the common amenities provided by the society he has to pay certain charges and expenses to the society. A housing society is, therefore, vitally concerned with the question as to who occupies the accommodation provided by it. A dispute in regard to the occupation of such accommodation is, therefore, a dispute connected with the business of such a society. In any case there can be no doubt that such a dispute will touch the business of the society." It is true that the ratio of this case has been partially overruled by the Supreme Court in the case of Deccan Merchants Co-operative Bank v. Dalichand (AIR 1969 SC 1320). The claim of the society to evict the non-members inducted in the building before its purchase by the society is held not to be touching the business of the society within its conception u/s. 91 of the Act. The ratio of Hingorani's case about the Society's claim to evict non-members inducted in the flats after its becoming owner, such as in the present case, remains unimpaired by the above Supreme Court judgment.

10. It is true that the plaintiff does not contain any express averment about the occupation of the licensee being in breach of any bye-laws. It is, however, expressly pleaded that the flats in the Society are intended (1) for the occupation of the members and (2) that the flat was given by the member to the licensee for occupation due to exigencies of employment of her husband. These averments, if found true, at the trial, cannot but make the Society an interested disputant in the same manner in which the member seeking possession for her own occupation can be said to be. Ensuring possession of the flat by the member and eviction of the non-member cannot but be held to be touching the business of the Society in terms of the ratio of the two judgments and several other cases decided by this Court.

11. Mr. Punwani, the learned advocate appearing for respondent No. 1, did try to distinguish the ratio of the judgment in Contessa's case (AIR 1980 Bom 374) on the ground that the disputant-Society therein was claiming possession both from the member and, the licensee, because of the breach committed after the cancellation of the member's membership on account of such a breach. The member and the licensee were both non-disputants. This, to our mind, cannot make any difference of substance to the ratio. The question whether the dispute touches the business of the Society or not, cannot depend on whether the membership is cancelled or whether the member is a disputant or non-disputant. It will depend on whether the occupation of the stranger happens to be in breach of the bye-laws or not. Nothing prevents the Society and the member joining their hands as long as the object is to ensure compliance with the bye-laws.

(see 1982-84 Bom LR 1, in this context). It is this breach and obligation to prevent it that touches the business of the Society and enables the Society to claim possession by invoking Section 91 of the Act. If para 10 in Contessa's case reflects the correct legal position, the Society, can be held to have real interest in the dispute even to ensure restoration of possession to the member and her continued possession of the flat. The Society joining the dispute on the member's undertaking to bear the expenses by itself cannot run counter to the existing interest of the Society in the flat and its obligation to ensure compliance and observation of the bye-laws and regulations in this behalf. The fact thus that a member happens to be a co-disputant or non-disputant turns out to be a beneficiary thereof even when he happens to be himself guilty of the breach of the bye-laws, cannot make any difference whatsoever. We must hasten to add that the averments in the present case show that occupation by the licensee was necessitated due to the exigencies of the employment of the member's husband and that such occupation was with the permission of the Society. This implies that the member herself is not guilty of any breach of the bye-laws. Breach by the member also cannot be said to be an ingredient of the cause of action in every such case.

12. Mr. Punwani then contends that the licensee had become the tenant, and the Court under the Rent Act, and not the Co-operative Court, can have jurisdiction to entertain the dispute. In this case, the Society and the member both are the disputants-claimants. The licensee does not claim to have become a tenant of the Society. The Society, no doubt, is claimed to have permitted occupation by the licensee. It is not known whether the terms of the agreement were also approved by the Society. Mere granting of permission to a licensee by itself cannot make the Society a party to the transaction. This apart, the averments in the plaint indicate grant of such permission by the Society only for the limited purpose and for limited period to suit the service exigencies of the member's husband. The Society itself not being a party to the transaction, the licensee cannot claim to be a tenant of the Society, even if the agreement of leave and licence is interpreted to be an agreement of tenancy or even if the licensee is held to have become a sub-tenant because of the amending provisions of the Rent Act enforced with effect from 1st Feb., 1973. At best, the licensee can claim to be a tenant of the member. The question whether a licensee of the flat held by a member in a Co-operative Society can or cannot be a tenant of the Society itself, did come up for consideration in the Contessa's case (supra). The point is discussed at great length. The Division Bench has held that in view of the housing schemes contemplated under S. 2 (16) of the Act, the Society can never be the landlord of the licensee inducted by the member. Nor permission of permanent tenancy is compatible with the basic structure of such housing societies.

13. It is true that under the ratio of this very judgment, a licensee can claim to have become a tenant of the member provided, the licensee is not of the exempted category contemplated under S. 5 (4-A) of the Rent Act. The definition of the word "licensee" in the said section excludes the licensee inducted in the premises to meet the service exigencies of the licensor. In the present social life, ordinarily, the wife is required to live with her husband and exigencies of the husband's employment become part of her life also. The plain averment that the licensee was inducted in the flat in dispute due to such service exigencies excludes her from the purview of the word "licensee" as contemplated under the Rent Act as also from the benefits of tenancy contemplated to be conferred on such licensees. It is not possible to accept the contention of the licensee to have become a tenant at this stage when the facts have yet to be investigated. The defence that here the licence agreement is, in fact, intended to be tenancy agreement also cannot be accepted without trial and proof.

14. Mr. Punwani then contends that in either case, the plaint suffers from misjoinder of parties and the Co-operative Court can claim to have no jurisdiction to try the dispute as long as the claim of the member to get possession from the licensee-tenant is excluded from its jurisdiction. As discussed earlier, firstly, this point can arise only after the trial, if it is found that the licensee is a tenant. Secondly, this question can be considered in its true perspective only at the trial and cannot be raised at this stage, when such points are not tried at all. Nothing also prevents the disputants or either of them from exercising their choice and getting one of them transposed from the array of disputants to the array of non-disputants to prevent the ouster of jurisdiction of the Co-operative Court.

15. Mr. Punwani then challenged the jurisdiction of the Co-operative Court on account of the reference itself being void. His argument is twofold: Firstly, that the reference order passed without any notice and any opportunity to the non-disputant to have her say is void. Secondly, that the order is made mechanically without any application of mind. No such point is raised in the written statement before the Co-operative Court though raised before the learned single Judge in a writ petition. Mr. Punwani contends that it was unnecessary to raise it before the Co-operative Court, the order of reference being final and the Co-operative Court being incompetent to go behind the reference order. He relied on the judgment of Jahagirdar J. delivered on 21st December, 1981 in the case of Mario Miranda v. Pilot Bunder Co-operative Society, (Writ Petn. No. 2541 of 1981*). The ratio of the judgment, no doubt, supports Mr. Punwani on all these points. The learned Judge has analysed the requirements of such reference in para 5 of his judgment by reference to Ss. 93 and 152 (4) of the Act and R. 76 of the Rules thereunder and upheld the contention to the above effect in an exhaustive judgment.

16. With respect, however, the view of the learned Judge does not appear to us to be correct. Section 93 (1) of the Act, so interpreted by the learned Judge, reads as follows:

"93 (1) If the Registrar is satisfied that any matter referred to him or brought to his notice is a dispute within the meaning of Section 91, the Registrar shall, subject to the rules, decide the dispute himself, or refer it for disposal to a Co-operative Court." This section consists of two parts. The first part requires the Registrar's "satisfaction" as to the dispute being covered by S. 91, by reference to the subject-matter and the parties involved. The second part requires him to decide if he would dispose of the dispute himself or refer it for disposal to the Co-operative Court. The decision on this point is always in favour of reference as he and his assistants can hardly get time even to read the plaint raising dispute for the first part of satisfaction. The section itself does not contemplate any notice to the non-disputants at this stage. The required "satisfaction" thus does not contemplate any trial of any issue as such, the disposal of the entire dispute with all its requirements and trap-pings being reserved for the subsequent stage. The stage of "satisfaction", on the face of it, is preliminary and contemplated "satisfaction" is of a prima facie nature. Several enactments contemplate such stages of prima facie "satisfaction" before the adjudicative machinery is set into motion. The next stage being of the decision either to try the dispute himself or refer the same for trial to the Co-operative Court, every aspect of the dispute remains untried at the stage of satisfaction including the truth of the averments made, which ultimately go to determine the jurisdiction. Requirement under R. 76 of recording decision and reasons for satisfaction is aimed merely at ensuring the application of mind by the Registrar and elimination of casual approach. Ordinarily, trial of the "dispute" should include trial of every aspect thereof including the issue of jurisdiction. This indeed is the rule, splitting of one case into two stages and trial thereof by two different persons being an exception. The section does not contain clearer words to that effect and it cannot be a matter of ready inference.

17. Such a satisfaction and following the decision to refer the dispute for disposal, themselves not affecting anybody's rights in the same way in which affecting of rights is understood in the legal sense, any question of implying obligation to hear the "affected" parties cannot arise. The absence of provision of notice also is reflective of the same legislative intent. We are, therefore, unable to see why any obligation to issue notice at this stage should be implied, when such satisfaction is not intended to affect anyone in any real sense, and issues involved therein ordinarily can be tried by the Co-operative Court as part of the trial of the dispute. Such notice is implied in the absence of express provision when there is a danger of a person being affected unheard. Any contrary view would involve trial within trial, resulting in unnecessary prolonging of the life of the litigation without any corresponding benefit and service to the cause.

18. Reliance is placed on R. 76 of the Rules introduced in 1973 to demonstrate that "satisfaction" is intended to have a trial. It reads as follows:

"76. Registrar's satisfaction regarding existence of a dispute.—

Where any reference of a dispute is made to the Registrar or any matter is brought to his notice, the Registrar shall, on the basis of the reference (if any) made to him in form 'P' and the relevant records and statements submitted to him, record his decision together with the reasons therefor whether he is or is not satisfied about the existence of a dispute within the meaning of S. 91. Such recording of decision shall be sufficient proof of the Registrar's satisfaction that the matter is or is not a dispute, as the case may be."

The word "decision" and obligation to record the reasons do create an impression as if the "satisfaction" required under the first part of S. 93 involves the regular trial. A close examination of the Rules and its object would demonstrate how this could not be the intent. In the first place, no rule can enlarge the scope of any section. The rule, therefore, cannot be understood to require any trial of any part of the dispute when the section, for the working out of which the rule is framed, itself does not contemplate it. The words "decision" and "reasons" in R. 76 shall have to be read down to bring them in conformity with the requirements of S. 93. Secondly, the recording of reasons and decision of "satisfaction" is intended to furnish proof of the Registrar having applied his mind. This is what the last sentence of the rule itself expressly indicates. Such a rule of proof or evidence can never be exalted to any substantive provision to require trial and override the provision of the section itself.

19. Strong reliance is placed on the ratio of the Division Bench judgment in Hingorani's case (1965-67 Bom LR 306) (supra). The ratio is based entirely on the wording of S. 91 (2) of the Act as it then stood. It read as follows:

"(2) When any question arises whether for the purposes of the foregoing sub-section, a matter referred to for decision is a dispute or not, the question shall be considered by the Registrar, whose decision shall be final." Section 93 obviously was required to be read with this provision. The conception of "satisfaction" and its content were required to be moulded to make it accord with the scheme of S. 91 (2) of the Act. The "satisfaction" was raised under this provision to the level of a decision. It was secondly declared to be "final". Thirdly, decision was left exclusively to the Registrar excluding the same from reference. It clearly indicated the legislative intent to make such a decision conclusive and binding even on the non-disputants, behind their back. The Division Bench had to imply obligation to give notice to the non-disputants for the trial of the issue involved before it became final and binding on them. As observed in the judgment itself (at page 310), all advocates had to concede to the need of such notice and adjudication. That this would result in anomalous splitting of the trial of the dispute" and inevitably but unnecessarily prolong the life of the litigation appears to have been present to the mind of the learned Judges. They, therefore, suggested suitable amendment in the concluding part of the judgment.

20. Section 91 (2) of the Act has been deleted by Maharashtra Act 27 of 1969 presumably in compliance with this suggestion. Any doubt on this point can be dispelled by reference to the Statement of Objects and Reasons published in the Maharashtra Government Gazette, Part V Extraordinary, dated 25th Mar., 1969. It expressly shows how such deletion was necessitated to overcome the ratio in Hingorani's case and eliminate the consequential delay. The "satisfaction" required to be reached under Section 93 now stands stripped of the finality and ceases to be of any binding nature. The Registrar's exclusive jurisdiction on this point also is now taken away which really prevented the Co-operative Court from trying it. Rule 76 is not a substitute for S. 91 (2). What is sought to be so eliminated by the legislature by expressly deleting sub-sec. (2) of Sec. 91 cannot be assumed to have been imported back by the executive by introducing R. 76 by requiring the Registrar to record "decision" and give "reasons". No "Rule" can ever be introduced to override any provision of the section. We have seen what the real object is. Reliance of Hingorani's case now thus appears to us to have been misplaced.

21. Reliance was also placed on the wording of S. 152 (4) of the Act. The section expressly provides for appeals against orders under certain sections of the Act. Orders under other sections are indicated to be subject to the revisional jurisdiction. All such orders are declared to be "final" subject to an order in such appeals and revisions. The wording of the section is wide enough to suggest as if the "decision" as to "satisfaction" of the Registrar required before any reference under S. 93 and recorded in compliance with R. 76, also is so final and immune from reconsideration by the Co-operative Court. Two factors, however, militate against any such conclusion. Firstly, the nature of the order is also a determining factor, in ascertaining if the legislature could have intended to make it so final. We have seen how under the scheme of the Act contemplated "satisfaction" is of a prima facie nature intended to be recorded at a preliminary ex parte stage merely by reference to the plaint raising dispute. An order made at this stage, on averments open to disproof at the trial of the dispute, could never have been intended to be final. Secondly, S. 91 (2) and S. 152 (4) co-existed in the statute for a long time. The legislature could not have felt the need to declare the Registrar's order under Section 93 to be final under S. 91 (2), had it intended to cover the same by sub-sec. (4) of S. 152. This, to our mind, is a conclusive answer to the reliance on S. 152 (4). Deletion of sub-sec. (2) from S. 91 is clearly aimed as stripping "satisfaction" of its finality.

22. Mr. Punwani relied before us not on Section 152 (4) but on the finality adverted to under Section 163 (3) of the Act. The section is aimed at ousting the jurisdiction of the civil and revenue courts as its marginal note indicates. Immunity from interference by the civil and revenue Courts in this context cannot cover immunity from adjudicative machinery created under this very Act itself for the trial of the very dispute. The object of S. 163 (3) is in a way really to ensure finality on the orders of the Co-operative Court subject to appeal and not to restrict the sphere of their operation. Reliance on both these sections is thus ill-founded.

23. Two unreported judgments of this Court point to the same view taken earlier. The learned Judge (Jahagirdar J.) has referred to the judgment of S. K. Desai J. dated 4th Aug., 1977 in Miscellaneous Petition No. 570 of 1975.* He has distinguished it on the ground that the powers of the Registrar to record satisfaction under S. 93 also were delegated to such Officer on Special Duty. Suffice to note that the ratio of this case, unlike in the case of the Co-operative Court, is not so expressly based on such a distinction. One of us (myself) was a party to the second judgment of a Division Bench dated 16th Dec., 1971 in Spl. Civil Appln. No. 1446 of 1971 (Smt. Chandra Chetanram Shivdasani v. Chander Shekar Sheth). This does not appear to have been brought to the notice of the learned Judge. The point, however, arose in that case incidentally and not directly.

24. It is true that the reference order contains admittedly two factual errors of clerical nature. It assumes the said "society" to be non-disputant and as if para 14 and not paragraph 12 of the plaint contains recitals about the cause of action. This betrays casual approach and is highly objectionable and is breach of the Rule 76. Its effect may be relevant in some other context but cannot by itself invalidate the reference. Invalidation results in the punishments of the litigants who have to face the agony of the prolonged trial and who have no control over the authors of the errors. Such errors can have no relevance, once it is found that the Co-operative Court itself can try the question whether the dispute is covered by S. 91 of the Act. To sum up, the "decision" in regard to "satisfaction" under S. 93 is of a prima facie nature. No notice to the non-disputants is necessary at this stage. Such "decision" is neither final nor can it prevent the Co-operative Court from trying any issue as to dispute being covered by S. 91 or not.

* Since reported in 1979 Bom CR 79.

 Since reported in ILR (1975) Bom 849.

25. We agree with the learned Judge that the Act should be amended and litigants be permitted to file their disputes directly in the Co-operative Court. The power of "reference" by the Registrar is a relic of the past when the Registrar himself could dispose of the majority of the disputes and was required to refer only a few of them for want of time. Today the Registrar and his aides are burdened with enormous administrative functions. Defective references demonstrate how they cannot find time even to comply with R. 76. This archaic provision has ceased to serve any purpose whatsoever. Authority to the Co-operative Court to receive the disputes directly would eliminate unnecessary litigation and also waste of time on preliminaries.

26. We accordingly allow the appeal, set aside the order of the learned trial Judge and direct the Co-operative Court to dispose of the dispute in accordance with law. Costs of both Courts, costs in the cause.

Appeal allowed.

(D) Transfer of Property Act (4 of 1882), S. 58 — Mortgage by conditional sale or sale with condition of repurchase.

The deed did not create, expressly or by implication, the relationship of debtor and creditor, nor was the amount paid by the transferee to the transferor made a charge on the land. There was no provision in the deed in regard to interest. Possession of the land was handed over to the transferee. Municipal taxes were made payable by the transferee. A period was stipulated, viz., five years, within which the transferor may purchase the land after making payment of the amount for which it was originally transferred.

Held, the statement in the deed that if the amount was not paid within the stipulated period the deed was to be treated as a permanent sale deed and the transferee could thereafter enjoy the land forever without the transferor and his successors claiming any ownership emphasised that the condition of repurchase was to operate only within the stipulated period and no further. These were clear indications of a sale with a condition of repurchase. (Paras 11, 13)

JUDGMENT:— This is a second appeal directed against the judgment and order of the District Judge, Ahmednagar sitting in appeal on the judgment and order of the Joint Civil Judge, Junior Division, Ahmednagar.

2. On 3rd May, 1950 the 10th respondent (the original 1st plaintiff) executed a deed in favour of one Madhav in respect of the land in suit. On 18th Nov., 1957 Madhav transferred the rights conferred upon him by the deed in favour of the 5th respondent. In 1957 one Sohanlal, the holder of a decree against the first plaintiff, purchased the land in suit in execution of the decree through a Court sale. On 13th June, 1958 the sale was confirmed. In 1966 the 1st plaintiff filed a suit for redemption alleging that the deed was a mortgage by way of conditional sale and that the mortgage amount had been repaid by virtue of the rent collected. The 5th respondent was impleaded as a defendant (the 5th defendant) in the redemption suit. He pleaded that the deed was a deed of sale with a condition of repurchase. In 1967 Sohanlal filed a suit for possession of the land making the 1st plaintiff and 5th defendant in redemption suit defendants to his suit. On 28th Nov., 1967 the appellant before me purchased the land from the original 1st plaintiff. He was thereafter impleaded as the 2nd plaintiff in the redemption suit. On 4th Nov., 1969 the redemption suit was dismissed, it being held that the deed was a deed of sale with a condition of repurchase. On 28th Nov., 1969 Sohanlal's suit was dismissed, reliance being placed upon the judgment dated 4th Nov., 1969 in the redemption suit. Sohanlal did not proceed further. Against the dismissal of the redemption suit an appeal was filed. In appeal a remand was ordered. On remand the trial Court held on 30th Mar., 1972 that the deed was a deed of sale with a condition of repurchase and that the sale in execution in favour of Sohanlal conferred upon him no title to the land. The trial Court, therefore, dismissed the redemption suit. The plaintiffs preferred an appeal. In the appeal it was held that the deed was a deed of mortgage by way of conditional sale but that the plaintiffs' title to the property had been extinguished by virtue of the sale in execution in favour of Sohanlal and the plaintiffs were, therefore, not entitled to redeem. Against the dismissal of the appeal this second appeal is preferred by the 2nd plaintiff.

3. It was contended on behalf of the only contesting respondent, the 5th respondent, that the finding in Sohanlal's suit that the deed was a deed of sale with a condition of repurchase was binding upon the appellant by reason of res judicata. The 1st plaintiff in the redemption suit (from whom the appellant before me claims title) and the 5th defendant in the redemption suit (the 5th respondent before me) were defendants in Sohanlal's suit. The point as to whether the deed was a deed of mortgage by way of conditional sale or a deed of sale with a condition to repurchase was in issue that was decided in that suit. There are, however, three reasons why the decision in Sohanlal's suit does not operate as res judicata against the appellant.

4. First, it is apparent from a reading of the judgment in Sohanlal's suit that the Court relied upon the judgment in the redemption suit of the trial Court of 4th Nov., 1969 to hold that the deed was a deed of sale with a condition to repurchase. That judgment in the redemption suit was effaced when the appeal Court ordered a remand. It cannot then be said that the decision in Sohanlal's case operates as res judicata against the appellant. Reference may be made in this connection to the judgment of the Privy Council in S. P. A. Annamalai Chetty v. B. A. Thorn- hill, AIR 1931 PC 263. The Privy Council held that no decree from which an appeal lay and had in fact been taken was final between the parties so as to form res judicata. Where an appeal lay and was taken the finality of the decree was qualified by the appeal and the decree was not final in the sense that it formed res judicata between the same parties.

5. Secondly, the conclusion about the character of the deed in Sohanlal's suit cannot be said to be based upon merits since the Court relied upon the conclusion arrived at on 4th Nov., 1969 in the redemption suit.

6. Thirdly, it will be noted that the finding in Sohanlal's suit that the deed was a deed of sale with a condition of repurchase was a finding adverse to the appellant, who was a defendant in that suit, but Sohanlal's suit was dismissed. The appellant had, therefore, no opportunity to appeal against the finding. The finding in Sohanlal's suit cannot then be said to be finally decided against the appellant and cannot operate as res judicata against him. In that behalf a decision of this Court in Bai Nathi v. Narshi Dullabh, (1920) ILR 44 Bom 321 : (AIR 1920 Bom 335), may be referred to. The Court said, "we think that the finding of the Court in the previous suit was not final, inasmuch as . . . there could be no appeal against it, because the decree was in favour of the party against whom the finding was recorded."

7. It was contended by Mr. Joshi, learned counsel for the 5th respondent, that it was not open to the appellant to seek to redeem the mortgage, assuming the transaction to be such, because it had been held in Sohanlal's suit that he had no equity of redemption. This is but another way of putting the same argument. It can be answered slightly differently. Sohanlal sought to establish his title to the land and obtain possession of it. His suit was dismissed. He went no further. It does not lie in the mouth of a mortgagee or his assignee (the 5th respondent) to set up title in another (Sohanlal) to destroy the mortgagor's or his assign's (the appellant's) equity of redemption. In that sense, once a mortgage always a mortgage. The 5th respondent obtained the land from Madhav, who obtained it from the 1st plaintiff under the deed. The 5th respondent is still in possession of it. If the deed is a deed of mortgage by way of conditional sale it is, in these circumstances, not open to the 5th respondent to plead that no equity of redemption exists.

8. It was urged on behalf of the appellant that, since the Court in first appeal had held the deed to be a deed of mortgage by way of conditional sale, it was not open to the 5th respondent to challenge that finding before me because he had not filed cross-objections. It is well settled that a respondent to an appeal may without filing cross-objections support the decree on grounds decided against him by the lower Court. It is, therefore, open to the 5th respondent to plead here that the deed is a deed of sale with a condition of repurchase and not a deed of mortgage by way of conditional sale.

9. The principal question, then, to be decided in this second appeal is whether the deed is a deed of mortgage by way of conditional sale or a sale with a condition of repurchase. The deed was not on record. Counsel have submitted an agreed translation of it upon which, by consent, I place reliance. The deed, as translated, reads thus :

"Conditional sale-deed of house in Nagpur (Nagar?) city for Rs. 2,000/- dated 3rd May, 1950.

M. B. Saidare	...	Executor
K. M. Kothar	...	Executant

Received Rs. 375/- before eight days Rs. 1,625/- I will receive (Sixteen hundred twentyfive only) before the Sub-Registrar, Anagar.

Total Rs. 2,000/- Received Rupees Two thousand for the marriage of daughter and family expenses.

In exchange thereof, the house which was inherited by me as my ancestral property as my share which is without any incumbrance : description

As per the said above description the house and the land on which it is constructed and the things appurtenant thereto is sold to you conditionally for five years. The same has been given completely in your possession. Hence till the stipulated limit you should pay the municipal tax and enjoy the property, within that period I will repurchase the property after making payment. If the amount is not paid within stipulated period this deed will be treated as permanent sale deed. Thereafter you should enjoy the property forever so that myself and my successors will not claim any ownership."

10. For construing the deed reliance was placed upon the judgments of the Supreme Court in Chunchun Jha v. Ebadat Ali, AIR 1954 SC 345 and Bhaskar Waman Joshi v. Shrinarayan Rambilas Agarwal, AIR 1960 SC 301. In the former judgment it was held that each such question has to be decided upon its own facts and that the intention of the parties as shown by the document was the determining factor. Prima facie, an absolute conveyance, containing nothing to show that the relation of debtor and creditor was to exist between the parties, did not cease to be an absolute conveyance and become a mortgage merely because the vendor stipulated that he had a right to repurchase. If the sale and the agreement to repurchase were embodied in separate documents then the transaction could not be a mortgage, whether the documents were contemporaneously executed or not. But the converse did not hold good. If the condition of repurchase was embodied in the document that effected or purported to effect the sale, then it was a matter for construction which was meant. In the later judgment the Supreme Court said that the question whether by the incorporation of a condition of sale a transaction ostensibly of sale could be regarded as a mortgage was one of the intention of the parties to be gathered from the language of the deed interpreted in the light of the surrounding circumstances. The definition of a mortgage by conditional sale postulated the creation by the transfer of a relation of mortgagor and mortgagee, the price being charged on the property conveyed. In a sale coupled with an agreement to reconvey there was no relation of debtor and creditor nor was the price charged upon the property conveyed, but the sale was subject to an obligation to retransfer the property within the period specified. What distinguished the two transactions was the relationship of debtor and creditor, the transfer being security for the debt.

11. In the instant case, the deed does not create, expressly or by implication, the relationship of debtor and creditor, nor is the amount paid by the transferee to the transferor made a charge on the land. There is no provision in the deed in regard to interest. Possession of the land is handed over to the transferee. Municipal taxes are made payable by the transferee. A period is stipulated, viz., five years, within which the transferor may purchase the land after making payment of the amount for which it was originally transferred. The statement in the deed that if the amount was not paid within the stipulated period the deed was to be treated as a permanent sale deed and the transferee could thereafter enjoy the land forever without the transferor and his successors claiming any ownership emphasises that the condition of repurchase was to operate only within the stipulated period and no further. These, as I see it, are indications of a sale with a condition of repurchase.

12. Mr. Dhorde placed reliance upon the recital in the deed that the amount had been received by the transferor for the marriage of his daughter and family expenses. He submitted that this was indicative that the transaction was a transaction of mortgage by way of conditional sale. This recital is not indicative either way. A man may, when he is in need of money, sell his property or he may mortgage it. Mr. Dhorde also submitted that it was the appellant's case that the property had been transferred at an under-valuation, which was indicative of a mortgage, but the trial Court rejected that contention. It had done so quite rightly since it was sought to be established by nothing more than the appellant's bare word.

13. In the result, I am inclined to take the view, having regard to the text of the deed interpreted in the light of surrounding circumstances, that it is a deed of sale with a condition of repurchase.

14. In that view of the matter the appeal must fail and is dismissed. Having regard to the tortuous litigation to which I have earlier made reference, the fair order is that the parties shall bear and pay their own costs.

Appeal dismissed.

MASODKAR AND BHARUCHA, JJ.

L. Y. Lagoo, Appellant v. The Special Land Acquisition Officer (2), Pune and another, Respondents.

First Appeal No. 634 of 1975, D/- 6-2-1982.

(A) Land Acquisition Act (1 of 1894), Section 23 — Assessment of compensation — Belting system — When applicable — Large area of land acquired in heart of city having potentiality for both commercial and residential purposes — Acquired land a compact parcel surrounded by roads and sub-roads that met main busy street — On facts, held, although area acquired was large, belting system could not be applied for working out compensation — Same had to be determined on basis of what a willing purchaser might pay in the context of market rate.

Held, it was not possible to apply belting system for the purpose of valuation of the market rate in the present case. The acquired property lay in the heart of the city. It was a commercial as well as residential locality and had a potentiality for both commercial as well as residential purposes. It was a compact parcel of land surrounded by roads and sub-roads that met the main busy street. In such a situation there was no possibility that any area could be evaluated by reason of its location or any of its particular feature made the difference so as to form a distinct belt of property. In such matters the central consideration was the willing purchaser notionally conceived ready to pay a price in the context of the market rate. Belting could be useful only from that angle when depth and remoteness of areas affected economic considerations and indicated possible variations in prices. Though, therefore, the area acquired was large, the effort to divide it in parcels of belts for different rates by the Assessing Valuers did not appear to be fair. Belting system if applied would not further the ends of justice so as to afford relief of just and equitable compensation.

(B) Land Acquisition Act (1 of 1894), Section 23 — Market value — Assessment of from sale instances — Large area of land acquired in heart of city having potentiality for both commercial and residential purposes — Market value may be determined on basis of bona fide sale transactions, notwithstanding that transactions relate to smaller areas and area acquired is a large one.

Held, the sale instances could not be brushed aside by observing that they related to smaller areas. When the acquired land lay in the heart of the city and particularly when the area was being used for commercial and residential purposes, even such smaller pieces, unless there were some special distinguishing features, could be indicative of the ruling market rate. It was not as if that all those sales were not voluntary or that they were the result of some compulsive circumstances. On the other hand, the transactions indicated that they were bona fide purchase transactions. Therefore, the sale instances could not be rejected merely because the area in each case happened to be smaller area and the area under acquisition was a large one. This factor could be kept in mind only while assessing the fair valuation.

(Para 8)

K. J. Abhyankar, for Appellant; M. R. Kotwal, Govt. Pleader with N. P. Hombalkar, Asstt. Govt. Pleader, for Respondents.

MASODKAR, J.:— This appeal questions the order made by the Land Acquisition Court, i.e. the Court of the Joint Judge, Pune, under Section 18 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, deciding the compensation payable to the present appellant. It may be mentioned, at the outset, that the Land Acquisition Officer granted the rate of Rs. 8/- per sq. ft. on the basis of the instances cited on behalf of the appellant as well as the instances collected during the course of the enquiry. He awarded the compensation at the flat rate, the area being 16,839 sq. ft. There existed a structure, which is valued at Rupees 6,000/- as compensation. In the compensation reference under S. 18 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, the learned trial Judge, by the impugned judgment, found against the appellant, holding that the land should be valued by applying belt system and he granted three rates of compensation. It is surprising to observe that, for the third block or belt the learned trial Judge was pleased to even reduce the rate and fix it at Rs. 5/- per sq. ft. even much lower than the one granted by the Land Acquisition Officer. In the view of the learned trial Judge, this method of belting indicated that the market value of the land in belt No. 1 in Block No. 2 was Rs. 11/- per sq. ft., while that in belt No. 2 was Rs. 7/- per sq. ft. and the value of the land in block No. 1 was Rs. 5/- per sq. ft. We were at pains to understand as to how the learned trial Judge reduced the compensation awarded at a flat rate by the Land Acquisition Officer, being Rs. 8/- per sq. ft., and then, calculating the totals at the lower rates, came to the conclusion that nothing was payable to the appellant. Suffice it to observe that unless the rate of compensation granted by the Land Acquisition Officer was challenged by the State or the acquiring body, in any manner, such a recourse was not available. The trial Court was bound to proceed on the basis that the rate offered was the minimum to which the appellant was entitled and that the only issue that arose concerned with its inadequacy. Unless this salutary position and principle is kept in view, it is likely to work unfair results in references seeking orders for enhanced compensation. The right conferred by S. 18 is in favour of an aggrieved party so as to seek enhancement and not to have the appellate adjudication with regard to the rate which has been already awarded. If, in a given case, the claimant does not establish the inadequacy, he fails; but that is no reason for the Court to hold that the Land Acquisition Officer should have awarded lesser rate for a piece and then by working out totals to reject additional fair compensation. As we see, the dispute related to the rate at which fair compensation was required to be worked out and there arose no other question for consideration.

2. In fact, in the present case by following belting system, for one belt the Court considered higher rate as would be adequate and for others lower rates than given by the Award. In such case, the claimant would be entitled to additional compensation for the first belt along with whatever awarded for other belts. Surely, the claimant seeks the fair value for each part and parcel as makes the entirety of the land. Belting, if permissible, is a method of parcelling for valuation and that cannot lead to the result of refusing additional compensation by totalling the belts. On the other hand, each belt, by very nature, would be specific parcel to be valued as such. The error thus is apparent on the face of record.

3. On merits, Mr. Abhyankar, the learned Counsel for the appellant, submitted that because of erroneous approach even the eventual result is affected. He took us through the evidence that consists of oral statements of the witnesses, being Vishnu Vinayak Deshpande (C. W. 1), Sadu Genu Chavan (C. W. 2), Vishwanath Waman Agashe (C. W. 3) and Babulal Tulshiram Gupta (C. W. 4) and so also the evidence of Gangadhar Dattatraya Karkare (C. W. 1) examined for the State. Apart from the oral evidence, there are statements showing the sale instances relied upon by the appellant and also by the acquiring body.

4. Mr. Hombalkar, Asstt. Govt. Pleader, on the contrary submitted that there was no cause for interference, firstly contending that the learned trial Judge was entitled to apply belting method and, secondly, that the area being large, the sale instances for smaller areas should not be treated as comparable for determining the reasonable rate payable to the appellant.

5. After considering the evidence and the submissions of both the learned Counsel, we are of the view that it is not possible to apply belting system for the purpose of valuation of the market rate in the present case. It is undisputed that the acquired property lies in the heart of Pune city. It is a commercial as well as residential locality and has a potentiality for both commercial as well as residential purposes. It is compact parcel of land surrounded by roads and sub-roads that meet the main busy street called 'Laxmi Road'. In such a situation there is no possibility that any area could be evaluated by reason of its location or any of its particular feature makes the difference so as to form a distinct belt of property. In such matters the central consideration is the willing purchaser notionally conceived ready to pay a price in the context of the market rate.

Belting may be useful only from that angle when depth and remoteness of areas affect economic considerations and indicate possible variations in prices. Though, therefore, the area is large, being 16,839 sq. ft., the effort to divide it in parcels of belts for different rates by the Assessing Valuers does not appear to be fair. It appears to us that belting system if applied would not further the ends of justice so as to afford relief of just and equitable compensation. The evidence of the valuers proceeds on the assumption and not on any good reason. We are not impressed by the evidence of witness Karkare that the area should be divided into two blocks for the purpose of evaluation. It is significant to observe here that even the Land Acquisition Officer, who made the Award, eventually offered a flat rate or average rate of Rs. 8/- per sq. ft. We, therefore, reject the approach of applying belting patterns for the purpose of working out the compensation in the present case.

6. Once this aspect is so decided then the narrow controversy is, what should be the reasonable rate of compensation? Section 4 notification has been issued, in the present case, on Nov. 18, 1965. The admitted evidence shows that in this area the property fetches in the open market quite a higher rate than the one granted to the appellant. At Appendix 'A', which is not in dispute, the instances are granted in two parts and consists of statement of sale instances collected by the appellant as well as the sale instances available on the office record of the Land Acquisition Officer. There is an instance of previous acquisition having reference to the date April 23, 1964. These instances, for the purpose of the present appeal, are not seriously in dispute. In fact, they were not in dispute even before the Land Acquisition Officer. The oral evidence of the Vishnu Deshpande shows that he seeks to have Rs. 15/- per sq. ft. The evidence of Sadu Chavan shows that he purchased CTS No. 371 from Sadashiv Peth, Pune, for a sum of Rs. 29,100/- for the purpose of starting a flour mill. His cross-examination shows that he was in need of the land as he wanted to shift his flour mill to the plot so purchased by him. Vishwanath Agashe, who is Engineer and Valuer, has spoken how he worked out the value of the front area at Rs. 15/- per sq. ft. and the land under structure at Rs. 10/- per sq. ft. The evidence of Babulal Gupta is with regard to plot No. 362-C of Sadashiv Peth, Poona, which is purchased in 1964 for Rs. 25,000/-, and he has spoken of the bidding, in the cross-examination, that was given before the Court of Wards and the lowest being Rs. 11,500/-. The evidence of expert Gangadhar Karkare, examined by the Land Acquisition Authority, is on the basis that the land could be divided in blocks and belts.

7. The oral evidence, therefore, is not that much satisfactory, but as we have stated above, the undisputed sale instances clearly go to indicate the position of the market rates at which available properties were sold and purchased during the relevant time and even before 1965. Turning to Appendix 'A' and the instances therein, we have the instance of first of May 30, 1960, involving 702 sq. ft. which fetched Rs. 17,000/- at the rate of Rs. 24.22 per sq. ft. Then we have the instance of Sept. 14, 1962 of CTS No. 773 (old), where the rate works out to Rs. 6.56 per sq. ft. Then, there is land acquisition compensation paid for portions CTS Nos. 894 to 897 vide notification under Section 4 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, of April 23, 1964 and the compensation awarded ranged from Rs. 13/- per sq. ft. to Rs. 15/- per sq. ft. Those lands were situate at Bajirao Road and Tulsibag Road, and it appears that front portions were acquired. Then the two pieces of 1914 sq. ft. being CTS No. 361/1 (old) and CTS No. 361/D (old), appear to have been sold on Oct. 16, 1964 and Dec. 21, 1964 respectively, and the rates paid by the purchaser were Rs. 13/- per sq. ft. and Rs. 15-20 per sq. ft. The instances, which were collected during the enquiry, are four and they show that for a piece of 505 sq. ft. (CTS No. 346) (old) sold on Dec. 21, 1962 the rate paid was Rs. 11.88 per sq. ft., for 783 sq. ft. (CTS No. 765) (old), the rate paid on Mar. 28, 1963 worked out to Rs. 12.77 per sq. ft. For 810 sq. ft. (CTS No. 570-A) (old) purchased on Aug. 28, 1964, the rate worked out to Rs. 18.51 per sq. ft. and for 1386 sq. ft. (CTS No. 729/B) (old) purchased on Oct. 8, 1964, the rate worked out to Rs. 11.18 per sq. ft. It may be mentioned that along with the structures these rates were paid and for the land the rates worked out, even according to the official calculation, between Rs. 9/- and Rs. 10/- per sq. ft.

8. These sale instances cannot be brushed aside by observing that they relate to smaller areas. Suffice it to say that, in the heart of city like Pune and particularly when the area is being used for commercial and residential purposes, even such smaller pieces, unless there are some special distinguishing features, may be indicative of the ruling market rate. It is not as if that all these sales were not voluntary or that they were the result of some compulsive circumstances. On the other hand, the transactions indicate that they were bona fide purchase transactions with regard to areas as were available in Sadashiv Peth in Pune town. We do not accept the approach that all these sale instances should be rejected only because the area in each case happens to be smaller area and the area under acquisition is large one. We can only keep this factor in mind while assessing the fair valuation.

9. Therefore, these instances unmistakably show that a willing purchaser, wanting to purchase land in the year 1964, was willing to pay not less than Rs. 10/- per sq. ft. for the land and, if it had any structure, the rate could even rise to Rs. 15/- or Rs. 18/- per sq. ft.

10. Once this position is available, we have to work out reasonable rate that should be made available by way of compensation in the year 1965. After considering the evidence, the potentiality of the area and the location, we think that the rate of Rs. 12/- per sq. ft. would be a fair compensation of the value of the land.

11. There is a structure and that has been valued at Rs. 6,000/-. For the appellant, no serious grievance is made with regard to that valuation.

12. In the result, therefore, the present appeal is allowed. The impugned judgment is set aside and it is adjudged that, apart from the compensation of Rs. 6,000/- for the structure, the appellant was entitled to compensation for the land at the rate of Rs. 12/- per sq. ft. Respondent No. 1, therefore, is directed to pay additional compensation of Rs. 67,356/- and the solatium of Rupees 10,103-50 p., the total being Rs. 77,459-50 p. and the interest at 4% p. a. from the date of taking possession till payment. Though the appeal thus succeeds, there would be no order as to costs in the appeal.

Appeal allowed.

tional evidence — Evidence sought to be let to prove correspondence about leases of flats — Respondents accidentally coming across old files containing lease deeds — Question involved was whether leases had complied with requirements of S. 175 (3) of Government of India Act, 1935 — Held it was in the interests of justice that if documents existed, they should not be shut out. (B) Constitution of India, Art. 299 (1) — Government of India Act (1935), S. 175 (3) — Execution of contracts — Non-compliance with requirements of Art. 299 or S. 175 — Effect.

The law on the subject can be summarised thus: (a) a formal deed or document of contract is not necessary; (b) a contract can be inferred from correspondence; (c) a mere tender and acceptance is sufficient to constitute a valid contract; (d) the contract must be entered into by an authorised person. However, a contract entered into by an unauthorised person can be ratified by the Government particularly if it is for the benefit of the Government; (e) neither S. 175 (3) nor Art. 299 (1) prescribes any particular mode in which authority has to be conferred. Normally such conferment is by a notification in an Official Gazette. But it can also be ad hoc on any person and when it is established, the requirements must be held to have been established. Further, an authority need not be given by rules expressly promulgated for the purpose. Even where an authority is given by rules, a special authority can always be validly given in respect of a particular contract to an officer other than the officer notified under the rules; (f) the sanction to the contract can be expressly or impliedly given and while inferring the sanction, the actions, apart from the execution of the document can be considered; (g) a contract entered into without complying with the requirements of S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, or Art. 299 (1) of the Constitution is void in the sense that it cannot be enforced by either party to the contract. However, it is not void for all purposes and it can be taken into consideration and looked into for collateral purposes. The contract can be said to exist validly for such purpose. Such a contract is only relatively void i.e. void between the parties but not absolutely void i.e. void for all purposes. Case law discussed. (Para 12)

and must comply with requirements of Article 299. Misc. Petn. No. 1016 of 1973 (Bom), Reversed.

When Government is a party to a contract the question to be considered is not whether a general statute such as the T. P. Act or the Contract Act permits a contract in a particular form, but whether the contract is in compliance of the mandatory provisions laid down in that behalf by the fundamental statute. Such provisions stand superimposed on the general law and have to be satisfied in addition to the requirements of the ordinary law. Hence it could not be said that the contracts in the present case being of monthly tenancy could be oral because S. 107 of T. P. Act permits them. Misc. Petn. No. 1016 of 1973 (Bom), Reversed. (Para 14)

(D) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Authorities under Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act, 1971, coming to conclusion that premises were taken on lease by the Government — They get jurisdiction to enquire under the Act without examining question of validity or otherwise of the leases — High Court cannot interfere with assumption of jurisdiction where existence of jurisdictional facts is not denied.

The Estate Officer appointed under S. 3 of the Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act, 1971, as well as the Appellate Authority under S. 9 thereof have only to satisfy themselves that the facts giving rise to their jurisdiction have been established. Once those facts are established it is not open for them to go into the validity of those facts. Not only that but their finding that such facts do exist and therefore give them the jurisdiction can only be challenged by the procedure laid down in the said Act and not in a separate proceeding. If a Tribunal appointed under an Act is vested with jurisdiction to try cases arising out of the said Act, the Tribunal is also vested with the power to decide the existence or non-existence of facts giving rise to such jurisdiction, and the Tribunal's finding thereon even if wrong can be assailed only before the authorities if any under the Act. Unless such finding is without any evidence on record or perverse or contrary to the evidence it is not liable to be questioned in a separate proceeding such as the writ petition under Arts. 226 and 227 of the Constn. AIR 1950 SC 222, AIR 1955 SC 661 and AIR 1961 SC 1549, Rel. on.; AIR 1970 SC 672, AIR 1973 SC 1362, AIR 1974 SC 125. Spl. Civil Appln. No. 112 of 1962, D/- 14-9-1962

(E) Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act (40 of 1971), S. 2 (e) — Words "belonging to the Central Government" — Do not mean the same thing as "owned by" — Premises taken on lease by government and allotted to others are public premises.

The expression "belonging to" does not mean the same thing as "owned by". The two expressions have two different connotations. The expression "belonging to" will take within its sweep not only ownership but also rights lesser than that of ownership. The expressions used in the statute are to be interpreted and given meaning in the context in which they are used. The present Act has been placed on the statute book to give a summary remedy to the Government to evict persons in occupation of public premises to obviate the long ordeal of trial in a Civil Court and of further proceedings thereafter. Hence a wider meaning will have to be given to the expressions used in the Act for defining the concept of public premises. So viewed there is no reason why the premises of which possession for the time being vests in the Government and which are allotted by the Government to others while so in possession should not be held to be public premises. SAWANT, J.:— These are five appeals against the decision of the learned single Judge in five different Miscellaneous Petitions, under the Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Act, 1971 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act). The appellants in Appeals Nos. 214 to 217 of 1979 were the members of the Defence Services and the appellants in Appeal No. 207 of 1979 are the heirs and legal representatives of one M. K. Kapoor who was a member of the Defence Services. The premises which are the subject-matter of the appeals were admittedly allotted by the Central Government to these members of the Defence Services because they were in its service and on the condition that they would vacate the same after they retired from service. However, in spite of their retirement, they refused to vacate the same. Hence under the Act proceedings for evicting them were started against them before the Estate Officer. In the proceedings, they took the plea that the premises in question were not "public premises" within the meaning of the said Act and therefore the authority under the said Act had no jurisdiction to entertain the said eviction proceedings. This plea failed before the Estate Officer. The petitioners preferred appeals before the appellate authority under the Act. The appellate authority i.e. the Principal Judge, City Civil Court, Bombay dismissed their appeals. The petitioners then filed writ petitions on the Original Side of this Court under Art. 226 of the Constitution. The writ petitions were dismissed by the learned single Judge. Hence the present appeals.

2. The only question that falls for consideration in all these appeals is whether the premises in question are "public premises" within the meaning of S. 2 (e) of the said Act. Admittedly, the premises in question are not owned by the Central Government nor are they requisitioned by them. However it is the case of the Government that they are "public premises" firstly because they have been taken on lease from their owners and secondly because in any event, they "belong to the Central Government".

According to them further the appellants who are either the allottees from them or claiming under the allottees have no right to challenge the basis on which the Government came in possession of the same. On the other hand, it is the contention of the appellants that there is no valid lease in favour of the Government nor has the Government an absolute right of user of the said premises and hence the proceedings under the said Act are not maintainable against them. Since in all these appeals the contentions raised are the same they are being disposed of by this common judgment.

3. It is necessary to state the relevant facts peculiar to each of these appeals in order to appreciate the respective contentions of the parties.

Appeals Nos. 207, 214 and 217 of 1979 relate to the flats in a building called "Reviera" situate at Marine Drive, Bombay. These flats were taken by the Central Government on lease on Aug. 1, 1942 and the rent of the same is being paid by the Government from that date.

The appellants in Appeal No. 207 of 1979 are the wife and children of the late Wing Commander M. K. Kapoor. The premises in question are Flat No. 22 in the said building. Kapoor was in Air Force Service and retired from the Government service on 3-10-1968. In the meanwhile, he was sent on deputation to the Air India with effect from 26-9-1967 and till his death on 21-8-1975, he continued in service of the Air India as Pilot designated as Captain. He was allotted the said Flat No. 22 on 25-7-1967 and in spite of his retirement from service on 3-10-1968 he failed to vacate the same. Hence, by notice dated 22-11-1971 the Estate Officer who is the authority appointed under S. 3 of the said Act for the purpose, called upon him to vacate the same. Kapoor having failed to do so after holding an enquiry, he passed an order of eviction on 2-5-1972. Kapoor filed an appeal being Appeal No. 87 of 1972 which was dismissed on 2-8-1973. The writ petition filed under Art. 226 of the Constn. on the Original Side of this Court was dismissed by the learned single Judge by the impugned order dated 3-7-1979.

The appellant in Appeal No. 214 of 1979 is Major H. S. Grewal. The premises in his occupation are Flat No. 27 in the same building. He was in Military Service and retired from service in Nov. 1971. He was allotted the said flat first on 14-10-1963 and thereafter on 5-5-1970. After his retirement, he failed to vacate the premises and therefore, after giving notice on 17-2-1972 and holding an enquiry, the Estate Officer passed an order of eviction against him on 28-7-1972. The appeal filed by him being Appeal No. 108 of 1972 was dismissed on 2-8-1973. The writ petition filed by him was also dismissed by the learned single Judge by the impugned order dated 3-7-1979.

The appellant in Appeal No. 217 of 1979 is Ram Kumar Behl and is in occupation of Flat No. 2 in the same building. He was in the employment of the Union of India as Commanding Officer No. 1, (Maharashtra) Air Squadron, N. C. C. up to 1-6-1971. He was allotted the said flat on 19-7-1968. In spite of his retirement from service on 1-6-1971, he failed to vacate the flat and therefore the Estate Officer, after giving him notice on 22-11-1971 and holding enquiry passed an eviction order on 2-5-1972. The appeal against the said order being Appeal No. 89 of 1972 was dismissed on 2-8-1973. His writ petition was dismissed on 3-7-1979.

4. Appeal No. 215 of 1979 relates to a flat in a building called Heliopolis situate at Colaba, Bombay-5. This flat was also taken on lease by the Central Government from the owner of the building with effect from 1-1-1943. The appellant in this case is Lieutenant M. Mohammed. He was in the employment of the Union Government as Lieutenant in the Indian Navy and because of his employment he was allotted the said flat on 21-6-1968. He retired from service on and from 1-1-1970. He failed to vacate the said flat and hence the Estate Officer after giving notice and holding an enquiry passed an eviction order against him on 18-8-1970. The appeal filed against the said order being Appeal No. 81 of 1970 was allowed on 17-12-1971 on the ground that the Estate Officer was not competent to hold the enquiry as his appointment had not been notified in the Government Gazette as required under the provisions of S. 3 of the said Act. Thereafter the Estate Officer duly appointed served upon him a fresh notice on 7-1-1972 and after holding an enquiry passed an eviction order against him on 2-5-1972. The appeal filed by him being Appeal No. 86 of 1972 was dismissed on 2-8-1973. His writ petition against the appellate order was dismissed on 3-7-1979.

5. Appeal No. 216 of 1979 is in respect of a flat in a building called Krishna Kunj, situate at Walkeshwar Road, Bombay 6. The appellant in this case is one I. M. Dhaul. This flat was taken by the Central Government on lease from the owner of the building on 4-6-1965. The appellant was in the employment of the Central Government as a Major in the Indian Navy and by virtue of the said employment, he was allotted the said flat on 15-7-1967. The appellant retired from service on 11-6-1971. On 8-11-1971 he was recalled for duty and was finally relieved from duty on 4-4-1972. In spite of his retirement, he failed to vacate the flat and therefore after giving notice and holding enquiry the Estate Officer passed an order of eviction against him on 4-9-1972. The appeal filed by him being Appeal No. 121 of 1972 was dismissed on 2-8-1973 and his writ petition was dismissed on 3-7-1979.

6. It will thus be noticed that the appellants in all these cases are the allottees from the Central Government in respect of the premises in question and they were allotted the premises because they were in service of the Government. Under the conditions of allotment they were required to vacate the premises on their retirement. In spite however, of their retirement, they have been continuing to occupy the same unauthorisedly for the last more than 10 years on the only plea that the Estate Officer has no authority to evict them because the premises are not "public premises" within the meaning of the said Act.

In order to appreciate the controversy as to whether the premises in question are public premises or not it will be necessary first to examine the definition of public premises given in the said Act. Admittedly the present premises are not covered by the definition of public premises given in sub-cl. (2) of Clause (e) of Section 2 of the said Act. Therefore the only definition that need be considered in the present case is the one given in sub-clause (1) of the said clause. That definition is as follows:

"S. 2(e) 'Public premises' means (1) any premises belonging to or taken on lease or requisitioned by, or on behalf of the Central Government, and includes any such premises which have been placed by the Government, whether before or after the commencement of the Public Premises (Eviction of Unauthorised Occupants) Amendment Act, 1980, under the control of the Secretariat of either House of Parliament for providing residential accommodation to any member of the staff of that Secretariat."

Here again we are not concerned with the latter and the inclusive part of the definition. On the contentions raised by the parties, the only part of the definition which is relevant for our purpose is:— "any premises belonging to or taken on lease or requisitioned by, or on behalf of the Central Government."

Since, further, admittedly the premises are not requisitioned or owned by the Central Government, ultimately the question that falls to be answered is whether the premises can be said "to belong to" the Central Government otherwise than as an owner or they are taken on lease by or on behalf of the Central Government.

7. Before we answer the questions raised before us, it would be instructive to recapitulate the contentions raised by the parties before the forums below and the answers given by them to the said contentions. In all these cases it was firstly the contention of the appellants that since the premises were not owned by the Central Government, they did not "belong to" them, and secondly since there was no deed of lease executed in accordance with the provisions of S. 107 of the Transfer of Property Act read with Section 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935 or Art. 299 (1) of the Constn., they were also not premises taken "on lease by" the Central Government. In either case, according to them, therefore they were not public premises within the meaning of the said Act. As against this the contention on behalf of the respondents was twofold. Firstly it was contended on their behalf that the leases in respect of all the said premises were monthly and hence there was no need of a registered deed of lease under S. 107 of the Transfer of Property Act. The correspondence between the parties, the long occupation of the premises and the payment of rent as evidenced by the rent-receipts was a sufficient evidence of the written contract of monthly lease arrived at between the parties. * The second lap of their argument was that in any case, the Central Government was in absolute possession of the premises and therefore the premises "belonged to them" within the meaning of the said Act and it is on the basis of their said absolute possessory right that they had allotted the premises to the occupants. Hence the premises fell within the definition of public premises and hence the appellants were liable to be evicted from them.

The Estate Officer held that the appellants being allottees from the Government were estopped from disputing the title of the Government to the premises. He also held that the premises belonged to the Government as tenant and therefore they were public premises and therefore he had jurisdiction to pass the eviction orders in question. The Appellate Authority viz. the Principal Judge, City Civil Court, Bombay, dismissed the appeals of the appellants on three grounds. In the first instance, he held that the appellants were estopped under S. 116 of the Evidence Act from challenging the title of the Central Government since they were admittedly let in the premises by the Government. Secondly, he held that the appellants had no locus standi to challenge the validity of the lease between the landlords and the Government even assuming that there was no compliance with the provisions of Art. 299 (1) of the Constn. (S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935). Thirdly, he held that in any case the premises "belonged" to the Central Government since they were in possession of Government for a long time and the Government was paying rent of the premises. The Government exercised an absolute right of user of the premises. Hence the orders of eviction passed by the Estate Officer did not suffer from want of jurisdiction. The learned single Judge of this Court however held that since what was in issue was the jurisdiction of the Estate Officer to entertain the proceedings, the petitioners were not estopped from challenging the jurisdiction of the Estate Officer. The learned Judge did not deal with the contentions on behalf of the respondents that since the Government had an absolute right of user of the premises, the premises "belonged to" the Government within the meaning of the Act. He however held that the Government had a monthly lease in its favour since it was not in dispute that the Government was in possession of the premises and that monthly rent was being paid by the Government. The learned Judge further held that monthly lease in favour of the Government though oral was a valid one since it is permissible under S. 107 of the T. P. Act. According to him, the provisions of S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935 or of Art. 299 (1) of the Constn. come into play only when an agreement was required to be in writing. He therefore held that there were valid agreements of lease between the Central Government and the landlords of the premises and the premises answered the definition of "taken on lease" by the Government and therefore they were public premises within the meaning of the said Act.

8. During the course of the hearing before us an application was made on behalf of the respondent-Union of India that an opportunity be given to them to produce certain documents in respect of the flats in Riviera to show that it was not a case of an oral lease but that there was correspondence between the parties showing a concluded written contract of lease. After hearing all the parties, by our order dated 17-9-1981 we permitted the respondent-Union of India to lead evidence in that behalf in this Court instead of sending the matter to the Estate Officer for the purpose which would have delayed the matter still further. In that order we had indicated that we would give our detailed reasons in support of the said order at the time of this judgment which we hereby do.

The additional evidence was sought to be led to prove correspondence with regard to the lease in respect of the flats in the building Riviera. In support of this application it was stated that prior to Feb. 1980 the authorities were not aware that there existed the relevant documents. It was only accidentally that a Lower Division Clerk working in the Office of the Western Naval Command, Bombay, had come across the said documents while he was taking search of the old records for some other purpose in Office of the Military Estate Officer. In this connection it was pointed out that the executive duties connected with the buildings hired for use of Defence Services were earlier discharged by the Garrison Engineer and the same were transferred to the Military Lands and Cantonment Service with effect from 2-1-1968 and hence the records connected with the lands and buildings hired were also transferred to the said office after that date. The records being old were consigned to the record room of the Military Estate Office and till the said Lower Division Clerk stumbled upon the documents in question the authorities were not aware of their existence. Hence the same could not be produced in the proceedings earlier. It was also pleaded that for doing justice between the parties the documents in question may be allowed to be produced at this late stage. For this purpose, Shri Desai for the respondents relied on the provisions of O. 41, R. 27 (1) (a) and (1) (b) of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908. The application was opposed on behalf of the appellants. The appellants contended that the said provisions of the Civil P. C. could not be invoked in the present case because it was not established that due diligence was exercised on behalf of the respondents for searching the said documents and yet the documents were not found and that to allow the respondents to lead additional evidence would amount to permitting them to fill in the lacuna in their evidence. It was also contended on behalf of the appellants that all along the case of the respondents was that there was an oral lease in respect of the said flats and therefore no documents could now be allowed to be produced to prove the contrary viz. that there was a written lease. For this purpose reliance was placed upon two decisions of the Supreme Court viz. AIR 1957 SC 912, (State of U. P. v. Manbodhan Lal Srivastava) and AIR 1975 SC 479, (Soonda Ram v. Rameshwaralal).

According to us the respondents could be permitted to produce the documents in question for various reasons. In the first instance, we were satisfied that the documents which were 13 in number were old and were in the files for the years 1942, 1943, 1944 and 1945 pertaining to the said building Riviera. The files were offered for inspection. The respondents also undertook to prove that the documents were not within their knowledge and/or could not be produced earlier in spite of the exercise of due diligence on their part. Secondly, the only narrow question involved in the present petition is whether the lease in respect of the flats in the said building had complied with the requirements of the provisions of S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935. It was therefore in the interests of justice that if there existed any documents to prove the said fact, they should not be shut out. It is true that the respondents have earlier described the transaction as one of an oral lease. However this was in ignorance of the true legal position on the subject viz. that although there is no formal document of lease, a concluded contract of lease can be inferred even from correspondence or by a mere offer and acceptance. It may be remembered that it was not the case of the respondents that there was no correspondence on the subject to show that there was an agreement of lease between the parties. What was stated on their behalf before the lower Courts was that there was no formal deed of lease and hence there was no written contract of lease. It is therefore incorrect to contend that since the respondents had admitted that there was only an oral lease, the correspondence on the subject should not be permitted to be produced. We were further of the view that in order to meet the ends of justice, and to prevent an abuse of the process of the Court, we should exercise our inherent powers and permit the production of the said documents. It is for this reason again that we were of the opinion that the reliance placed on behalf of the appellants on the two authorities of the Supreme Court was not well conceived. In fact, in AIR 1957 SC 912 (supra) the Court has in terms stated as follows:—

"It is well settled that additional evidence should not be permitted at the appellate stage in order to enable one of the parties to remove certain lacuna in presenting its case at the proper stage, and to fill in gaps. Of course, the position is different where the appellate Court itself requires certain evidence to be adduced in order to enable it to do justice between the parties." (Emphasis supplied).

As stated earlier according to us on the facts and circumstances of the present case to deny an opportunity to the respondents to produce the documents in question would not only have not done justice between the parties but would have resulted in injustice and reduced the judicial process to a ridiculous farce.

In AIR 1975 SC 479 (supra), the High Court had not permitted the tenants to adduce additional evidence at the second appellate stage in a suit for eviction, and the Supreme Court found that the High Court had committed no error of law in that regard. It was not a case where the High Court had permitted such evidence and the Supreme Court had discouraged the same. For all these reasons we were of the view that the additional evidence in the form of the said 13 documents should be permitted to be led even at this stage.

Accordingly, the Central Government led the evidence of the following witnesses:— (1) Vinayak Anant Mahajan, a Lower Division Clerk in the Office of the Western Naval Command, Bombay, who looks after the litigations in Courts as well as before the Estate Officer under the Act; (2) Tapeshwar Nath, Superintending Building and Roads in the Office of the Military Estate Officer, Bombay and Gujarat Circle, the Military Estate Officer being in actual charge of the hiring of immoveable properties and (3) Lt. Commander Sukhjinder Singh who is attached to Flag Officer, Commanding-in-Chief, Western Naval Command, Bombay, and who works under the Chief Staff Officer, Personnel and Administration. Through these witnesses, certain documents were produced and by our order dated 5-3-1982, we took on record some of the said documents for the reasons stated therein. The notes of evidence, the order dated 5-3-1982 and the documents taken on record under the said order form part of the present proceedings. Besides the other contentions it is also in the light of these documents that we have to decide whether there is sufficient evidence on record to show that the premises in question were taken on a valid lease by the Central Government and if not whether otherwise the premises fall within the definition of "public premises" under the said Act.

9. Before we discuss the relevant documentary evidence and its effect, it is necessary to state the legal position on the subject viz. whether the Government can enter into an oral contract and if not, the requirements of law needed to be complied with by the Government before entering into a contract. The lease in the present case in respect of the premises in Riviera covered by Appeals Nos. 207, 214 and 217 of 1979 is admittedly of the year 1942. The lease in respect of the premises in Heliopolis covered by Appeal No. 215 of 1979 is of the year 1943 and the lease in respect of the flat in building Krishna Kunj covered by Appeal No. 216 of 1979 is of the year 1965. Therefore in the case of the first two leases it is the provisions of Section 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935 and in the case of the lease of 1965 it is the provisions of Art. 299 (1) of the Constn. which would be applicable. However the two provisions are pari materia and nothing turns on the question whether one or the other provision applies to the respective leases.

10. One more question which we need answer before we examine the relevant authorities on the said Constitutional provisions is whether the leases in question require registration. Under S. 107 of the T. P. Act, "a lease of immoveable property from year to year, or for any term exceeding one year, or reserving a yearly rent, can be made only by a registered instrument. All other leases of immoveable property may be made either by a registered instrument or by oral agreement accompanied by delivery of possession." In the present case there is no dispute that the rent of the premises was being paid monthly and the rent was not reserved yearly. There is also further no dispute that the lease was accompanied by delivery of possession. All the authorities below including the learned single Judge has taken the view that there is a monthly lease and not a lease for any term exceeding one year.

In the case of the building Heliopolis, (Appeal No. 215 of 1979), the written agreement dated 17-2-1943 clearly contemplates the creation of monthly tenancy since it states that the hiring will be on monthly basis and subject to termination of one calendar month's notice on either side. The rent reserved is also monthly at the rate of

Rs. 130. The rent receipts also show that the rent has been paid on monthly basis.

In the case of Krishna Kunj (Appeal No. 216 of 1979), the agreement dated 4-6-1965 mentions that the premises were in the occupation of the Government since Sept. 1945 under a lease dated 17-9-1945 and that these premises were to be demolished and in their place new premises were to be constructed and they were to be taken on a fresh lease to be executed in the form prescribed by Government and the lease was for a period of ten years with option to the tenant to renew the same for a further period of ten years. This agreement contemplates the execution of a formal lease. There is no record to show that any formal deed of lease was executed subsequently as per the said agreement. However, it is undisputed that after the premises were reconstructed, possession was taken by the Central Government and the appellant was allotted the same on 15-7-1967. The rent of the premises is also being paid on monthly basis since then. There is further no dispute that the old premises in the same building which were handed over for demolition were also on monthly rental basis. In the absence of any other document it is legitimate to presume that the lease has continued on the same old basis.

As regards the premises in building "Reviera" (Appeals Nos. 207, 214 and 217 of 1979) again, it is an admitted position that the rent is being paid monthly by the Government and there is no rent reserved yearly. Thus, we are of the view that in all these cases, the lease being monthly there was no need to register the same and therefore the lease agreement between the Government and the owners concerned, cannot be said to be invalid on that account. This is also the finding of all the authorities below and we see no reason to differ from the same much less to interfere with it.

11. Coming now to the question whether these leases can be said to be valid in the face of the provisions of S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935 or Art. 299 (1) of the Constn. as stated earlier the provisions being similar, it will be sufficient if we quote the provisions of Art. 299 (1) of the Constn. which are as follows:—

"299 (1). All contracts made in the exercise of the executive power of the Union or of a State shall be expressed to be made by the President, or by the Governor of the State, as the case may be, and all such contracts and all assurances of property made in the exercise of that power shall be executed on behalf of the President or the Governor by such persons and in such manner as he may direct or authorise."

These provisions have been interpreted by the Supreme Court in various decisions. In AIR 1954 SC 236, (Chaturbhuj Vithaldas Jasani v. Moreshwar Parashram), the facts were that the contracts were not in proper form and not expressed to be made by the President and the contention was that on that account they were void. While dealing with this argument, after reviewing the earlier case law on the subject, the Court observed as follows:—

"In our opinion, this is a type of contract to which Section 230 (3) Contract Act would apply. This view obviates the inconvenience and injustice to innocent persons which the Federal Court felt in 'J. K. Gas Plant Manufacturing Co. Ltd. v. Emperor', AIR 1947 FC 38 at pp. 41, 42 (M), and at the same time protects Government. We feel that some reasonable meaning must be attached to Article 299 (1). We do not think the provisions were inserted for the sake of mere form. We feel they are there to safeguard Government against unauthorised contracts. If in fact a contract is unauthorised or in excess of authority it is right that Government should be safeguarded.

On the other hand, an officer entering into a contract on behalf of Government can always safeguard himself by having recourse to the proper form. In between is a large class of contracts, probably by far the greatest in numbers, which, though authorised, are for one reason or other not in proper form. It is only right that an innocent contracting party should not suffer because of this and if there is no other defect or objection we have no doubt Government will always accept the responsibility. If not, its interests are safeguarded as we think the Constitution intended that they should be.

In the present case, there can be no doubt that the Chairman of the Board Administration acted on behalf of the Union Government and his authority to contract in that capacity was not questioned. There can equally be no doubt that both sides acted in the belief and on the assumption, which was also the fact, that the goods were intended for Government purposes, namely, amenities for the troops. The only flaw is that the contracts were not in proper form and so, because of this purely technical defect, the principal could not have been sued. But that is just the kind of case that S. 230 (3), Contract Act is designed to meet.

It would, in our opinion, be disastrous to hold that the hundreds of Government officers who have daily to enter into a variety of contracts, often of a petty nature, and sometimes in an emergency, cannot contract orally or through correspondence and that every petty contract must be effected by a ponderous legal document couched in a particular form. It may be that Government will not be bound by the contract in that case, but that is a very different thing from saying that the contracts as such are void and of no effect. It only means that the principal cannot be sued; but we take it there would be nothing to prevent ratification, especially if that was for the benefit of Government.

There is authority for the view that when a Government officer acts in excess of authority Government is bound if it ratifies the excess: see 'Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavalry Venkata Narrainapah', (1859-61) 8 Moo Ind App 529 at p. 554 (N). We accordingly hold that the contracts in question here are not void simply because the Union Government could not have been sued on them by reason of Art. 299 (1)."

This decision therefore lays down, firstly, that an oral contract or a contract through correspondence is not void. Secondly, that even when a Government Officer acts in excess of authority the Government is bound by the contract if it ratifies the same and thirdly that the contract is not void for all purposes simply because the Union Government cannot be sued on it for non-compliance of the provisions of Art. 299 (1) of the Constn. The last proposition means that a contract which is unenforceable by the parties to the contract for non-compliance with the provisions of Art. 299 (1) can still be looked into as a valid contract for other purposes. In that case the Court was considering the effect of such a contract vis-a-vis Section 7 (d) of the Representation of the People Act. Section 7 (d) is in these terms:—

"A person shall be disqualified for being chosen as, and for being, a member etc.

(d) if by himself he has any share or interest in a contract for the supply of goods to the appropriate Government."

The argument advanced was that the contract in question being not in compliance with the provisions of Art. 299 (1) was void for all purposes and although the appellant there was a partner of the firm which had at all material times a contract for the supply of bidis to the Government, he did not incur disqualification for contesting election under the Representation of the People Act.

The Court held that the provision of Section 7 (d) did not require that the contracts should be enforceable against the Government. All that it required was that the contract should be for the supply of goods to the Government. The contract in question being just that, it was hit by that section. The Court therefore held that the Election Tribunal was right in disqualifying the appellant as a candidate.

In AIR 1962 SC 110, (State of Bihar v. Karam Chand Thapar and Brothers Ltd.) the question which fell for consideration was whether the person who had executed the contract on behalf of the Government had authority to do so or not. The Court held while construing the provisions of S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935 which fell for consideration there, that the said provisions did not prescribe any particular mode in which authority has to be conferred. The Court observed that normally no doubt such conferment will be by notification in the Official Gazette, but there was nothing in the section itself to preclude authorisation being conferred ad hoc on any person, and when that fact is established, the requirements of the section must be held to have been satisfied. From the correspondence placed on record in that case, the Court found that the Executive Engineer concerned had been authorised by the Governor acting through his Secretary, to execute the agreement for a reference to arbitration. The Court found that the correspondence showed that it was the Secretary who from the very inception took the leading part in arranging for arbitration. He was throughout speaking in the name of and on behalf of the Government and he did so "as directed". The subject-matter of the arbitration was a claim which concerned the Government. The proposal at the earlier stages to amend a clause of the original contract so as to include an arbitration also showed that the intention of the parties was to treat the agreement for arbitration as part and parcel of the contract. Even after the agreement was executed, the Secretary made corrections and modifications in the agreement on the basis that it was the Government that was a party thereto. The conclusion from all this, according to the Court, was irresistible that the Executive Engineer had been authorised to execute the agreement. This decision therefore lays down firstly that whether an Officer had or had not an authority, can be gathered in each case from the facts of that case. Neither the section lays down, nor is it necessary to follow, a particular mode for conferring such authority. Secondly, once it is established that the Officer acting on behalf of the Government had such authority the contract can be deemed to be in compliance with the Constitutional provisions.

In AIR 1962 SC 113, (Bhikraj Jaipuria v. Union of India), the Court while interpreting Sec. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935 held that the said provision in terms did not provide that the direction or authority given by the Governor-General or the Governor to a person, to execute contracts shall be given only by rules expressly promulgated in that behalf or by formal notifications. A special authority may validly be given in respect of a particular contract or contracts by the Governor to an officer other than the officer notified under the rules made under the said provision. This was stated by the Court while however observing that the contracts must show on their face that they are made on behalf of the State, i. e. by the Head of the State and executed on his behalf and in the manner prescribed and by the person authorised.

In AIR 1962 SC 779, (State of West Bengal v. M/s. B. K. Mondal and Sons), while interpreting the same provisions of S. 175 (3), and stating the consequences of a contract which did not comply with the requirements of the said section for the purpose of S. 70 of the Contract Act the Court made the following observations which are material for our purpose (Paras 14, 19 and 20):—

“Where a claim for compensation is made by one person against another under S. 70, it is not on the basis of any subsisting contract between the parties; it is on the basis of the fact that something was done by the party for another and the said work so done has been voluntarily accepted by the other party. In regard to the claim made against the Government of a State under Section 70 it may be that in many cases the work done or the goods delivered are the result of a request made by some officer or other on behalf of the said Government. In such a case, the request may be ineffective or invalid for the reason that the officer making the request was not authorised under Section 175 (3) of the Government of India Act or, if the said officer was authorised to make the said request the request becomes inoperative because it was not followed up by a contract executed in the manner prescribed by Section 175 (3) of the Government of India Act. In either case the thing has been delivered or the work has been done without a contract and that brings in Section 70.

It would not be reasonable to suggest that in recognising the claim for compensation under Section 70 the Court is either directly or indirectly nullifying the effect of S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act or treating as valid a contract which is invalid. The fields covered by the two provisions are separate and distinct; there is no conflict between the two provisions. In the functioning of the vast organisation represented by a modern State Government officers have invariably to enter into a variety of contracts which are often of a petty nature. Sometimes they may have to act in emergency, and on many occasions, in the pursuit of the welfare policy of the State Government, officers may have to enter into contract orally or through correspondence without strictly complying with the provisions of S. 175 (3) of the Act. If, in all these cases, what is done in pursuance of the contracts is for the benefit of the Government and for their use and enjoyment and is otherwise legitimate and proper, Section 70 would step in and support a claim for compensation made by the contracting parties notwithstanding the fact that the contracts had not been made as required by S. 175 (3).”

Read with the concurring judgment delivered by Sarkar, J. for himself and Das Gupta J., the learned Judges have observed as follows (Paras 44 and 45):—

“We also feel no doubt that the work was done lawfully. It was work which the Government badly needed. We will assume for the present purpose, as the learned Advocate for the appellant said, that work done under a contract with the Government which is invalid in view of the provision of Section 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, is work unlawfully done. The learned Advocate contended that that would be because thereby Section 175 (3) of the Government of India Act would be evaded which is the same thing as doing that which the section forbids. Assume that is so. But that section does not say that if work is done for the Government without any contract or agreement at all and voluntarily, as was done in the present case, that work would not have been lawfully done. Government is free not to take the benefit of such work. There is no law, and none has been pointed out to us, which makes the doing of such work unlawful. No other reason was given or strikes us for saying that the work was not lawfully done. There is no law, as Bachawat, J. said, that Government cannot take any work except under a contract in respect of it made in terms of S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act. That section may forbid a Government to take work under a contract which is invalid because not in terms of it, but it does not make it unlawful for the Government to take the benefit of work done for it without any contract at all. We should suppose that if the doing of the work was unlawful the Government would not have accepted the benefit of it. In the present case, the Government needed the work badly and we do not see how then the Government can say that the work was not done lawfully. We therefore think that the work was done lawfully.

It was contended that the obligation under Section 70 of the Contract Act arises only in circumstances in which English law would have created an obligation on the basis of an implied contract or a quasi-contract and that there could be no implied contract or quasi-contract with the Government because a contract could be made with it only in accordance with S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act. Now it has been repeatedly held that a resort to English law is not justified for deciding a question arising on our statute unless the statute is such that it cannot be reasonably understood without the assistance of English law. Indeed, there is good authority for saying that S. 70 was framed in the form in which it appears with a view to avoid the niceties of English law on the subject, arising largely from historical reasons and to make the position simple and free from fictions of law and consequent complications: see Pollock on Contracts (13th Ed.) p. 10. Furthermore, we do not see that S. 175 (3) in any way prevents a contract with the Government being implied or a Government from incurring an obligation under a quasi-contract. A contract implied in law or a quasi-contract is not a real contract or, as it is called a consensual contract and S. 175 (3) is concerned only with such contracts. The section says that 'all contracts made in the exercise of the executive authority of the Federation or of a Province shall be expressed' in a certain manner and 'shall be executed on behalf of the Governor-General or Governor by such person and in such manner as he may direct or authorise'. It therefore applies to consensual contracts which the Government makes and not to something which is also called a contract but which the law brings into existence by a fiction irrespective of the parties having agreed to it. Now by its terms Section 70 of the Contract Act must be applied where its requisites exist; if it is necessary to imply a contract or to contemplate the existence of a quasi-contract for applying the section that must be done and we do not think that S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act prevents that, nor are we aware of any other impediment in this regard. This argument must also fail."

It is clear from the aforesaid observations that although a contract which does not fulfil the requirements of S. 175 (3) is not a valid contract, the relationship created thereunder is not unlawful and the work done thereunder or the services or goods supplied under it do not become unlawful for the purpose of Section 70 of the Contract Act. The relationship so created by acceptance of the goods or services or of the work done can be recognised and a compensation claim can be based on the same. The observations also further reiterate the position that in the functioning of the vast organisation, officers have invariably to enter into a variety of contracts. Sometimes they have to act in emergency, and on many occasions, they have to enter into contracts orally or through correspondence without strictly complying with the provisions of Section 175 (3). If, in all these cases, what is done in pursuance of the contract is for the benefit of the Government and is otherwise legitimate and proper, Section 70 of the Contract Act would step in and the claim for compensation made by the contracting parties on the basis of such contracts is legitimate notwithstanding the fact that such contracts are not in compliance with the provisions of Sec. 175 (3). What is important from our point of view is the fact that the Court there has referred to its earlier decision reported in AIR 1954 SC 236 (supra) and has explained the said position by stating that the Court in the earlier case had held that a contract made in contravention of Art. 299 (1) of the Constn. could be ratified by Government if it was for its benefit and as such it could not take the case of the contractor outside the purview of S. 7 (d) of the Representation of the People Act. A contract which is void may not be capable of ratification, but, since according to the Court the contract in question could have been ratified it was not void in the technical sense. (Underlining ours). It was for this reason according to the Court that in that case the following observations were made: "The Government may not be bound by the contract but that is a very different thing from saying that the contract was void and of no effect and that it only meant that the principal (Government) could not be sued, but there will be nothing to prevent ratification if it was for the benefit of the Government."

In AIR 1963 SC 1685, (Union of India v. A. L. Rallia Ram), the Court after referring to the decision in AIR 1962 SC 113 (supra) held that S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935, did not in terms require that a formal document of contract executed on behalf of the Dominion of India alone is effective. In the absence of any direction by the Governor-General issued under that section prescribing the manner of executing contracts a valid contract may result from correspondence if the requisite conditions are fulfilled. The Court further held that although it was true that the said section used the expression "executed" that did not by itself contemplate execution of a formal contract by the contracting parties. A tender for purchase of goods in pursuance of an invitation issued by or on behalf of the Governor General of India and acceptance in writing which is expressed to be made in the name of the Governor General and executed on his behalf by a person authorised for the purpose would conform to the requirements of that section. The Court also further held on the facts of that case that the correspondence between the parties ultimately resulting in the acceptance note, amounted to a contract made by the Government and therefore by the Governor-General, because it was the Governor-General who had invited the tender through the Director of Purchases, and it was the Governor-General who through the Chief Director of Purchases accepted the tender of the respondent subject to the conditions prescribed therein. There were no rules made by the Governor-General requiring the Officer authorised in that behalf to describe himself as signing on behalf of the Governor-General of India. Although, therefore, in that case the Court held affirming its earlier decision reported in AIR 1962 SC 113 (supra) that the requirements of S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935 were mandatory, the Court also held firstly, that the said provisions did not require a formal document to be executed between the parties and secondly, that a valid contract may result from correspondence, and thirdly that there is no need for the Officer authorised to enter into a contract, to describe himself as signing on behalf of the Governor-General of India in the absence of a direction to the contrary.

In AIR 1967 SC 203, (K. P. Chowdhry v. State of Madhya Pradesh), two questions arose for consideration. The first was whether the view taken by the High Court that

Art. 299 of the Constn. does not hit an implied contract and therefore the amount due under such contract was recoverable or not under S. 155 (b) of the Madhya Pradesh Land Revenue Code was correct, and secondly whether, if the view was not correct, the amount was recoverable under any other provision of law. While dealing with this question, the Court specifically referred to the aforesaid decisions and interpreted them in paras 6 to 9 of the judgment. While interpreting the decision in AIR 1962 SC 110 (supra) the Court stated that it was held there that the following three conditions had to be satisfied under S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935 viz. (1) the contract must be expressed to be made by the Governor or the Governor-General, (2) it must be executed in writing, and (3) the execution should be by such persons and in such manner as the Governor or the Governor-General might direct or authorise. According to the Court, it was further held there that S. 175 (3) did not prescribe any particular form in which the authority must be conferred and where an ad hoc authority was conferred on any person, the requirement must be held to have been satisfied. AIR 1962 SC 113 (supra) was interpreted by the Court as laying down that if a contract was to bind the Government it had, (a) to be expressed to be made by the Governor or Governor-General, (b) to be executed on behalf of the Governor or Governor-General, and (c) to be executed by an officer duly appointed in this behalf and in such manner as the Governor or the Governor-General directed or authorised. AIR 1962 SC 779 (supra) was interpreted by the Court as laying down that the provisions of S. 175 (3) were mandatory. According to the Court, the decision in Art. 1954 SC 236 was explained in that case and it was held there that it should be confined to its own facts in the context of the Representation of the People Act. According to the Court further it was held in that case that Section 70 of the Contract Act could be invoked against the Government if the person invoking it could show that he had acted lawfully and had not intended to act gratuitously and that the State had enjoyed the benefit. AIR 1963 SC 1685 (supra) was held to have laid down that so long as all the requirements of S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act were fulfilled and were clear from the correspondence, the said section did not necessarily require the execution of any formal document.

After reviewing the said decisions the Court stated in para 10 of the judgment, that firstly; in view of Art. 299 (1) of the Constn. there can be no implied contract between the Government and another person since if such implied contracts were allowed, that would in effect make Art. 299 (1) useless and a person who had a contract with the Government could get away by saying that an implied contract should be inferred from the facts and circumstances of a particular case. Secondly, if the contract is not in full compliance with Art. 299 (1), it would be no contract at all and could not be enforced either by the Government or by the other person as a contract. In the case which fell before the Court for consideration, there was no contract as required by Art. 299 (1) and therefore the view taken by the High Court that there was an implied contract was not sustained. The Court did not answer the second question because whether the amount could be recovered under any other provision of law was not investigated by the High Court and remanded the matter to the High Court for determining the said question.

In AIR 1972 SC 915, (Union of India v. N. K. Private Limited) the Court held that though the words "expressed" and "executed" in Article 299 (1) might suggest that it should be by a deed or by a formal written contract, a binding contract by tender and acceptance can also come into existence if the acceptance is by a person duly authorised in this behalf by the President of India. A contract whether by a formal deed or otherwise by persons not authorised by the President cannot be binding and is absolutely void.

In AIR 1977 SC 151, (Timber Kashmir Pvt. Ltd. v. Conservator of Forests, Jammu), again while construing the provisions of Art. 299 (1), the Court observed that although a contract cannot be executed without sanction, nevertheless if the sanction could be either expressly or impliedly given by or on behalf of the Government, and if some acts of the Government could fasten some obligations upon the Government, the lessee could also be estopped from questioning the terms of the grant of the sanction even where there is no written contract executed to bind the lessee. When there is any question to be decided as to whether the Government had sanctioned the leases, its actions, apart from the execution of leases, could be considered. But, once there has been a valid execution of leases by duly authorised officers, the documents would be the best evidence of sanction also. That was one of the objects of prescribing a formal mode of execution of instruments on behalf of the Government apart from the need to protect its interests against mala fide and other unauthorised acts of its servants or agents. This authority therefore lays down that a sanction could be expressed or implied and for enforcing such sanction, the actions, apart from the execution of the formal document can be considered when there is no formal document of contract.

12. We may now summarise the law on the subject which emerges from the aforesaid survey of the authorities as follows:— (a) A formal deed or document of contract is not necessary; (b) a contract can be inferred from correspondence; (c) a mere tender and acceptance is sufficient to constitute a valid contract; (d) the contract must be entered into by an authorised person. However, a contract entered into by an unauthorised person can be ratified by the Government particularly if it is for the benefit of the Government; (e) neither S. 175 (3) nor Article 299 (1) prescribe any particular mode in which authority has to be conferred. Normally such conferment is by a notification in an Official Gazette. But it can also be ad hoc on any person and when it is established, the requirements must be held to have been established.

Further, an authority need not be given by rules expressly promulgated for the purpose. Even where an authority is given by rules, a special authority can always be validly given in respect of a particular contract to an officer other than the officer notified under the rules; (f) the sanction to the contract can be expressly or impliedly given and while inferring the sanction, the actions, apart from the execution of the document can be considered; (g) a contract entered into without complying with the requirements of Section 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, or Article 299 (1) of the Constitution is void in the sense that it cannot be enforced by either party to the contract. However, it is not void for all purposes and it can be taken into consideration and looked into for collateral purposes. The contract can be said to exist validly for such purpose.

Such a contract is only relatively void i.e. void between the parties but not absolutely void i.e. void for all purposes.

13. For the last proposition we may also usefully refer to Chitty on Contracts, 24th Edition. In paragraph 17, the learned Author has discussed, "Unenforceable contracts" and has observed that "Unenforceable contracts are valid in all respects except that one or both parties cannot be sued on the contract. Instances of unenforceable contracts in English law are afforded by certain contracts which are not evidenced by a signed writing as required by certain statutes; contracts in respect of which the right of action is barred by the Limitation Act 1939 and contracts with a foreign sovereign or ambassador. In most cases the defect of unenforceability is curable. Thus, if written evidence of a contract of guarantee or a contract for the sale of an interest in land comes into existence, the contract becomes enforceable, though it was made orally; a right of action barred by the Limitation Act, 1939 may revive if the defendant makes a written acknowledgment of his indebtedness, or a part payment; a foreign sovereign or ambassador may waive his immunity. An unenforceable contract may be indirectly enforceable by other means than bringing an action. Thus a statute-barred debt may be recoverable indirectly if the creditor has a lien on goods of the debtor which are in his possession. Sometimes the contract is enforceable by one party but not by the other. Thus a contract for the sale of an interest in land can be enforced by the party who has not signed the note or memorandum against the other who has. More often, however, the contract is enforceable by neither party."

In paragraph 250 while discussing the same subject, he has observed as follows:—

"Contract unenforceable. A contract which fails to comply with the statutory formalities is not void but only unenforceable. No action can be brought to enforce it directly. Nor can it be indirectly enforced by suing on some other cause of action. Thus if A orally agreed to allow B to dig for gravel on A's land and later turns B and his machinery off the land, B cannot sue A in trespass. But as the contract is not void, it can sometimes be relied upon as a defence. Thus in the above example B does not commit a trespass by entering on the land and digging for the gravel: the oral contract operates as a licence and excuses the trespass. But once A withdraws the licence B will become a trespasser if he does not leave within a reasonable time; and if A then sues B for possession B cannot, in this action, rely on the oral contract as a defence. A fortiori A is entitled to turn B out or to sue for possession if he withdraws the licence before B enters but B nonetheless makes a clandestine entry.

As the contract is not void, money or property transferred under it cannot be recovered back; thus, if a purchaser pays a deposit under an oral contract, the vendor can retain the deposit, if the purchaser defaults. And a security given for the performance of the oral contract is not void for want of consideration merely because the oral contract is unenforceable; thus an action can be brought on a cheque given in payment of a deposit under the oral contract."

14. Taking into consideration the fact that the whole purpose of the provisions of the former Section 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935, and the present Article 299 (1) of the Constn., is firstly, to safeguard the public interests by not saddling the Government with liabilities and obligations under unauthorised contracts and secondly, to protect the interests of the third parties who enter into contracts with the Government daily, according to us, on the authorities of the Supreme Court discussed above, it will be proper to hold, that the contracts which do not fulfil statutory requirements are only relatively void in the sense that they are not enforceable by the parties to the contract. However, if the parties to the contract accept the obligations under them or if the formal defects in them are curable by such as ratification, the contracts need not be held to be absolutely void and can be said to exist validly for all other purposes. In particular they can be said to exist validly when third parties challenge their validity. In cases such as the present one where the validity of a contract is questioned in a collateral proceeding and for a collateral purpose by persons who have benefited by such contracts, such as the present allottees, it will have to be held that such contracts do validly exist.

We may however add that the view taken by the learned single Judge that the contracts in the present case being of monthly tenancy can be oral because Section 107 of the T. P. Act permits them is erroneous and contrary to law. When Government is a party to a contract the question to be considered is not whether a general statute such as the T. P. Act or the Contract Act permits a contract in a particular form, but whether the contract is in compliance of the mandatory provisions laid down in that behalf by the fundamental statute. Such provisions stand superimposed on the general law and have to be satisfied in addition to the requirements of the ordinary law. We therefore do not agree with the said view of the learned Judge.

15. We may also in this connection refer to the additional submission made by Shri

Desai on behalf of the respondents. He submitted that for exercising statutory powers no sanction is necessary. This argument was necessitated because it was argued on behalf of the appellants that the Garrison Engineer who took the premises on lease had, firstly, not done so far and on behalf of the Government of India and secondly, even if he had, he had no authority to do so. We will presently point out, while discussing the contract of lease in each of the three cases, that the record shows that the leases were entered into by the Garrison Engineer for and on behalf of the Government of India. As regards the second point what is pointed out on behalf of the respondents is that the Regulations for the Military Engineering Services which are a part of the Defence Service Regulations have given an authority for the hiring and de-hiring of lands and buildings to the local Commanders and such hiring and de-hiring has to be done through the agency of the Military Engineer Services. The relevant portion of Paragraph 613 of the said Regulations is as follows:—

“The hiring and de-hirings of lands and buildings for the Army (excluding Farms and Ordnance Factories), Navy and Air Force is the responsibility of the local commanders and will be carried out through the agency of the MES”

Paragraph 683 of the said Regulations further gives power to fix the rental of the building to the Garrison Engineer unless it is otherwise fixed by the Government of India. The paragraph reads as follows:—

“Rules regarding assessment, rates of recovery and remission of rent, including rent for internal electrical installations are contained in ‘Quarters and Rents’. The GE is authorised to fix the rent of a building unless otherwise fixed by the G of I. Market rates of rent will be fixed by the GE, where necessary, after ascertaining the prevailing rents in the market for similar accommodation, in consultation with the appropriate local civil authorities. Buildings in Factory estates will be assessed by the Factory authorities concerned.”

The relevant portion of paragraph 4 of the “Quarters and Rents” rules referred to above further reads as follows:—

“Appropriation and hiring of houses for military officers and messes, etc.—

(a) Accommodation required for all military officers (including R. A. F. officers and departmental officers) and messes for units, etc., for which a mess allowance is laid down in Pay and Allowance Regulations or in other Government orders, may be appropriated under the Cantonments (House Accommodation) Act, No. VI of 1923 as amended by Act IX of 1930, or hired, except in a hotel, by the local M. E. S. officer concerned, under the orders of the O. C. Station, provided that suitable quarters owned or hired by Government are not available (but see exceptions mentioned in para 3 (b) (iii).)”

There is no dispute that the M. E. S. Officer referred to therein is the Garrison Engineer. Although therefore it is not clear from the copy of the “Defence Services Regulations — Regulations for the Military Engineer Services 1968” (which is reprint of the original Regulations) produced before us as to under what provisions the said Regulations were made, there is no difficulty in holding that these Regulations which are printed and published in a book form have been issued under the authority of the Government of India as is made clear from the preface of the said Regulations written by the Secretary to the Government of India, Ministry of Defence. It can safely be held that it is the Government of India in the exercise of its executive powers, which has given the necessary authority to the Garrison Engineer to hire and de-hire lands and buildings and to fix their rental and thus to enter into contracts of leases on its behalf.

16. It is in the light of the aforesaid position of law that we may now examine the contracts in each of the three cases. Before we narrate the facts in each of the cases, it is necessary to remember that it is not in dispute that in all these cases there is a contract of lease. What is disputed is that the contracts are according to S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935 or Art. 299 (1) of the Constn. because, (i) there are no formal written leases, and (ii) it is not shown that the contracts have been entered into in the name of the Governor-General or the President of India and (iii) it has also not been shown that it has been entered into by an authorised officer. The facts to be examined will be in the light of the said three points of controversy.

I. In Appeal No. 215 of 1979 which pertains to the building Heliopolis, we have on record the letter dated 17-2-1943 written by the Office of the Garrison Engineer (Hirings), Bombay, to Mr. S. A. Patel, the landlord of the building. The relevant portions of the letter are as follows:—

“The Defence Department will hire the above flat for occupation by as from 1st January, 1943 on a monthly rental of Rs. 130/- which will be paid to you by the Government.

The flat will be inspected and formally taken over 11.30 hours on 23-2-1943 and it is requested that your representative be directed to attend."

Four things flow from this letter. Firstly it was the Defence Department which was to take the flat on lease. Secondly, the lease was to be a monthly one. Thirdly, the monthly rent was to be paid by the Government and lastly, the tenancy was to commence from 1st January 1943 although the possession of the flat was to be taken from 23-2-1943. There is no dispute that after this letter was written, the premises were taken possession of and were occupied as stated in the said letter. There is further no dispute that the rent is being paid by the Government from the Government treasury since that day. In view of the Military Engineer Services Regulations the Garrison Engineer had an authority to take the said premises on hire and that it was he who had taken the same for and on behalf of the Government of India and the rent was also being paid by him on their behalf. Although, therefore, there is no formal document of lease, these facts on record viz. letter dated 17-2-1943, the occupation of the flat from 23-2-1943, and rent receipts showing the payment of rent all along by the Government from its funds by an officer authorised for the purpose show that there was a contract of lease entered into between the landlord of the premises on the one hand and the Garrison Engineer on the other for and on behalf of the Government of India. This is therefore not a case of an oral lease but a lease spelt out from the documents on record.

II. In Appeal No. 216 of 1979 we are concerned with a flat in the building "Krishna Kunj". The document which is on record is the agreement dated 4-6-1965 entered into between the Trustees of the building and the President of India. The President of India has been described in that agreement as the tenant. This agreement recites that the tenant has been in occupation of the premises in question under a lease dated 17-9-1945 made between the Trustees and the tenant. This document therefore shows that there was a written agreement of tenancy entered into between the Trustees and the President of India as early as on 17-9-1945. The document further proceeds to recite that the Trustees have represented to the tenant that they will rebuild and reconstruct a new building on the same plot of land where the premises in question are now standing and that the Trustees will give on lease to the tenant, two flats of the description as are now being occupied and held by the tenant. It also further states that at the request of the Trustees, the tenant has agreed to vacate the portion of the building held by him on the condition that the Trustees will carry out and complete the demolition of the premises and thereafter construct a new building and hand over the new premises to the tenant within a stipulated period of time. The document also shows that the new premises will be given by the Trustees on lease and at a rent to be fixed by the Bombay Municipal Corporation. The document also states that on the completion of the new building, a fresh lease agreement in the form introduced by the Government of India will be executed between the parties. However, it also further states that the fresh tenancy will commence from the date of occupation by the tenant of the new premises and the tenancy shall be for a period of 10 years from the date of such commencement with option to the tenant to renew the same for a further period of 10 years.

There is no dispute that pursuant to this agreement the old premises were handed over and thereafter the new premises were occupied from July 1967. There is also no dispute that the rent is being paid monthly by the Government from the Government funds even after its occupation of the newly constructed premises in July 1967. There is further nothing on record to show that any fresh agreement of lease as contemplated in the agreement was entered into between the Government of India and the Trustees. Therefore, it can be legitimately held that since July 1967, there is a monthly tenancy created in favour of the Government of India as evidenced by the rent receipts on the same terms and conditions as the original tenancy was created. This is further not a case where it can seriously be doubted that the monthly tenancy was for and on behalf of the Government of India, and the agreement for the purpose was entered into by the Garrison Engineer i.e. the officer authorised in that behalf. This again is not a case of no agreement. The old agreement of 17-9-1945, the new agreement of 4-6-1965, the rent receipts and the occupation of the premises continuously show that the contract of a monthly tenancy had come into existence validly between the parties.

III. In Appeals Nos. 207, 214 and 217 of 1979, which relate to the premises in building Riviera, there is no formal document of lease, although the correspondence on record, the occupation of the premises and the payment of rent as evidenced by the rent receipts ever since their occupation from the year 1942 show that there is a validly concluded contract of monthly tenancy between the landlord and the Government of India. In the correspondence the first in the series of letters is a letter dated 13-4-1942 Exhibit 3 (a) which is addressed by the Flag Officer to the Commodore, informing him that the Government of India had given its sanction to the hiring of the premises at a monthly rental of Rs. 5,800/- on certain conditions. This letter further categorically states that the lease will be executed by the owner or his agent on his behalf and the Garrison Engineer, Bombay, on behalf of the Government of India, and if a stamped lease was required, the cost of the stamp would be met by the owner. The letter also states that the lease shall be for an initial period of three years, and it will be renewable month by month at the option of the Government at the same rent after the expiry of the period of three years. Three things are clear from this letter. Firstly, the Government of India had given its consent for taking the premises on lease. Secondly, the Government of India had also authorised the Garrison Engineer to execute the lease. This authorisation was in addition to the general authority under the Military Engineer Services Regulations referred to earlier. Thirdly, the payment of rent was monthly and the tenancy contemplated was a monthly one.

The next document is a copy of letter dated 16-4-1942 Exhibit 'A', from the Commodore, which states that the Government of India had given sanction for the hiring of the flats at a monthly rental of Rs. 5,800/-. The letter encloses a draft lease agreement which is Exhibit 'B' on record. This agreement shows that it was to be executed between the owner and the Garrison Engineer on behalf of the Government of India.

The third document is a letter dated 9-6-1942 Exhibit 20 on record which is written by Messrs Gilbert Lodge and Co., Solicitors of the owner to the Commodore, Royal Indian Navy, stating therein that the draft lease with corrections was being sent to the Commodore. It also mentions the fact that the landlord wished to execute the lease on or about the 20th of that month. It appears from the subsequent documents on record which are letters dated 18-6-1942 (Ex. 16), 25-6-1942 (Ex. 12), 9-7-1942 (Ex. 5), 20-7-1942 (Ex. 17), 1-8-1942 (Ex. 6), 27-8-1942 (Ex. 7) and 9-9-1942 (Ex. 18) that the drafts of the lease were exchanged between the parties and the possession of the premises was taken by the Government of India on 31-7-1942. The latter fact is evidenced by the contents of letter dated 1-8-1942 (Ex. 6) written by the Solicitors of the owner to the Garrison Engineer. Further there is correspondence between the Bombay Municipal Corporation and the Garrison Engineer on the subject. It appears that by his letter dated 9-9-1942 (Ex. 8) the Assessor and Collector of the Bombay Municipal Corporation had made a query to the Garrison Engineer asking him to forward information with regard to the lease of the premises and the Garrison Engineer by his letter dated 11-9-1942 (Ex. 19) had informed the Assessor and Collector, that the tenancy commenced from 1-9-1942 and the monthly rent of the premises was Rs. 5,800/-. It therefore appears that although the premises were occupied on 31-7-1942, the tenancy had commenced from 1-9-1942. This it appears was because the premises were not ready for occupation in all respects as evidenced from the letters exchanged between the parties which are a letter (Ex. 12) dated 25-6-1942 from the Solicitors of the owners to the Commodore, Royal Indian Navy, and another letter (Ex. 17) dated 20-7-1942 from the Garrison Engineer to the Solicitors of the owners. We have also on record a letter dated 30-10-1942 (Ex. 9) from the Station Staff Officer, Head Quarters Bombay, to the Garrison Engineer (Hiring) informing him that sanction was accorded to the hiring of the said premises on a monthly rental of Rs. 5,800/- with effect from 1-8-1942. It further appears from the correspondence (Ex. C collectively) on record that till 1-3-1945, a formal lease agreement was not executed between the parties. Letter dated 24-2-1945 which is part of Ex. C (Colly.) and which is written by the Solicitors of the owner of the premises, mentions the fact that the building had been in the occupation of the officers belonging to the Royal Indian Navy on behalf of the Government since Aug. 1942 and laments that although more than one draft of the lease had been prepared and approved and reapproved even as late as on 26-8-1944 and it was stipulated that the Government would pay rent of Rs. 5,800/- per month for the entire building, the rent of only Rs. 5,000/- per month was being paid. It appears from this letter that there was some dispute going on between the parties with regard to the responsibility of the costs of repairs and maintenance. The Solicitors therefore had suggested some modifications in the agreement under this letter. This was responded to on behalf of the Government by the Officer in charge of the Defence Accounts Department by letter dated 1-3-1945 by suggesting further amendments in the agreement. There are no further documents on record in respect of the said lease. However, it is not disputed before us that the premises concerned have been in occupation of the Government of India since 1-8-1942, that the rent is being paid monthly by the Government either from 1-8-1942 or from 1-9-1942. The correspondence also shows that the Garrison Engineer had received in addition to the general authority a special or ad hoc authority to enter into the contract of lease, that the Government has approved of the said contract of lease and had also sanctioned the main terms of the lease including the rental. There is further no dispute today between the landlord of the premises and the Government that a valid monthly lease exists between the parties. These facts therefore according to us are sufficient to establish a validly concluded monthly contract of lease in respect of the premises. This is again not a case of an oral lease but a lease as evidenced by the documents on record.

17. We are therefore of the view that in all the three cases viz. the premises in Hello-lopis, Krishna Kunj and Riviera, the correspondence and the relevant documents on record together with the rent receipts and the continuous occupation clearly establish that there have been valid leases of the premises between the Government of India and the landlords concerned. The validity of these leases further is not challenged by either of the parties to the contracts for the alleged failure to comply with the requirements of S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935 or Art. 299 (1) of the Constitution as the case may be. In fact both the parties to the contract have accepted the leases as valid and have been fulfilling their respective obligations under them.

We are further of the view that assuming that there is some non-compliance with the statutory requirements in executing the said leases, in the first instance, the Government has not disowned the same and secondly it has every right to ratify them since it is for its benefit and the Government has ratified them. In fact, the Government has been pursuing proceedings against the allottees i. e. the present appellants on the basis that the leases are valid.

18. Assuming that we are wrong in the view we have taken that the statutory requirements have been complied with in respect of the leases, there is no reason why in the present case, a presumption under Section 114 of the Evidence Act that the official acts have been regularly performed, should not be drawn. The provision of the said section enables the Court to presume the existence of any fact which it thinks likely to have happened, regard being had to the common course of natural events, human conduct and public and private business, in their relations to the facts of the particular case. Illustration (e) under the said section enables the Court to presume that the judicial and official acts have been regularly performed and Illustration (f) states that the Court may also presume that the common course of business has been followed in particular cases. In all the three cases, we have pointed out that it was the intention of the Government of India to take the premises on lease. Pursuant to this intention, the premises were taken possession of by the Government of India and ever since the date of such possession, the rents of the premises are being paid regularly from 1940 till today. None of the parties to the contract further, has ever disputed their validity and they have been fulfilling their obligations under them. Therefore, it will be legitimate to presume that the leases have been taken by and on behalf of the Government of India by the Officers authorised for the purpose and on the terms and conditions apparent on the record.

By virtue of S. 114 of the Evidence Act we will also be justified in presuming that the Military Engineer Service Regulations referred to earlier as stated in their preface have been framed in the normal course of business under the authority of the Government of India. Since the contracts have been entered into by the Garrison Engineer in exercise of his powers under the said Regulations, the provisions of S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935 or that of Art. 299 (1) of the Constn. will not come into play. For all these reasons we are of the view that there is no defect whatsoever in the contracts of leases in question.

19. The next question that falls for our consideration is, assuming that the leases are invalid, can the authorities under the said Act enquire into their validity at the instance of the third parties such as the allottees and to what extent?

According to us, for the reasons stated hereafter, the Estate Officer appointed under S. 3 of the said Act as well as the Appellate Authority under S. 9 thereof have only to satisfy themselves that the facts giving rise to their jurisdiction have been established. Once those facts are established it is not open for them to go into the validity of those facts. Not only that but their finding that such facts do exist and therefore give them the jurisdiction can only be challenged by the procedure laid down in the said Act and not in a separate proceeding. If a Tribunal appointed under an Act is vested with jurisdiction to try cases arising out of the said Act, the Tribunal is also vested with the power to decide the existence or non-existence of facts giving rise to such jurisdiction, and the Tribunal's finding thereon even if wrong can be assailed only before the authorities if any under the Act. Unless such finding is without any evidence on record or perverse or contrary to the evidence it is not liable to be questioned in a separate proceeding such as the Writ Petition under Arts. 226 and 227 of the Constn. We may in this connection refer to the relevant authorities.

In AIR 1950 SC 222, (Province of Bombay v. Khushaldas S. Advani) at page 242 in para 78 of the judgment the Court has observed as follows :—

“One other question arises in this connection and that relates to the second and alternative contention raised by the learned Attorney-General. When the legislature delegates powers to an authority, and lays down that the powers could be exercised only if a certain state of facts exists, obviously the authority cannot act if the condition is not fulfilled. If it wrongly holds or assumes that the condition exists although it actually does not exist, its assumption of jurisdiction would be unsupportable, and could be removed by a writ of certiorari. The Legislature however may entrust the authority with a jurisdiction which includes the jurisdiction to determine whether the preliminary state of facts exists. In such cases even if the authority makes a wrong decision either of facts or law, it can be corrected by an appellate tribunal if there is any, but not by a writ of certiorari, as every authority if it acts within jurisdiction is competent to decide both rightly or wrongly, Per Esher L. J., in Queen v. Commrs. for Special Purposes of the Income-tax, (1888) 21 QBD 313 at p. 319.”

This authority therefore clearly lays down that where the Legislature entrusts an authority with a jurisdiction also to determine whether the preliminary state of facts exist, even if the authority makes a wrong decision either of fact or law, it can be corrected by an Appellate Tribunal if there is any, but not by a Writ of Certiorari, as every authority is competent to decide both rightly or wrongly so long as it is given jurisdiction to do so.

In AIR 1955 SC 661 (Bengal Immunity Co. Ltd. v. State of Bihar) which reiterates what is stated in the above case, it is observed in paragraph 144 as follows :—

“... .. We are not here concerned with a statute whose ‘vires’ is not in question, and which confers jurisdiction on any authority to take proceedings if certain facts exist and the enquiry directed by the authority is as to whether those facts exist. The determination in such a case is incidental to the effective exercise by the authority of its undisputed jurisdiction and if, as a result of that enquiry, it came to an erroneous conclusion, there is no error of jurisdiction, and it might well be contended in that case that the remedy of the party aggrieved was to resort to the machinery provided in the statute itself by way of appeal or revision, and that a writ of prohibition would be misconceived.”

In AIR 1970 SC 672, (Shauqin Singh v. Desa Singh) and on which much reliance was placed on behalf of the appellants, in para 6 of its judgment, the Court, while dealing with the jurisdiction of the Chief Settlement Commissioner under S. 24 (2) of the Displaced Persons (Compensation and Rehabilitation) Act 44 of 1954, has stated as follows :—

“... .. The Chief Settlement Commissioner has, therefore, power under subsection (2) to cancel an allotment if he is satisfied that the order of allotment of land had been “obtained by means of fraud, false representation or concealment of any material fact.” The power is judicial and by the use of the expression “is satisfied” the Chief Settlement Commissioner is not made the final arbiter of the facts on which the conclusion is reached. The jurisdiction of the Chief Settlement Commissioner arises only if an allotment is obtained by means of fraud, false representation or concealment of material facts. The relevant satisfaction is a jurisdictional fact on the existence of which alone the power may be exercised. A superior authority or the High Court in a writ petition would, therefore, be entitled to consider whether there was due satisfaction by the Chief Settlement Commissioner on material placed before him and that the order was made not arbitrarily, capriciously or perversely.”

It must be remembered that in the aforesaid case the Court was dealing with the exercise of jurisdiction by the Chief Settlement Commissioner where the Commissioner had arrived at a finding without any evidence. This was not a case where the authority had come to the conclusion that it had jurisdiction on the basis of evidence placed before it. It is in these circumstances that the Court observed that the High Court in a Writ Petition would be entitled to consider whether there was due satisfaction by the Chief Settlement Commissioner on materials placed before him and that the order was made not arbitrarily, capriciously or perversely.

In AIR 1973 SC 1362, (Raza Textiles Ltd., Rampur v. Income-tax Officer, Rampur), the Court was dealing with the exercise of jurisdiction by the Income-tax Officer under Section 18 (3-B) read with S. 18 (7) of the Income-tax Act, 1922 which required the assessee to pay certain taxes on a sum remitted by him as selling-commission to a non-resident. The question involved was whether the firm to whom the remittance was made was resident or non-resident. It was the contention of the assessee that the firm was not a non-resident firm. The Income-tax Officer having held that the firm was non-resident and directed the payment of tax, the assessee went in appeal to the Appellate Assistant Commissioner. The Appellate Assistant Commissioner rejected the appeal on the ground that the same was not maintainable since an appeal lay to him under Section 30 (1-A) only if the assessee had deducted the tax due from the non-resident in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (3-B) and had paid the sum so deducted to the Government. This order of the Appellate Assistant Commissioner was confirmed by the Tribunal. The appellant thereafter moved the High Court under Art. 226 of the Constn. The learned single Judge who heard the matter, came to the conclusion that the firm was not a non-resident firm and therefore the appellant was not required to act under Section 18 (3-B). The Revenue went in appeal against the order of the learned single Judge and the Division Bench allowed the appeal observing that the question before the Income-tax Officer was whether the firm was non-resident or not. There was material before him on this question and he had jurisdiction to decide the question either way. It could not be said that the officer assumed jurisdiction by wrong decision on the question of residence. It is while commenting upon this decision of the Division Bench that the Supreme Court observed that the Bench was under an impression that the Income-tax Officer was the sole Judge of the fact that whether the firm in question was resident or non-resident. According to the Court further no authority, much less a quasi-judicial authority can confer jurisdiction on itself while considering a jurisdictional fact wrongly. The question whether the jurisdictional fact has been rightly decided or not is a question which is open for examination by the High Court in an application for a Writ of Certiorari.

In AIR 1974 SC 125, (State of U. P. v. Anand Swarup), the question which fell before the Court was one arising out of the provisions of U. P. Government Premises (Rent Recovery and Eviction) Act, 1952. The point at issue was whether the premises were requisitioned by the Government and, if by the District Magistrate, whether they were requisitioned by him in exercise of the powers validly delegated to him by the Government. This question arose in a suit which was filed by the occupant of the premises against the Government for a permanent injunction restraining the State and the District Magistrate who was made defendant in the case from recovering certain amount and from threatening to evict him from a portion of the premises. It was the contention of the plaintiff that the premises were not requisitioned. The Court came to the conclusion that on the material on record it was not possible to say that the premises in suit were a requisitioned property and therefore Government premises within the meaning of that Act because no notification containing the order of requisition had been produced either before the High Court or before the Court although an opportunity was offered by the Court in that behalf. Therefore the Court held that the said Act did not apply to the premises in question. This was again a case where there was no evidence on record to show that the premises were requisitioned.

The next case is reported in AIR 1961 SC 1549, (Collector of Customs, Baroda v. Digvijaysinhji Spinning and Weaving Mills Ltd., Jamnagar). In that case the point was whether the Chief Customs Authority while acting under Section 190 of the Sea Customs Act had power to commute the order of confiscation to a penalty not exceeding the value of the goods confiscated. Under the said section, the Authority had power to pass such an order subject to the conditions laid down in that section viz. that it should have obtained the consent of the party whose goods were confiscated. It is with reference to these facts that the Court observed that "in a case like this when the validity of an order depends upon the fulfilment of a condition, the party relying upon the presumption in favour of the regular performance of an official act, should at least show that the order on the face of it is regular and is in conformity with the provisions of the statute." The Court further observed that "if the order of the Chief Customs Authority ex facie does not show that it was made under Section 190 of the Act, nor any proof is offered to establish that fact by necessary evidence, then it must be held that it has not been established that the Chief Customs Authority made its order under Section 190 of the Act with the consent of the owner of goods ordered to be confiscated." (emphasis supplied)

This authority therefore holds that the order must at least ex facie show that it satisfies the condition for the exercise of the power.

20. A scrutiny of these authorities shows that the Tribunal appointed under a special Act has to satisfy itself that it has jurisdiction to pass orders. The Tribunal is not the sole Judge of the question whether the jurisdictional fact has been rightly or wrongly decided. If the decision is without evidence, perverse, contrary to facts or without application of mind, it can be corrected. However no authority has gone to the extent of saying that although the jurisdictional facts are established, the Tribunal can enquire into their validity or otherwise. We are therefore of the view that once the jurisdictional facts are established it is not open for such Tribunal to conduct a collateral enquiry into the validity or otherwise of the said facts. In a case such as the present one, once the authorities under the Act satisfy themselves that the premises are taken on lease by the Government, the Tribunal is not required to go into the question of the validity of the lease.

21. On behalf of the appellants, two authorities of this Court were cited to show that the lease must positively be established to have been taken by and on behalf of the Government and unless it is done it cannot be held that the Government is a tenant of the premises. The first is an unreported decision of the Division Bench consisting of Chainani, C. J. and K. K. Desai, J. in Spl. Civil Appln. No. 112 of 1962, (State of Maharashtra v. J. S. Bagayatkari) decided on 14-9-1962. In that case the facts were that the Commissioner of Police had taken the premises on lease sometime in 1939, and the flat was allotted to a Sub-Inspector of Police who was the opponent No. 1 in that case in 1950. On 2-11-1950, the Commissioner of Police wrote a letter to the landlord in which he stated that from 25th Sept. onwards the rent would be paid to the landlord directly by the opponent. Since then the rent was all along being paid by the opponent and receipts for payment of rent were also issued in the name of the opponent. After the opponent retired from service in 1964, he was asked to vacate the premises. He did not do so and therefore the Commissioner of Police made an application to the competent authority for an order under the Bombay Government Premises (Eviction) Act, 1955. The competent authority passed an eviction order against the opponent. In appeal, the Principal Judge, City Civil Court, came to the conclusion that the premises had not been leased by the State Government. It is in these circumstances that the question which arose before the Division Bench was whether the premises were leased by the Government. On facts, the Division Bench came to the conclusion that the letter which the Commissioner of Police wrote to the landlord in 1939 showed that the premises had been leased by the Commissioner in his own name. The receipts were issued by the landlord in the name of the Commissioner of Police and not in the name of the State Government. The Court therefore held that the lease in the case was taken by the Commissioner of Police in his own name and therefore it was difficult to hold that the premises had been leased by the State Government. We have pointed out that in our case, the leases have all along been taken for and on behalf of the Government of India.

The next unreported decision relied upon is of a learned single Judge, Chandurkar J. in Special Civil Application No. 665 of 1975, (Dr. K. E. Sopariwalla v. M. K. Vaswani) decided on 30-6-1976. It must be remembered at the outset that the Trustees viz. the landlords of the premises had filed a suit for ejectment against the Military Estate Officer, on the ground that it was the Military Estate Officer who was the lessee of the premises. The defence taken by the Military Estate Officer was that the premises were taken on lease by the Government of India and not by the Military Estate Officer and therefore the suit was bad in law. (emphasis supplied).

The trial Court held that the lease was through the Government of India and therefore notice under Section 80 of the Civil P. C. was necessary and since no such notice was given, the suit was not maintainable. The Appeal Bench of the Small Causes Court held that there was no compliance with the provisions of Art. 299 (1) of the Constn. and hence there was no valid contract of lease between the Government of India and the landlord. The Court therefore came to the conclusion that there was no lease in favour of the Government of India. However, the Court held that the Military Estate Officer against whom the decree was sought was not a legal entity and therefore no decree could be passed in the suit. The Appeal Court therefore dismissed the plaintiffs' suit. It is aggrieved by this decision that the plaintiffs came in writ petition under Art. 227 of the Constn. before this Court and while dealing with this situation, the learned single Judge took the view that it was not established on behalf of the defendant who was resisting the suit that the premises were taken on lease by the Government and not by the Military Estate Officer. It is for this reason that this Court decreed the plaintiff's suit which was filed against the Military Estate Officer. Incidentally, it may be stated that while coming to this conclusion the learned single Judge had an occasion to refer to the 1963 reprint of the Regulations for the Military Engineer Services, 1936. The learned Judge after referring to these Regulations observed that it was not shown that the document of lease entered into by the Garrison Engineer in that case was on behalf of the Government of India or was in the exercise of any executive authority as contemplated by Section 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935. We have already pointed out that in our case there is no lis between the parties to the contracts of lease. In fact, both the parties to the contracts of lease accept the fact that the leases have been executed for and on behalf of the Government of India. Secondly, we have also held that in our case the Garrison Engineer has been authorised to enter into the lease-contracts. The ratio of the said two decisions therefore will be clearly inapplicable to the facts of our case.

We therefore hold that even assuming the leases are defective for non-compliance with the provisions of Section 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935 or of Art. 299 (1) of the Constn., it is not open for the appellants to challenge the said leases and the Estate Officer or the Appellate Authority under the Act cannot go into the question of the validity or otherwise of the leases. Once the factum of lease is established which has been done in the present case the authorities under the Act get jurisdiction to enquire under the Act.

22. Assuming we are wrong in our aforesaid conclusions, we are of the view that there is no reason why the present premises should not fall within the expression "belonging to the Central Government" in the definition of "public premises" in S. 2 (e) of the said Act. There is no doubt that the expression "belonging to" does not mean the same thing as "owned by". The two expressions have two different connotations. The expression "belonging to" will take within its sweep not only ownership but also rights lesser than that of ownership. It must be remembered in this connection that the expressions used in the statute are to be interpreted and given meaning in the context in which they are used. The present Act has been placed on the statute book to give a summary remedy to the Government to evict persons in occupation of public premises to obviate the long ordeal of trial in a Civil Court and of further proceedings thereafter. Hence a wider meaning will have to be given to the expressions used in the Act for defining the concept of public premises. So viewed there is no reason why the premises of which possession for the time being vests in the Government and which are allotted by the Government to others while so in possession should not be held to be public premises.

In AIR 1965 SC 1923, (Mahomed Amir Ahmad Khan v. Municipal Board of Sitapur), the Supreme Court was called upon to consider the expression "belonging to me" used by the tenant in an application to the Compensation Officer under Act 26 of 1948 for the Rehabilitation of Refugees. While commenting upon this in para 14 of the judgment the Court observed as follows:—

"Now to revert to paragraphs 2, 5 and 8 which the learned Judges considered amounted to a clear and unequivocal denial of the Government's title, they referred in para 2 to the words 'belonging to me' as constituting a disclaimer of the tenancy and a repudiation of the landlord's title. We do not agree that this is the only or proper construction which the words are capable of bearing. Though the word "belonging" no doubt is capable of denoting an absolute title, is nevertheless not confined to connoting that sense. Even possession of an interest less than that of full ownership could be signified by that word. In Webster 'belong to' is explained as meaning inter alia 'to be owned by, be the possession of'. The precise sense which the word was meant to convey can therefore be gathered only by reading the document as a whole and adverting to the context in which it occurs."

"Property 'belonging' to a person, has two general meanings, (1) ownership, (2) the absolute right of user: 'A road may be said, with perfect propriety to belong to a man who has the right to use it as of right, although the soil does not belong to him'."

Therefore where a person has an absolute right to user i.e. right of user even against the owner, it can be said that the property belongs to him. It must be remembered that the absolute right of user is distinct from the possessory title which a person has against the whole world except the true owner. In the present case, in the first instance there is no dispute between the landlord and the Government that the Government is the monthly tenant of the premises in question. Secondly, even under the Bombay Rent Act, by virtue of Section 4 (1) thereof, the Government's tenancy is protected. Therefore, it can legitimately be held that the Government has an absolute right of user of the premises in question. If this is so, then the premises can properly be said to "belong to" the Government. Since we have already observed that the expression "belonging to" does not merely include the right of ownership but also something less than that and since further the premises of which the absolute right of user vests in a person can be said to belong to him, the present premises will squarely be embraced by the definition of public premises within the meaning of the said Act.

We may usefully refer, in this connection, to two authorities. In (1950) 52 Bom LR 688 : (AIR 1951 Bom 205), (Laxmipat Singhania v. Larsen & Toubro Ltd.), the facts were that the plaintiff had filed a suit for eviction against the defendants who were a Company to whom a portion of the building was let out. The plaintiff's predecessor had taken on lease the land from the Port Trust for constructing the building. After constructing the building, he had let out a portion of the same to the defendants. The question was whether the building belonged to the Port Trust or to the plaintiff. If it belonged to the Port Trust the Rent Court had no jurisdiction in view of S. 4 (1) of the Bombay Rent Act. While holding that the building belonged to the plaintiff the Court observed as follows (at p. 209 of AIR) :—

"These decisions in my opinion establish that there may be in relation to property a dual ownership for a limited period of time; and it would be possible to say in such cases that even a person who was not the absolute owner but had a right of ownership limited to that period was a person to whom the property belonged. No doubt these cases related to moveable property; but I do not conceive that the principle is any different when we are dealing with immoveable property. The tests as to whether for a limited period of time a temporary ownership has been created is according to the cases (1) whether there is a demise of the property, (2) whether there is full dominion and control over the property in the demisee and (3) whether the risk of the property falls on the demisee, or the absolute owner.

Applying these principles to the case of a lease of land together with the building for a limited period of time — particularly a period as long as 99 years — it appears to me that if the lease demises the land with the building and confers on the transferee full dominion and control over the property, the transferee taking the risk of the property, then, for that limited period, the lessee is the owner of the property and the property can be said to belong to him. Ownership is nothing more than a bundle of rights in relation to property. The aggregate of rights constitutes absolute ownership. It may be that during a stated period some of these rights are vested in one person and some in others. In the case of a lessor and a lessee such as we are considering, the lessee has the right of reversion which of course is not tangible immovable property, but an intangible thing. He has also a right of re-entry under the terms of the lease and he has further a right by covenant to claim the building upon termination of the lease or upon its determination in any other manner provided by the lease. With regard to all other rights in the property, these vest completely in the lessee for the limited period of time. It seems to be that it is the lessee who is under the circumstances the owner qua at any rate those to whom he has let or sublet such premises. It is consistent with dual ownership that qua the lessee it may be that the lessor is the owner of the property; and in any proceedings between the lessor and the lessee it would be possible to say that the premises belonged to the lessor and not to the lessee. That is not the case before me. The case here arises between the lessee and those to whom he has let the premises. I have no doubt in my mind that qua the defendants in these two suits the premises in suit belong to the plaintiff and to nobody else so long as the lease is subsisting. That being so, those premises are not excluded from the operation of the Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act, and this Court has therefore no jurisdiction to entertain or try either of these suits."

In AIR 1977 Bom 220 (S. R. B. Kaikwad v. Union of India), what fell for consideration was the status of the Central Government as the lessee when the lease is determined and the Government becomes a statutory tenant under the Bombay Rent Act. While construing the meaning of public premises in this context, the Court observed as follows :—

"Even where the lease in favour of the Central Government is determined and the Central Govt. becomes a statutory tenant under the Bombay Rent Act, 1947 the premises do not cease to be public premises within the meaning of Section 2 (e). The Act is not so much concerned with the title as with the possessory rights vested in the Central Government and Section 2 (e) only indicates the sources by which such right to possession can be acquired, one such being, the taking of the premises on lease from its owner. The definition thus is descriptive of the source or origin of the possessory rights acquired by the Central Government. It is the continuance of the vesting of this possessory right in Government and not so much the origin thereof, that makes any premises, a public premises under the Act. The contract of lease, no doubt, gives rise to the estate and interest of the lessee in the property, bare right to possession being only a part of such estate and interest. The determination of the lease, no doubt puts an end to the contract and such interest and the estate. However, provisions of the Bombay Rent Act afford some protection to the tenants against eviction and prevents such determination of lease from having its full effect. In spite of the determination of the lease and incapacity of the tenant and the landlord to enforce the terms of the contract, the ex-tenant actually happens to enjoy still, what once was the fruit and the product of the same contractual lease. In other words, the entire interest covered by the possessory right created by the contract does not come to an end with the determination of the lease but part of it, at any rate, i.e., the bare right to remain in possession still survives and is protected by the Rent Act. The right to possession acquired by the Central Government under the lease on taking the same on lease, thus continues to exist and is protected, though the lease interest and the estate comes to an end. The premises do not cease to have been "taken on lease" as the phraseology is merely descriptive of how the possessory right originated. The loss of contractual security, and the substitution thereof by the cover of the protection under the Rent Act does not affect, at any rate, the kernel, i.e. the possessory right which also was the creature of the contractual lease. It is difficult to see how the premises cease to be public premises when in spite of the determination of the lease, possessory right created thereunder continues to be vested in the Government."

The aforesaid observations reinforce the conclusion that where a person has an absolute right to user i.e. the right of user even against the owner, it can truly be said that the premises belong to such person though he is not the owner of the same. In the present case therefore, on the facts discussed earlier it can validly be held that the premises belong to the Central Government. Even assuming therefore that we are wrong in our conclusion that the premises are leased to the Central Government, the premises will be public premises within the meaning of the said Act and therefore the orders passed evicting the appellants are valid in law.

23. The Appellate Authority viz. the Principal Judge, City Civil Court, Bombay, has also held that by virtue of the possessory title of the Government, it can be said that the premises "belong to" the Government and therefore they are public premises. The nature of the possessory title as explained earlier is that a person in possession is entitled to remain in possession as against the whole world except the true owner. Even the owner cannot dispossess him except by due process of law. If this is so and if the present appellants have come into the premises under the cover of the possessory title of the Central Government, there is no reason why the phrase "belonging to" should not be construed to include such possessory title. We have our own doubts as to whether the phrase "belonging to" would include a mere possessory title. However it is not necessary for us to express any final opinion on the same either way. In the view that we have taken viz. that the premises are leased to the Central Government and in any case they belong to the Central Government on account of its absolute right of user of the same, according to us the appellants are liable to be evicted from the said premises. Although therefore we are unable to agree with the learned single Judge that an oral lease is a sufficient compliance with the provisions either of S. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act, 1935 or of Art. 299 (1) of the Constitution, we are of the view that in the circumstances there is no substance in these appeals and they will have to be dismissed.

24. In the result, the appeals fail and are hereby dismissed with costs.

25. The appellants apply for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court. Leave is refused for according to us there is no substantial question of law of public importance involved in the case which requires to be determined by the Supreme Court.

26. The appellants are given time to vacate the premises in their occupation till 31st July, 1982.

Appeals dismissed.

M/s. Hirjee Veerjee and Co., Appellant v. Smt. Saroja Narayan Shetty and others, Respondents.

First Appeal No. 78 of 1974, D/- 15-4-1982.

Fatal Accidents Act (13 of 1855), Ss. 1-A, 2 — Determination of compensation — Mode of — Receipt of insurance amount — Not the whole of it but only the value of acceleration is to be excluded. 1972 Acc CJ 334 (Punj and Har), 1975 Acc CJ 56 (Delhi), AIR 1980 Him Pra 16 and AIR 1982 Delhi 1, Dissented from.

The principle to be followed in determining the pecuniary loss to the dependants of the deceased is that the actual extent of the pecuniary loss to the dependants has to be determined and this can be ascertained only by balancing on the one hand the loss to the claimants of the future pecuniary benefit and on the other any pecuniary advantage which, from whatever source, comes to them by reason of the death, that is, the balance of loss and gain to a dependant by the death must be ascertained. 1942 AC 601, 1951 AC 601, 105 Commonwealth LR 569 and AIR 1962 SC 1, Rel. on.

(Para 28)

The only benefit which has to be valued in terms of money, which accrues to the heirs in the case of a policy of insurance on the life of the deceased is the benefit of acceleration. Such benefit may fairly be taken to be represented by the interest on the life insurance moneys received for the period of acceleration which would be the difference between the age up to which the deceased would normally be expected to have lived and the age at which he died as a result of the fatal accident. The rate of interest will, of course depend on the relevant facts in each case. Hence it could not be said that the entire amount of life insurance is liable to be deducted. (1888) 13 AC 800, (1942) AC 601, 1975 Acc CJ 396 (Delhi) and 1977 Acc CJ 72 (Kant), Rel. on.; AIR 1978 Bom 239, Explained, 1972 Acc CJ 334 (Punj and Har), 1975 Acc CJ 56 (Delhi), AIR 1980 Him Pra 16, AIR 1982 Delhi 1, Dissented from. (Para 37)

If the liability has to be determined by striking a balance between the pecuniary loss and the pecuniary benefit, then the mere fact that in a given case at the foot of such a balance-sheet the amount is zero or less than the insured amount, will not in any way affect the merits of the question as to whether the insurance amount, in law, is liable to be deducted in whole or in part at all.

(Para 40)

The nature of compensation which is made payable under the Fatal Accidents Act is not punitive. The damages are really of a compensatory nature and if in arriving at such compensation the necessary factors which have now been crystallised by the decisions have to be taken into account, then the mere fact that in a given case, the liability of the wrongdoer is reduced, will not be very relevant. CHANDURKAR, J.— This appeal by defendant No. 1 against the judgment and decree of the Civil Judge, Senior Division, Thane, awarding compensation of Rupees 1,49,400/- under the Fatal Accidents Act, has been referred to the Full Bench by the Division Bench consisting of Dharmadhikari and S. J. Deshpande, JJ. as they felt that the decision of another Division Bench of this Court in Jaikumar v. Mary Jerome D'Souza, AIR 1978 Bom 239, in so far as it took the view that the amount received from Life Insurance Policy on the death of the deceased was liable to be deducted from the compensation to which the plaintiffs were entitled, required reconsideration.

2. Since the whole appeal has been referred to the Full Bench, it becomes necessary to briefly state the facts leading to the present appeal.

3. The original plaintiffs Nos. 1 to 5 are the legal representatives of deceased Narayan Shetty. Plaintiff No. 1 is the widow of deceased Narayan. Plaintiff No. 2, who was then a minor, is his son. Plaintiffs Nos. 3 and 4 are his daughters and plaintiff No. 5 is the mother of the deceased. It is not now in dispute that on 7th December, 1969 at about 10 a.m. when the deceased was driving his motor vehicle No. MRC 3011 and was proceeding from Thane on Agra Road towards Bhiwandi side, there was a collision with a motor lorry of the appellants which was driven by driver Damodar from the opposite direction. The motor car was heavily damaged. Narayan Shetty sustained serious injuries and he succumbed to these injuries on the same day at 1.30 p.m. in the Civil Hospital at Thane. Narayan Shetty was about 45 years of age at the time of his death. He had taken technical education in Germany in 1965 and in 1966 had started his own industry called Rubber Products Pvt. Ltd., of which he was a Managing Director and was drawing a salary of Rs. 2,500/- per month. In addition, he was earning commission on sales.

4. In the suit filed by the plaintiffs for compensation under the Fatal Accidents Act, the plaintiffs claimed Rs. 2,50,000/- as damages under different heads specified in Schedule A to the plaint, with which we are not concerned at this stage. Out of the amount of Rs. 2,50,000/-, the pecuniary loss to the estate of the deceased was estimated at Rs. 2,30,000/- and Rs. 20,000/- were claimed on account of pain and suffering prior to the death and shortening the expectation of life.

5. The defendants, namely, the present appellant and defendant No. 2 Messrs South India Insurance Co. Ltd. Bombay, contested the claim of the plaintiffs that the accident was a result of rash and negligent driving by the driver of the lorry of defendant No. 1 and their case was that the accident occurred due to the negligence of the deceased himself and the appellant company in fact claimed to be entitled to Rs. 5,199.41 as damages caused to their lorry by the car of the deceased. Defendant No. 2, the Insurance Company pleaded that it was not liable to pay anything to the plaintiffs in excess of Rs. 20,000/- which was the statutory limit.

6. On evidence given before the trial Court it was found that the defendant No. 1's driver Damodar had driven the lorry rashly and negligently and thereby he knocked the car which was driven by the deceased Narayan. The plea of contributory negligence of the deceased was negatived. While dealing with the question of determination of quantum of compensation, the trial Court found that if the deceased was alive, the net gain of the members of the family would have been

Rs. 1,000/- per month or Rs. 12,000/- per year. Holding that deceased Narayan would have led active earning life till 60 years and on the finding that the age of the deceased Narayan at the time of death was 45 years and that he was a healthy man with a robust constitution, the trial Court found that the deceased's family had lost the benefits of the financial contribution by the deceased for 15 years and the total loss was thus estimated at Rs. 1,80,000/-. In so far as the claim under Section 2 of the Fatal Accidents Act, 1855, was concerned, the trial Court took the view that the claim of Rs. 20,000/- was excessive, though the plaintiffs were entitled to be granted some amount under that head. Finding that deceased Narayan had died within two hours of the accident and was unconscious and had never regained consciousness, the trial Court granted Rs. 1,000/- as damages for pain and suffering of the deceased and Rs. 9,000/- for loss of expectancy of life. The total amount of compensation payable to the plaintiffs was thus computed at Rs. 1,90,000/-.

7. After the death of deceased Narayan, the company of which the deceased was the Managing Director had paid to plaintiff No. 1 a sum of Rs. 1,000/- per month for two years in pursuance of a resolution of the company which stated that the amount was being paid in consideration of meritorious services rendered and sacrifices made by deceased Narayan in building up the company and raising it to its unique position. Holding that the said amount of Rs. 24,000/- was received by plaintiff No. 1 because of death of Narayan Shetty and further holding that though the amount was in consideration of meritorious services, it would not have been paid but for the death of Narayan, the trial Court took the view that the amount of Rs. 24,000/- should be deducted from the amount of Rs. 1,90,000/-. Thus the amount of compensation payable to the plaintiffs came to Rs. 1,66,000/-.

8. A further deduction of 10% was made as the plaintiffs got the compensation amount in a lump sum. The amount of deduction came to Rs. 16,600/- and finally the plaintiffs were entitled to recover in lump sum Rupees 1,49,000/- as pecuniary loss caused to them by the death of Narayan. The defendant No. 1's claim for set off of Rs. 5,199.41 on account of damages caused to the lorry of defendant No. 1 was negated.

9. In so far as the liability of defendant No. 2 insurance company was concerned, it was held that the liability should be limited to Rs. 15,000/-.

10. The amount of damages was apportioned between the several plaintiffs as follows:—

Plaintiff No. 1 Smt. Saroja	Rs. 50,000/-
Plaintiff No. 2 Master Shantaram	Rs. 50,000/-
Plaintiff No. 3 Smt. Sarala	Rs. 15,000/-
Plaintiff No. 4 Smt. Savita	Rs. 15,000/-
Plaintiff No. 5 Smt. Kusu Lokayya Shetty	Rs. 19,400/-

Interest was awarded at 6% p.a. from the date of suit till recovery. The plaintiffs were granted proportionate costs of the suit on Rs. 1,49,000/-, subject to the limit that the costs to be recovered from defendant No. 2 should not exceed the costs on Rs. 15,000/-. This judgment and decree is now challenged only by defendant No. 1.

11. When the appeal came up for hearing before the Division Bench, the Division Bench confirmed the finding that the defendant No. 1's driver Damodar had driven the lorry rashly and negligently. With regard to the quantum of damages, it was contended on behalf of the appellant before the Division Bench that in view of the decision of the Division Bench of this Court in Jaikumar's case cited (AIR 1978 Bom 239) (supra), if the amount received by the widow of Narayan Shetty, the first plaintiff, from the Life Insurance policies was deducted, then no decree for compensation could be passed in the present case. The Division Bench found that the decision in Jaikumar's case supported the contention of the appellant. But, according to the Division Bench, that decision required reconsideration. The Division Bench took the view that there was a clear distinction between the benefit received on account of death and those that were merely payable on the death of a person. It was said that the former arose out of death and would not have been available without it, while the latter were benefits which were available independently of death but were payable on death. A passage from Munkman on Damages for Personal Injuries and Death, 6th Edition, page 77, was quoted extensively. We shall refer to this passage later. It is at this stage sufficient to point out that the passage quoted was under the heading "Accident insurance" wherein it was stated on the authority of the decision in Bradburn v. Great Western Rly. Co., (1874) LR 10 Exch 1, that money received under an accident insurance policy is not deducted or taken into account in any way in assessing damages for personal injuries. A passage from "The Quantum of Damages" by Kemp and Kemp, Volume I, page 221, dealing with acceleration, in which the learned authors have stated that where a sum has been paid to a dependant solely by reason of death, the sum is to be taken into account, but if the payment or part thereof is likely to be made to some dependant at some future date, in any event, the dependant's benefit as a result of the death is not the whole amount of such payment but the value of the acceleration of that payment plus the certainty of its receipt, was also referred.

12. Before the Division Bench an application for leading additional evidence under O. 41, R. 27 of the Code of Civil Procedure was also filed by the respondents-plaintiffs in order to show that although the major portion of the amount received by the plaintiffs was under policies covered under Women's Property Act and became payable after the death of Narayan Shetty, it could not be said that the first plaintiff became entitled to receive the amount by reason of Narayan Shetty's death alone. The Division Bench, however, did not feel inclined to deal with the argument that the amounts covered by these policies could not be deducted having regard to the nature of the policies since the Division Bench felt inclined to refer the appeal to a larger Bench. One of the reasons which seems to have weighed with the Division Bench while making the reference was that in the present case, the total compensation awarded was less than Rs. 1,50,000/- and the widow-plaintiff No. 1 had received an amount of Rs. 1,50,000/- towards the insurance policies and, therefore, she would not be entitled to get a single pie as compensation. As a natural consequence, according to the Division Bench, even the insurance company would be absolved from its statutory liability under Ss. 95 and 96 of the Motor Vehicles Act. "This will have the startling results", said the Division Bench. Finally the Division Bench expressed a sentimental view that compensation payable under the Motor Vehicles Act or the Fatal Accidents Act was not full reimbursement for the life lost and that a precious life cannot be valued on the basis of artificial mathematical formula. The Division Bench felt that the benefit from the savings of a prudent man, meant for his benefit as well as for the benefit of his family under a contract, should not go to the tortfeasor or wrongdoer, who by his negligent act has caused the death of a person. Finally pointing out that the benefit under the insurance policy is available independently of death but is payable only on death, the Division Bench found that the view taken by this Court in Jaikumar's case (AIR 1978 Bom 239) required reconsideration. That is how this appeal has now come up before this Full Bench.

13. The arguments before us both on behalf of the appellant and on behalf of the respondents have mainly been restricted, and in our opinion rightly so, to the question as to whether the amount of insurance policy taken out by the deceased and payable on his death is liable to be deducted either wholly or partially from the amount of compensation which is payable to the legal representatives of the deceased in a claim under the Fatal Accidents Act.

14. It may be mentioned that the present appeal arises out of a suit filed in a Civil Court to enforce a claim for compensation specifically made under Ss. 1-A and 2 of the Fatal Accidents Act, 1855. Therefore, though at one stage the learned counsel for the claimants also wanted to canvass before us the scope of the provision relating to compensation payable under S. 110B of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1939, and as to the scope of the words "the amount of compensation which appears to it to be just", we have declined to hear the learned counsel for the plaintiffs on that aspect as such a controversy was not relevant for the purpose of deciding the appeal before us.

15. Since the correctness of the view taken by the Division Bench in Jaikumar's case (AIR 1978 Bom 239) was doubted by the Division Bench which made the reference, it would be available at the outset to analyse that decision and ascertain what was the view of the Division Bench in so far as the deductibility of the amount of insurance in respect of policies taken out by the deceased payable on his death and in fact received by his legal representatives was concerned. It is, therefore necessary to deal with that decision in some detail. The Division Bench was dealing with an appeal against a judgment of the Motor Accidents Claims Tribunal for Greater Bombay, by which the Tribunal had awarded a sum of Rs. 40,000/- with interest at 6% p.a. from the date of the claim by way of compensation to the widow and two sons of the deceased Jerome D'Souza. The deceased was at the material time a taxi driver and was knocked down by a car belonging to the respondent resulting in his instantaneous death. The owners of the car did not contest the claim and the claim was contested only by the insurance company after securing permission under Section 110-C of the Motor Vehicles Act. The Division Bench quoted the principles laid down by the Supreme Court in Gobald Motor Services Ltd. v. R. M. K. Veluswami, AIR 1962 SC 1 (at p. 6), as follows:—

“Only by balancing on the one hand the loss to the claimants of the future pecuniary benefit and on the other any pecuniary advantage which from whatever source comes to them by reason of the death, that is, the balance of loss and gain to a dependant by the death must be ascertained.....”

With regard to the manner in which these principles have to be worked out the Division Bench observed as follows (at p. 241 of AIR 1978 Bom):—

“To work this out, one has to find out amongst other things (1) the net annual income of the deceased earned by dint of his labour, manual or of head and heart, (2) as to how much out of it was spent by him for himself and how much for his dependants, which is otherwise referred as their “dependancy”, (3) as to how long each dependant would have been required to depend on the same, widow being assumed to be so required during her whole of lifetime in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, and (4) how long the deceased could have supported, each one of them, depending on the estimate of expectancy of his future span of life. The age of the deceased on the date of the accident, his health and estimate of the years during which he would continue to earn, also are equally important and relevant factors.”

After referring to the decision of the Supreme Court in Sheikhupura Transport Co. Ltd. v. N. I. T. Insurance Co., AIR 1971 SC 1624, the Division Bench pointed out that even for determination of compensation under Section 110-B of the Motor Vehicles Act, essential principles of the decided cases under the Fatal Accidents Act still hold the field and pecuniary benefits coming to the claimants by reason of the death of the deceased are still liable to be balanced against the claimants' pecuniary losses. The Division Bench then went on to consider the question as to what were the claimants' pecuniary losses and whether there were any pecuniary benefits coming to the claimants by reason of the death of the deceased. Holding that the dependants of the deceased were receiving net amount of Rs. 200/- per month and taking the average longitude at 65 and the fact that the deceased was 42 years of age at the time of the accident, the life expectancy was fixed at 23 years and the compensation on this data by recourse to the accepted formula was computed at Rs. $200 \times 12 \times 23$ — Rupees 55,200/-. The widow in that case had received Rs. 15,000/- towards the life insurance policy and the contention on behalf of the defendant was that this amount of Rupees 15,000/- was liable to be deducted from the amount of Rs. 55,200/-, being a pecuniary advantage received by the claimants by reason of death in terms of the ratio of Gobald Motor's case (AIR 1962 SC 1). The Division Bench noticed the fact that judicial opinion was sharply divided on the question whether the life policy amount could be said to have come to the claimants by reason of the death of the deceased to justify its deduction from the amount of compensation payable to the claimants towards their pecuniary loss. Decisions cited before the Division Bench in support of the view that insurance policy amount cannot be said to have come to the claimants by reason of death of the deceased and, therefore, is not deductible from the compensation were: (1) L. I. C. of India v. Kasturben Naranbhai, AIR 1973 Guj 216: 1973 Acc CJ 226; (2) Sood and Co. v. Surjit Kaur, 1973 Acc CJ 414 (Punj & Har); (3) Bhagwanti Devi v. Ish Kumar, 1975 Acc CJ 56 (Delhi). The judgments taking the opposite view relied upon by the defendants were: (1) Union of India v. S. Ghosh, AIR 1973 Pat 129; (2) Sushila Devi v. Ibrahim, AIR 1974 Madh Pra 181; (3) Sabita Pati v. Rameshwar Singh, 1973 Acc CJ 319 (Orissa); and (4) Automobiles Transport v. Dewalal, AIR 1977 Raj 121. The Division Bench took the view that receipt of insurance amounts amounted to pecuniary advantage, but the genuine question was whether this could be said to be a pecuniary advantage that comes to the claimants by reason of the death of the deceased. Observing that reading of the decided cases went to show how this very question can arise under variety of circumstances giving rise to different considerations pregnant with equally different legal implication and that it was by no means easy to lay down any inflexible rule as to which pecuniary benefit can be said to have been received “by reason of the death”, the Division Bench said (at p. 243 of AIR 1978 Bom):—

“It is pertinent to note that in the absence of any provision to the contrary such policy amounts form part of the estate of the deceased and come to his heirs or dependants by way of inheritance, unless it is sought to be disposed of by the deceased otherwise. Nominee mentioned therein is not necessarily the beneficiary but invariably happens to be merely an authorised collector thereof for the benefit of all heirs. We are unable to see any difference between this amount, and any other income yielding estate, that comes to the dependants either by way of inheritance or pursuant to any will or settlement. The causal connection between receipt of such amounts, and death is too apparent and both really stand on the same footing legally."

The Division Bench distinguished the nature of the payment received by way of donations by the charitable trusts or provisions for such dependants by some public-spirited institutions or gifts or contributions by relatives or sympathisers as they stood on different footing and could never be treated as advantages or benefits having been received by reason of the death of the bread winner, though the death may furnish an occasion for such receipts. It was then observed as follows (at p. 243 of AIR 1978 Bom):—

"We are ourselves unable to see how and why the policy amount or other amounts from income yielding assets, such as bank balances, or interests thereon, or on fixed deposits, or dividends from shares and securities, left or settled by the deceased on the dependants, cannot be said to have come to the claimants by 'reason of the death' of the deceased and why it should not be balanced against the pecuniary losses caused by the death of the bread winner in terms of Gobald Motor's case (AIR 1962 SC 1) (supra)."

The Division Bench thus took the view that insurance amounts received by the legal representatives of the deceased stand on the same footing as other estate left behind by the deceased and justification for this view was found in the observations of the Supreme Court in Gobald Motor's case in which the Supreme Court had laid down that the source of the pecuniary advantage received by the legal representatives was irrelevant. The Division Bench disagreed with the view taken by the High Courts of Gujarat, Punjab and Haryana and Delhi which have treated the receipt of insurance amounts as collateral benefit coming to the dependants not so much by reason of death of the deceased as by reason of the contract that the deceased had entered into with the Life Insurance Company and according to the Division Bench, this view was open to grave doubt. The Division Bench noticed the fact that this view was based on the decisions in Bradburn's case (1874 LR 10 Exch 1) and in the case of Parry v. Cleaver, (1969) 1 All ER 555 (HL), which were cases of compensation for personal injury. According to the Division Bench, insurance amount received from the insurance company in the case of personal injury stood on a different footing from the life policy amounts payable to the dependants of insured on the death of the insured and principles governing awards of damages in these two events cannot be identical. The Division Bench then considered in para 13 a decision of the Delhi High Court and the Orissa High Court where, according to the Division Bench, justification was found for deducting some portion of such policy amounts and the Division Bench found that the claimants could have the benefit of policy amounts even if the deceased had died otherwise than in the accident or would have shared the benefit thereof had the policy matured during his lifetime and death in fatal accidents only accelerates its receipt by the dependants, according to this view, and interest chargeable for the estimated accelerated years alone represents the deductible portion of such benefit. The Division Bench expressly referred to the decision of the Delhi High Court in Amarjit Kaur v. Vanguard Insurance Co. Ltd., 1969 Acc CJ 286, in which Deshpande, J. of the Delhi High Court drew support for his view from the decision in Grand Trunk Railway Co. of Canada v. Jennings, (1888) 13 AC 800. It is necessary to reproduce a little extensively the observations of the Division Bench in para 14 which, it appears to us, indicate that the principle of acceleration seems to have been accepted by the Division Bench. In para 14 the Division Bench observed as follows (at p. 245 of AIR 1978 Bom):—

"It is true that liquid assets possessed and owned by the deceased in certain cases are open to the enjoyment of all such dependants during lifetime of the deceased and they can claim certainty of inheriting or receiving it otherwise in the ordinary course. Accidental death in such cases can be said to have only accelerated the process of their ownership. Pecuniary benefit to the dependants is bound to be far lesser than in cases where such certainty of enjoyment, actual receipt, in any manner whatsoever, is absent or slender.

Cases of the former type are bound to be far and few. The amount of the life policy standing in the name of the deceased is exposed to more uncertainties in majority of the cases, there being no guarantee even of continuation thereof."

The observations quoted above and those underlined by us would thus indicate that in case of receipt of insurance amount, the Division Bench recognised the fact that the benefit received by the claimants on the death of the deceased is merely acceleration and that in such cases, the pecuniary benefit is bound to be far less than in cases where there was no such expectation or certainty of enjoyment at all. In the same paragraph the Division Bench referred to the decision of the Privy Council in Jennings' case cited (1888-13 AC 800) (supra), in which the deceased had subscribed to the policy expressly for the benefit of the wife and the wife was bound to receive the benefits thereof irrespective of death of the husband and of the accident. But the Division Bench took the view that this could not be true of all policies which would indicate that at least in certain kinds of policies the Division Bench was inclined to take the view that when insurance amount is received on death, the only benefit arising as a result of death of the deceased was in the nature of accelerated succession. Having thus dealt with the decisions which take the view that death merely accelerates the receipt of the insurance amount by the dependants, the Division Bench seems to have found that so far as the case before it was concerned, this was not material and on the facts of that case, the entire policy amount would have to be deducted. This would be clear from para 15 of the judgment which reads as follows :—

"Had the deceased not met with accident, policy amount would have gone to the husband on maturity, and there was no guarantee that the amount would have been spent for the benefits of the dependants, alone in this case. Deceased is not shown to have been possessed of other property. Instability and insecurity to which a driver's life is exposed, introduces high degree of uncertainty of the dependants having been ever benefited." The net result of the decision of the Division Bench was that the entire amount of insurance received by the widow of the deceased came to be deducted as a pecuniary benefit arising from death from the compensation to which the widow of the deceased was found to be entitled.

16. The decision in Jaikumar's case (AIR 1978 Bom 239) cannot, however, be read as laying down the law that in each case, the entire amount of insurance must be deducted as a matter of course because the Division Bench had clearly approved of the principle of acceleration in para 14 of the judgment. Indeed the observations in para 14 indicate to the contrary because the Division Bench having referred to the facts of the Privy Council decision in Jennings' case (1888-13 AC 800) has clearly stated that the ratio of Jennings' case cannot be applicable to all the policies and "No inflexible rule, therefore, can be laid down in this behalf as is suggested by the Delhi High Court". It may be pointed out that in Amarjit Kaur's case (1969 Acc CJ 286), to which reference was made by the Division Bench in Jaikumar's case in para 14, the Delhi High Court in para 15 had taken the view that "The best way to estimate the benefit of acceleration is to calculate the 'Interest on the money during the period of acceleration' as observed by Lord Watson at page 805 of the Grand Trunk Railway Company's case (Jenning's case). ((1888) 13 AC 800)". With respect, therefore, it is necessary to point out that if the Division Bench, which made this reference, has understood the decision in Jaikumar's case as laying down a principle that in all cases the insurance amount received by the claimants in respect of policies taken out by the deceased should be deducted from the compensation to which the claimants are found entitled, that would not be the correct reading of the decision in Jaikumar's case. As a matter of fact though the passage from "The Quantum of Damages" by Kemp and Kemp dealing with acceleration has been quoted in the reference order, it appears that before the Division Bench, which made the reference, the argument that the value of the accelerated benefit alone should be deducted does not seem to have been advanced.

17. As a matter of fact if the reference would have been restricted merely to the question as to whether in a case where the claimants are in receipt of amount of insurance in respect of the life policies taken out by the deceased, the entire amount was liable to be deducted or only the value of the acceleration of the benefit should be deducted, we would not have been required to deal with the matter further. However, the entire appeal has been referred to us and it, therefore, becomes necessary to deal with the contentions advanced both on behalf of the appellants and the respondents which have essentially turned again on the question, namely, whether any insurance amount received by plaintiff No 1 was liable to be deducted.

18. Since the reference appeared to have been made at the instance of the claimants, the arguments were opened by Mr. Tijoriwala appearing for them and once again the same argument was advanced before us, as was advanced before the Division Bench in Jaikumars case (AIR 1978 Bom 239). Mr. Tijoriwala has argued that since the insurance amount has been received by plaintiff No. 1 because of a contract between the deceased and the insurance company, the payment cannot be said to arise out of the death of the deceased and, therefore, no amount is liable to be deducted from the amount of compensation and the further argument advanced is that permitting the insurance amount to be deducted out of the compensation amount would mean that the tortfeasor would get the benefit of the premium which is paid by the deceased. As a matter of fact both the arguments are founded on the views which have been taken in the decisions relied upon on behalf of the claimants in Jaikumar's case.

19. According to Mr. Shah appearing on behalf of the appellants, if the mode of determination of compensation is to make out a balance-sheet between the pecuniary loss and the pecuniary benefit, then the receipt of insurance amount is clearly a benefit and the entire amount of insurance was, therefore, liable to be deducted. The learned counsel contended that the view taken by the Division Bench in Jaikumars case (AIR 1978 Bom 239) is a view which is in accord with the decision in Gobald Motor's case (AIR 1962 SC 1) and, therefore, there was no need to reconsider that decision. This argument was obviously founded on the footing that Jaikumar's case decides as a principle of law that in each case the value of the insurance amount was liable to be deducted from the amount of compensation to which the claimants are found entitled.

20. In the case before us, we are concerned only with the moneys received from insurance policies on the life of the deceased because the case has proceeded on that footing in view of the admission of plaintiff No. 3 that "My father had taken several insurance policies on his life". We shall later refer to the decisions on which reliance has been placed by Mr. Tijoriwala, but it does not require much argument to see that when it is contended that the insurance amount is received by the heirs of the deceased as a result of the contract with the insurance company, the argument is obviously based on certain decisions of Courts in England where it has always been the common law that in the case of computation of damages for personal injury, the amount of insurance received by the injured person should not be deducted. It is that principle which is now sought to be extended even in the case where the damages are claimed not by the deceased himself but by the heirs of the deceased in exercise of a right which is newly conferred under the Fatal Accidents Act. In so far as the position in English law is concerned, till a statutory provision was made in 1908 for the first time, insurance moneys received by the claimants on policies taken out by the deceased were always deducted from the amount of compensation.

20-A. The basis of the proposition that in the case of personal injuries, moneys received on account of accident insurance should not be deducted from the amount of compensation claimed is the decision in Bradburn v. Great Western Railway Co., (1874) LR 10 Exch 1, in which it was held that in an action for injuries caused by defendant's negligence, a sum received by the plaintiff on an accidental insurance policy cannot be taken into account in deduction of damages. Two passages from the judgment in Bradburn's case contain the ratio of that case. In that case Bramwell B. said :—

"In Dalby v. India and London Life Assurance Company, (1854) 15 CB 365, it was decided that one who pays premium for the purpose of insuring himself, pays on the footing that his right to be compensated when the event insured against happens is an equivalent for the premiums he has paid; it is a quid pro quo, larger if he gets it, on the chance that he will never get it at all. That decision is an authority bearing on the present case, for the principle laid down in it applies, and shows that the plaintiff is entitled to retain the benefit which he has paid for in addition to the damages which he recovers on account of the defendants' negligence."

In the same case, Pigott B. said :—

"The plaintiff is entitled to recover the damages caused to him by the negligence of the defendants, and there is no reason or justice in setting off what the plaintiff has entitled himself to under a contract with third persons, by which he has bargained for the payment of a sum of money in the event of an accident happening to him. He does not receive that sum of money because of the accident, but because he has made a contract providing for the contingency; an accident must occur to entitle him to it, but it is not the accident, but his contract, which is the cause of his receiving it."

It may be pointed out at this stage that a reading of some of the decisions of English Courts, which have been relied upon on behalf of the plaintiffs before us, shows that the English Courts have laid down a principle that in the case of personal injury, the insurance amount is a quid pro quo for the premium paid in the case of insurance for personal injury. It is on the basis of that principle that an argument has been advanced ed in India that in the case of a claim for compensation under the Fatal Accidents Act, insurance amount should not be deducted from the amount of compensation.

21. The decision in Bradburn's case (1874 LR 10 Exch 1), in so far as the non-deductibility of accident insurance from the damages claimed for personal injury is concerned, has stood in the field even now and has been expressly approved by the House of Lords in Parry v. Cleaver, (1969) 1 All ER 555: 1969 Acc CJ 363. Pointing out the real reason as to why such amounts are excluded from deduction in the case of a personal injury, Lord Reid in para 7 of the judgment observed as follows:—

"As regards moneys coming to the plaintiff under a contract of insurance, I think that the real and substantial reason for disregarding them is that the plaintiff has bought them and that it would be unjust and unreasonable to hold that the money which he prudently spent on premiums and the benefit from it should enure to the benefit of the tort-feasor. Here again I think that the explanation that this is too remote is artificial and unreal. Why should the plaintiff be left worse off than if he had never insured? In that case he would have got the benefit of the premium money; if he had not spent it he would have had it in his possession at the time of the accident grossed up at compound interest. I need not quote from the well known case of Bradburn v. Great Western Rly. Co., (1874) LR 10 Exch 1: (1874-80) All ER Rep 195, but I may refer to an old Scottish case, Forgie v. Henderson, (1818) 1 Murr 413 (418), where the pursuer was assaulted by the defender. During part of his resulting illness he received an allowance from a friendly society, and Lord Chief Commissioner Adam said in charging the jury:

"I do not think you can deduct the allowance from the Society, as that is of the nature of an insurance, and is a return of money paid."

22. The question which, therefore, requires to be determined is whether a similar position must obtain in so far as claims by heirs of the deceased for compensation under the Fatal Accidents Act, 1855, is concerned.

23. The Fatal Accidents Act of 1855 is in substance a reproduction of the English Fatal Accidents Acts 9 and 10 Vict., Ch. 93, known as Lord Campbell's Acts and the scope of the provisions corresponding to Section 1-A of the Fatal Accidents Act in the English Fatal Accidents Act has been discussed by the House of Lords in Davies

v. Powell Duffryn Associated Collieries Ltd., 1942 AC 601, and by the Privy Council in the decision in Nance v. British Columbia Electric Railway Co. Ltd., 1951 AC 601, which has been accepted by the Supreme Court in Gobald Motors' case (AIR 1962 SC 1) to be laying down the correct principle for determining the questions relating to determination of compensation under the Fatal Accidents Act. As we have already pointed out, though insurance amount received by the insured in pursuance of a contract of insurance for personal injury was not deducted while determining claims for compensation for personal injury, when a question as to the compensation payable in respect of a fatal accident for death of the deceased victim of an accident arose, under the common law, insurance moneys received by the heirs were always deducted from the amount of compensation till a statutory provision to the contrary was made for the first time in 1908. The reason for this lies in the fact that the basis of the two claims, that is, claim for damages for personal injury and claim for compensation under the Fatal Accidents Act is wholly different. A claim for damages for personal injury is a claim for damages in tort under the common law. Under the common law there was no right in the heirs of the deceased victim of a fatal accident to claim any compensation till for the first time such right was created in them by the Fatal Accidents Act. The right of the heirs of the victim of a fatal accident to claim compensation is, therefore, a statutory right and the claim for such compensation has to be determined in accordance with the relevant statutory provisions. The relevant statutory provision dealing with the power of the Court to give damages is contained in the third part of Sec. 1-A of the Fatal Accidents Act, 1855, which reads as follows:—

"and in every such action, the Court may give such damages as it may think proportionate to the loss resulting from such death to the parties respectively, for whom and for whose benefit such action shall be brought, and the amount so recovered, after deducting all costs and expenses, including the costs not recovered from the defendant, shall be divided amongst the before-mentioned parties, or any of them, in such shares as the Court by its judgment or decree shall direct."

It will suffice for the present to state that the measure of damages is the loss resulting from the death of the deceased and certain principles have now been evolved and well established as to how the loss resulting from the death of the deceased has to be estimated.

24. The difference in the nature of the two claims, that is, damages for personal injury and compensation under the Fatal Accidents Act is highlighted in the following observation of Singleton, L. J., from the judgment of the Court of Appeal in Payne v. Railway Executive, (1951) 2 All ER 910 at page 914, where after reproducing the classic observations of Bramwell, B., and Pigott, B., in Bradburn's case (1874 LR 10 Exch 1) (cited supra), it was observed as follows:—

"Under the Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 the damages awarded represent the pecuniary loss to the widow or dependants arising from the death of the deceased. In an action for damages for personal injuries different considerations arise, as Bramwell, B., pointed out. In such a case the damages assessed cover pain and suffering, loss of amenities of life, and loss of earnings, past and prospective."

25. We may refer to the decision of the Court of Appeal in Baker v. Dalglish Steam Shipping Co., (1922) 1 KB 361, in which dealing with the nature of the right created under the Fatal Accidents Act known as Lord Campbell's Act, the learned Judge observed as follows at page 371:—

"The claim is a new right given by Lord Campbell's Act on new principles, not the transfer of any existing right of the dead man. The claimant is entitled to damages proportioned to the injury resulting to her from the death, and that injury must be pecuniary injury. She is not entitled to money compensation for mental suffering resulting from the death or for loss of the deceased's society. She is entitled to claim on the one hand any pecuniary benefit which it is reasonably probable she would have received if the deceased had remained alive; per Erle, C. J. in Pym v. Great Northern Ry. Co., (1863) 4 B & S 396."

In the same case, Younger, L. J., dealing with the nature of the loss for which the compensation is to be computed pointed out that the right to recover damages is restricted to the actual pecuniary loss sustained by each individual and said at page 381:—

"If that same accident and death has produced from some other quarter a sum which would not otherwise have been received, the recoverable pecuniary loss is pro tanto reduced, and with it the wrongdoer's liability to that extent."

26. The legal position with regard to deduction of collateral benefits such as amounts paid in pursuance of a policy of insurance while determining compensation has been succinctly stated in McGregor on Damages, 13th Edn., para 1237, where the learned author observes as follows:—

"The path taken by the collateral benefits issue in fatal accident claims has been curiously different from the path it has followed in the field of personal injury. Whereas there was for long general acceptance of the rule that the damages in a personal injury claim were not to be reduced because benefits had been conferred upon the plaintiff by third parties which mitigated his loss, the general rule was the exact opposite where the claim was in respect of a fatal injury, and it became accepted, without any real dispute, that only the net pecuniary benefit accruing to the dependants is recoverable as damages. This undoubted general rule finds its clearest and most authoritative expression in the speeches of their Lordships in Davies v. Powell Duffryn Collieries, 1942 AC 601. Lord Macmillan put it thus: 'Except where there is express statutory direction to the contrary, the damages to be awarded to a dependant of a deceased person under the Fatal Accidents Acts must take into account any pecuniary benefit accruing to that dependant in consequence of the death of the deceased. It is the net loss on balance which constitutes the measure of damages.'"

The learned author points out that serious inroads were made by statute upon this rule of deduction of collateral benefits and referring to these inroads he observes:

"The first statutory inroad came with the Fatal Accidents (Damages) Act, 1908, which provided by Sec. 1 that, in assessing the damages, insurance moneys should no longer be taken into account. Next followed, by Section 22 of the Widows', Orphans' and Old Age Contributory Pensions Act, 1929, a provision that such pensions were not to be taken into account, and this was later replaced by the larger provisions of the Law Reform (Personal Injuries) Act 1948, which added to the items not to be taken into account any right to benefit under the National Insurance Act 1946."

After the enactment of the Fatal Accidents Act, 1959, the net result was that in England, in view of the provisions of Section 2 of the 1959 Act, in assessing the damages, any insurance moneys, benefits under the National Insurance Acts, pension or gratuity paid or to be paid as a result of the death were not to be taken into account.

27. Thus having regard to the basic difference in the nature of the claim for damages in the case of personal injury and claim for compensation in the case of a fatal accident made under the statute, namely, the Fatal Accidents Act, it would be difficult to accept the argument that because in cases of damages for personal injury, the accident insurance is treated as quid pro quo, and, therefore, was not deducted from the compensation for personal injury, the entire amount of life insurance must also be excluded from computation of compensation claimed under the Fatal Accidents Act.

28. Here we must refer to the well established principles on which compensation in such cases is to be determined. It is not necessary to go back to the English decisions, namely, the decision of the House of Lords in Davies v. Powell Duffryn Associated Collieries Ltd., 1942 AC 601, and to the decision of the Judicial Committee in Nance v. British Columbia Electric Railway Co. Ltd., 1951 AC 601, in detail because the Supreme Court in Gobald Motors case (AIR 1962 SC 1) has adopted these principles laid down in those decisions. The principle is that in calculating the pecuniary loss to the dependants, the actual extent of the pecuniary loss to the dependants has to be determined and this can be ascertained only by balancing on the one hand the loss to the claimants of the future pecuniary benefit and on the other any pecuniary advantage which, from whatever source, comes to them by reason of the death, that is, the balance of loss and gain to a dependant by the death must be ascertained. The Supreme Court reproduced the following passage from the decision of Viscount Simon in Nance v. British Columbia Electric Railway Co. Ltd., which referred to the two heads of damages. The passage reads as follows (at p. 5 of AIR 1962 SC) :—

"The claim for damages in the present case falls under two separate heads. First, if the deceased had not been killed, but had eked out the full span of life to which in the absence of the accident he could reasonably have looked forward, what sums during that period would be probably have applied out of his income to the maintenance of his wife and family?"

Then summarising the decision of Viscount Simon as to the mode of estimating the damages under the first head, the Supreme Court observed as follows (at p. 5 of AIR 1962 SC) :—

"Viscount Simon then proceeded to lay down the mode of estimating the damages under the first head. According to him, at first the deceased man's expectation of life has to be estimated having regard to his age, bodily health and the possibility of premature determination of his life by later accidents; secondly, the amount required for the future provision of his wife shall be estimated having regard to the amounts he used to spend on her during his lifetime, and other circumstances; thirdly, the estimated annual sum is multiplied by the number of years of the man's estimated span of life, and the said amount must be discounted so as to arrive at the equivalent in the form of a lump sum payable on his death; fourthly, further deductions must be made for the benefit accruing to the widow from the acceleration of her interest in his estate; and fifthly, further amounts have to be deducted for the possibility of the wife dying earlier if the husband had lived the full span of life; and it should also be taken into account that there is the possibility of the widow remarrying much to the improvement of her financial position. It would be seen from the said mode of estimation that many imponderables enter into the calculation. Therefore, the actual extent of the pecuniary loss to the respondents may depend upon data which cannot be ascertained accurately, but must necessarily be an estimate, or even partly a conjecture. Shortly stated, the general principle is that the pecuniary loss can be ascertained only by balancing on the one hand the loss to the claimants of the future pecuniary benefit and on the other any pecuniary advantage which from whatever source comes to them by reason of the death, that is, the balance of loss and gain to a dependant by the death must be ascertained."

These are then the principles and ineffect a computation, according to these principles, must bring into being what in substance is, as Windeyer J. of the High Court of Australia in National Insurance Company of New Zealand Ltd. v. Espagne, 105 Common Wealth LR 569, calls, a balance sheet. We are in the present case concerned with the deduction under category 'fourthly' in the above quoted principles laid down by the Supreme Court, as we shall presently point out.

29. Now, if the true requirement of the mode of estimating damages is to find out the pecuniary advantage from whatever source it comes to the heirs by reason of the death, the question is, can the life insurance amount be said to be such a pecuniary advantage that the whole of it must be deducted from the amount of compensation or does the pecuniary benefit lie merely in the fact that there is an acceleration in getting the benefit of the amount of insurance which on the death of the deceased becomes a part of the estate of the deceased. Now, if the deceased had lived his full length of life, the policies would have matured, they would have become a part of his estate and, as it appears from the facts of the present case, the deceased was a well to do man having a large amount of insurance, a large business and property, the possibility of the insurance amount being frittered away or spent away for maintenance would almost be negligible. It would, therefore, be reasonable to assume that if the deceased had lived a full span of life, the insurance amount would have become a part of his estate to which in normal course the present plaintiffs would have succeeded as heirs of the deceased after his natural death. The insurance amount as a part of his estate would have sooner or later come to them by inheritance. All that happens on the unnatural or accidental death of the deceased is that the pecuniary benefit in the form of insurance amount which would have come to the heirs by inheritance as a part of the estate of the deceased after the natural death of the deceased now comes to them much earlier in point of time, though as a result of the unfortunate circumstance of the death of the deceased. Properly looked at, therefore, the benefit to the claimants truly lies only in the fact of acceleration in the succession to the estate of deceased including the insurance amount and not in the fact that the entire estate has come to them, which in any case would have come by way of inheritance.

30. The manner in which life insurance amount should be taken into account in cases where the heirs of the deceased have received the insurance amount in respect of a policy of life insurance taken out by the deceased has been the subject of decisions by Courts and it now seems to have been well established at least for over a century that in the case of life insurance amount, the benefit to heirs lies only in the acceleration of insurance moneys and only the value of such acceleration has to be taken into account. The value of such benefit cannot be the entire amount of insurance received by the heirs. We may once again refer to McGregor on Damages, 13th edition, where the law has been summarised in paragraph 1248. Referring to the law in England prior to the intervention of the statute which made insurance moneys wholly excludible from deduction, the learned author has observed as follows:—

“However, the earlier law assists the conclusion that no account should be taken of the cesser of premiums in assessing the damages.

In Hicks v. The Newport, Abergavenny and Hereford Ry., (1857) 4 B & S. 403n, and Grand Trunk Ry. of Canada v. Jennings, (1888) 13 AC 800 (PC) the nineteenth century decisions which established that at common law the acceleration of the insurance moneys must be taken into account in assessing the damages, it was suggested that the benefit of the acceleration of the insurance moneys might be arrived at by deducting future premiums. The future premiums were however not to be deducted qua premiums; they merely provided one method of calculating the benefit of the acceleration, and statute now requires that this benefit is not to be taken into account. Further, the saving of the future premiums is not a saving which necessarily follows from the death, since the deceased might not have continued to maintain the insurance policy.”

31. On the basis of the Hicks’ case ((1857) 4 B & S 403n) and the Jennings’ case (1888-13 AC 800) (PC), Munkman in his treatise on Damages for Personal Injuries and Death, Sixth edition, at page 130 has observed as follows:—

“A deduction must certainly be made for benefits which would not have arisen at all but for the death, such as accident policies (until the law was amended to prohibit a deduction): Hicks v. Newport, Abergavenny and Hereford Ry. Co., (1857) 4 B & S 403n. But even in the case of an insurance policy, there was no obligation to deduct the exact sum, pound for pound: if it was a life policy, as distinct from an accident policy, the benefit to be taken into account was the acceleration of the payment of the policy, rather than its full value: Grand Trunk Ry Co. of Canada v. Jennings, (1888) 13 AC 800 (PC). After 1908, deductions for insurance were forbidden by statute.”

32. We may at this stage point out that the passage in Munkman’s treatise, which is quoted by the Division Bench which made the reference, was under the heading “Accident Insurance” and dealt with damages for personal injuries and was not, therefore, very relevant in so far as cases under the Fatal Accidents Act are concerned.

33. The same position is reiterated by Kemp and Kemp in “The Quantum of Damages” in the paragraph which we have reproduced earlier.

34. Jennings’ case (1888-13 AC 800) (PC) is, in our view, clearly an authority for the proposition that in the case of receipt of insurance amount by the heirs of the deceased after the death of the deceased, the benefit to be taken into account is merely the benefit of acceleration. In Jennings' case, the decision in Hicks' case (1857-4 B & S 403n) was approved and Lord Watson observed as follows at page 804:—

"The pecuniary benefit which accrued to the respondent from his premature death, consisted in the accelerated receipt of a sum of money, the consideration for which had already been paid by him, out of his earnings. In such a case, the extent of the benefit may fairly be taken to be represented by the use or interest of the money during the period of acceleration; and it was upon that footing that Lord Campbell, in Hicks v. Newport, etc., Railway Company, (1857) 4 B & S 403n, suggested to the jury that, in estimating the widow's loss, the benefit which she derived from acceleration might be compensated by deducting from their estimate of the future earnings of the deceased the amount of the premiums which, if he had lived, he would have had to pay out of his earnings for the maintenance of the policy."

35. The following observations of Lord Porter in Davies' case ((1942) AC 601 at page 618) are instructive:—

"Under Lords Campbell's Act the question for decision is what damage is proportioned to the injury resulting from the death to the parties respectively for whom and for whose benefit the action is brought. The wording itself is sufficient to show that each individual must be considered separately, and Pym v. Great Northern Railway Co., (1863) 4 B & S 396, so decides. In calculating the damage proportioned to the injury it is accepted view that all factors, benefits as well as injuries, must be taken into account so as to ascertain on a balance of losses and gains what (if any) compensation is to be awarded. Pym's case illustrates this proposition. Accordingly, up till 1908 it was necessary to have regard to any insurance effected by the deceased on his life. If the subject-matter of that insurance was accidental death and the deceased man was accidentally killed, the full sum recoverable, being a gain resulting wholly from the death, was generally regarded as a gain which, to the extent to which any dependant benefited from it, would diminish the sum to be awarded to that dependant. But not every sum paid under an insurance policy was so regarded, Life insurance, inasmuch as its receipt was not solely brought about by the death but was merely accelerated by it was, it is true, to be taken into account but only to the extent of the benefit arising from its acceleration."

(Underlining ours.)

36. The Judicial Committee in Nance's case (1951 AC 601) has also taken a similar view. That was a case in which the widow of the deceased had come into possession of one-third of the estate and the deceased had a policy of Dollars 1,000/- on his life. Referring to the nature of deduction Viscount Simon observed as follows:—

"Then a deduction must further be made for benefit accruing to the widow from the acceleration of her interest in his estate on his death intestate in 1949 (she came into Dollars 6,500/- one-third of his estate, x years sooner than she would otherwise have done) and of her interest in sums payable on a policy of Dollars 1,000 on his life."

37. Though it is contended on behalf of the appellants that the entire amount of life insurance was liable to be deducted, it is difficult to accept that contention because the position is well established that the only benefit which has to be valued in terms of money, which accrues to the heirs in the case of a policy of insurance on the life of the deceased is the benefit of acceleration. Such benefit may fairly be taken to be represented by the interest on the life insurance moneys received for the period of acceleration which would be the difference between the age up to which the deceased would normally be expected to have lived and the age at which he died as a result of the fatal accident. The rate of interest will, of course, depend on the relevant facts in each case.

37A. We are, therefore, of the view that in the instant case, what was liable to be deducted from the amount of compensation determined by the trial Court at Rs. 1,90,000/- was only the value of acceleration in respect of the total insurance amount of Rupees 1,49,400/-. In view of the settled position of law, it would, in our view, be a futile exercise to deal with the several cases which are cited before us on behalf of the respondents in support of the proposition that the whole of the amount of insurance is liable to be excluded. As we have already pointed out earlier, those cases are mainly based on the analogy of non-deductibility of insurance amount in the case of personal injuries on the ground that in the case of accident insurance amount, the receipt is in the nature of a quid pro quo. The decision in Life Insurance Corporation v. Kasturben, AIR 1973 Guj 216, is expressly based on the ratio of the decision in Parry v. Cleaver, (1969) 1 All ER 555, which was a case dealing with personal injury. Damyanti Devi v. Sita Devi, 1972 Acc CJ 334, which is a decision of the Punjab and Haryana High Court, follows the decision in Bradburn's case (1874 LR 10 Exch 1) which again was a case of personal injury. With reference to this decision, however, we may like to point out that the Punjab and Haryana High Court has gone to the extent of holding that the accelerated succession to the assets does not bring any additional benefit to the heirs which may be liable to be set off against the loss occasioned by the death. With respect, it is not possible for us to agree with this view because on the very fact that in the case of a death by a fatal accident, the heirs succeed to the estate much earlier than when they would have otherwise succeeded, the benefit is implicit and it is this benefit of accelerated succession which, authorities have decided, must be taken into account while making a balance sheet of the pecuniary loss and the pecuniary gain. In Bhagwanti Devi v. Ish Kumar, 1975 Acc CJ 56, again, the Delhi High Court has applied the ratio of cases dealing with personal injury because in paragraph 44 it has expressly been held that insurance benefits are in the nature of quid pro quo and have relation to the savings effected by the deceased, a line of reasoning from which we respectfully dissent. The Himachal Pradesh High Court in H. P. Road Transport Corporation v. Pandit Jai Ram, 1980 Acc CJ 1 : (AIR 1980 Him Pra 16), has again treated insurance amount as an advantage not as a result of death but as a result of contract. In Amarjit Kaur v. Vanguard Insurance Co., AIR 1982 Delhi 1, again, the insurance amount is held not to be deductible on the ground that it is a quid pro quo.

38. We may in passing, however, point out that the principle that the benefit of acceleration must be taken into account has been accepted by the Delhi and Karnataka High Courts. A learned single Judge of the Delhi High Court in Pushpa Rani Chopra v. Anokha Singh, 1975 Acc CJ 396, has taken the view that what has to be deducted on account of insurance is the acceleration of the payment of the claim and not the whole claim and on the facts of that case, this deduction was worked out at Rs. 250/- while the entire amount of insurance of Rs. 2,500/- received on a life insurance policy of the deceased was deducted by the trial Court. In Parvatamma v. Syed Ahmed, 1977 Acc CJ 72 (Kant), a Division Bench of the Karnataka High Court has accepted the principle of acceleration following the decision in Jennings' case (1888-13 AC 800) (PC) and one-third of the life insurance amount was allowed to be deducted.

39. Mr. Tijoriwala appearing on behalf of the respondents at one stage wanted to contend firstly that the amount of Rs. 24,000/-, which has been deducted by the trial Court and which was really in the nature of an ex gratia amount paid by the company, should not have been deducted and that in the appeal filed by defendant No. 1, that part of the decision should be set aside. We are unable to entertain this contention. The effect of deleting the deduction of Rupees 24,000/- would be to enhance the amount of compensation decreed which would be wholly impermissible in the appeal filed by defendant No. 1.

40. It is necessary to make a mention in passing about the two reasons which are given by the Division Bench while making the reference in support of their view that the insurance amount should not be excluded from the amount of compensation. The Division Bench seems to have felt that if this was the correct view, there would be no occasion for any liability to be enforced against the insurance company under Section 95 of the Motor Vehicles Act. It does not appear from the reference order that the provisions of the Motor Vehicles Act were dealt with in any detail by the Division Bench, but we merely wish to point out that the liability of the insurer under Section 96 of the Motor Vehicles Act is merely to satisfy the judgment against a person insured in respect of third party risk and if the liability is to satisfy the judgment in respect of any liability which is determined, then the occasion to enforce the liability against the insurance company will arise only after the amount of compensation is correctly determined according to law. The insurance company will thus come into picture only at the stage subsequent to the determination of the liability. If the liability has to be determined by striking a balance between the pecuniary loss and the pecuniary benefit, then the mere fact that in a given case at the foot of such a balance sheet the amount is zero or less than the insured amount, will not in any way affect the merits of the question as to whether the insurance amount, in law, is liable to be deducted in whole or in part at all.

41. Similarly, the second ground which seems to have weighed with the Division Bench is that the benefit of the insurance must not go to a wrongdoer. Now, the nature of compensation which is made payable under the Fatal Accidents Act is not punitive. The damages are really of a compensatory nature and if in arriving at such compensation the necessary factors which have now been crystallised by the decisions have to be taken into account, then the mere fact that in a given case, the liability of the wrongdoer is reduced, will not be very relevant.

42. We have made these observations since the referring order has given these two reasons as indicative of the mind of the Division Bench when it found that the decision in Jaikumar's case (AIR 1978 Bom 239) requires reconsideration.

43. In support of the application under O. 41, R. 27 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which has been filed before the Division Bench, the learned Counsel appearing on behalf of the respondents-plaintiffs has contended that even though the benefit of acceleration should be evaluated in terms of money, the policies, the details of which were given in the application, were such that payment in respect of a large number of those policies could not be taken into account at all for the purpose of deduction on the principle of acceleration. The main argument was in respect of a policy for a lac of rupees, which was under the Married Women's Property Act and it was sought to be contended that the benefit of this policy would not have gone to the estate of the deceased but that plaintiff No. 1 was alone entitled to the insurance amount on maturity. There was one policy which was taken out for marriage expenses of the minor and there was another policy which was taken out for the education of one of the children. Thus, according to the learned Counsel, at the most only those policies which are endowment policies should be taken into account. It is not necessary for us to consider these arguments, firstly because the details of these policies are not available on record and the defendants have relied on an admission made by plaintiff No. 1 that an amount of Rupees 1,50,000/- has been received as insurance amount in respect of life insurance policies of the deceased, and secondly because the parties have now arrived at a settlement as to the amount of compensation which the plaintiffs will be entitled to receive and defendant No. 1 will be liable to pay, thus again relieving us of the task of computing the value of the benefit of acceleration. The amount now agreed to be paid by defendant No. 1 is a sum of Rs. 1,00,000/- (Rs. one lac only) in accordance with the consent terms signed by the Counsel for the parties and handed over to us.

44. The result, therefore, is that the decree of the trial Court will stand modified as per consent terms. The decree of the trial Court will now be substituted by a decree in terms of the consent terms. We have been informed that the assets of the appellant-company are in the hands of a Receiver appointed in two suits for dissolution of partnership between the same parties. Since Rs. 40,000/- have already been deposited in the trial Court, the balance of the decretal amount will now be payable by the Receiver in accordance with the consent terms arrived at and filed in the Court between the parties. Since the consent terms have been filed and the decree of the trial Court is now substituted, it will be open to the trial Court to pay the moneys which are lying in deposit with it on production of a certified copy of the consent terms. The Receiver also to pay the amount as per the consent terms on production of the certified copy of the consent terms.

45. Before parting with this case, we would like to highlight the hardship that may be caused to the heirs of a victim of a fatal accident if the benefit in the form of insurance moneys is reduced by making a deduction by way of accelerated succession. It is, therefore, worthwhile considering whether insurance moneys should be wholly excluded from the compensation determined as payable to the heirs of the deceased as has been done in England in the new enactment of 1959. Section 2 of the English Act of 1959 provides that in assessing damages, any insurance moneys, benefits under the National Insurance Act or pensions and gratuities to be paid as a result of the death are not to be taken into account. Section 2 of the said Act of 1959 reads as follows:

"2. Exclusion of certain benefits in assessment of damages.

(1) In assessing damages in respect of a person's death in any action under the Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 ... there shall not be taken into account any insurance money, benefit, pension or gratuity which has been or will or may be paid as a result of the death.

(2) In this section—

'benefit' means benefit under the National Insurance Acts, 1946 (as amended by any subsequent enactment, whether passed before or after the commencement of this Act), or any corresponding enactment of the Parliament of Northern Ireland and any payment by a friendly society or trade union for the relief or maintenance of a member's dependants :

'insurance money' includes a return of premiums; and 'pension' includes a return of contributions and any payment of a lump sum in respect of a person's employment." We are of the opinion that it would be in the fitness of things if the question as to whether the Fatal Accidents Act of 1855 deserves to be amended on similar lines is gone into. With a view to facilitate such a consideration, a copy of the judgment should be sent to the Law Department of the Government of India.

AIR 1982 BOMBAY 482

MODY, J.

Gopal Vishnu Ghatnekar, Appellant v. Madhukar Vishnu Ghatnekar, Respondent.

First Appeal No. 720 of 1972, D/- 24-6-1981.

(A) Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act (24 of 1961), S. 30 — Transfer of share or interest of deceased member to a nominee or to an heir or legal representative recognised by Society — Does not create interest in such person to exclusion of other heirs — He only holds share and interest of deceased for disposal of the same in accordance with law.

The intention of S. 30 is to provide for who has to deal with the society on the death of a member and not to create a new rule of succession. Thus, the provision for transferring a share and interest to a nominee or to the heir or legal representative as will be decided by the society is only meant to provide for interregnum between the death and the full administration of the estate and not for the purpose of conferring any permanent right on such a person to a property forming part of the estate of the deceased. The idea of having this section is to provide for a proper discharge to the society without involving the society into unnecessary litigation which may take place as a result of dispute between the heirs or uncertainty as to who are the legal heirs or representatives. Even when a person is nominated or even when a person is recognised as an heir or a legal representative of the deceased member, the rights of the persons who are entitled to the estate of the interest of the deceased member by virtue of law governing succession are not lost and the nominee or the heir or the legal representative recognised by the society, as the case may be, holds the share and interest of the deceased for disposal of the same in accordance with law. It is only as between the society and the nominee or heir or legal representative that the relationship of the society and its member is created and this relationship continues and subsists only till the estate is administered either by the person entitled to administer the same or by the Court or the rights of the heirs or persons entitled to the estate are decided in a Court of law. Thereafter the society will be bound to follow such decision. Judgment in Appeal No. 694 of 1968, D/- 15-6-1976 (Bom), Refd., AIR 1973 Delhi 148, Explained. (Para 6)

Therefore held, the plaintiff could not be said to have become the owner of the property of the deceased member qua the other heirs merely by virtue of the nomination.

(B) Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act (24 of 1961), S. 30 — Nomination by a member is permitted only in respect of the shares in and the property of the Society — Held, nomination in respect of structure built by member on land leased out to him by Society was invalid.

The relationship of the Society and member subsists only in respect of shares in and the property of the Society. Therefore, a nomination is permitted only in respect of the share in and the property of the Society. The Society is concerned only with the shares held by a member and the land given by it to a member and not with the structure that a member may put up. The member's interest in the structure cannot be a share or interest in the Society. (Para 10)

Therefore, held, the nomination in respect of the structure built by the deceased member on the land leased out to him by the Society was invalid and of no effect. The structure continued to belong to the estate of the deceased and in that view of the matter the defendant-son of the deceased member could never be a mere licensee and could not be evicted. The defendant was equally entitled to the structure as the plaintiff along with other heirs. (Para 10)

Cases Referred: Chronological Paras (1976) Appeal No. 694 of 1968, D/- 15-6-1976 (Bom), Poona Hindu Middle Class Co-operative Society Ltd. v. Jaywant Vishnu Sapre 7
AIR 1973 Delhi 148 7

V. V. Karmarkar and J. R. Lalit, for Appellant; Bhimrao N. Naik, for Respondent.

JUDGMENT:— The plaintiff and the defendant are brothers. Their father Vishnu Narayan Ghatnekar died on 9-5-1969 leaving behind him the plaintiff, the defendant and other children as his heirs. At the time of his death Vishnu held shares in a co-operative society and was an allottee of a piece of land under a lease from the society on which he had put up a building. Vishnu also had filed a nomination with the society nominating the plaintiff as his nominee to whom the shares, the land and the building should be transferred after his death. By virtue of this nomination the plaintiff claims to be the owner of the entire property consisting of shares, land and building. He also claims possession from the defendant by virtue of the said ownership and on the ground that the defendant was in occupation of the property by virtue of a licence granted by the father and that the same had been terminated.

2. It is admitted that the property is that of the father Vishnu. At the time of his death all the heirs of Vishnu became interested in the estate and in ascertainment of what property goes to whom on his death. The suit, therefore, could not have been filed without all the heirs being on record inasmuch as the suit really involves a question of title to the property of the deceased. The suit, therefore, ought to have been dismissed on that ground alone. However, other points hereinafter decided have been argued exhaustively on both sides and it is but fair that I should decide them also.

3. The plaintiff's contention is that by virtue of S. 30 of the Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act, 1960 r/w. Rule 25 framed under the said Act and Bye-law 16 (1) of the society, a nominee acquires title to the shares and the property to the exclusion of all the heirs of the deceased and that with the result the plaintiff has become owner of the property and the defendant has no title or interest in the property and is liable to be evicted. It is contended that in any event the nomination paper having been witnessed by two witnesses and all the other formal requirements of a will having been complied with it should be treated as a will and in that circumstance also the plaintiff becomes the exclusive owner of the property and as such entitled to evict the defendant.

4. Section 30 of the Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act, 1960 reads as follows :—

"30. (1) On the death of a member of a society, the society shall transfer the share or interest of the deceased member to a person or persons nominated in accordance with the rules, or, if, no person has been so nominated to such person as may appear to the committee to be the heir or legal representative of the deceased member :

Provided that, such nominee, heir or legal representative, as the case may be, is duly admitted as a member of the society;

Provided further that, nothing in this sub-section or in Sec. 22 shall prevent a minor or a person of unsound mind from acquiring by inheritance or otherwise, any share or interest of a deceased member in a society.

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (1) any such nominee, heir or legal representative, as the case may be, may require the society to pay to him the value of the share or interest of the deceased member, ascertained in accordance with the rules.

(3) A society may pay all other moneys due to the deceased member from the society to such nominee, heir or legal representative, as the case may be.

(4) All transfers and payments duly made by a society in accordance with the provisions of this section shall be valid and effectual against any demand made upon the society by any other person."

5. Rule 25 of the Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act, 1961 reads as follows :—

"25. Nomination of persons :— (1) For the purpose of transfer of his share or interest under sub-section (1) of S. 30, a member of a society may, by a document signed by him or by making a statement in any book kept for the purpose by the society nominate any person or persons. Where the nomination is made by a document, such document shall be deposited with the society during the member's lifetime and where the nomination is made by a statement, such statement shall be signed by the member and attested by one witness.

(2) The nomination made under sub-rule (1) may be revoked or varied by any other nomination made in accordance with that sub-rule.

(3) (i) Where a member of a society has not made any nomination, the society shall on the member's death, by a public notice exhibited at the office of the society, invite claims or objections for the proposed transfer of the share or interest of the deceased within the time specified in the notice.

(ii) After taking into consideration the claim or objections received in reply to the notice or otherwise, and after making such inquiries as the committee considers proper in the circumstances prevailing, the committee shall decide as to the person who in its opinion is the heir or the legal representative of the deceased member and proceed to take action under S. 30."

Bye-law 16 of the Housing Society reads as follows:—

"16. Transmission of Interest:

(1) How nomination is to be made:— A member may, by a writing under his hand deposited with the Society during his lifetime or by a statement made in any book kept thereat, nominate any person to whom under Sec. 22 of the Act his share or interest in the Society or so much thereof as is specified in such nomination shall be transferred at his decease, or the moneys referred to in S. 22 (2) of the Act or so much thereof as is specified in such nomination shall be paid.

(2) How it is to be revoked or varied:— A nomination so made may be revoked or varied by any similar writing or statement under the hand of the nominator deposited or made as aforesaid.

(3) Fees on Nomination or Revocation:— A nomination made at the time of applying for membership shall be recorded free of charge. But for the recording of every nomination subsequently made or of a revocation or variation a fee of annas four shall be paid."

6. However, what is important is the section and not the rules and bye-laws inasmuch as the rules and bye-laws cannot provide anything contrary to the section. It is very clear on the plain reading of the section that the intention of the section is to provide for who has to deal with the society on the death of a member and not to create a new rule of succession. The purpose of the nomination is to make certain the person with whom the society has to deal, and not to create interest in the nominee to the exclusion of those who in law will be entitled to the estate. The purpose is to avoid confusion in case there are disputes between the heirs and legal representatives and to obviate the necessity of obtaining legal representation and to avoid uncertainties as to with whom the society should deal to get proper discharge. Though, in law, the society has no power to determine as to who are the heirs or legal representatives, with a view to obviate similar difficulty and confusion, the section confers on the society to determine who is the heir or legal representative of a deceased member and provides for transfer of the shares and interest of the deceased member's property to such heir or legal representative. Nevertheless, the persons entitled to the estate of the deceased do not lose their right to the same. Mr. Naik contends that once a person is nominated and the society transfers the share or interest of the deceased to him, he becomes the owner. If that is to be accepted it will follow that if a society accepts a person as the heir or legal representative and transfers the share or interest to him, that person will become the owner. That, obviously, cannot be the intention of the legislature. Society has no power, except provisionally and for a limited purpose to determine the disputes about who is the heir or legal representative. It, therefore, follows that the provision for transferring a share and interest to a nominee or to the heir or legal representative as will be decided by the society is only meant to provide for interregnum between the death and the full administration of the estate and not for the purpose of conferring any permanent right on such a person to a property forming part of the estate of the deceased. The idea of having this section is to provide for a proper discharge to the society without involving the society into unnecessary litigation which may take place as a result of dispute between the heirs or uncertainty as to who are the legal heirs or representatives. This being the position, the contention of Mr. Naik cannot be accepted. Even when a person is nominated or even when a person is recognised as an heir or a legal representative of the deceased member, the rights of the persons who are entitled to the estate of the interest of the deceased member by virtue of law governing succession are not lost and the nominee or the heir or the legal representative recognised by the society, as the case may be holds the share and interest of the deceased for disposal of the same in accordance with law. It is only as between the society and the nominee or heir or legal representative that the relationship of the society and its member is created and this relationship continues and subsists only till the estate is administered either by the person entitled to administer the same or by the Court or the rights of the heirs or persons entitled to the estate are decided in a Court of law. Thereafter the society will be bound to follow such decision. The plaintiff, therefore, cannot be said to have become the owner of the property qua the other heirs merely by virtue of the nomination.

7. Mr. Naik relies on an unreported judgment dated 15-6-1976 of Hajarnavis and Shah, JJ. in Appeal No. 694 of 1968. Poona Hindu Middle Class Co-operative Society Ltd. v. Jaywant Vishnu Sapre. Based on this judgment he contended that it is the right of the society to decide who is to be the member of the society and once the society has decided to take the nominee as the member or to take one of the heirs as the member, the heirs or other heirs of the deceased member, as the case may be, cannot have any cause of action in respect of the property allotted by the society to a member.

(a) In the judgment cited the appellant was a society of which one Vishnu Sapre was a member. (The name of the deceased in the present appeal also happens to be Vishnu). He had obtained on a lease a separate sub-plot of land from the society after becoming a member thereof. By a registered Will dated 19-9-1939, he bequeathed the said plot to his two sons Jaywant and Ramchandra. He appointed three executors and also created a trust of which the executors were trustees. The executors applied for a probate which was granted by the District Court, Poona, on 23-11-1940. The executors also made an application to the society on 23-1-1942 referring to the Will and the two sons being the legatees and the fact of the plot having been bequeathed to his two sons. The executors also requested and applied for Jaywant being substituted as a member of the society in place of the deceased. The society by its resolution dated 7-2-1942 elected Jaywant as its member. Because of certain breaches of the bye-laws of the society which required construction to be put up by a particular time, the plot was forfeited to the society and the lease was cancelled. A dispute arose which was referred to the statutory arbitration and the registered nominee gave an award in favour of the society. The other brother Ramchandra was not a party to these proceedings. Ramchandra filed a suit from which the said appeal arose in the Court of Civil Judge, Junior Division, Poona, challenging the award mainly on the ground that he was not made a party to the proceedings before the arbitrator even though he was entitled to the plot as a legatee under the Will. Decree was passed against the society which was challenged in that appeal. On behalf of the society it was contended that (1) disposition of the plot made by Vishnu was not binding on the society; (2) the executors of the Will themselves made an application to substitute the name of Jaywant in place of Vishnu and the society had acted on the basis thereof; (3) that in accordance with the bye-laws of the society as well as provisions of Sec. 27 of the Bombay Co-operative Societies Act, the transfer in favour of Jaywant made by the society was valid and effective against the plaintiff who was not a member of the society. Other pleas were also raised. It was further contended on behalf of the appellant that (i) on passing of the resolution by the society it was only Jaywant who had a right to the property and that Ramchandra had no right in respect of the property, (ii) without being member he cannot claim any right against the society, (iii) his claim was barred by the law of limitation and (iv) Ramchandra can claim as a legatee under the Will only against Jaywant and not against the society.

(b) It is held by the learned Judges that it is the executors who had asked the society to recognise Jaywant as a member of the society in place of Vishnu and so it was not open to the plaintiff to challenge the action taken by the society on this application without challenging the authority of the executors to make the application. This was the main ground for deciding against Ramchandra. Thereafter Sec. 27 of the Bombay Co-operative Societies Act, 1925 is set out and after pointing out that Vishnu had not made any nomination, it is observed that the society was free to transfer the share or the interest of the deceased to any of the heirs or legal representative after electing him as the member of the society. It is again emphasized that the authority of the executors to represent to the society to take Jaywant as a member had not been challenged. It is then observed that the society was therefore right in recognizing only Jaywant as a member of the society. Section 19 of the said Act is then set out and it is observed that the transfer of any property of the society is not governed by the ordinary law but by the provisions of the Bombay Co-operative Societies Act, 1925 and the rules and bye-laws framed by the society. It is stated that that being the position the plaintiff Ramchandra did not get any title to the suit property. It is observed that even if Ramchandra had half share in the property of the society he cannot enforce the claim against the society without being elected as a member of the society. It is emphasized that the executors had not moved the society for recognizing him as a member of the society and, therefore, whatever claim that Ramchandra had he can enforce it only against the executors.

Reliance is then placed on a judgment of the Delhi High Court in the Chief Commr. v. Mrs. Kitty Puri, AIR 1973 Delhi 148, wherein it is, inter alia, observed, ".....In fact, even the society cannot transfer the share or interest of a deceased member to a nominee of such a member except after the nominee is duly admitted to be a member of the society." He does not automatically succeed to the share or interest of the deceased member. The reason is that the membership is a contract between the member and the society. It is not an interest which can be inherited by the nominee of the successor from the deceased member without reference to the society.

(c) The judgment then proceeds to say that in view of the fact that only a member can claim interest in the property, the plaintiff had no cause of action against the society.

8. The ratio of the judgment therefore is that it is only a person who is a member of the society that can claim a right against and in respect of the property of the society. However, the right of a society to admit a person of its choice as a member cannot be exercised arbitrarily and so as to deprive a person of his right to the shares or property of a deceased member. The law does not give a right to the society to continue as member a person who had no right to be a member or to refuse membership to a person who is entitled to become a member. To put it differently, a society cannot arbitrarily refuse to make a person a member. It is for this very reason that the provision is made in the Co-operative Societies Act for an appeal to the Registrar in case society refuses to accept any person as a member. Therefore, in my view, this judgment does not take any view which is contrary to the view that I am taking. To repeat, a society has a right to admit a nominee of a deceased member or an heir or legal representative of a deceased member as chosen by the society as the member. A person who disputes the right of such person to be a member or continue to be a member of the society will have to obtain relief in the normal Court against such person and have his rights ascertained and declared and thereafter apply to the society on the basis of the Court judgment to make him a member of the society. In case society refuses, that person will have to take appropriate proceedings against the society's refusal. In the case cited before me the plaintiff had taken resort to Court against society without making any application for membership.

Moreover the plaintiff's claim was under a Will, and when there is a Will in which executors are appointed the property vests in the executors and therefore it is the executors alone who can represent the estate. If the executors request the society to make somebody a member, the remedy of the person objecting will be only against the executors. It is in the light of this legal position that the learned Judges came to the conclusion they did. It cannot be, that the Act dealing with the regulation of the Co-operative Societies is intended to lay down a new rule of succession which will again be dependent on the sweet will of the society or to deprive a person to a part of the estate or to give to the society a right to pick and choose from among heirs who should inherit the property of the deceased, except provisionally. Take the case of legal representatives. The Act gives right to the society to accept an heir or a legal representative as a member. It is the society which has to select which of the legal representatives it will take as a member. Executors are legal representatives. It cannot be the intention of the legislature that an executor, who may not be even a legatee, should get the share or interest of the deceased member to the exclusion of the legatee on whom the share or interest may have been bequeathed or to exclude residuary legatee, in the absence of specific bequest thereof.

9. Mr. Naik contends, in the alternative, that the nomination which is described as 'Varas Patra' is signed by the deceased and witnessed by two persons. It, therefore, complies with all the requirements of a valid Will and should be construed to be a Will. He contends that even though it may be described as a nomination paper i.e. 'Varas Patra', looking to the tenor thereof, it is really a will. This contention of Mr. Naik is without any substance. It is well settled that a document can be said to be a Will only when it is executed with an intention to regulate succession after death. There must be animus testandi. It is true that in construing a document, the nomenclature given to the document is not to be given too much importance and what is of importance is the intention as disclosed by contents and surrounding circumstances. However, in the present case the nomenclature completely corresponds to the contents and the intention and by no stretch of imagination this nomination form can be said to be a will. The only similarity between a will and this nomination form is that a Will has to be witnessed by two persons and the nomination paper is witnessed by two persons. The law permits the nomination of such number of persons as a member may desire and requires witnessing only by one person. The nomination form in the present case is a cyclostyled form which is issued by the society. This form has been drafted by the society obviously prior to the Act of 1960. The form refers to various provisions of law and bye-laws which clearly are meant for nomination and it is stated that this document was being executed in accordance with these provisions. It is, therefore, clear that the intention of the deceased in signing this nomination form was not to make a Will or to provide for succession after his death but only to nominate in accordance with the law prevailing. The form, by mistake or otherwise, in the footnote says that the nomination can be in favour of one person only, though this is clearly contrary to law. The form has column for two witnesses. It is obvious that it is because of this column that the signatures of two witnesses have been taken though only one witness is required in law. The intention was not to take signatures of the two witnesses to make this document a Will. It is also possible that because of this footnote that the deceased nominated only one person and not more. In this view of the matter it is not possible to hold that the document is a Will of the deceased and in any event looking to the possibility that the deceased was misled by the footnote it cannot be said to be a true Will.

10. Mr. Lalit for the appellant contends that in any event there could not have been any nomination in respect of the structure put up by the deceased. The society's interest is confined only to the shares and the land i.e. the deceased had a share or interest, qua the society, only in the shares and the land and, therefore, Sec. 30 providing for nomination can apply only to the shares and the land and the title, if any, conferred on the plaintiff will be in respect of the shares and the land and not the structure. The structure will continue to belong to the estate and devolve in accordance with law. He points out that it was a mistake on the part of the society to include in the form, the structure also. The contention of Mr. Lalit has to be accepted. It is well settled that in India ownership of land and the building can be separate unlike in England. The relationship of the society and member subsists only in respect of shares in and the property of the society. Therefore, a nomination is permitted only in respect of the share in and the property of the society. The society is concerned only with the shares held by a member and the land given by it to a member and not with the structure that a member may put up. The member's interest in the structure cannot be a share or interest in the Society. The nomination in respect of this structure is, therefore, invalid and of no effect. Even if I had held that the plaintiff became entitled in his own right, to the shares and the land by virtue of nomination he can in no circumstances become entitled to the structure which must continue with the estate of the deceased and in that view of the matter the defendant can never be a mere licensee and cannot be evicted. The defendant will be equally entitled to the structure as the plaintiff along with other heirs.

11. In the circumstances, the appeal is allowed. The decree of the learned trial Judge is set aside. The suit is dismissed. The plaintiff-respondent will pay the costs of the suit as well as of this appeal.

Appeal allowed.

J. R. Lalit, for Appellant; V. Z. Kankaria, for Respondents Nos. 1 to 3.

JUDGMENT:— This second appeal is filed by original plaintiff against the appellate decree passed against respondent No. 4 Trust, respondent Nos. 1 to 3 are the trustees of the Trust-respondent No. 4, though they are not described as such.

2. The plaintiff had filed a suit against the Trust initially in the Court of the Joint Civil Judge, Junior Division, Jalgaon, being Regular Civil Suit No. 618 of 1972 impleading the Trust as the first defendant and defendants Nos. 2 to 11 as original trustees. The suit was filed to recover an amount of Rs. 2,322/- with future interest and costs. The case of the plaintiff was that the first defendant is a Public Trust and he was the employee of this Trust working as a teacher in one of the High Schools conducted by the Trust. The plaintiff was appointed as the Head Master for academic year 1969-70 on monthly pay of Rs. 200/- as the basic pay and permitted dearness allowance. The total salary of the plaintiff was Rs. 327/- per month. It was the case of the plaintiff that he was appointed on June 11, 1969 for a period of one year i.e. from June 11, 1969 to June 10, 1970.

3. It appears that the school was closed within that time after appointment and the defendants did not pay the plaintiff the agreed amount of salary, and therefore, the plaintiff was required to file a suit for recovery of his pay. The plaintiff had, therefore, filed an earlier suit, being Regular Civil Suit No. 529 of 1969 to recover his salary and it appears that suit related to the first six months of academic year 1969-70. That suit came to be decreed and the decree in that suit is on record which shows that the plaintiffs' claim to the extent of six months' period was decreed on the basis that the defendant-Trust committed breach of contract.

4. In this suit, which is filed by the plaintiff the plaintiff says that he was ready and willing to work as Head Master for the whole year but Vidyalaya was closed and the defendant-Trust is liable to pay for the remaining six months of the academic year 1969-70.

5. Defendant-Trust raised a plea that the suit is barred by the provisions of O. 2, R. 2 of the Civil P. C., in view of the judgment and decree passed in the earlier suit being Reg. Civil Suit No. 529 of 1969. It also denied that the Trust had committed any breach of contract and finally contended that the plaintiff is not entitled to any relief because he has no cause of action to file the present suit.

6. The learned trial Judge framed as many as seven issues. On consideration of the evidence on record, he held on issue No. 5, which related to the closure of the school, that as on this issue no evidence was given by the defendants, therefore, the contention of the plaintiff was accepted by the trial Judge that the school was not closed and therefore holding the contract continues he held that the plaintiff is entitled to the relief claimed by him. On issue No. 6, which related to the bar under O. 2, R. 2 of the Civil P. C., the learned trial Judge held that the bar is not attracted, because the cause of action for the present suit and the cause of action for the earlier suit are different, holding that the former suit was for recovery of damages of the earlier six months and the present suit is confined to the period from Nov. 12, 1969 to June 11, 1970 and the bar of O. 2, R. 2 of the Civil P. C. does not arise. The learned trial Judge was of the view that since the plaintiff's claim relates to the monthly salary in which event monthly salary becomes due per month and as this cause of action is recurring cause of action, he held that the bar of O. 2, R. 2 of the Code cannot be attracted to the present suit. The other issues are not necessary to be taken into consideration. On these principal issues, the trial Judge having held in favour of the plaintiff passed a decree in the sum of Rs. 2,322/- plus interest. It is material to note that the decree reads as follows:—

"The defendant-Trust to pay the plaintiff a sum of Rs. 2,322/- plus interest at the rate of 4% p. a. from the date of suit till realisation. Defendant-Trust to pay the costs of this suit to the plaintiff and shall bear its own."

7. Against this decree, only defendant Nos. 3, 5 and 6 filed an appeal before the learned District Judge, Jalgaon. This appeal was heard by the learned District Judge and he has reversed the decree passed by the trial Court and dismissed the suit of the plaintiff on the ground of bar of O. 2, R. 2 of the Civil P. C., although he held on other issues in favour of the plaintiff concurring with the trial Court. In the result the learned District Judge allowed the appeal and set aside the decree of the trial Court, and dismissed the suit of the plaintiff by his judgment and decree, dated Feb. 9, 1976. The plaintiff being dissatisfied with this appellate decree has filed this second appeal in the High Court.

8. It may be noted here that the first defendant is a Trust and there were as many as defendants Nos. 2 to 11 as trustees originally on record. Mr. V. Z. Kankaria, the learned Advocate for the respondents had told that defendants Nos. 3, 5 and 6 were represented by lawyers and original defendant No. 11 died and all other respondents were ex parte. Original defendant No. 2 Pandharinath Thapade is not the appellant before me.

9. Mr. J. R. Lalit for the appellant has raised preliminary point that the appeal filed by defendant Nos. 3, 5 and 6 before the Appellate Court is incompetent and defective, because the other defendants who were co-trustees are not joined in the said appeal either as appellants or respondents. Secondly, he says that as the decree is only passed against the Trust, the appeal filed by defendants Nos. 3, 5 and 6 is untenable, because they cannot be said to be the persons aggrieved or adversely affected by the decree. I have already quoted the extract of the operative portion of the decree and from that it appears that that decree does not show that original defendants Nos. 2 to 11 are made liable under the said decree.

10. Mr. Kankaria, the learned Advocate for the respondents has urged before me that the framing of the appeal before the Appellate Court is not defective, because defendants Nos. 3, 5 and 6 are co-trustees along with other trustees and the Trust is duly represented by them and their interest being joint, they are entitled to challenge the decree, which adversely would affect the Trust. He invited my attention to the provisions of S. 2 (18) of the Bombay Public Trusts Act, 1950 (hereinafter referred to as the "Trust Act"), which reads thus:—

"2 (18). 'trustee' means a person in whom either alone or in association with other persons, the trust property is vested and includes a manager."

Mr. Kankaria also invited my attention to the definition of 'Public Trust' and contended that any one of the trustees being interested can file the appeal, and therefore the framing of the appeal is not defective. He tried to substantiate his case by citing certain circumstances. Especially he invited my attention to the authority reported in Rameshwar Prasad v. Shambehari Lal, AIR 1963 SC 1901. Relying on the provisions of Civil P. C. contained in O. 41, R. 4 as interpreted by the Supreme Court in Rameshwar Prasad v. Shambehari Lal (supra), he contended that one of the plaintiffs or defendants under R. 4 represents the non-appelling defendants and thus can file the appeal when the decree proceeds on any ground common to all. He also invited my attention to other two cases in support of his contention that one co-trustee can file appeal. He also relied on the case reported in B. Sailendra Nath v. Shib Dass, AIR 1944 Oudh 289, which case according to me is not applicable to the facts of the present case, because the said case deals with the appointment of new trustees under Section 92 of the Civil P. C. There is no quarrel with the proposition that the new trustees can be appointed in place of old trustees in a case which is governed by Section 92 of the Civil P. C. for removal of the trustees. The present suit is not a suit as contemplated by Sec. 92 of the Civil P. C. Mr. Kankaria again referred to an authority reported in Gurunath Khandappa-gouda v. Venkatesh Lingo, AIR 1937 Bom 101, which case has no bearing on the present facts of the case, because that case related to a decree for costs which was made against A, B and C in the trial Court and after execution of the decree against A, on appeal by B and C to which A was not party, the decree was reversed and A applied for restoration of that decree. It was held in that case that A was entitled to restoration though he was not party to the appeal. This case again is not of any assistance to Mr. Kankaria in any way.

11. There is another aspect, which is important in this case, that the first defendant-Trust was the public trust and defendant No. 2 was managing the affairs of the trust as stated in the judgment of the trial Court. It would have been expected that at least defendant No. 2 should have been on record to file the appeal. Mr. Kankaria is unable to show me from the memo of appeal of the Appellate Court or the plaint that the trustees were described as such or the present respondents Nos. 1 to 3 were mentioned as managing trustees. In the absence of the other co-defendants against whom the decree was not passed by the trial Court, in my opinion, the decree of the trial Court has become final and if it is allowed to be reopened at the instance of defendants Nos. 3, 5 and 6 as the remaining co-defendants are not parties to this appeal as stated above, I think that it will give rise to conflicting decrees. If the decree is joint and one, then it is difficult to see how in this particular case, at least defendants Nos. 3, 5 and 6 could represent the other trustees of the Trust when defendant No. 2 was actually described as managing trustee as stated above in the judgment.

12. The learned Advocate Mr. Kankaria further contended that in view of the provisions of O. 41, R. 4 of the Civil P. C. as the trust property vests in the trustees as stated in the definition of "trustee" contained in S. 2 (18) of the Public Trusts Act and in view of the cases, which are cited by him to support his contention that the appeal before the Appellate Court was competent one, he also relied on the provisions of O. 41, R. 33 to support his contention that the decree can be passed against non-appealing defendants and the Appellate Court is entitled to exercise power under O. 41, R. 33 of the Civil P. C.

13. I need not discuss the provisions of O. 41, R. 33 of the Civil P. C. It is sufficient to say that reliance on the provisions of Order 41, Rule 33 is quite misconceived. Order 41, Rule 33 deals with the powers of the appellate Court to pass a decree against non-appealing respondent or under certain special circumstances. The power is wide and therefore it is also to be exercised sparingly. The power cannot be invoked for the simple reason, because the appeal filed by defendants Nos. 3, 5 and 6 before the learned District Judge is inherently defective and no formal application for amendment of the defect has ever been given even to-day. I have not prevented Mr. Kankaria to address his arguments although he has not formerly made any application for amendment, but that does not solve the controversy in regard to the preliminary point. In my opinion, reliance on O. 41, R. 4 of the Civil P. C. is also not correct. Order 41, Rule 4 deals with the case where there are more plaintiffs or more defendants than one in a suit and the appellate decree proceeds on any ground common to any one of them. In view of the contention of Mr. Kankaria that the interest of the Trust and the trustees is one and same, it is difficult to see how the provisions of O. 41, R. 4 can be availed of.

14. It is true that in case of trust, one of the trustees interested in the property can certainly take proceedings, but in this case I am concerned with the decree which is already passed by the trial Court and the trial Court having not held the respondents liable under the decree, I do not see how this principle will be applicable to the facts of the present case. The memo of appeal in the District Court as well as the plaint is silent about the actual description and designation of the other respondents who are trustees although the plaintiff has himself stated in his plaint that he is suing the Trust and made the other trustees as party defendants to the suit. But that position is not being availed of by the defendants, because the suit was tried and the decree was passed by the trial Court. As the decree as interpreted is only against the Trust, it is not possible to accept the contention of Mr. Kankaria that the other trustees are adversely affected or can be said to be the aggrieved persons.

15. Mr. Lalit, the learned Advocate for the appellant has invited my attention to a case reported in Vendakannu Nadar v. Nanguneri Taluk Singikulam Annadana Chattram, AIR 1938 Mad 982 and reliance was placed on Head Note (e), which reads as follows:

"The general principle of law is that the office of a trustee, irrespective of the number of trustees, is a joint one and co-trustees form, as it were, one trustee and must therefore execute the duties of their office jointly. Hence no suit in regard to trust properties would be maintainable by one or some of the trustees only, if the remaining trustees are not before the Court either as plaintiffs or even as defendants."

Following ratio of this decision, I see no difficulty in accepting the contention raised by Mr. Lalit. It is further found in the said authority that the other co-trustees were not made parties and even formal amendment application for bringing them on record was not made. In this case also, Mr. Kankaria has also not made any attempt to make any application to bring the other trustees on record. Therefore, in my opinion, the appeal filed before the District Court is defective. Mr. Lalit also derived support from the Gujarat High Court (FB), case reported in Ahmaram Ranchhodbhai v. Gulamhusein Gulam Mohiyaddin, AIR 1973 Guj 113 which reiterates the same principle that all the trustees must be before the Court when the question of liability of trust properties is involved. In view of this legal position, I hold that the appeal filed by defendants Nos. 3, 5 and 6 before the learned District Judge, Jalgaon being Civil Appeal No. 124 of 1974 was not competent appeal and, therefore, the findings recorded by the learned District Judge in the appeal are liable to be vacated. I do not think it necessary to deal with the other point regarding bar of O. 2, R. 2 of the Civil P. C., as the appeal stands disposed of on the preliminary point raised by Mr. Lalit.

16. In the result, the appeal is allowed. The appellate decree, dated Feb. 9, 1976 in Appeal No. 124 of 1974 is set aside and the decree of the trial Court in Civil Suit No. 618 of 1972, D/- April 11, 1974 is restored and confirmed.

Mr. Lalit for the appellant pressed for costs throughout. I do not agree with the learned Advocate as the appellant has succeeded on a technical point and therefore the appellant will be entitled to the costs of this appeal.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1982 BOMBAY 491

M. N. CHANDURKAR AND
B. C. GADGIL, JJ.

M/s. Nilesh Construction Company and another, Appellants v. Mrs. Gangubai and others, Respondents.

Appeal No. 137 of 1982 in Notice of Motion No. 1236 of 1981 in Suit No. 1811 of 1980, D/- 26-4-1982.

(A) Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands Act (67 of 1948), S. 85-A — Issue of tenancy — Cannot be raised on vague plea. (Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 6, R. 2).

Before a reference to the Mamlatdar for deciding the issue of tenancy under the Tenancy Act is made, the alleged tenant must disclose in his pleadings details about the tenancy and the exact nature of the right which is claimed by him. An issue of tenancy cannot be raised on a vague plea. AIR 1975 Bom 52, Followed. (Para 11)

(B) Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands Act (67 of 1948), S. 85-A — Bar of jurisdiction of Civil Court — Power of Civil Court to determine applicability of Act and recall reference — Notice of Motion No. 1236 of 1981, dated 11-3-1982 (Bom), Reversed. (Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), S. 9).

If the question raised is whether the provisions of the Tenancy Act are attracted to a given case, on facts which are not in dispute, it is clearly permissible for the Civil Court to go into the question of the applicability of the provisions of the Tenancy Act. If it is found on the facts that the reference to the Revenue Court should not have at all been made as the lands were excluded from the operation of the Tenancy Act, it would be permissible to recall the reference. 1979 Bom CR 75, Followed. Notice of Motion No. 1236 of 1981, D/- 11-3-1982 (Bom), Reversed. (Para 11)

(C) Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands Act (67 of 1948), Ss. 88 (1) (b) and 45-C Proviso — Land covered by S. 88 (1) (b) Notification — Effect — Relevancy of Section 45-C Proviso in context of such land.

The effect of the Notification issued under Section 88 (1) (b) is that the lands covered by the Notification have been totally excluded from the operation of the provisions of the Tenancy Act, because the imperative words of Section 88 are, "nothing in the foregoing provisions of the Act shall apply" to the area reserved for non-agricultural or industrial development. The "foregoing provisions" are Sections 1 to 87-A and, therefore, the moment a Notification is issued under Section 88 (1) (b), none of the provisions of Tenancy Act will apply in the case of any area which has been specified as being reserved for non-agricultural or industrial development. The effect of the Notification is to exempt lands from the operation of the provisions of the Tenancy Act retrospectively. AIR 1966 SC 538, Followed. (Para 13)

It is, therefore, difficult to accept the contention advanced on behalf of the plaintiffs that the Notification dated 29th March, 1957 issued under Section 88 (1) (b) cannot deprive the plaintiffs of the rights which had vested in them as tenants. Even assuming that the plaintiffs' predecessor had any rights under the Tenancy Act, having regard to the mandatory provisions of Section 88 (1) (b), no rights under any of the provisions of Sections 1 to 87-A of the Tenancy Act could be claimed by the plaintiffs. (Para 14)

Reference to the provisions of Sec. 43-C and the proviso thereto appears to be wholly out of place for the purposes of the present case. In order to understand this proviso it has to be borne in mind that when the new provision in Cl. (c) was enacted in Section 88 (1) by the Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands (Amendment) Act 1952 (33 of 1952), the effect was that all the lands situated within the limits of Greater Bombay, within the limits of the Municipal Corporation under the Bombay Municipal Corporation Act, within the limits of the Municipal Boroughs constituted under the Bombay Municipal Boroughs Act 1955 and in the limits of any cantonment were exempted from the operation of the provisions of the Tenancy Act. There was, thus, a total deprivation of the benefits of the Tenancy Act to the tenants of lands situated within the municipal limits of the Corporations or municipality and cantonment specified in Cl. (c). This was undone partly by the enactment of the provisions of Section 43-C and the proviso. The object of enacting the proviso was to restore to the tenants of lands in the areas specified in Cls. (a) to (f) of Section 43-C the other rights which had already accrued to them prior to the Amending Act of 1952 and the Amending Act 1955 and which had been adversely affected by those enactments. The proviso to Section 43-C, however, has no relevance in the context of lands in respect of which a Notification under Section 88 (1) (b) has been issued. The effect of S. 88 (1) of depriving tenants of lands which are reserved for non-agricultural and industrial development continued because such lands were not the subject matter of provisions of Sec. 43-C or the proviso. Section 43-C was, therefore, wholly irrelevant for the purpose of ascertaining the effect of the Notification under Section 88 (1) (b). AIR 1973 Bom 172 and AIR 1966 SC 459, Distinguished.

R. J. Joshi with H. C. Tunara and C. V. Mandavia, for Appellants; S. H. Kapadia with Kumar V. Deorukhkar i/b M/s. Gagrat and Co., for Respondents Nos. 1 to 5.

CHANDURKAR, J.:— This appeal by defendants Nos. 3 and 4 is directed against the order made by Kania, J. on 11th Mar., 1982 dismissing the Notice of Motion taken out by the appellants for vacating an order of interim injunction made by Modi, J. on 13th April, 1981. The contesting respondents Nos. 1 to 5 have filed a suit on the Original Side of this Court asking for a permanent injunction preventing the appellants from trespassing upon or entering the lands in question; from dispossessing the plaintiffs or any of them of the said lands or any part thereof; from constructing any structure or structures on the said lands or any part thereof and from preventing, obstructing or interfering in any manner with the exclusive possession, use and enjoyment of the said lands or any portion thereof by the plaintiffs. It is not necessary to go into the various allegations made in the plaint on which the plaintiffs claim a right to continue in possession of the lands in dispute and it is sufficient to mention that the claim of the plaintiffs appears to be that their predecessor-in-title, viz., Babiya, who was the husband of plaintiff No. 1 and the father of the other plaintiffs was in exclusive and uninterrupted possession, use and enjoyment of the lands in dispute. It may be stated that the lands in dispute, which is having an area of 8006 sq. metres approximately, is a part of a larger piece of land having an area of 17,000 sq. metres situate at Village Kurar which has been included in the Municipal limits of Malad Municipality.

2. According to the defendants, the land in question belongs to one Sukhtankar with whom the appellants had entered into a partnership for the purpose of developing the land. This partnership came to be dissolved in 1977 and as a part of the division of the assets of the partnership, the lands have been taken over by the appellants who had applied to the Competent Authority under the Urban Land Ceiling Act for exemption under Section 20 of the Act. This application has been granted on 21st Feb., 1978 and the appellants claimed that permission to convert the land to non-agricultural purpose has also been granted on 2nd Nov., 1978.

3. In the suit, a Notice of Motion was taken out by the plaintiffs for an interim order of injunction. Injunction was granted by Modi, J. restraining the appellants from in any way interfering with the possession of the disputed lands bearing CTS Nos. 74, 75, 84 (1 to 7) and 95 (1 to 4) of Village Kurar, Dapthary Road, Malad, and from dispossessing the plaintiffs or any of them from the said lands or part thereof and from putting up any construction on or under the said land or any part thereof. The present appellants, who are defendants Nos. 3 and 4 were given liberty to put up a compound wall around the said lands but so as not to obstruct in any way the possession or right to pass or repass of the plaintiffs or any of them or their guests, invitees and persons desiring to visit them. Defendants Nos. 3 and 4 were also permitted to construct or have constructed drainage, electric cables and other facilities passing throughout the land in dispute provided, however that the same will be taken only along the periphery of the land. After having made an order of injunction, the learned Judge, taking the view that the plaintiffs claimed tenancy rights under the Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands Act, 1948, made a reference to the Mamlatdar. In para 4 of the order Modi, J. observed as follows:

"The case of the plaintiffs based on adverse possession, prima facie, appears to be difficult to prove. However, the plaintiffs' claim in the alternative is for the tenancy rights claimed under the Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands Act, 1948. This issue in my view must be referred to the proper authorities under the said Act. Hence, under the provisions of Section 85-A of the said Act I stay this suit till this issue is decided and refer the said issue to Mamlatdar Borivali under the provisions of the Act for decision. The Mamlatdar should dispose of the matter as expeditiously as possible.

5. In case the decision is against the plaintiffs, liberty to the defendants to apply for vacating or variation of the interim order.

6. Liberty to the parties to apply also in case there is delay in disposing of the matter by Mamlatdar."

4. The reference was dealt with by the Tahsildar, Borivali, by his order dated 20th Aug., 1981. The Tahsildar took the view that the provisions of the Tenancy Act are not applicable to the suit lands because of the proclamation made by the then Government of Bombay on 24th May, 1948, which, according to the Tahsildar had the effect of the suit land becoming a part of the Municipal District of Malad, as well as in view of the provisions made in Section 88 (1) (b) under which the suit lands were reserved for non-agricultural and industrial development. He, therefore, took the view that the claim of the plaintiffs for tenancy right under the Tenancy Act was not established and was, therefore, rejected. This order was upheld by the Collector who dismissed the appeal against the order of the Tahsildar. By a brief order, the Additional Collector, Bombay Suburban District, upheld the decision of the Tahsildar and confirmed the declaration that, "the appellants are not the tenants of the suit lands viz., Survey Nos. 32/2 and 33 of Village Kurar." There is no dispute that these are the lands in question.

5. The plaintiffs have filed a revision application before the Maharashtra Revenue Tribunal which has not yet been heard. But, in the meantime, the appellants took out the Notice of Motion to have the order of injunction vacated. This Notice of Motion was taken out after the decision of the Additional Collector dismissing the appeal of the plaintiffs. The Notice of Motion was, however, dismissed by Kania, J. giving opportunity to the appellants to take out fresh Notice of Motion after the final disposal of the revision application by plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 6 before the Maharashtra Revenue Tribunal, and the learned Judge noted the agreement of the parties that they would apply for the expeditious hearing of the application. It is this order which is now challenged in this appeal.

6. Mr. Joshi, learned counsel, appearing on behalf of the appellants had contended that in view of the fact that the lands in question have been included in the local area of the Municipal District of Malad by Notification under Section 8 (1) of the Bombay District Municipal Act 1901, as well as in view of the fact that the State Government has already issued a Notification on 29th Mar., 1957 in exercise of its power under Section 88 (1) (b) of the Bombay Tenancy Act declaring the entire land in village Kurar as being reserved for non-agricultural and industrial development, the provisions of the Tenancy Act were wholly inapplicable to the lands in question and not only were the plaintiffs not entitled to claim any right under the Tenancy Act but the reference made to the Tahsildar was also not necessary.

7. The argument in the appeal before us has proceeded on the limited question as to whether, on admitted facts in the present case, the plaintiffs were entitled to claim any right under the provisions of the Bombay Tenancy Act? The facts, which are not in dispute, are as follows:

(i) By a preliminary notification dated 24th May, 1948 issued under Section 8 (1) of the Bombay District Municipal Act 1901, the Government of Bombay had notified its proposal to constitute a local area, a permanent municipal district, under Ss. 4 and 7 of the said Act under the name of Municipal District to Malad and many other survey numbers of village Kurar including survey numbers 22 to 39 which included survey Nos. 32/2 and 33 in question.

(ii) The Government by subsequent Notification dated 22nd Nov., 1950 published in the Bombay Government Gazette dated 7th Dec., 1950, Part I A, after making a reference to the Notification dated 24th May, 1948, referred to above, declared under Sections 4 and 7 of the Bombay District Municipal Act, 1901, that the local area, the local limits whereof are set forth in the schedule annexed to the Notification to be a permanent municipal district with effect from 1st April, 1951 under the name of the Municipal District of Malad. The schedule set out the limits of the permanent Municipal District of Malad and they were the same as were specified in the Notification of 24th May, 1948.

(iii) The Government of Bombay had in exercise of the powers conferred by Cl. (b) of sub-section (1) of Section 88 of the Bombay Tenancy Act, issued a notification on 29-3-1957 and had specified the area mentioned in the schedule annexed to the Notification as being reserved for non-agricultural and industrial development and Village Kurar was mentioned at serial No. 12.

8. Normally, when the matter was pending in revision before the Maharashtra Revenue Tribunal, we would not have gone into the question as to whether the plaintiffs were entitled to the benefit of the Tenancy Act. But the matter appears to us to be so plain and clear and beyond any controversy that we do not think it worthwhile to allow the litigation between the parties to be dragged on only on the issue of a claim of tenancy. It also appears to us that the relevant facts were probably not brought to the notice of either Modi, J. or Kania, J. and if the relevant provisions were brought to the notice of the learned Judge who dealt with the matter earlier, we are sure that the matter could have been dealt with by this Court without making a reference to the Revenue Authorities.

9. It is contended on behalf of the appellants that there was no occasion in this case to make any reference to the Tahsildar because, on admitted facts, the provisions of the Tenancy Act were not applicable at all. According to the learned counsel, having regard to the fact that Notification dated 29th Mar., 1957 was issued under Section 88 (1) (b) of the Tenancy Act, the provisions of the Tenancy Act became inapplicable to the lands in question. The learned counsel contended that if the provisions of the Tenancy Act became inapplicable to the lands in question, and the Civil Court is competent to decide the question as to whether the provisions of the Tenancy Act were attracted in the instant case or not, and further Modi, J. having taken the view that prima facie the claim of the defendants that they were in adverse possession could not be supported, Kania J. should have vacated the injunction issued by Modi, J. According to the contesting respondents they and their three predecessors-in-title were in possession of the lands in dispute since 1903 and in any case as they were in possession on the date on which the Tenancy Act had come into force, certain rights had accrued to them under the Tenancy Act and therefore, the only forum where the question as to whether the contesting respondents were tenants or not could be decided was the Revenue Authorities viz., the Tahsildar and this could be done only by a reference under Section 85-A of the Bombay Tenancy Act. Reliance was placed on the provisions of the proviso to Section 43 (c) of the Tenancy Act and it was contended by Mr. Kapadia that once certain rights had accrued to the contesting respondents under the provisions of the Tenancy Act, those rights were not affected either by the Notification dated 29th March, 1957 or by the inclusion of the lands in question of village Kurar within the limits of the Municipality of Malad. We shall refer later to some decisions on which Mr. Kapadia has relied in support of the above contention.

10. Before we refer to the relevant provisions of the Tenancy Act, and especially to the provisions of Ss. 43 (c) and 88 thereof, it is necessary to refer to certain averments in the plaint made by the plaintiffs. In para 8 of the plaint the plaintiffs have admitted that the area in which the plot of land in dispute is situated falls within the territorial limits of Malad District Municipality prior to 1st Feb., 1957. Then in paragraph 12 they have stated that from and after 1st Feb., 1957 the said plot of land was merged in the Municipal Corporation of Greater Bombay and certain structures standing on the plot of land have been assessed to municipal taxes in the name of Bably, the deceased predecessor-in-title of the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs themselves have stated in para 30 that on 31st Jan., 1949 the tenancy of Bablya Chaudhary was terminated by the mother of the first defendant, and that after 1949, in any event, the plaintiffs' predecessor continued to remain in exclusive possession, use and occupation of the land in question and, therefore, the plaintiffs were owners of the said land by adverse possession. The allegation further made is that on 1st April, 1957 plaintiffs were in exclusive possession, use and occupation of the lands and the said lands were also under cultivation even as late as 24th Feb., 1979 as could be seen from the order of the Tahsildar, Borivali. That these averments were intended to support the claim of adverse possession is clear from the averments in para 30. Then in para 31 the plaintiffs have stated that Bablya had made an application on 17th April, 1965 for a declaration under Section 70-B of the Bombay Tenancy Act that he was a tenant but the said application (Suit No. 5 of 1965) was subsequently withdrawn by Bablya on the ground that certain provisions of Bombay Tenancy Act did not apply and Bablya could not claim to be the owner of the land under his cultivation in view thereof. A plea of exclusive possession from 1949 onwards is once again raised in the same para and an averment has been made at the end of para 33 as follows:

"The plaintiffs therefore submit that in any event as stated hereinabove the afore-said lands continue to be agricultural lands and in any event the plaintiffs are the tenants of defendants Nos. 1 and 2 herein, and are in lawful possession thereof."

These are the material averments and these averments highlight the fact that while in para 30 it is stated that the tenancy was terminated by notice dated 31-3-1949, in para 33 a plea of tenancy is again taken and lawful possession of the land in question is claimed.

11. This Court has consistently taken the view that before a reference to the Mamlatdar for deciding the issue of tenancy under the Tenancy Act is made, the alleged tenant must disclose in his pleadings details about the tenancy and the exact nature of the right which is claimed by him and that an issue of tenancy cannot be raised on a vague plea (see 1974 Mah LJ 548): (AIR 1975 Bom 52). In so far as the present case is concerned, in the relevant averments referred to above, the case pleaded is that the plaintiffs were in adverse possession after the tenancy of Bablya was terminated by the notice dated 31-3-1949. The tenancy rights seem to have been claimed by the plaintiffs on the ground that they and their predecessors-in-title had been in lawful possession after the tenancy was terminated by notice dated 31st Mar., 1949. The claim thus appears to be one of deemed tenancy. It is, however, not necessary for us to go into this question because if it is found that the lands in question were excluded from the operation of the provisions of the Tenancy Act, then even Section 85-A of the Tenancy Act would not be attracted to the facts of the present case. If it is found on the facts of the present case that the reference to the Revenue Court should not have at all been made as the lands were excluded from the operation of the Tenancy Act, it would be permissible to recall the reference as held by this Court in Civil Revn. Appln. No. 561 of 1978 decided on 17th Nov., 1978* by Pratap, J., Satwashila Daulatrao Ghorpade v. Rukminibai. If the question raised is whether the provisions of the Tenancy Act are attracted to a given case, on facts which are not in dispute, it is clearly permissible for the Civil Court to go into the question of the applicability of the provisions of the Tenancy Act.

12. It is, therefore, now necessary to refer to certain provisions of the Tenancy Act. Under the original provisions of Section 88 (1) (c) it was provided that nothing in the foregoing provisions of the Tenancy Act shall apply inter alia, "to any area within the limits of Greater Bombay and within the limits of the municipal boroughs of Poona City and Suburban, Ahmedabad, Sholapur, Surat and Hubli and within a distance of two miles of the limits of such boroughs; or (d) to any area which the Provincial Government may, from time to time, by notification in the Official Gazette, specify as being reserved for urban non-agricultural or industrial development." By Act 13 of 1956, in the place of original Section 88, new provisions in S. 88 (a) to (d) were substituted. We are concerned only with Cl. (b) of Section 88 which reads as follows:

"Nothing in the foregoing provisions of this Act shall apply—

(b) to any area which the State Government may, from time to time, by notification in the Official Gazette, specify as being reserved for non-agricultural or industrial development."

By Act 33 of 1952 Cl. (c) of Section 88 was substituted for the original Cl. (c). The new clause along with Cl. (d) reads as follows:

(c) to any area within the limits of Greater Bombay, within the limits of the Municipal Corporations constituted under the Bombay Provincial Municipal Corporations Act, 1949, within the limits of the municipal boroughs constituted under the Bombay Municipal Boroughs Act, 1925, and within the limits of any cantonment; or

(d) to any area which the State Government may, from time to time, by notification in Official Gazette, specify as being reserved for urban non-agricultural or industrial development:

By the same Act of 1956 a new provision in S. 43-C was enacted. This S. 43-C was one of the several provisions in Chaps. III A and B which were added to the Tenancy Act by Act 33 of 1956. Since heavy reliance is placed on the provisions of S. 43-C along with proviso thereof, it is necessary to reproduce that provision. Section 43-C and the proviso read as follows:

* Reported in 1979 Bom CR 75.

"43-C. Nothing in Sections 32 to 32-R (both inclusive) and 43 shall apply to lands in the area within the limits of—

- (a) Greater Bombay,
- (b) a municipal corporation constituted under the Bombay Provincial Municipal Corporations Act, 1949.
- (c) a municipal borough constituted under the Bombay Municipal Boroughs Act, 1925,
- (d) a municipal district constituted under the Bombay District Municipal Act, 1901,
- (e) a cantonment, or
- (f) any area included in a Town Planning Scheme under the Bombay Town Planning Act, 1954:

Provided that, if any person has acquired any right as a tenant under this Act on or after the 28th December, 1948, the said right shall not be deemed to have been affected by the Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands (Amendment) Act, 1952, or (save as expressly provided in Section 43-D), by the Amending Act, 1955, notwithstanding the fact that either of the said Acts has been made applicable to the area in which such land is situate."

One more amendment of the Tenancy Act which requires to be referred to was the amendment in Cl. (b) of Section 70 of Tenancy Act, by the Act 49 of 1969, which had the effect of vesting jurisdiction in the Tahsildar not only to decide whether the person is a tenant or not but also to decide whether a person "was at any time in the past, a tenant". We have referred to this amendment because it was contended on behalf of the plaintiffs by Mr. Kapadia that since the jurisdiction of the Tahsildar extended to decide the question as to whether a person was a tenant or not, the question as to whether the predecessor-in-title of the plaintiffs was a tenant could also be decided by the Tahsildar and the reference was, therefore, validly made to him.

13. Now we have already referred to the Notification which was issued by the State Government under Section 88 (1) (b) on 29th March, 1957 under which 20 villages were reserved for non-agricultural and industrial development and Kurar was one of the twenty villages so notified. Kurar is the village in which the land in dispute is situated. The effect of this Notification of 29th March, 1957 issued under S. 88 (1) (b) of the Tenancy Act is that the lands in village Kurar including the lands in question have been totally excluded from the operation of the provisions of the Tenancy Act, because the imperative words of Section 88 are, "nothing in the foregoing provisions of the Act shall apply" to the area reserved for non-agricultural or industrial development. The "foregoing provisions" are Sections 1 to 87-A and, therefore, the moment a Notification is issued under S. 88 (1) (b), none of the provisions of Tenancy Act will apply in the case of any area which has been specified as being reserved for non-agricultural or industrial development. That the effect of a Notification under S. 88 (1) (b) is to exempt lands from the operation of the provisions of the Tenancy Act retrospectively is now settled by the decision of the Supreme Court in S. N. Kamble v. Sholapur Borough Municipality, AIR 1966 SC 538.

14. It is, therefore, difficult to accept the contention advanced on behalf of the plaintiffs that the Notification dated 29th Mar., 1957 cannot deprive the plaintiffs of the rights which had vested in them as tenants. This argument presupposes that on the date of the coming into force of the Tenancy Act the plaintiffs' predecessor-in-title was a tenant and certain rights under the Tenancy Act had vested in him. It is not necessary to go into this question because, even assuming that Bablya had any rights under the Tenancy Act, having regard to the mandatory provisions of Section 88 (1) (b), no rights under any of the provisions of Ss. 1 to 87-A of the Tenancy Act could be claimed by the plaintiffs.

15. Reference to the provisions of Section 43-C and the proviso thereto appears to us to be wholly out of place for the purposes of the present case. A bare reading of the provisions of Section 43-C in its substantive part will show that lands specified in Cls. (a) to (f) thereof, have been exempted from the operation of certain provisions viz., Sections 32 to 32-R and Section 43. The lands specified in Cls. (a) to (f) are lands either in the limits of Municipal Corporation or Committees or Cantonment or in any area included in any town planning scheme under the Bombay Town Planning Act 1954. Now the proviso to S. 43-C merely provides that if any person has acquired any right as a tenant under the Tenancy Act on or after 27th Mar., 1948, i.e. the date on which the Tenancy Act came into force, that right shall not be deemed to have been affected by the Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands (Amendment) Act, 1952 or by the Amending Act of 1955, which is same as the Act 13 of 1956, notwithstanding the fact that either of the said Act has been made applicable to the area in which such land is situated. In order to understand this proviso it has to be borne in mind that when the new provision in Cl. (c) was enacted in S. 88 (1) by the Bombay Tenancy and Agricultural Lands (Amendment) Act 1952 (33 of 1952), the effect was that all the lands situated within the limits of Greater Bombay, within the limits of the Municipal Corporation under the Bombay Municipal Corporation Act, within the limits of the Municipal Boroughs constituted under the Bombay Municipal Boroughs Act 1955 and in the limits of any cantonment were exempted from the operation of the provisions of the Tenancy Act. There was, thus, a total deprivation of the benefits of the Tenancy Act to the tenants of lands situated within the municipal limits of the Corporations or municipality and cantonment specified in Cl. (c). This was undone partly by the enactment of the provisions of S. 43-C and the proviso. The effect of enactment of Section 43-C and the proviso thereof was that in respect of tenants of lands situated within the Municipal limits specified in Cls. (a) to (d) and other areas specified in (e) and (f) the rights of statutory ownership available to tenants of other lands could not be availed of by these tenants. The object of enacting the proviso was to restore to the tenants of lands in the areas specified in Cls. (a) to (f) of Section 43-C the other rights which had already accrued to them prior to the Amending Act of 1952 and the Amending Act 1955 and which had been adversely affected by those enactments. The proviso to Section 43-C, however, has no relevance in the context of lands in respect of which a Notification under S. 88 (1) (b) has been issued. The effect of S. 88 (1) of depriving tenants of lands which are reserved for non-agricultural and industrial development continued because such lands were not the subject matter of provisions of Section 43-C or the proviso. Section 43-C was, therefore, wholly irrelevant for the purpose of ascertaining the effect of the Notification under Section 88 (1) (b). The authorities relied upon by Mr. Kapadia were mainly concerned with the effect of Section 43-C and the proviso.

16. In Pralhad Ganaba Kapare v. Sadaba Rambhau Bhosale, 1973 Mah LJ 124 : 74 Bom LR 687 : (AIR 1973 Bom 172) the question was whether a Notification issued by the Government under Section 88 (1) (b) of the Act excluding the lands from the operation of Sections 32 to 32-R, after the lands had already vested in the tenants under Section 32, divested the tenant of the ownership rights, and it was held by this Court that the tenant had acquired title to the lands which could not be divested by the Notification and the Agricultural Lands Tribunal had power to determine the purchase price in respect of the land under S. 32-G of the Act. The facts of that decision will show that the Notification including the fields in that case within the limits of the Poona Municipal Corporation was subsequent to the vesting of the title under Section 32 of the Tenancy Act. The learned Judge followed an earlier decision of Division Bench of this Court which had taken the view that inclusion of the lands of which the tenants had become owners with effect from 1-4-1957 within the limits of Thana Municipal Borough did not affect the rights which had already vested in the tenants on 1st April, 1957; the tillers' day. In the case before the Division Bench the lands in question were included in the limits of Thana Municipal Borough with effect from 1st Aug., 1958 by Notification issued by Government on 23rd June, 1958 when the proceedings for determination of purchase price under S. 32-G were pending before the Agricultural Lands Tribunal as the tenant had become owner of the land on 1st April, 1957 and it was held that the jurisdiction of the Lands Tribunal to determine the purchase price was not affected by the Notification on 23-6-1958. It may be pointed out that so far as the Notification in question in the present case is concerned, it was issued on 29th March, 1957 which is prior to the statutory vesting date.

17. The other decision relied upon by Mr. Kapadia is in Ishverlal Thakorelal Almaula v. Motibai Nagjibhai, AIR 1966 SC 459 in which the Supreme Court was dealing with the scope of Section 43-C and the proviso thereto. The Supreme Court held that the effect of the proviso was that rights other than those specified under S. 43-C were restored by the proviso retrospectively. As we have already pointed out, so far as the present case is concerned, Section 43-C is not at all relevant.

18. We may also refer to the provisions of Section 88-AI of the Tenancy Act which was inserted in the Act by Act 63 of 1958. It reads as follows:

"88-AI. Where any land being land situate in any of the villages specified in Sch. IV was not included within the limits of the former municipalities of Malad, Kandivali, Borivali, and Mulund immediately before the first day of February 1957, and a tenant of the land would have been deemed to have purchased the land under Section 32 but for the Government Notification in the Revenue Department, No. TNC. 5157/31/90-M, dated the 29th March, 1957, issued under Cl. (b) of Section 88 in respect of the said villages, such tenant shall, notwithstanding the said notification, be deemed to have purchased the land under Section 32 on the relevant date specified in that section and the provisions of Sections 32 to 32-R and Section 43 shall apply to such purchase accordingly."

19. The Notification dated 29th March, 1957 referred to in S. 88-AI above is the same Notification No. TNC. 5157/31/90-M, by which lands in Kurar were reserved for non-agricultural and industrial development. By this new provision it was provided that any land situated in any of the villages specified in Schedule 4 — Village Kurar is at Serial No. 12 in the Schedule — was not included within the limits of former municipal limits of Malad immediately before 1st Feb., 1957 and the tenant of the land would have been deemed to have purchased the land under Section 32 but for the Government Notification dated 29th March, 1957, such a tenant shall, notwithstanding the said Notification, be deemed to have purchased the land under S. 32 on the relevant date in that section and the provisions of Sections 32-R and 43 were to apply to such purchase accordingly. This provision operates only in respect of those lands which were not included within the limits of Kandivali, Borivali and Malad immediately before the 1st day of March, 1957. Tenants of such lands were now vested with a right of statutory purchase if they were deprived of such a right as a result of Notification dated 29th March, 1957.

20. The Lands in question, even as specified in the plaint are Survey Nos. 32 part and 33 part i.e. City Survey Nos. 74, 75, 84 (1 to 7), 95 and 95 (1 to 4). The proclamation dated 24th May, 1948 included Survey Nos. 22 to 39 of village Kurar as proposed to be included in the permanent Municipal District of Malad. We have also referred to the final Notification issued dated 22nd Nov., 1950 by which the area within the limits specified there was constituted to be a permanent municipal district with effect from 1st April, 1951 in the Municipal District of Malad. We have also pointed out that the limits are same as specified in the earlier Notification of 24th May, 1948. The express provisions in Section 88-AI further reiterate the position that while in respect of certain lands which were not within the limits of Malad Municipality before 1st Feb., 1957, statutory ownership rights were to be vested in the tenant thereof, no such rights were contemplated in respect of the lands in question because they were already part of the Municipality of Malad.

21. It is thus clear that the claim made by the plaintiffs, though not in so many words in the plaint, that they are governed by the provisions of the Tenancy Act is wholly misconceived and for the purpose of determining the question as to whether they are entitled to any interim relief or not, the determination of the alleged right as tenants was wholly irrelevant because we have already shown that the provisions of the Tenancy Act are not at all attracted in the present case. The consequence which must now follow is that the reference made to the Tahsildar was wholly unnecessary and incompetent and it is liable to be recalled and must be treated as recalled with the result that the Revenue Tribunal is not required now to decide on merits the Revision Application pending before it. Secondly, the appellants are entitled to have their Notice of Motion for vacation of injunction heard on merits without taking into account the fact that the plaintiffs were claiming to be entitled to the benefits of the Tenancy Act.

22. In the view which we have taken, the order made by Justice Kania rejecting the Notice of Motion No. 1236 of 1981 is set aside and the Notice of Motion will now be decided on merits. The appeal is thus allowed. In the circumstances of the case, we make no order as to costs of the appeal. The Notice of Motion to be heard in the third week of June, 1982.

Appeal allowed.

A. N. MODY, J.

P., Appellant v. P., Respondent; and R. Co-respondent.

First Appeal No. 599 of 1979, D/- 6-8-1981.

(A) Hindu Marriage Act (25 of 1955), S. 13 (1) (i) — Pleadings — Alibi evidence of co-respondent — Cannot be believed in absence of pleading in that behalf. (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 8, R. 2).

*Only portions approved for reporting by High Court are reported here.

GZ/GZ/D75/82/JHS

If a person is relying on an alibi, it is necessary that it should be pleaded. The alibi of the co-respondent relied on, if not pleaded, is likely to take the opposite party by surprise and it ought to have been pleaded and not having been pleaded, apart from the question of whether he can lead evidence, the defence becomes difficult of belief. (Para 21)

(B) Evidence Act (1 of 1872), Ss. 137 and 138 — Cross-examination — Scope.

The answers in examination-in-chief are normally in reply to the questions put by the advocate, but whatever is stated is really the case of that witness and particularly when the witness is a party to the proceedings of that party. All the questions which are asked with a view to challenge the evidence-in-chief are permissible. There is no provision of law which says that cross-examination should be confined to what is volunteered by the witness and cannot be directed to challenge or clarify the answers given in reply to the questions put by his own advocate in examination-in-chief. (Para 23)

(C) Hindu Marriage Act (25 of 1955), S. 13 (1) (i) and (ia) — Evidence and proof — Respondent-wife in hotel cabin with her blouse and brassiere unhooked and co-respondent holding her breasts in his hands — Not by itself sufficient to prove adultery or cruelty.

It is true that there can be ordinarily no direct evidence of adultery. It is difficult to produce evidence of the party being found in actual compromising position. The finding of adultery must necessarily rest on circumstantial evidence. The circumstantial evidence will consist not only of the two offending parties being found together in unusual circumstance or being together alone in a secluded place for a long period of time but also will consist of the social condition of the party and the manner in which the parties are accustomed to live. To put it differently, what can be said to be natural mingling of the opposite sexes in a jet set world will be alien to a person belonging to ordinary middle class and the unusual mingling of two persons of opposite sex in seclusion for any length of time amongst that class can justifiably lead to an inference of adultery. However, in the present case this position cannot help the appellant-petitioner. The evidence on the incidents prior to 30th Nov., 1971 is not reliable. This leaves only the incident of 30th Nov., 1971. Assuming the incident of 30th Nov., 1971 i.e. the presence of the respondent-wife in the restaurant cabin with her blouse and brassiere unhooked and the co-respondent holding her breasts in his hands is proved, that by itself cannot permit any inference of adultery. It is possible that it was preliminary step to adultery and may ultimately have resulted in adultery but it cannot be said that the incident proved that adultery had taken place. Hence, the petitioner has been unable to prove adultery. AIR 1963 Bom 98, Distinguished. (Paras 18, 24)

As regards cruelty, it is not sufficient to prove mere cruelty. What is required is that the conduct should be such as is wilful or unjustifiable and of such a character as to cause danger to life, limb or health, bodily or mental or to give rise to a reasonable apprehension of such a danger. L. P. Appeal No. 28 of 1980, D/- 10-3-1981 (Bom), Foll. (Para 24)

The incident is such as may cause great disturbance to the petitioner, but cannot be said to be such as can cause any damage to the health. The evidence given also does not establish that the incident had in fact affected the health of the petitioner to any extent. The only evidence is of annoyance or mental disturbance. This cannot amount to legal cruelty required to form a ground for divorce. (Paras 18, 24)

K. H. Panchal with Hemendra Shah, for Appellant; C. R. Dalvi with P. N. Karlekar, for Respondent; M. P. Kenia with Miss Premila Shah, for Co-respondent.

JUDGMENT:— The appellant (original petitioner) is the husband of the 1st respondent (original respondent). She is alleged to have committed adultery with the 2nd respondent (original co-respondent). The petition was dismissed, hence, this appeal.

2. The petitioner and the 1st respondent were married on 14-2-1943 according to Hindu Vedic rites, both being Hindus. They have four issues: three sons and one daughter. The first son is 27 years old, the daughter is 25 years old and the other two sons are respectively 17 and 15 years old. The allegations in the petition, which are not only vague but confusing, are, inter alia, that since about few years prior to the petition, the respondent had been cold and indifferent towards the petitioner; that her conduct aroused suspicion of the petitioner about the fidelity of the respondent. In or about 1969 the petitioner arranged unobstructive watch on the movements of the respondent through investigative agencies. It is alleged that the respondent was seen moving out of the house almost every day in the absence of the petitioner and meeting various persons of opposite sex and was seen visiting pictures in their company but would return home before the petitioner returned. In the beginning the petitioner pulled up the respondent and pointed out that the respondent should realise her responsibility in life and should lead a chaste life. It is alleged that sometimes the respondent was seen entering a room in a hotel in the company of the co-respondent and coming out after a good length of time. In the following para it is alleged that on finding that his persuasion did not have any effect on the respondent, the petitioner sent a registered letter to the respondent through his advocate in May, 1969, recording the facts. The letter had some effect on the respondent, who improved in her behaviour for sometime, but after a few months, the petitioner again found the respondent to be acting in the same manner and discovered that the respondent in the company of the co-respondent was visiting pictures and hotels and would remain with the co-respondent in rooms in hotels for quite sometime. The petitioner had the movements of the respondent kept under watch in the month of Nov., 1971 and found that on 2-11-1971, the respondent was seen going out with two ladies. The respondent was very well dressed at that time. In the company of those ladies she went to Hotel Buckley Court at Wodehouse Road in a taxi and one of the ladies (other than the respondent) went in the hotel to enquire anxiously for some person but had to come back disappointed. From there the three ladies visited a cinema and after the show again went to the said hotel and returned back. It is then alleged that on 3-11-1971, the respondent went in a building known as Sakar Bhavan at 6th Khetwadi and enquired about some person from a lady on the 2nd floor of the said building, and finding that, that person was not at home, the respondent went to Grant Road, entered a shop known as Simplex Readymade Store and after sometime went to Shalimar Talkies at Grant Road, where co-respondent met her and they went inside the theatre at about 2.45 p. m. The respondent was already having tickets of the show. They came out of the theatre at about 3.15 p. m., hired a taxi bearing No. BMR 1454 and went inside Aroma Hotel near Chitra Cinema, Dadar, and came out after some enquiries. From there they proceeded by the same taxi to Preetam Hotel (which is an eating house and not a residential hotel) at Khodadad Circle, Dadar and were there till about 4.30 p. m. From there, they went by a taxi to Grant Road, entered Imperial Hotel behind Apsara Cinema at about 5 p. m., hired a room and were there in the hotel till about 6.30 p. m. and after coming out hired a taxi. The co-respondent dropped the respondent near Alankar Cinema and then went away. Then there is a reference to what happened on 4-11-1971. Then comes reference to 6-11-1971, when one Dr. Kishorebhai, was espied hugging and kissing the respondent. Then is mentioned the most important incident of 30-11-1971. On 29-11-1971, the petitioner on a pretext of going out of Bombay, left the home and stayed in Modern Hindu Hotel near Excelsior Cinema. On 30-11-1971, a watch was kept by two of the operatives of the detective agency which was hired as also the Chief Executive D'Souza and the petitioner. The respondent left her home at about 1.30 p. m. and took a bus, got down at Hughes Road, walked along the footpath followed by one operative on the same footpath and the other one on the opposite footpath. She entered New York Stores and Restaurant and was there till about 2.30 p. m. when one of the operatives of the detective agency, entered the cabin and saw that respondent's blouse and brassiere were unhooked and the co-respondent was holding her breasts in his hands. The respondent and the co-respondent were startled. The said operative immediately called the petitioner to the cabin and when the petitioner saw the respondent and the co-respondent in the said cabin, the petitioner informed the co-respondent that he was the husband of the respondent, the co-respondent got frightened and started apologising and at the instance of the petitioner disclosed his name. On the basis of this the petition is filed on the ground of adultery and cruelty. The written statement of the respondent consists of complete denials.

3. The petitioner's case mainly rests on his suspicion about the activities of the respondent and which were recorded by him in a letter dated 26-3-1967 addressed by him to the maternal uncle of the respondent, with a copy to one Jitendra, a brother of the respondent, to which there was no reply; a letter dated 16th May, 1969, addressed to the respondent by the petitioner through his advocate to which also there was no reply. The finding of an empty bottle bearing name Saraswati which was, as the petitioner alleges, on enquiry found to have contained some medicine for abortion; the incidents of 2nd and 6th Nov., 1971 and the final incident of 30-11-1971. As regards the general allegations of bad character of the respondent, they are absolutely vague and devoid of any particulars.

4. The evidence in the matter is most unsatisfactory. The evidence led on behalf of the petitioner consists of his own evidence and that of the employees of the detective agency employed and the contemporaneous reports sent to the petitioner by the said agency. As pointed out by Mr. Dalvi, there are many contradictions between the reports and the evidence and also between the evidence of the two operatives and that of the petitioner as to what happened on 30-11-1971. There is a set of the books of account of the Agency showing the expenses incurred on each particular case. However, these books are not very satisfactory. The evidence of the respondent and the co-respondent also is unsatisfactory. The respondent maintains throughout her evidence that her married life with the petitioner was happy till about 1975/76, that is, even after the date of the filing of the petition. She then says that their married life was happy till 1969/70, which she changes to the married life being happy till about 1974/75 and then explains that the married life was happy till 1969/70 and good till 1974/75. Then she says that up to 1969/70, they had no complaints against each other and thereafter till 1974/75, she had no complaints against the petitioner and that the petitioner had no complaints against her, except as mentioned in the petition. I will refer to the other aspect of the evidence later on. The evidence of the co-respondent as is discussed hereinafter, is not reliable.

5. As contended by Mr. Kenia, the allegations of the petitioner as contained in the petition are most unsatisfactory, vague and contrary to the actual events that have taken place, as admitted by the petitioner in his evidence. Paras 3 and 4 of the petition give a clear impression that the case of the petitioner is that in or about the year 1969, the petitioner came to know that the respondent was carrying on with the co-respondent and that they were found in a hotel room more than once and that this was followed by the advocate's letter of May, 1969. Then it is alleged that even after the incident of 30-11-1971, the respondent is carrying on her adulterous and immoral connection with the co-respondent openly and more vigorously, than before and that there is not a word about this in the evidence of the petitioner. The attack of Mr. Kenia is justified. He also points out that it is not as if the petitioner does not understand the law or legal drafting. The petitioner is a sales tax practitioner, and is therefore, supposed to have a trained legal mind to some extent, and therefore, he should be presumed to have understood the effect of what is stated in the petition. Though, there is substance in the attack of Mr. Kenia, I do not propose to attach too much importance to the manner in which the petition is drafted as in my view, the petition contains exaggerated allegations and allegations are mentioned out of sequence. Though, I may therefore, treat the petition a little leniently, it must to some extent have an effect on appreciating the evidence of the petitioner.

6 to 11. (His Lordship considered the evidence and proceeded.)

12 to 17. Then comes the most important period of 2nd to 6th Nov., 1971 and of 30th Nov., 1971. Mr. Dalvi and Mr. Kenia have strongly attacked the evidence led by the petitioner in this respect. The most important witness regarding these reports is one Chitnis, an operative of the Detection Service India Pvt. Ltd., the detective agency employed by the petitioner. (His Lordship after considering the evidence of witness Chitnis with regard to happenings of 2nd to 6th Nov., 1971 and holding that the same could not be accepted, proceeded.)

18. Then comes the most important incident of 30-11-1971. The report says that an arrangement was made on 29-11-1971 by the petitioner and according to the arrangement, the senior executive of the agency and operative picked up the petitioner from Modern Hindu Hotel located near Excelsior Cinema, at about 10.15 a.m., in Car No. MRG 4866. From there they went to Khetwadi, where they posted themselves unobstructively near about Kanji Bhavan, at about 10.35 a.m. the respondent was seen coming out of the balcony thrice and looking out on the road in both the directions. She left her residence at about 1.30 p.m., stood at a bus stop near her residence. Two of the operatives stood in the queue. At about 1.40 p.m. the respondent boarded a BEST bus No. BMQ 991 proceeding towards Babulnath. The operatives also boarded the bus. The petitioner and the senior executive followed them in the car No. MRG 4866. The respondent left the bus at Hughes Road as also the operatives. The respondent started walking along the foot-path and the operatives kept a watch at a short distance, followed by the car. The respondent walked into the New York Stores & Restaurant, situated at the corner of the road and went up the loft, where special family rooms are available. She entered one of the cabins, two of the operatives kept a watch on the ground floor and as the respondent did not come down till 2.30 p.m. One of the operatives went up and suddenly got into the cabin and noticed that the respondent had unhooked her blouse and brassiere was found to have been moved up, thereby exposing her breasts, which were held by a gentleman in both his hands. On seeing the operative, the respondent and her male companion suddenly got up. The male companion came out and asked the waiter as to why he had allowed some stranger to come into the cabin, whereupon the waiter replied that he had allowed the said stranger to meet his relative. In the meantime the operative came down quickly and apprised the petitioner as to what he had seen, whereupon, the petitioner accompanied by the senior executive and another operative rushed in and found the respondent and her male companion seated side by side in the cabin. When the petitioner confronted the companion of the respondent, he gave his name as R., residing at Khar and stated that he had come to the said restaurant to meet the respondent by previous arrangement on telephone. Thereafter, the petitioner told R that he was the husband of the respondent, whereupon the said R offered his apologies and begged his pardon and bent down and touched his feet. On being further questioned, he stated that he in the past resided at Tara Bhuvan, near about the residence of the petitioner and that he knew the respondent for last about four years and that during that period till today he had been carrying on with the respondent. At this stage, the operative who had first found the respondent and R in the cabin stated that R was the same person who had met the respondent at Shalimar Talkies on 3-11-1971 from where R and the respondent had visited two hotels. Thereafter, R gave his visiting card, which showed him as a broker for the Empire Dyeing & Manufacturing Co. Ltd. He was then asked his residential address by the petitioner who wrote out his address on the reverse of the visiting card as x x x x. The said card was taken by the senior executive from R. R also handed over another card of one C. B. H. which was taken over by the senior executive and they left the restaurant at 3.15 p.m.

19. The evidence of the petitioner on this point is that on 29-11-1971 he approached the investigating agency and informed them that he wanted to catch the respondent red-handed, moving with some person, and accordingly he left the house and stayed in Modern Hindu Hotel. He pretended to the respondent that he was going to Poona. In the afternoon, he went to Maganlal Dress-wala and took a mustache and wig on hire. The detective agency was to contact him in Modern Hindu Hotel. He stayed overnight and on 30-11-1971, he left with the personnel of the detective agency. They were D'Souza, Chitnis and Singbal. His evidence in chief follows by and large the report till he enters the family room. He then says that when he tried to enter the said family room, the co-respondent tried to leave the family room but was stopped by him from coming out. He enquired about his name which was given as R and he told him that he resided at Khar. He also informed him that he had come there by previous appointment on telephone with the respondent. At that time the respondent was in the family room. Chitnis then told him that the co-respondent was the same person as was seen at Shalimar Cinema on 3-11-1971. He then asked for the address of the co-respondent who gave a printed card. He produced the printed card and said that it is the same card which was given by the co-respondent showing his address. He then made enquiries with the co-respondent as to his occupation who told him that he was a broker. Then the petitioner enquired as to for which party he was working when he gave another card showing that he was working for that party. That is the card bearing the name of C. B. Hingorani. He then identified himself as the husband of the respondent whereupon the co-respondent begged his pardon and bent down to touch his feet. The petitioner then enquired of the co-respondent as to how he came in contact with the respondent and the reply is as stated in the report. In his cross-examination, he is again made to repeat what is stated in his examination-in-chief. He elaborated that there was no scuffle between him and the co-respondent, that no sound was created, that there was no hue and cry, that neither the manager of the hotel or the servants of the restaurant noticed the incident. He says that he went back to the hotel and not to his residence because he wanted to think over the matter. After returning home he did not discuss the incident with the respondent, nor did he reprimand her. He took meals on that day at home and no quarrel or scene took place at their residence thereafter in respect of the New York Restaurant incident, but he did not like to speak to the respondent.

20. D'Souza being dead, obviously his evidence could not be led. The other operative, Singbal has also given evidence. Between the evidence of Chitnis and Singbal, there are certain discrepancies as to who went in first after the respondent and co-respondent were seen by Chitnis in compromising position in the cabin. There are some other discrepancies. The discrepancies, in my view, are not material, particularly, when the evidence is being given after a lapse of about 7 to 8 years.

21. As against this, as already pointed out the evidence of respondent is not such as can inspire confidence. Basically, her evidence consists of denials of the main events, coupled with positive evidence on certain other aspect of the matter which can be called peripheral material. Her evidence on this peripheral material, as already pointed out, is unacceptable. As regards the evidence of the co-respondent, his evidence consists of denial of his carrying on with the respondent and complete denial of his meeting the respondent either on 3rd or 30th Nov., 1971. If he had stuck to his denials, it would possibly have been difficult for the petitioner to shake the evidence of the co-respondent in cross-examination. However, the co-respondent has gone further and trotted out an alibi saying that on 30th Nov., 1971, for almost the whole day he had not gone out of the house at all because he was busy with the first death anniversary of his mother. His evidence regarding his being busy for this purpose cannot be accepted for several reasons. One is that there is no pleading of this alibi in the written statement. There is not a single word in the written statement even remotely indicating that his defence is not only that he was not present on the spot on 30th Nov. but that he was at home and very busy with any such ceremony. In my view, if the person is relying on an alibi, it is necessary that it should be pleaded. Order 8, Rule 2 of the Civil P. C. provides, inter alia, that the defendant must raise in his pleading all such grounds of defence as, if not raised, would be likely to take the opposite party by surprise. In my view, the alibi of the co-respondent relied on, if not pleaded, is likely to take the opposite party by surprise and it ought to have been pleaded and not having been pleaded, apart from the question of whether he can lead evidence, the defence becomes difficult of belief. Another reason against believing the evidence is that according to him his mother died on 28th Nov., 1970, while the ceremonies for the first death anniversary which were to last for 4 to 5 days started on 29th Nov., 1971 as the co-respondent says that 30th Nov., 1971 was the second day of the ceremony. The learned trial Judge in his judgment has pointed out that death ceremonies are always observed as per Hindu calendar and that he had ascertained the corresponding Hindu tithies on 29th Nov., 1971 and 30th Nov., 1971. He found that it was impossible that the first death anniversary of the person who died on 28th Nov., 1970 can fall anywhere within 4 days of 30th Nov., 1971. Mr. Kenia for the co-respondent has not been able to point out that these observations of the learned trial Judge are wrong. Moreover, the learned trial Judge has stated that he had given an opportunity to the co-respondent to examine any priest or astrologer to convince him that the first anniversary of his mother's death could have fallen on 30th Nov., 1971, which opportunity was not availed of by the co-respondent. Still another reason which raises suspicion about his evidence is that there must have been a number of persons present at the death ceremony and it would be conducted by a priest. Apart from the bare and uncorroborated words of the co-respondent, no other evidence has been led by the co-respondent to prove the ceremonies. He could have led the evidence of his father or brothers or their wives or of some independent outsider for this purpose, but he has chosen not to do so. The evidence of the co-respondent also consists basically of denials with the only important positive evidence being of the alibi. If the co-respondent is disbelieved on the alibi, his denials will have to be viewed in the light thereof.

22. Whichever way one looks at the matter, the position emerges is that most of the evidence on either side is unreliable. The only evidence which can possibly be accepted and which has been accepted by the learned trial Judge is regarding the incident of 30th Nov., 1971. I do not propose to give any definite finding as regards whether that incident can be held to have been proved since, as I will presently point out, in my view, even if that incident is held to be proved, it will not furnish to the petitioner a ground of divorce.

23. Before I come to the question as to whether the incident of 30th Nov., 1971 by itself can enable the Court to draw presumption of adultery or can amount to cruelty of the type required to furnish a ground for divorce, I must dispose of the contention of Mr. Shah that the learned trial Judge has erroneously disallowed certain questions regarding the alibi. Three questions were disallowed by the learned trial Judge. They are:

"Q. Is it your case that because of the first anniversary rites connected with your mother's death, you could not be out of your home all the day and particularly about 3 p.m. at New York Restaurant with the respondent on 30-11-1971?"

Q. Why have you referred to the incident of the 1st anniversary rites of the death of your mother?

Q. Have you given instructions to your Advocate while drafting the written statement regarding the incident of your mother's death and the 1st anniversary rites on or about 30-11-71?"

The reasons for disallowing the first question is not mentioned. I cannot understand why the question was disallowed. The question is absolutely relevant and though not very germane is only asked with a view to elicit the reason why the co-respondent was relying on the performance of the ceremony of the first anniversary of his mother's death. The next question also is to the similar effect and is disallowed on some peculiar ground which reads as follows:

"Question disallowed. The reference was not volunteered by the witness. He gave it in answer to the questions put by his advocate in his examination-in-chief."

The very purpose of the cross-examination is to ask the questions regarding what the witness has stated in the examination-in-chief. The answers in examination-in-chief are normally in reply to the questions put by the advocate, but whatever is stated is really the case of that witness and particularly when the witness is a party to the proceedings of that party. All the questions which are asked with a view to challenge the evidence-in-chief are permissible. There is no provision of law which says that cross-examination should be confined to what is volunteered by the witness and cannot be directed to challenge or clarify the answers given in reply to the questions put by his own advocate in examination-in-chief. A party can always be asked the purpose behind his reliance on a particular incident even though the incident may have come out in reply to question put to him by his advocate in his examination-in-chief. The question was obviously wrongly disallowed. The third question is asked as a preliminary question with a view to point out and ascertain the witness's explanation as to why this incident was not referred to in the written statement. The question was perfectly legitimate question and has been wrongly disallowed. Unfortunately the learned trial Judge has not chosen to deal with the submissions of the learned advocate for the petitioner in support of his right to ask the question, hence, I am unable to know how the mind of the learned trial Judge worked, but whatever may be the view of the matter, I cannot think of any reason for which any of these questions could have been disallowed. If the answers to those questions were found to be material by me I would have remanded the case or taken the evidence of co-respondent in Court but ultimately I did not find it necessary to adopt such course as the evidence of the co-respondent is found to be not worthy of any belief even otherwise.

24. This brings me to the questions referred to above. I am deciding those questions on the assumption that the incident of 30th Nov., 1971 is proved. Mr. Shah has relied on Devyani v. Kantilal, (1963) 65 Bom LR 24: (AIR 1963 Bom 98) to contend that there can be ordinarily no direct evidence of adultery. It is difficult to produce evidence of the party being found in actual compromising position. The finding of adultery must necessarily rest on circumstantial evidence. The circumstantial evidence will consist not only of the two offending parties being found together in unusual circumstance or being together alone in a secluded place for a long period of time but also will consist of the social condition of the party and the manner in which the parties are accustomed to live. To put it differently, what can be said to be natural mingling of the opposite sexes in a jet set world will be alien to a person belonging to ordinary middle class and the unusual mingling of two persons of opposite sex in seclusion for any length of time amongst that class can justifiably lead to an inference of adultery. The contention is an acceptable one. However, in the present case this position cannot help Mr. Shah. As I have already stated the evidence on the incidents prior to 30th Nov., 1971 is not reliable. This leaves only the incident of 30th Nov., 1971, which by itself cannot permit any inference of adultery. It is possible that it was preliminary step to adultery and may ultimately have resulted in adultery but it cannot be said that the incident proved that adultery had taken place. Hence, the petitioner has been unable to prove adultery. As regards cruelty, it is not sufficient to prove mere cruelty. What is required is that the conduct should be such as is wilful or unjustifiable and of such a character as to cause danger to life, limb or health, bodily or mental or to give rise to a reasonable apprehension of such a danger. This is the position after the amendment of the Hindu Marriage Act in the year 1978, as held in Madanlal Sharma v. Santosh Sharma, L. P. Appeal No. 28 of 1980 by Rege & Kanade, JJ. dated 10th March, 1981. Therefore, one has to determine whether this incident is such as has caused danger to health, which in the present case may be mental health or give rise to reasonable apprehension of such danger. While determining this question the Court cannot ignore what the condition of the petitioner's mental health was between the date of filing of the petition and the date when he has given evidence. The incident is such as may cause great disturbance to the petitioner, but cannot be said to be such as can cause any damage to the health. The evidence given also does not establish that the incident had in fact affected the health of the petitioner to any extent. The petitioner is a sales tax practitioner. There is no evidence to show that he was unable to attend to his matters or that his mental balance was upset or his nature had changed to any extent. The only evidence is of annoyance or mental disturbance. This cannot amount to legal cruelty required to form a ground for divorce.

25. Mr. Shah desired to contend that the legal position as laid down in the aforesaid judgment is not correct and that in amending the Act in 1978, the intention of the legislation was to introduce cruelty simpliciter as a ground for divorce and that in the alternative the law was still the same as laid down by the Supreme Court in Dastane v. Dastane, AIR 1975 SC 1534. However, it is not open to me to entertain any such contention in view of the binding judgment to the contrary and Mr. Shah will have to take it up in the higher Court.

26. Mr. Dalvi also contended that even if there is a matrimonial offence there was condonation. He relied on several facts and circumstances and on case law to support his contention. I am not called upon to decide this question in view of what I have already held.

27. In the circumstances the appeal is dismissed. In view of the fact that I have disbelieved both the respondent and the co-respondent, it will be just to make no order as to the costs of the appeal.

Appeal dismissed.

V. S. DESHPANDE, C. J.

AND D. M. REGE, J.

M/s. Kanshiram Surinderkumar a firm, Appellants v. M/s. Thakurdas Deomal Rohire and others, Respondents.

Appeal No. 119 of 1976. In Misc. Petn. No. 811 of 1969, D/- 13-2-1981 & 16-2-1981.

(A) Trade and Merchandise Marks Act (43 of 1958), Ss. 11 (a), 12 (3) and 33 — Identical marks falling under S. 11 (a) — Registrability — Relevant considerations — Purity of register in public interest is a prime consideration as against acquiescence or delay, unless injury caused to party is so substantial as to outweigh public interest — Protection under S. 12 (3) or S. 33 cannot be extended to identical marks falling under S. 11 (a).

In the case of identical marks falling within S. 11 (a) viz. marks which are likely to deceive or cause confusion the question of purity of Register in public interest is a primary consideration as against the question of acquiescence, or delay unless the same has caused substantial injury to a party so as to outweigh the question of public interest. The provisions of S. 12 (3) or S. 33 cannot be extended to the case of identical marks falling u/s. 11 (a). Sections 12 (3) and 33 constituted exceptions to S. 12 (1) of the Act providing for the existence of two marks on the Register, though identical, under certain circumstances. Section 12 (3) is an evident exception to S. 12 (1) prohibiting the registration of a mark identical to the mark already registered while S. 33 is a sort of defence to the person who has vested rights in the prior use of a mark identical with that of the Register mark. It is therefore clear that for the identical marks which do not fall under either S. 12 (3) or S. 33, the said protection cannot be extended and they cannot be registered because of the provisions of S. 11 (a). Under the circumstances the contention that because of the provisions of S. 12 (3) and S. 33, the consideration as to purity of Register in public interest in case of identical marks falling u/s. 11 (a) would not arise, cannot be accepted. AIR 1958 Bom 56, Rel. on. AIR 1963 Bom 246, Disting. Judgment in Misc. Petn. No. 811 of 1969, Affirmed.

Held, the acquiescence or delay in the instant case was of a few months, the appellants having shown the use of the said mark by them only since 1961 and the registration of the mark in their favour having become effective only since 8-11-1962. There was also nothing to show that the appellants had suffered any damage due to such acquiescence or delay on the part of the Respondents. On the contrary if not anything the appellants had stood to gain thereby. (Para 22)

(B) Trade and Merchandise Marks Act (43 of 1958), S. 12 (3) — Claim of honest concurrent user — Claimant must show that concurrent use of the mark was honest — Question of honest belief as to reputation of opponent's mark is irrelevant for consideration. (Para 28)

V. V. Tulzapurkar, for Appellants;
G. J. Desai, for Respondents.

REGE, J.:— This appeal involves a question of rectification of the Trade Mark Register by deleting mark 'Amar' registered in the name of the Appellants under No. 212206B in Part 'B' of the Register in class 24 of the rules made under the Trade and Merchandise Marks Act, 1958.

2. The appellants had by their application dated 8th Nov. 1962 applied for registration of the mark consisting of word "Amar" in respect of textile piece goods. On 25-3-1964 the said mark 'Amar' was registered in the name of the appellants under No. 212206B in part 'B' of the Register of Trade Mark in class 24. The Respondents thereafter on 21-5-1965 applied for the registration of the very same mark in their name, However, on being pointed out about the registration of the said mark in the name of the appellants, the respondents made an application dated 2nd Sept. 1965 under S. 56 (2) of the said Act for rectification of the register by deleting the said mark 'Amar' as registered in the name of the appellants on the ground that the same was entered on the register without any sufficient cause. According to them, the registration of the said mark in the name of the appellants was in contravention of S. 11 (a) of the said Act as firstly they were the proprietors of the said mark before the mark was registered in the name of the appellants and secondly the said mark of the appellants being identical to that of their mark was likely to deceive or cause confusion.

3. The appellants opposed the said application for rectification, inter alia, denying that the respondents were proprietors of the said mark when the mark was registered in their name and that the mark was contrary to the provisions of S. 11 (a) of the said Act. They also pleaded acquiescence on the part of the respondents in use of the said mark by them. They also contended that their case fell under S. 12 (3) of the said Act on the basis of honest concurrent user.

4. The Joint Registrar of the Trade Marks held that on the material on record the Register was liable to be rectified as the respondents were the proprietors of the mark at the time when the same was registered in the name of the Appellants and that the Appellants' mark being identical to that of the respondents was in contravention of Section 11 (a). He also negatived the appellants' plea as to acquiescence on the part of the respondents so also their plea of honest concurrent user. Accordingly he passed an order rectifying the register by removing from the register the said mark in the name of the appellants.

5. In appeal to this court under Section 109 (2) of the said Act, the very same contentions were raised before the learned Judge and all of them were negatived. It may be pointed that in connection with the contention as to acquiescence the court also considered the question of purity of register in public interest in connection with marks falling under S. 11 (a) of the said Act viz., marks likely to deceive or cause confusion and relevance of the question of acquiescence thereunder. He followed the decision of this court in Ciba Ltd. v. M. Ramlingam, (59 Bom LR 548) : (AIR 1958 Bom 56) holding that in respect of marks falling under S. 11 (a) as in this case, maintaining purity of register in public interest was of primary importance and the question of delay or acquiescence was to be considered from the point of view of any substantial injury caused to the party so as to outweigh the consideration of public interest and that the hardship of the party cannot be taken into account when the party was not an innocent party. He therefore held that in this case the question of public interest was of importance and no such hardship or injury was shown to the appellant so as to outweigh the public interest. The learned Judge also negatived on merits the appellants' plea as to acquiescence and honest concurrent user falling under S. 12 (3) of the said Act.

6. Against said order of the learned Judge, the appellants have filed this appeal as permissible under the provisions of the said Act. The learned counsel for the appellants has also raised before us the very same contentions which were raised by him in the lower court.

7. It cannot be disputed that the mark 'Amar' as used by the respondents in respect of the textile goods sold by them, was identical with the mark sought to be used by the appellants and was likely to deceive or cause confusion as contemplated under S. 11 (a) of the said Act. However, the registration of the said mark in the name of the appellants could be considered to be in contravention of S. 11 (a) if the respondents were to show that they were proprietors of the said mark i.e., had adopted and used the same, prior to it being used by and registered in the name of the appellants. It may be mentioned at the outset that none of the parties are the manufacturers of the textile goods. They only sell under their various marks textile goods manufactured by different mills. The appellants also work as commission agents in textile goods.

8. Both the sides had before the Deputy Registrar, led evidence by way of affidavits to substantiate their respective claims as to their being proprietors of the said marks.

9. It was the case of the respondents that they have been using the said mark

'Amar' on the textile goods sold by them since 1955, while according to the appellants they have been using the said mark since 1958. Both the joint Registrar and the learned Judge in their judgments have considered in detail the affidavits filed on both sides and found that the respondents had shown their proprietorship of the said mark since 1955, i.e., much prior to the use by the appellants of the same. In our view, on the material on record their said conclusion cannot be faulted with. The rival affidavits in that connection be shortly referred to,

10. The respondents in the affidavit of one Chhogumal made in their behalf have pointed out various sales which were supported by their books of account and as pointed out by the learned Judge, the said sales were not seriously disputed by the learned counsel for the appellants. The said sales are substantial. The respondents were therefore able to substantiate their case of use of the mark since 1955. The respondents also produced affidavits from the mills who had placed the respondents' said marks on the goods supplied by them to the respondents. It was also not disputed that the appellants had at least since 1958 knowledge of the respondents' use of the said mark 'Amar' since they had purchased as commission agents for their upcountry customers from the respondents under two invoices dated 20-1-1958 and 3-2-1958, which were produced during the hearing, textile goods under the said mark 'Amar.'

11. As against this the appellants who claimed to have used the said mark since 1958 do not appear to have been able to substantiate their said case. The appellants have not been able to produce their books of account in any event for the years 1958-59, 1959-60 and 1960-61 and there was no other positive evidence to show whether they had sold any of their goods with the said mark since 1958 to substantiate their case. The evidence produced by the appellants if believed could show the use of the mark only from 1961. Three purchasers had filed affidavits on behalf of the appellants. Their affidavits also did not take the appellants' case any further. One Dherasha who had filed an affidavit spoke about having purchased the goods bearing the said mark from the appellants in the years 1958, 1959 and 1960 but the affidavit showed that he had purchased only 2 bales during all the said three years. One Hariram in his affidavit claimed to have purchased the goods from the appellants with the said mark in the years 1957-58 and 1959-60. In that case also, the bales purchased were two in number. So also was the affidavit of one Motiram who was also claimed to have purchased 1 bale bearing the said mark from the present appellants in the year 1957-58. The learned Judge has rightly disbelieved the last two affidavits as when even according to the appellants, they had started using the said mark since 1958, the affidavits spoke about the purchase of the goods from the appellants in 1957. The said affidavits spoke about the purchase in all of 5 bales in three years and were not supported by any account books. Apart from that as pointed out by the learned Judge that if it was admitted that in January/February, 1958 the appellants had purchased goods worth Rs. 6766.58 under the same mark from the respondents it was probable that the goods said to have been purchased by the said three persons making the affidavits, from the appellants could have been the very same goods purchased by the appellants from the respondents. Reliance was also placed on certain orders received by the appellants from the customers asking for goods under the mark 'Amar'. The persons who were supposed to have given the said orders had not filed any affidavit. It was not therefore possible to place any reliance on the said order forms and could not help the appellants in their contention. As pointed out by the learned Judge the respondents have not produced the best evidence to support their case. If their case was true the best evidence that they could have produced was affidavits from the Mills who had placed the said mark on the goods supplied to them, as the respondents had done.

12. On the material on record the learned Judge and the joint Registrar were justified in holding that the respondents were the proprietors of the said mark 'Amar' prior to the use of the mark by the appellants.

13. If therefore the respondents were the proprietors of the said mark at the time of the registration of the said mark in the name of the appellants and if the said mark being identical was likely to deceive or cause confusion, then the registration of the said mark was in contravention of the provisions of S. 11 (a) of the said Act.

14. The main contention of the learned counsel for the appellants was on the question of acquiescence. He has contended that the conclusion of the learned Judge that in cases of registration of mark under S. 11 (a) of the said Act, the question of purity of Register in public interest was a prime consideration unless the injury caused to a party was so substantial so as to outweigh public interest, was not right.

15. It was contended by the learned counsel for the appellants in the lower court that excepting in the cases of marks covered under Sec. 9 of the said Act viz., marks inherently incapable of adaptation, in no other case the consideration of purity of register in public interest would arise. The said contention was negatived by the learned Judge. However, before us the learned counsel has considerably narrowed down the ambit of the said contention. His contention before us was that it was only in cases of marks that were identical or nearly resembling, though falling under Section 11 (a) of the said Act, the question of purity of Register in public interest would never arise and the plea of acquiescence would be available against an unmeritorious applicant, though according to him in all other cases viz., marks under Sec. 9, under Sec. 11 (a), excluding marks that were identical or nearly resembling, as well as marks falling under Sections 11 (b) to (e) and Section 12 (1) of the said Act, the said consideration of public interest would arise. According to him, the consideration of public interest in case of marks that are identical or nearly resembling would not arise as S. 12 (3) and Sec. 33 of the said Act permitted the existence of two of such marks appearing on the Register at the same time.

16. The question as to the consideration of the purity of register in public interest as against acquiescence came directly to be considered by the Division Bench of this court in the case of Ciba Ltd. v. M. Ramlingam (59 Bom LR 548) : (AIR 1958 Bom 56). There the court was specifically concerned with the provisions of S. 10 (corresponding to S. 12 (1) of the present Act) dealing specifically with the prohibition against registration only of identical or deceptively similar marks and Sec. 46 of the Trade Marks Act, 1940 dealing with rectification of the Register (corresponding to Sec. 56 (2) of the present Act).

17. The facts in that case so far as relevant were that amongst other marks of the appellants, their mark 'Ciba' was registered on 24-8-1946, and mark 'Ciba' (monogram) was registered on 27th October 1944. On 22nd December 1943 the respondents applied for registration of their label containing the word 'Cibal'. The said label was advertised after amendment on 3rd Nov. 1949 'CIBOL' was registered in the name of the respondents. On 16th March 1960 the appellants applied for rectification of the register under Sec. 40 of the Act, on the ground that the respondents' mark so closely resembled their mark that its registration contravened the provisions of Section 10 (1) of the Act, 1940. The Registrar in that case ordered rectification which decision was reversed by the single Judge of this Court and in appeal this Court restored the order of the Registrar holding that, in view of the phonetic as well as visual resemblance between the two words, it was clear that the subsequent registration of the respondents' mark was not justified in law.

18. As pointed out above the court thereafter was specifically concerned with the rectification of register in respect of the marks which were identical with or deceptively similar to the marks (covered under Section 11 (a) of the present Act) already registered under Section 10 of the Act, 1940 (Sec. 12 (1) of the present Act). In that connection the court made the following observations at pp. 560-561 of the report (of Bom LR): (At p. 58 of AIR).

"Now, in considering both S. 46 and S. 10, it has got to be remembered that the primary duty of the Court is towards the public and the maintenance of the purity of the register. When a case is sought to be made out that a particular trade mark is likely to deceive or cause confusion, the contest is not so much between the parties to the litigation as it is a contest between the party defending his right to a particular trade mark and the public, and the duty of the Court must always be to protect the public irrespective of what hardship or inconvenience it may cause to a particular party whose trade mark is likely to deceive or cause confusion. The object of maintaining a trade mark register is that the public should know whose goods they are buying and with whom particular goods are associated. It is, therefore, essential that the register should not contain trade marks which are identical or which so closely resemble each other that an unwary purchaser may be likely to be deceived by thinking that he is buying the goods of a particular person or a particular firm or a particular industry, whereas he is buying the goods of another person or firm or industry."

19. As is clear from the above observations the same do not admit even of a limited exception as contended by the learned counsel for the appellants. The learned counsel for the appellants has based his said contention on the provisions of S. 12 (3) and S. 33 of the said Act. The said provisions constitute exceptions to Sec. 12 (1) of the Act providing for the existence of two marks on the Register, though identical, under certain circumstances. Sec. 12 (3) deals with the registration by the Registrar in his discretion and subject to such limitation and condition of a mark identical with the mark already registered, in case of there being an honest concurrent user. Sec. 33 inter alia, deals with the prohibition against the proprietor of a registered trade mark, from interfering in the use of a mark identical with his registered trade mark, by a person who has vested rights in the use of the same being prior to the use of the registered trade mark. The section also prevents the Registrar from the registering the said mark only by reason of the identical mark being registered earlier.

20. Section 12 (3) is an evident exception to S. 12 (1) prohibiting the registration of a mark identical to the mark already registered while Sec. 33 is a sort of defence to the person who has vested rights in the prior use of a mark identical with that of the Register mark. It is therefore clear that for the identical marks which do not fall under either Sec. 12 (3) or Sec. 33 of the said Act, the said protection was not extended and they cannot be registered because of the provisions of Sec. 11 (a). Under the circumstances the contention of the learned counsel for the appellants that because of the provisions of Sec. 12 (3) and S. 33 of the said Act, the consideration as to purity of Register in public interest in case of identical marks would not arise, cannot be accepted.

21. The learned counsel for the appellants has in support of his contention referred to a judgment of the single Judge of this court in the case of Neku-mar K. Porwal v. M/s. Mohanlal Har-govindas (AIR 1963 Bom 246). It is difficult to see how the said decision can have application to the question involved in this case. In that case the persons who applied for rectification of the register had in fact at the time of the registration of the earlier mark withdrawn their opposition to the same. The Deputy Registrar who dealt with the matter had in terms held that the parties applying for rectification were by their conduct not persons aggrieved and therefore could not obtain relief on either of the grounds mentioned in the application. However, although not necessary for him to do so, the Deputy Registrar had suo motu gone into the question of similarity of marks in the name of purity of register and public interest and had also held that there was no similarity. Even then the Deputy Registrar instead of dismissing the application even at that stage, again suo motu in the name of purity of register and public interest went further into a question of rectification on the ground of misdescription and rectified the register on that ground. The court in that case was therefore only concerned with the question of the jurisdiction of the Asst. Registrar to act suo motu under Sec. 56 (4) of the said Act in rectifying the register. While dealing with the said power of the Registrar, the Court observed as follows (at p. 252):—

"From these authorities, it will be clear that where a trade mark inherently incapable of registration or where the entry on the Register is not illegal or improper in the sense that it contravenes any of the provisions of the Act, the Court or the Registrar under sub-section (2) of Section 56 of our Act would have no jurisdiction whatever to exercise the power of rectification except on the ground and in the manner urged by the applicant being a "person aggrieved" in his application for rectification."

The said decision has therefore no application to the point at issue before us. However, if at all, the aforequoted observations would go against the appellants for them to show that the Deputy Registrar has jurisdiction under S. 56 (4) of the Act to rectify the Register suo motu on the basis of purity of Register or public interest in cases where the entry on the Register was illegal which would be the case in the case of identical marks as contravening S. 11 (a) of the Act. The learned Judge in that case in no way held contrary to the law laid down in Ciba's case, (AIR 1958 Bom 56), but on the contrary cited the same and held that the said decision was not applicable to the facts of the case as the mark concerned was not illegal or improper. The said decision therefore cannot help the learned counsel for the appellants in his said contention.

22. In our view therefore the learned Judge was right in holding that in this case of identical marks falling within S. 11 (a) of the said Act the question of purity of Register in public interest was a primary consideration as against the question of acquiescence, or delay unless the same had caused substantial injury to the appellants so as to outweigh the question of public interest. As the learned Judge has rightly pointed out, there is no case of such hardship in this case. The acquiescence or delay in this case was of a few months, the appellants having shown the use of the said mark by them only since 1961 and the registration of the mark in their favour having become effective only since 8th November 1962. There is also nothing to show that the appellants had suffered any damage due to such acquiescence or delay on the part of the respondents. On the contrary as the learned Judge has rightly pointed out if not anything the appellants have stood to gain thereby.

23. Even apart from his said conclusion the learned Judge has proceeded to consider the appellant's contention as to acquiescence and has negatived it. The learned counsel for the appellants has challenged that conclusion as well. In that connection, he has firstly contended that the learned Judge was wrong in holding that the acquiescence that was to be considered in this case was as that of 8th November 1962 when the registration of the mark in appellants' name had become effective and not later. According to the learned counsel for the appellants the acquiescence that was to be considered was as on the date of the respondents' application for rectification i.e. 2-9-1965.

24. On the reading of Sec. 56 (2), the said contention cannot be accepted. In this case, it cannot be disputed that the respondents have come to the court for rectification on the ground that, entry made in the register of the said mark 'Amar' in the name of the appellants was without any sufficient cause and it is the appellants who were seeking to show that the said entry was properly made by pointing out that the respondents has acquiesced in the making of the said entry. If that were so, the only date from which acquiescence could be considered is the date on which the registration of the appellants' mark had become effective i.e. 8-11-1962 and not thereafter.

25. If that were the case, then as the learned Judge has rightly pointed out that on 8-11-1962 when the Registration of the mark in favour of the appellants had become effective there was no acquiescence of any substance by the respondents in the appellants' use of the said mark the delay at that date being of a few months,

26. However, even if the acquiescence till the date of the application for rectification i.e. till 2-9-1965 were to be considered still in our view, on the material on record there is no substance in it. The respondents have contended that they became aware of the Registration of the said mark 'Amar' in respect of their piece goods, when in 1965 the mills from which they were getting their goods stamped with the said mark, received a notice from the appellants in that regard. It is also not disputed that the appellants had purchased from the respondents the goods with the said mark 'Amar' and it was probable that the respondents would have considered the sale by the appellants of the goods under the said mark being of those purchased by the appellants from them,

27. As against this, to support his case as to respondents' acquiescence on that basis, the learned counsel for the appellants has relied on three things viz., (1) proximity of the shops of both the parties, (2) the exhibition of their goods with the marks by the appellants in their shop and (3) advertisements as to the appellants' said mark appearing in Textile Magazines. In our view, none of the said circumstances would prove knowledge by respondents about the appellants selling their goods under the said mark 'Amar'. The circumstance about the shops of the appellants and respondents being close or the appellants exhibiting their goods bearing the said mark in their shops would not fix the respondent with the requisite knowledge about the appellants' use of the said mark unless it was alleged that the respondents had visited the appellants' shop. No such allegation is however found in the affidavits. The third circumstance viz. advertisement in textile magazine in 1962 also stands on the same footing unless it was shown that the respondents were subscribers thereto. Therefore even if the question of acquiescence is considered as at 2-9-1965 being the date of the application for rectification, still in our view, the material on record fails to prove the appellants' case.

28. That brings us to the last contention of the learned counsel for the appellants viz., that the Joint Registrar should not have rectified the register on the ground that the case fell within the provisions of S. 12 (3) of the Act being that of honest concurrent user of the said mark by the appellants. In this case since admittedly in 1958 itself the appellants have purchased goods from the respondents under the said mark 'Amar' it would be difficult to hold that the appellants' subsequent use of the said mark in relation to their goods could be considered as honest. What was contended by the learned counsel for the appellants was that although the appellants had in 1958 itself knowledge of the respondents' use of the said mark, the appellants would have honestly believed that the respondents had not built up sufficient reputation for their said mark as to be the proprietors thereof and therefore the appellants' use of the said mark could be considered to be an honest concurrent user. On the wording of Sec. 12 (3) the said contention of the learned counsel for the appellants has got to be rejected. All that is required to be shown under S. 12 (3) of the Act was that the concurrent use of the mark by the appellants was honest and the question of honest belief as to the reputation of the respondents' mark was irrelevant for consideration. In that view of the matter, the appellants' case cannot also come under S. 12 (3) of the said Act.

29. The appeal therefore fails and is dismissed with costs. The order of the learned Judge is confirmed.

30. The learned counsel for the appellants make an oral application before us for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court. The same is rejected.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1982 BOMBAY 512

CHANDURKAR AND BHONSALE, JJ.

The Union of India, Appellant v. Bhusawal Municipal Council, Respondent.

First Appeal No. 774 of 1971, D/- 16-12-1980.

(A) Railways Act (9 of 1890), S. 135 — Notification D/- 29-11-1907 — Goods imported within municipal limits by Railway Administration — Liability to pay octroi duty. (Railways (Local Authorities' Taxation) Act (1941), Ss. 3 and 4; Constitution of India, Art. 285; Government of India Act (1935), S. 154).

Section 135 of the Railways Act specifically deals with railway property which could be subjected to levy of taxes in aid of the funds of the Local Authority. Under that Section unless the Railway Administration is expressly declared as being liable to pay a tax, that tax cannot be levied on the Railway Administration. This declaration has to be by a notification issued by the Central Government. Now Notification D/- 29-11-1907, which is issued in exercise of power under S. 135, enables the local authority to impose all such taxes in respect of property of the Railway Administration which could be imposed by that local authority in aid of its funds. It cannot be seriously disputed that on the terms of this notification Octroi Duty could have been validly levied by the Municipal Council in respect of railway property because under S. 72 of the Bombay Municipal Boroughs Act 1955 one of the taxes which could be imposed by the Municipality is "Octroi on animals or goods or both brought within the Municipal limits for consumption, use or sale thereof". Articles brought within the municipal limits by the catering department of the Railway Administration were obviously brought either for consumption or for sale or use. The question, however, is: Does this power survive after coming into operation Section 154 of the Government of India Act 1935. If the proviso to S. 154 was not attracted, then there would be no power in the municipality to tax the property of the Railway Administration because of the express bar in the main part of S. 154. The power under S. 135 of the Railways Act to issue a notification could not have been exercised in respect of Government property after 1st April 1937 (when Part III of the Government of India Act 1935 came into force) because S. 154 of the Government of India Act 1935 exempted all such property from local taxation unless there was a federal law providing to the contrary. In view of the fact that S. 154 exempted the railway property from provincial or local taxation, except so far as the legislation may otherwise provide and under the proviso, all the taxes payable by virtue of notifications issued under Section 135 of the Railways Act continue to be payable until Legislature otherwise provides, the Central Legislature enacted the Railways (Local Authorities' Taxation) Act 1941. S. 3 of this Act enables the local authority to levy a tax in aid of its funds in respect of property vested in the Central Government, being a property of a railway, only if the Central Government issues a notification declaring the Railway Administration to be so liable. Therefore, after coming into force of Part III of the Government of India Act 1935, before the Railway property can be taxed, a notification under S. 3 of the 1941 Act has to be issued by the Central Government. Section 4 of the 1941 Act only empowers the Central Government to revoke or modify a notification issued under Section 135 of the Railways Act. The consequence of revocation is that the liability to pay tax to any local authority under that notification ceases. The position, as it appears, is that the notification of 1907 was revoked in October 1953. Therefore, even assuming that the notification of 1907 empowered the local authority to levy Octroi Duty, that liability ceased in terms of S. 4 of the 1941 Act with effect from 3rd October 1953 and no recovery of Octroi Duty could have been made thereafter. (Para 10)

Looking at the matter from a different aspect, it will have to be ascertained whether the notification of 1907 is such that the proviso to S. 154 of the Government of India Act would be attracted to it. Now there can be no doubt, that the notification of 1907 enables even Octroi Duty to be levied in respect of goods. But for the purposes of the proviso to S. 154, the requirement of that proviso has to be satisfied. The requirement is that the property which is being subjected to tax must be in existence before 1st April, 1937 physically and the property must be the same at the time when the tax is sought to be levied. The physical identity of the property, before and after 1st April 1937, is therefore a sine qua non for levy of a tax after 1st April 1937 by virtue of the proviso of S. 154 of the Government of India Act, 1935. AIR 1948 Cal 116 (2). Followed. (Para 11)

Such cannot however be said to be the case where Octroi Duty is sought to be levied. Octroi Duty is levied once and for all on any particular article or goods. There is no occasion to levy Octroi Duty again and again in respect of the same property. In other words, the Octroi Duty is paid on a property which comes for the first time within the municipal limits and that is brought for consumption, sale or use and the same goods are not again liable to duty. Therefore, the physical identity of the property prior to 1st April 1937 cannot be the same where on and after 1st April 1937 new goods are brought within municipal limits and Octroi Duty is sought to be levied on those goods or articles. Therefore, the proviso to S. 154 would be wholly inapplicable and unless there is a Federal Law as contemplated by the substantive provision in Section 154 of the Government of India Act 1935, there will be no power in any Municipal Council to levy Octroi Duty in respect of Government property after 1st April 1937. That will also be the position in the post-Constitution period and unless there is a law made by the Parliament as contemplated by Art. 285 of the Constitution, the scheme of which Article is the same as the scheme of Section 154 of the Government of India Act 1935, permitting the property of the Union to be taxed, Octroi Duty could not be levied after 25th January 1950.

(Paras 8, 11)

Octroi Duty which was permitted to be levied by the notification of 1907 could not have been levied on goods brought by the Railways after 1st April 1937 because of the bar under the main part of S. 154 of the Government of India Act and because such a tax was not saved by the proviso to S. 154, the Octroi Duty could also not be levied after the commencement of the Constitution because of the express bar in Art. 285 (1) and further because there was no Octroi Duty which could be claimed under Art. 285 (2). AIR 1978 SC 1803, Rel. on. (Para 14)

(B) Limitation Act (36 of 1963), S. 30 — Cause of action arising after coming into force of 1963 Act — S. 30 has no application. (Para 16)

M. R. Kotwal, for Appellant; K. J. Abhyankar, for Respondent.

CHANDURKAR, J.:— The short question which arises in this appeal filed by the Union of India is whether goods imported within the limits of municipality by the Railway Administration are liable to Octroi Duty which the respondent Bhusawal Municipal Council is seeking to recover under a Notification issued under Section 135 of the Railways Act, 1890, on 29th November, 1907.

2. Facts in this case are not in dispute. The Catering Department of the Railway Administration admittedly brought within the limits of the Bhusawal Municipal Council certain articles required by them for catering administration at the Bhusawal Railway Station during the period from 2nd November 1963 to 1st November 1966. The Railway Administration not having paid the necessary Octroi Duty which, according to the Municipal Council, the Railway Administration was liable to pay for those articles brought within the municipal limits, a suit came to be filed for the recovery of the amount of Octroi Duty to the tune of Rs. 7,766.14 along with interest amounting to Rs. 2,611.21. Thus, in the suit filed on 6th February 1969 a sum of Rs. 10,377.35 was claimed from the Union of India. The plaint itself does not refer to the Notification dated 29th November 1907 but it is common ground that liability to pay Octroi Duty is fastened on the Union of India, according to the Municipal Council, by the Notification dated 29th November 1907 (Exhibit 86). This Notification reads as follows:

"In pursuance of Clause (i) of Section 135 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890 (IX of 1890) and in supersession of the notifications of the Government of India in the Public Works Department, No. 270, dated the 12th June, 1890, and No. 136, dated the 5th April, 1893, the Governor General in Council is pleased to declare that every railway administration in British India shall hereafter be liable to pay, in respect of property within any local area, every tax which may lawfully be imposed by any local authority in aid of its funds, under any law for the time being in force."

Two defences were raised by the Union of India to this claim. According to the Union of India, it was not liable to pay any Duty in the absence of any Notification in the Official Gazette declaring the Railway Administration to be liable to pay such taxes and that the Union of India was further protected under the provisions of Section 3 (1) and Section 4 of the Railways (Local Authorities' Taxation) Act, 1941 (hereinafter referred to as the 1941 Act). According to the Union of India, the provisions of the 1941 Act will be saved by Article 372 of the Constitution of India. The issue of limitation was also raised. It appears that the plea that a Notification under Section 135 of the Railways Act relating to Octroi tax was not issued was not specifically taken probably because in the plaint no such Notification was disclosed. The questions involved in the suit were essentially questions of law, the facts having been admitted. The oral evidence in the case, therefore, does not become very material.

3. The trial Court took the view that Section 135 of the Railways Act regulated the levy of taxes by a Local Authority and unless a Notification was issued under Section 3 of the 1941 Act, the property of the Railway Administration cannot be subjected to tax by the Local Authority. The trial Court further took the view that Exhibit 86 indicates that the Railway Authority was liable to pay taxes connected with immovable properties such as house tax, water tax, conservancy tax, latrine tax, wheel tax and water rate, etc. and that there was no Notification in respect of Octroi on goods brought within the Municipal limits. With reference to the provisions of Article 285 of the Constitution of India, the trial Court took the view that under the Bombay Municipal Borough Act, 1925, when the Bhusawal Municipality had approved and levied Octroi since 1932 and the Octroi Rules were in force even before the Constitution came into force, the authority to impose Octroi Duty did not cease simply because the Constitution came into force. The trial Court found that the State Government has not framed any rules exempting the catering unit of the Railways from Octroi Duty. The trial Court took the view that the Railway Administration had paid Octroi Duty in the past and the articles were rightly taxed under the Octroi rules as there was no exemption. With regard to the limitation, the trial Court held that the claim in respect of all the items was within the period of limitation. A decree for Rs. 10,377.35 was thus being passed against the Union of India. This appeal has now been filed by the Union of India challenging the decree of the trial Court.

4. Mr. M. R. Kotwal, the learned Government Pleader, has mainly relied on the provisions of Article 285 (1) of the Constitution of India under which, according to the learned counsel, there is a blanket exemption of the property of the Union from all taxes imposed by a State or by any authority within a State unless provisions to the contrary is made by a law of Parliament. The learned Government Pleader therefore contended that goods brought within the municipal limits by the catering establishment of the Railway Administration were the property of the Union and since there was no law made by the Parliament providing for those goods being allowed to be taxed by the Local Authority, the Octroi Duty could not be levied by the Municipal Council on the articles in question. Mr. Abhyankar appearing on behalf of the Municipal Council had relied mainly on the provisions of Article 285 (2) of the Constitution of India and the argument advanced before us was that goods brought within the municipal limits have already been made subject to tax by virtue of Notification Exhibit 86 and therefore such tax would be saved by the provision of sub-article (2) of Article 285. The learned counsel pointed out that Notification of 1907 enabled the Municipal Council to levy Octroi Duty and that Notification continued to be effective even after the coming into force of the Government of India Act 1935 because the power to levy Octroi Duty was preserved in the Municipal Council by the proviso to Sec. 154 of the Government of India Act 1935. According to the learned counsel, as Octroi Duty was levied since 1907 and it continued to be levied even after the commencement of the Constitution, the Union of India could not avoid its liability. Now, admittedly, so far as the Notification of 1907 is concerned, it was revoked by another Notification dated 6th October, 1953 Exhibit 9. That Notification expressly stated that the Central Government revokes the Notification of the Government of India "in the Department of Commerce and Industry No. 9977-Rys. dated the 29th November, 1907, issued under Clause (1) of the said Section". The learned counsel contended that the Octroi Duty was legally levied till 6th October 1953 and that since the Railways have been treated as liable to pay Octroi Duty even thereafter, even though the levy may be illegal, the Union of India would be liable to pay Octroi Duty. It may be pointed out at this stage that the dispute with regard to the liability to pay Octroi Duty was for the first time raised by the Union of India in August 1969.

5. Article 285 of the Constitution reads as follows :

"(1) The property of the Union shall, save in so far as Parliament may by law otherwise provide, be exempt from all taxes imposed by a State or by any authority within a State.

(2) Nothing in Clause (1) shall, until Parliament by law otherwise provides, prevent any authority within a State from levying any tax on any property of the Union to which such property was immediately before the commencement of this Constitution liable or treated as liable, so long as that tax continues to be levied in that State."

Article 285 of the Constitution is thus in two parts. Sub-Article (1) provides for exemption of the property of the Union from all taxes imposed by a State or by any authority within a State which will include a Local Authority like a Municipal Council. This exemption can, however, be taken away by a law made by the Parliament. In other words, the property of the Union could be subjected to tax by a State or by a local authority only if it is so permitted by a law made by the Parliament after the Constitution has come into force. It is therefore a blanket exemption in respect of Union property from State taxation or taxation by any authority within a State. It is on the same pattern as is to be found with regard to exemption of federal property from State taxation in the Australian and the Canadian Constitution. Sec. 114 of Commonwealth of Australia Constitution Act 1900 provides inter alia that "A State shall not, without the consent of the Parliament of the Commonwealth, raise or maintain any naval or military force, or impose any tax on property of any kind belonging to the Commonwealth, nor shall the Commonwealth impose any tax on property of any kind belonging to a State." Section 125 of the British North America Act 1867 provides as follows :

"No lands or property belonging to Canada or any Province shall be liable to taxation."

It is, however, open to the Parliament to enact a law which will enable the State or any authority within a State to tax the property of the Union.

6. The latter part of Art. 285 was intended to save the taxes which were being levied on the property of the Union at the commencement of the Constitution by any authority within a State so long as the tax continued to be levied in that State. Thus, where a property of the Union was, immediately before the commencement of the Constitution, liable to tax or treated as liable to tax levied by a local authority, that tax could continue to be levied in view of the express provisions in Art. 285 (2). Such property could be exempted from taxation only by a law made by the Parliament. The provisions of Art. 285 will, therefore, make it clear that the property of the Union of India could not be subjected to tax by a Local Authority unless the condition in Sub-Art. (2) was satisfied. It is on this Sub-Art. (2) that Mr. Abhyankar placed heavy reliance. Now, there is no doubt that the word "property" used in Art. 285 is a word of widest amplitude and it cannot be given any restricted meaning. In order to find out whether the Municipal Council could claim protection in respect of power to levy Octroi Duty from Art. 285 (2), it becomes necessary to find out whether the Octroi Duty can be said to be a tax in respect of the property which was liable to that tax immediately before the commencement of the Constitution. Therefore, though the period in respect of which Octroi Duty is now sought to be recovered is a post-Constitution period, we will have to revert back to the position before the commencement of the Constitution on 26th January, 1950.

7. The Notification itself is dated 29th November, 1907 and the period from the first levy of the Octroi Duty which is said to have been made in 1932 up to the commencement of the Constitution would therefore have to be split up into two parts. Article 285 is the successor of the similar provision which was made in the Government of India Act in Section 154 of the Government of India Act 1935 which came into force on 1st April, 1937. Therefore, the period immediately preceding the commencement of the Constitution required to be considered for the purposes of the validity of the Octroi Duty would be from 1st April, 1937 to 25th January, 1950 and the other period would be from 1st September, 1932 to 31st March, 1937. Primarily therefore before the Municipal Council can claim that its power to levy Octroi Duty is saved by the provisions of Art. 285 (2), it would have to be established that the power to levy tax on the property of the Union validly vested in the Municipal Council up to 1st April 1937.

8. In this context, the provisions of S. 154 of the Government of India Act 1935 become relevant. It reads as follows :

"Property vested in His Majesty for purposes of the government of the Federation shall, save in so far as any Federal law may otherwise provide, be exempt from all taxes imposed by, or by any authority within, a province or Federated State :

Provided until any Federal law otherwise provides, any property so vested which was immediately before the commencement for Part III of this Act liable, or treated as liable, to any such tax, shall, so long as that tax continues, continue to be liable, or to be treated as liable, thereto.

A reading of S. 154 of the Government of India Act 1935 will show that the scheme of that section is the same as the scheme of Art. 285 of the Constitution of India. Under Sec. 154 property vested in His Majesty for purposes of the Government of the Federation is exempted from all taxes imposed by or by any authority within a province or a federated State. Prior to the commencement of the Constitution, it cannot be disputed that the railway property was property of the Crown. That property of the Crown is exempted from all taxes which may be imposed by a local authority or by a province or a federated State. This exemption could be taken away by a federal Law which had to be a law made by the Central Legislature prior to the commencement of the Constitution. Now there can be no difficulty in holding that under the main part of S. 154 of the Government of India Act 1935 all properties of the Crown would be exempt from taxes imposed by a local authority. The word property under S. 154 is also used in its widest and generic sense. In Governor General of India in Council v. Corporation of Calcutta, AIR 1948 Cal 116 (2) B. K. Mukherjee, J. (as he then was) while dealing with the scope of S. 154, has observed as follows :

"The language of S. 154 is obviously very wide; it embraces within its scope all taxes and impositions levied by or by any authority within a province or Federated State. The expression "property" has also been used in a perfectly general sense and would include land, building, chattles, shares, debts, and in fact every thing that has a money value in the market and comes within the purview of any taxing statute."

It was pointed out by Mukherjee, J. that under the English Law the Crown not being bound by any Statute unless expressly named, property owned and occupied by Crown shall be exempt from taxation unless rendered liable either by express words or by necessary implication, and with reference to the provisions of S. 154 the learned Judge further observed as follows :

"In India it seems prior to the passing of the Government of India Act 1935, the question of exemption of Crown property from taxation was not definitely settled."

Mukherjee, J. referred to the decision in Bell v. Commrs. for the City of Madras (1902) ILR 25 Mad 457. It was pointed out that the view expressed therein was that according to the uniform course of Indian Legislation, statutes imposing duties or taxes bind Government unless the very nature of the duty or tax is such as to be inapplicable to Government. It was then observed by Mukherjea, J., as follows:

"It is a fact, however, that on the general question different views were taken in other cases : vide 14 Bom 213. Many properties vested in His Majesty were treated as liable to taxation, when the Constitution Act of 1935 came into force, and the proviso attached to Section 154 makes it clear that properties which were treated as so liable immediately before April 1937, when Part III of the Act was to come into operation, would not enjoy the exemption given by the main provision of the section. The Parliament deliberately used the words "liable" or "treated as liable" with a view to avoid a final solution of the question regarding the legal liability of Crown property to taxation in India prior to the coming into operation of Part III of the Act."

9. Ormond, J., who was the other Member of the Bench, after pointing out that, "in England in the absence of special statutory provisions imposing a tax on Crown property, Crown property would be exempt by virtue of the Crown prerogative" and "it is equally well established that both in England and in India, liability for taxation may be imposed against Crown property by apt statutory provisions" set out in the scheme of S. 154, in paragraphs 20 and 21, as follows :

"The scheme of the section is that in the first part (the main body of it) there is an exemption from taxation in general terms. Then in the second part of the section (the proviso in it) there is an exception from that exemption. The result is that any property covered by the exception will be liable to tax in spite of the exemption in the first part. Were it not for the exception in the second part, it is clear and undisputed that the whole of the....."

"The proviso is worded in a manner which lays down a positive liability to tax in the case of the particular class of Crown property described in it The first result of the proviso is that any property covered by the exception in the proviso will be liable to tax, in spite of any exemption in the earlier part of the section within the section itself. The further result is also, that any property covered by the exception will be liable to tax, in spite of any general exemption outside the section, such as might have been based on the general Crown prerogative."

The learned Judge further dealing with the proviso pointed out that the only taxable property brought within the exception contained in the proviso is property which was in physical existence before 1st April 1937. The four conditions which would be necessary to be established to bring the property within the proviso were set out as follows :

"(1) Physical existence of the property before 1-4-1937,

(2) Liability of that property to the tax then,

(3) Physical existence of the same property now, that is to say, for the current period for which tax is sought to be levied, and

(4) Liability of the property (if it were not Crown property) to the tax now."

It may be pointed out that the learned Government Pleader has heavily relied on the fact that one of the conditions necessary for the Union property to be subjected to Octroi Duty was that the identity of the property must be established both prior to and after the commencement of the Constitution and both prior to and after 1st April, 1937. The contention was that Octroi Duty is levied on goods as they come within the municipal limits and it is not a recurring duty on the same goods and the goods being different every time the duty is sought to be levied, whatever might have been the position prior to 1st April, 1937, after 1st April 1937 and 26th January 1950, in view of the substantive provisions in S. 154 of the Government of India Act 1935 and Art. 285 of the Constitution of India, the goods belonging to the Union of India are not liable to Octroi Duty. The wide meaning to the word property given by the Calcutta High Court has been expressly approved by the Federal Court in The Corporation of Calcutta v. Governors of St. Thomas' School, Calcutta, AIR 1949 FC 121. Dealing with S. 154 and the meaning of the word property used therein, the Federal Court observed as follows :

"Section 154 raises two questions for determination when an exemption from liability to tax is claimed : (i) whether tax is claimed in respect of property; and (ii) whether such property is vested in Government : The word "property" is used in the context without any limitation and therefore should bear its normal meaning. Interpreted in that way it will embrace every kind of property. As observed by Langdale, M. R. in Jones v. Skinner, (1835) 5 LJ Ch 87 at p. 90 : (42 RR 274) :

" 'Property' is the generic term for all that a person has dominion over. It is the most comprehensive of all terms which could be used, inasmuch as it is indicative and descriptive of every possible interest which the property can have."

Without attempting to define affirmatively what the generic term will cover, it is sufficient for us to hold that the buildings in question are property and as in India the ownership of a building is not necessarily related to the ownership of the land on which the building stands, the buildings in the present case were vested in the Government.....
.....In our opinion, the meaning of "property" adopted in Governor-General of India in Council v. Corporation of Calcutta, 52 Cal WN 173 : (AIR 1948 Cal 116) is correct."

We have referred to this meaning given to the word property in S. 154 because at one stage it was contended by the learned Government Pleader that in S. 154 when the proviso referred to property or taxes on property, the reference was only to immovable property and that the proviso to S. 154 did not save the power to levy Octroi Duty which was a tax levied on movable property, viz., goods. In view of the wide meaning which the word property bears, even movable property will be covered by it and if the Municipal Council succeeds in proving that Octroi Duty levied in respect of such property is saved by the proviso to S. 154, it would be possible for it to contend that the requirements of Art. 285 (2) have also been satisfied.

10. Thus in the face of an express bar to tax Crown property contained in Section 154 of the Government of India Act 1935, it was incumbent on the Municipal Council to satisfy the Court that the power to levy Octroi Duty could be validly exercised even after 1937 when Part III of the Government of India Act 1935 came into force. It was for this purpose that a reference was made to the Notification of 1907 which was issued under the Railways Act. It is necessary now, therefore, to refer to the provisions of S. 135 of the Railways Act. The relevant provisions are contained in Clauses 1, 2 and 3 of the Railways Act which read as follows :

" 135. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in any enactment, or in any agreement or award based on any enactment, the following rules shall regulate the levy of taxes in respect of railways and from railway administrations in aid of the funds of local authorities, namely :—

(1) A railway administration shall not be liable to pay any tax in aid of the funds of any local authority unless the Central Government has, by notification in the Official Gazette, declared the railway administration to be liable to pay the tax.

(2) While a notification of the Central Government under Cl. (1) of this section is in force, the railway administration shall be liable to pay to the local authority either the tax mentioned in the notification or, in lieu thereof, such sum, if any, as an officer appointed in this behalf by the Central Government may, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, from time to time determine to be fair and reasonable.

(3) The Central Government may at any time revoke or vary a notification under Cl. (1) of this section."

Section 135 specifically deals with railway property which could be subjected to levy of taxes in aid of the funds of the Local Authority. By Cl. (5) of that section, the term Local Authority is given the same meaning as in the General Clauses Act 1887. Under S. 135 unless the Railway Administration is expressly declared as being liable to pay a tax, that tax cannot be levied on the Railway Administration. This declaration has to be by a notification issued by the Central Government. The second clause only deals with quantification of the tax liability. It provides that the liability could be discharged by paying a lump sum to be determined by an officer to be appointed by the Central Government. Clause (3) gives power to Central Government to revoke the said notification. Now Exhibit 86, which is issued in exercise of power under S. 135, enable the local authority to impose all such taxes in respect of property of the Railway Administration which could be imposed by that local authority in aid of its funds. We do not think it can be seriously disputed that on the terms of this notification Octroi Duty could have been validly levied by the Municipal Council in respect of railway property because under Sec. 72 of the Bombay Municipal Boroughs Act 1955 one of the taxes which could be imposed by the Municipality is "Octroi on animals or goods or both brought within the Municipal limits for consumption, use or sale thereof". Articles brought within the municipal limits by the catering department of the Railway Administration were obviously brought either for consumption or for sale or use. The question, however, is : Does this power survive after coming into operation of S. 154 of the Government of India Act 1935? If the proviso to S. 154 was not attracted, then there would be no power in the municipality to tax the property of the Railway Administration because of the express bar in the main part of S. 154 of the Government of India Act 1935. The power under S. 135 of the Railways Act to issue a notification could not have been exercised in respect of Government property after 1st April 1937 because S. 154 of the Government of India Act 1935 exempted all such property from local taxation unless there was a federal law providing to the contrary. In view of the fact that S. 154 of the Government of India Act 1935 exempted the railway property from provincial or local taxation, except so far as the legislation may otherwise provide and under the proviso, all the taxes payable by virtue of notifications issued under Section 135 of the Railways Act continue to be payable until Legislature otherwise provides, the Central Legislature enacted the Railways (Local Authorities Taxation) Act 1941, reliance on which has been placed on behalf of the municipality. The relevant provisions are in sections 3 and 4 of that Act. The entire Act itself has only five sections. Section 3 reads as follows :

"3. (1) In respect of property vested in the Central Government, being property of a railway, a railway administration shall be liable to pay any tax in aid of the funds of any local authority, if the Central Government, by notification in the Official Gazette, declares it to be so liable.

(2) While a notification under sub-section (1) is in force, the railway administration shall be liable to pay to the local authority either the tax mentioned in the notification or in lieu thereof such sum, if any as a person appointed in this behalf by the Central Government may, having regard to the services rendered to the railway and all the relevant circumstances of the case, from time to time determine to be fair and reasonable. The person so appointed shall be a person who is or has been a Judge of a High Court or a District Judge."

Section 4 reads as follows :

"4. The Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, revoke or vary any notification issued under Cl. (1) of S. 135 of the Indian Railways Act 1890; and where a notification is so revoked, any liability arising out of the notification to pay any tax to any local authority shall cease, and where a notification is so varied the liability arising out of the notification shall be varied accordingly."

Section 3 of this Act thus enables the local authority to levy a tax in aid of its funds in respect of property vested in the Central Government, being a property of a railway, only if the Central Government issues a notification declaring the Railway Administration to be so liable. Therefore, after coming into force of Part III of the Government of India Act 1935, before the Railway property can be taxed, a notification under S. 3 of the 1941 Act has to be issued by the Central Government. Section 4 only empowers the Central Government to revoke or modify a notification issued under S. 135 of the Railways Act. The consequence of revocation is that the liability to pay tax to any local authority under that notification ceases. The position, as it appears, is that the notification of 1907 was revoked in October 1953. Therefore, even assuming that the notification of 1907 empowered the local authority to levy Octroi Duty, that liability ceased in terms of S. 4 of the 1941 Act with effect from 3rd October 1953 and no recovery of Octroi Duty could have been made thereafter.

11. Looking at the matter from a different aspect, it will have to be ascertained whether the notification of 1907 is such that the proviso to S. 154 of the Government of India Act would be attracted to it. Now there can be no doubt, as already pointed out, that the notification of 1907 enables even Octroi Duty to be levied in respect of goods. But for the purposes of the proviso to S. 154, the requirement of that proviso has to be satisfied. The requirement, as pointed out by Ormond, J. in Calcutta Corporation's case, is that the property which is being subjected to tax must be in existence before 1st April 1937 physically and the property must be the same at the time when the tax is sought to be levied. This is the undisputable effect of the proviso and the manner in which it is worded, and thus the proviso to Section 154, Government of India Act 1935 saved some taxes. The taxes saved were in respect of property which vested in His Majesty and was, immediately before 1st April 1937, liable to tax and taxes only in respect of such property could be recovered after 1st April 1937. The physical identity of the property, before and after 1st April 1937, is therefore a sine qua non for levy of a tax after 1st April 1937 by virtue of the proviso of S. 154 of the Government of India Act 1935. Such cannot however be said to be the case where Octroi Duty is sought to be levied. Octroi Duty is levied once and for all on any particular article or goods. There is no occasion to levy Octroi Duty again and again in respect of the same property. In other words, the Octroi Duty is paid on a property which comes for the first time within the municipal limits and that is brought for consumption, sale or use and the same goods are not again liable to duty. Therefore, the physical identity of the property prior to 1st April 1937 cannot be the same where on and after 1st April 1937 new goods are brought within municipal limits and Octroi Duty is sought to be levied on those goods or articles. In the case of Octroi Duty, therefore, it is obvious that the proviso to S. 154 would be wholly inapplicable and unless there is a Federal Law as contemplated by the substantive provision in S. 154 of the Government of India Act 1935, there will be no power in any Municipal Council to levy Octroi Duty in respect of Government property after 1st April 1937. That will also be the position in the post-Constitution period and unless there is a law made by the Parliament permitting the property of the Union to be taxed, Octroi Duty could not be levied after 25th January 1950.

12. We may now refer to two decisions of the Supreme Court in which the scope of Article 285 has been considered. In Union of India owner of the Eastern Railway v. Commissioner of Sahibganj Municipality (AIR 1973 SC 1185) a notification was issued on 24th August 1911 under Section 135 of the Railways Act declaring that the Administration of East India Railway shall be liable to pay in aid of the funds of the local authorities set out in the schedule thereto annexed the taxes specified in the second column thereof. The taxes in question were house rate and latrine fees. Out of the buildings in question some were constructed after 31st Mar. 1937 and some after 25th Jan. 1950. The Union of India contended that it was not liable to pay municipal tax by virtue of provisions contained in S. 154 of the Government of India Act 1935 and Article 285 of the Constitution. The High Court had held that the 1941 Act was a Federal Law within the meaning of Section 154 of the Government of India Act and Section 4 of the 1941 Act rendered the buildings liable to taxation. Reversing the decision of the High Court it was pointed out by the Supreme Court that the High Court overlooked the effect of Section 3 of the 1941 Act which required a notification declaring a liability to pay and that the notification under 1941 Act created a liability for railway property coming into existence after 1941 Act but no such notification was issued. Pointing out that Section 4 of the 1941 Act did not provide for payment of taxes in respect of railway property and that there was no law contemplated by Article 285 providing for taxation of railway property the Supreme Court observed as follows (at p. 1187):—

"The High Court was in error in construing the notification issued in 1911 under the 1890 Act to continue by virtue of the provisions contained in Section 4 of the 1941 Act. These 32 blocks of buildings vested in the Union some of them after 1st April 1937 and some after the Constitution came into existence. These properties could be made liable to pay tax to the municipality only if Parliament by law provided to that effect."

The Supreme Court thus held that the notification under the 1890 Act did not apply to the 32 blocks of buildings which were not in existence before 1st April 1937 and that there was no law declaring the 32 blocks of buildings to be liable to payment of tax as claimed by the municipality. The Supreme Court decision therefore points out that the notification issued under the Railways Act could not be availed of by the Municipal Council after 1st April 1937. The scope of the proviso was, however, not in question in that case. The other decision is in Union of India v. City Municipal Council, Bellary, AIR 1978 SC 1803. The Supreme Court referring to the scope of Article 285 observed as follows (Para 7):—

"The property of the Union is exempt from all taxes imposed by a State or by any authority within a State. But the Parliament may by law provide otherwise and then any tax on the property of the Union can be imposed and levied in accordance with the said law. But then an exception has been carved out in clause (2). The exception is not meant for levying any tax on such property by any State; but it is merely for the benefit of any authority including the local authority like the Municipal Council in question. Clause (1) cannot prevent such authority from levying any tax on any property of the Union if such property was exigible to such tax immediately before the commencement of the Constitution. The local authority, however, can reap advantage of this exception only under two conditions namely (1) that it is 'that tax' which is being continued to be levied and no other; (2) that the local authority in 'that State' is claiming to continue the levy of the tax. In other words, the nature, type and the property on which the tax was being levied prior to the commencement of the Constitution must be the same as also the local authority must be the local authority of the same State to which it belonged before the commencement of the Constitution."

13. Mr. Abhyankar appearing on behalf of the Municipality has contended that when Octroi Duty is levied the nature and character is the same both as to the property and the tax. The contention appeared to be that the property subjected to tax were goods imported within municipal limits and the nature of tax was Octroi tax and therefore according to the learned counsel even the condition laid down by the Supreme Court in Bellary Municipality's case was satisfied. Now it is obvious that when the Supreme Court referred to the nature and type of the property on which tax was being levied, that was in the context of Article 285 (2) which expressly provided that the property in respect of which the tax was being sought to be levied must be the same property which was liable or treated as liable prior to the coming into force of the Constitution. As already pointed out, when Octroi Duty is levied on goods brought into the municipal limits for the first time, on each occasion the goods are different and not the same goods though in a given case the goods may be identical or of the same kind.

14. We may also point out that the Supreme Court in the Bellary Municipality's case has taken the view that the provisions of the 1941 Act are not saved by Article 285 of the Constitution because, it was not a law made by the Parliament as contemplated by Article 285 (2). Referring to the provisions of the 1941 Act in the context of Art. 285 and Article 372 of the Constitution the Supreme Court has observed as follows (Para 8):—

"The Act of 1941 creating the liability of the Railways to taxation by local authorities was passed by the then Central Legislature which was a Federal Legislature of India. The present Central Legislature, namely, the Parliament has not enacted any law after coming into force of the Constitution making any provision affecting the exemption of the property of the Union from all taxes imposed by a State or by any authority within a State. The 1941 Act is repugnant to clause (1) of Article 285. It is neither a law made by Parliament nor a law made by the Central Legislature after the advent of the Constitution. In either view of the matter it is not a law covered by the phrase 'save in so far as Parliament may by law otherwise provide' occurring in clause (1) of Article 285."

It therefore appears to be clear to us that Octroi Duty which was permitted to be levied by the notification of 1907 could not have been levied on goods brought by the Railways after 1st April 1937 because of the bar under the main part of Section 154 of the Government of India Act and because such a tax was not saved by the proviso to Section 154, the Octroi Duty could also not be levied after the commencement of the Constitution because of the express bar in Article 285 (1) and further because there was no Octroi Duty which could be claimed under Article 285 (2).

15. It was at one stage contended by Mr. Abhyankar on the basis of the decision of the Calcutta High Court in Corporation of Calcutta v. Union of India, AIR 1957 Cal 548 that even if the Octroi tax was illegally levied after 1953, when the notification of 1907 was revoked, the case would still be covered by Article 285 (2) and the Municipal Council was therefore entitled to claim Octroi Duty from the Railway Administration. Dealing with the meaning of the words "treated as liable" which are to be found both in the proviso to Section 154 of the Government of India Act and Article 285 (2) of the Constitution of India, the Division Bench of the Calcutta High Court has observed as follows (at p. 550):

"The phrase "treated as liable" has the same legal meaning in both the proviso to S. 154 of the Government of India Act, 1935, and clause (2) of Article 285 of the Constitution and it has the same purpose, namely, to avoid a final solution of the dispute as to the legal liability of the particular property to the disputed tax and to authorise or validate the levy of the tax in the post-Act and post-Constitution period respectively, at least when such tax was actually levied and realised and paid, in fact, for the particular property as Central Government property for the period immediately before the relevant date, that is, the commencement of Part III of the Government of India Act, 1935, in the one case and the commencement of the Constitution in the other, even if such levy was illegal."

These observations are not of any assistance to the Municipal Council. The concept of "treated as liable" have been used by the learned Judges in the context of the particular property and it is in respect of such property which has once been treated as liable that it is said that the tax could be recovered even though it was illegally levied. That case dealt with house property which was assessed to municipal taxes and the contention on behalf of the Municipal Council was that though the assessment up to the end of the second quarter of 1950-51, i.e., up to a post-Constitution period was actually paid by the Union, the Union was disputing the assessment as illegal and ultra vires immediately when the property came under the ownership to the Central Government on 1st April 1943 and the property, according to the Union of India, ceased to be liable to municipal taxes. The Calcutta High Court held that the levy of the disputed tax in the disputed post-Constitution period was valid in law because the disputed premises belong to Central Government and owned by it and were actually assessed to municipal tax and such tax was paid and realised immediately before the commencement of the Constitution. The premises were therefore held to be "treated as liable" for the purposes of Article 285 (2). As already pointed out, we are, in the present case, concerned with Octroi Duty and each levy is a fresh levy on fresh articles and tax was not intended to be recovered for the same goods for which once it is paid. The trial Court was, therefore, in our view, wrong in holding that the Union was liable to pay Octroi Duty as claimed.

16. This finding is sufficient to dispose the appeal. However, the question of limitation has been argued before us and we proceed to decide it. Admittedly, the Limitation Act, 1963 came into force on 1st January, 1964. Out of the several items which were subjected to Octroi Duty, there were only two items which fell within the period before 1st January 1964. Those are items 1 and 2 in Exhibit 41 dated 2nd November, 1963 to 17th December, 1963. The remaining items are between 10th January, 1964 and 1st November, 1966. Admittedly the suit is filed after the Limitation Act, 1963 has come into force. The trial Court has found that the limitation for the suit under the old Act would have been six years but under the new Act it is only three years under Article 113 which is the Article corresponding to Article 120 of the 1908 Limitation Act. The commencement of limitation in both the Acts would be from the time when the right to sue would normally accrue when the tax would become payable. It normally becomes payable at the time when the goods are brought within the municipal limits. Now the trial Court has taken the view that since under the new Limitation Act the period of limitation prescribed is less i.e. three years, than the one prescribed under the old Act, i.e. six years, the provisions of Section 30 of the Limitation Act 1963 could be invoked by the Municipal Council and therefore the Municipal Council was entitled to file a suit within a period of seven years from 2nd November 1963. The only material provision is in clause (a) of Article 30 which reads as follows:—

"30. Notwithstanding anything contained in this Act,—

(a) any suit for which the period of limitation is shorter than the period of limitation prescribed by the Indian Limitation Act, 1908 may be instituted within a period of seven years next after the commencement of this Act or within the period prescribed for such suit by the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, whichever period expires earlier;"

The trial Court has taken the view that the suit could be filed within seven years from 1st January 1964 and making provision for the statutory notice period of two months, it could be instituted on 1st March 1971 and since it was instituted on 6th February 1969, even the item dated 2nd November 1963 would be within limitation. In our view, the trial Court has fallen in a serious error of law in invoking the provisions of Section 30. A suit in respect of a claim for Octroi Duty arising after 1st January 1964 would be wholly governed by the provisions of Article 113 of the Limitation Act 1963. It is difficult for us to appreciate how the provisions of Section 30 of the Limitation Act could be made applicable to a cause of action which arises after the Limitation Act has already come into operation. Section 30 Cl. (a) refers to a suit for which the period of limitation is shorter than the period of limitation prescribed by the Indian Limitation Act, 1908. It contemplates that the cause of action has arisen prior to the Act of 1963 but that the limitation for such a suit which has not been filed before 1st January 1964 is shorter under the new Act. It is apparent therefore that the provisions of Section 30 of the Limitation Act could be invoked only in respect of the first two items dated 2nd November 1963 and 17th December 1963. In respect of the remaining items the suit would be governed by the provisions of Article 113 of the Limitation Act 1963. On that view, items between 10th January 1964 and 10th January 1966 could not have been claimed in the present suit because the claim in respect thereof would be barred by limitation. If at all the Municipality was entitled to any claim, it could be only in respect of items between 2nd November 1963 and 17th December 1963 and for items 45 to 257.

17. In the view which we have taken on the constitutional position in the appeal, the suit filed by the Municipal Council must stand dismissed. The judgment and decree passed by the trial Court are set aside and the appeal filed by the Union of India is allowed. Suit filed by the plaintiff is dismissed with costs throughout.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1982 BOMBAY 523

Smt. SUJATA V. MANOHAR, J.

Purshottam Vishindas Raheja, Plaintiff v. Life Insurance Corporation of India and others, Defendants.

Notice of Motion No. 1303 of 1981 (In Suit No. 1593 of 1981), D/- 2-4-1982.

(A) Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act (57 of 1947), S. 28 — Section covers all claims arising under Act even though parties may not be landlord and tenant — Whether claim is one under Act or not depends upon substance of claim in plaint — Held, suit was not covered by S. 28.

Under S. 28 the Court of Small Causes alone has jurisdiction to entertain and try any suit or proceedings between a landlord and a tenant relating to the recovery of rent or possession of any premises and to decide any application made under that Act and to deal with any claim or question arising out of the Act or any of its provisions. But in order that a claim should arise under the provisions of the Bombay Rent Act, it is not necessary that the claim should be between a landlord and a tenant. Section 28 is wide enough to cover all questions which arise out of the Bombay Rent Act even though the parties may not have the legal relationship of a landlord and a tenant. In order to decide whether the claim of the plaintiff arises under the Act or not, one has to examine the substance of the case in the plaint and not merely the manner in which the claim is framed. Ingenuity in drafting cannot confer jurisdiction on a court, Case law Ref. (Para 7)

The plaintiffs have filed the suit against defendants 1 to 10 asking for specific performance of the agreement of sale as against defendant No. 1. They have sought in addition, a declaration that the agreements entered into between defendants 2 to 9 on the one hand and defendant No. 10 on the other hand are null and void and have asked for a cancellation of these agreements. They have asked for a declaration that defendants 2 to 9 are not in actual or symbolic occupation or possession of the suit property. They have also asked for a declaration that defendant No. 10 has no right, title or interest in respect of the suit property and is a trespasser and have asked for possession of the premises from the defendant No. 10. The present notice of motion is taken out by the plaintiff for the appointment of a receiver of the said immovable property, especially of the studio premises and for other reliefs set out in the motion. The defendants contended that the disputes between the parties are under the Bombay Rent Act and ought to be tried before the court of small causes.

Held, the contention was not tenable. The plaintiff had claimed reliefs against defendant No. 10 on the ground that he is trespasser and has no right, title or interest in the suit premises. It was true that in order to decide whether defendant No. 10 was trespasser on the premises or not, it would be necessary to examine the provisions of S. 15 of the Bombay Rent Act and the notification issued under it. But the court did not cease to have jurisdiction simply because, in order to decide the title of a person to any property, it might incidentally have to examine the provisions of the Bombay Rent Act. In substance the suit against defendant No. 10 was a suit on the basis of trespass and as such the suit could not be considered as covered by S. 28. As against defendants Nos. 2 to 9, it was the plaintiff's case that they had parted with all their rights in the suit premises. They had also parted with possession of the suit premises. They therefore had ceased to be tenants of the suit premises. The plaintiff had therefore merely sought a declaration against defendants 2 to 9 that they were no longer in possession of the suit premises. The plaintiffs had not claimed any relief of possession against them. The plaintiff had also asked for a cancellation of certain agreements executed between defendants 2 to 9 and defendant No. 10 on the ground that these documents were illegal and/or null and void. Such a suit also could not be considered as a suit which was covered by S. 28 of the Bombay Rent Act. In fact the court of Small Causes would not have jurisdiction to grant the relief of cancellation of documents. In substance, therefore, the claim of the plaintiff in the suit did not fall under S. 28. (Para 7)

(B) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 7, R. 11 — Suit for specific performance of agreement of sale — Notice of motion for appointment of receiver and injunction — Part of cause of action found defective against some of the defendants — Held, O. 7, R. 11 was not applicable — Those provisions could not be invoked at motion stage and plaint could not be rejected. Case law Ref. (Specific Relief Act (47 of 1963), S. 5). (Paras 11, 13)

(C) Specific Relief Act (47 of 1963), S. 20 — Suit for specific performance of agreement of sale — Remedy is discretionary — Plaintiff does not get right of possession unless he gets a decree — He cannot, therefore, dispossess anybody at interlocutory stage. (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 40, R. 1).

Specific performance of an agreement of sale is a discretionary remedy which may or may not be granted. It is quite possible that in a given case the party who asks for specific performance may, even when successful, get only damages in lieu of specific performance. Therefore, unless the plaintiff gets a decree of specific performance in his favour, he does not get a right to possession. He cannot, therefore, at the interlocutory stage, dispossess somebody who is in possession prior to the filing of the suit, by notice of motion (for appointment of receiver and injunction in this case).

A. K. Sen with Atul Munim and S. R. Pandit, for Plaintiff; N. H. Seervai, for Defendant No. 1 and S. D. Parekh, for Defendants Nos. 2 to 10 to show cause.

ORDER:— The plaintiff is the Karta and Manager of a Joint Hindu Family called Raheja Sons (H. U. F.) which carries on business in the name and style of Shri Tirupati Builders. The plaintiff entered into an agreement with the Life Insurance Corporation of India (defendant No. 1) for the purchase of the suit property at Dadasaheb Phalke Road, Parel, Bombay under an agreement of sale dated 21st Jan. 1981. Life Insurance Corporation which is defendant No. 1 is the owner of the suit property which consists of several structures, some of which are used as a cinema studio. One T. Tarachand was a tenant of Life Insurance Corporation in respect of the said entire property including the said studio. T. Tarachand died on or about 18th September 1972. Defendants 2 to 8 are his surviving heirs and legal representatives. They claim tenancy rights in respect of the said property as the heirs of the deceased tenant. Defendant No. 9, Roop Tara Studios, is a partnership firm in which originally T. Tarachand was a partner. The said partnership firm claims that the tenancy rights of the said immovable property were held for the benefit of the partnership. One N. L. Mehta Cinema Enterprises Pvt. Ltd. is defendant No. 10.

2. The Life Insurance Corporation advertised for the sale of the said property in "as is where is" condition some time in June 1980. The plaintiff had submitted a tender for Rs. 37,50,000/-. Defendant No. 9 M/s. Roop Tara Studios had submitted a tender for Rs. 20,07,000/- and N. L. Mehta Cinema Enterprises Private Limited (Defendant No. 10) had submitted a tender for Rs. 21,06,000/-. There were other tenders also. The plaintiff's tender being the highest, was accepted by the Life Insurance Corporation by a letter dated 4th July 1980. Thereafter a formal agreement between the plaintiff and Life Insurance Corporation was entered into on 21st Jan. 1981.

3. Prior to the agreement of sale there were proceedings between the Life Insurance Corporation and the heirs of T. Tarachand in respect of the suit property. Life Insurance Corporation had terminated the tenancy in respect of the suit property and had instituted proceedings under the Public Premises Eviction Act for eviction of defendants 2 to 8. Defendants 2 to 8 thereupon filed a writ petition in this court challenging the application of the Public Premises Eviction Act to the premises owned by the Life Insurance Corporation. The Writ Petition was allowed. An appeal is pending from the decision in the writ petition.

4. It is the case of defendants 2 to 10 that defendant No. 9 entered into an agreement with defendant No. 10 in June 1980 whereunder defendant No. 10 agreed to buy the business of defendant No. 9 in respect of their studio division together with its goodwill and tenancy rights in respect of the said immovable property. Thereafter by an agreement dated 23rd Sept. 1980 entered into between defendants 2 to 9 on the one hand and defendant No. 10 on the other hand, the defendants 2 to 9 agreed to assign to defendant No. 10 the studio business of defendant No. 9 together with its stock-in-trade, goodwill and tenancy rights in the said immovable property. Defendant No. 10 claims to have paid to defendants 2 to 9 a sum of Rs. 3 lakhs on 23rd Sept. 1980 and to have obtained possession inter alia of the said studio on that day from defendants 2 to 9. Defendant No. 10 thus claims to be in possession of the studio premises since 23rd Sept. 1980.

5. The plaintiffs have filed the present suit on or about 1st Sept. 1981 against defendants 1 to 10. In the plaint the plaintiff has asked for specific performance of the agreement of sale dated 21st Jan. 1981 as against defendant No. 1. They have sought in addition, a declaration that the agreements entered into between defendants 2 to 9 on the one hand and defendant No. 10 on the other hand are null and void and have asked for a cancellation of these agreements. They have asked for a declaration that defendants 2 to 9 are not in actual or symbolic occupation or possession of the suit property. They have also asked for a declaration that defendant No. 10 has no right, title or interest in respect of the suit property and is a trespasser and have asked for possession of the premises from the defendant No. 10. The present notice of motion is taken out by the plaintiff for the appointment of a receiver of the said immovable property, especially of the studio premises and for other reliefs set out in the motion.

6. Defendants Nos. 2 to 10 have raised certain preliminary objections to the notice of motion. The first preliminary objection is to the effect that this Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the suit as against defendants 2 to 10 in view of the provisions of S. 28 of the Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act, 1947 (hereinafter referred to as the Bombay Rent Act). Defendants Nos. 2 to 10 have submitted that under S. 9A of the Civil P. C. the issue as to jurisdiction must be tried at the stage of the Notice of Motion as a preliminary issue and suit against defendants 2 to 10 should be dismissed on the ground that this Court has no jurisdiction.

7. Under S. 28 of the Bombay Rent Act the Court of Small Causes alone has jurisdiction to entertain and try any suit or proceedings between a landlord and a tenant relating to the recovery of rent or possession of any premises and to decide any application made under that Act and to deal with any claim or question arising out of the Act or any of its provisions. Admittedly the present suit is not a suit between a landlord and a tenant for recovery of rent or possession of any premises. According to the defendants Nos. 2 to 10 however, the claim in the suit against them is a claim arising out of the Bombay Rent Act and its provisions and hence it is covered by S. 28 of the Bombay Rent Act. Now it is true that in order that a claim should arise under the provisions of the Bombay Rent Act, it is not necessary that the claim should be between a landlord and a tenant. Section 28 is wide enough to cover all questions which arise out of the Bombay Rent Act even though the parties may not have the legal relationship of a landlord and a tenant. The Supreme Court, in the case of Sushila Kashinath Dhonde v. Harilal Govindji Bhogani reported in AIR 1971 SC 1495 has held that it is not necessary that there should be a relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties for a matter to be covered by Sec. 28. No doubt, one type of action contemplated under that section viz., a suit or proceeding for recovery of rent or possession of any premises may be between a landlord and a tenant; but in respect of other matters dealt with in that section it is not necessary that the relationship of a landlord and a tenant should exist between the parties before the Court. In the case before the Supreme Court the suit was to enforce a charge under the provisions of S. 18 of the Rent Act. It was held as covered by S. 28 of the Bombay Rent Act. There is a similar observation in an early case of Messrs. Importers and Manufacturers Ltd. v. Pheroze Framroze Taraporewala reported in AIR 1953 SC 73. In the present case we have to examine whether the claim of the plaintiff against defendants 2 to 10 is a claim which arises under the provisions of the Bombay Rent Act. It is now well established that in order to decide this question one has to examine the substance of the case in the plaint and not merely the manner in which the claim framed. Ingenuity in drafting cannot confer jurisdiction on a court. According to the defendants Nos. 2 to 10 the suit is in substance for eviction against defendants Nos. 2 to 8 who are the heirs of the tenant and against defendant No. 9 who claim to be the tenants and for obtaining possession from their proposed transferee defendant No. 10. According to these defendants there was admittedly a tenancy in respect of the suit property created by the first defendant in favour of T. Tarachand and defendants 2 to 8 are the heirs of that tenant. There is some dispute as to whether tenancy is now a statutory tenancy or a contractual tenancy. Defendants Nos. 2 to 9 have purported to enter into an agreement to transfer the business of defendant No. 9 together with its tenancy rights, stock-in-trade and good-will in favour of defendant No. 10 in purported exercise of their rights under the notification issued under Sec. 15 of the Bombay Rent Act. According to these defendants the disputes between them and the plaintiff in the suit are thus under the Bombay Rent Act and they ought to be tried before the Court of Small Causes. This contention is not tenable. The plaintiff has claimed reliefs against defendant No. 10 on the ground that they are trespassers and have no right, title or interest in the suit premises. It is true that in order to decide whether defendant No. 10 is trespasser on the premises or not, it will be necessary to examine the provisions of S. 15 of the Bombay Rent Act and the notification issued under it. But the court does not cease to have jurisdiction simply because, in order to decide the title of a person to any property, it may incidentally have to examine the provisions of the Bombay Rent Act. In substance the suit against defendant No. 10 is a suit on the basis of trespass and as such the suit cannot be considered as covered by S. 28 of the Bombay Rent Act. As against defendants Nos. 2 to 9, it is the plaintiff's case that they have parted with all their rights in the suit premises. They have also parted with possession of the suit premises. They therefore have ceased to be tenants of the suit premises. The plaintiff has therefore merely sought a declaration against defendants 2 to 9 that they are no longer in possession of the suit premises. The plaintiff has also asked for a cancellation of certain agreements executed between defendants 2 to 9 and defendant No. 10 on the ground that these documents are illegal and/or null and void. Such a suit also cannot be considered as a suit which is covered by S. 28 of the Bombay Rent Act. In fact the court of Small Causes would not have jurisdiction to grant the relief of cancellation of documents. In substance, therefore, the claim of the plaintiff in the suit does not fall under S. 28 of the Bombay Rent Act.

8. My attention was drawn to the case of Thakkar Keshavalal Mohanlal v. Parekh Amrutlal Harilal reported in AIR 1973 SC 1099. In that case a suit had been filed before the Competent Court under S. 28 of the Bombay Rent Act for eviction both against the tenant as well as his sub-tenant. The sub-tenant contended that since the claim against him was a claim in trespass, S. 28 would not apply to the suit against him and the court had no jurisdiction to entertain a claim against him. In negating this contention the Supreme Court observed that the suit was essentially a suit between a landlord and tenant; and the joinder of the sub-tenant in such a suit would not make the suit any the less a suit between a landlord and a tenant. The court referred to its earlier decision in Hiralal Vallabhram v. Kasturbhai Lalbhai reported in AIR 1967 SC 1853 and observed that a suit on the basis of trespass was clearly a suit which was not covered by the provisions of the Bombay Rent Act. In substance the claim of the plaintiff is in trespass against defendant No. 10. Such a claim does not fall under S. 28 of the Bombay Rent Act. It is true that in the present case the tenants are also made parties to the suit. But no relief of eviction or possession is asked for against the tenants. This is not merely a technical camouflage as the defendants 2 to 10 would like to submit, because in substance, it is the plaintiff's case that the tenants have parted with their possession of the premises and have also parted with their right title and interest as tenants. The plaintiff therefore seeks a declaration that the tenants have ceased to be tenants. Whether the plaintiff's case is correct or not is a matter which will be decided at the final hearing of the case after evidence is led. But whatever be the merits of the plaintiff's case, the fact remains that the basis of the suit against defendants Nos. 2 to 9 is that they have abandoned all their rights as tenants. Accordingly plaintiffs have not claimed any relief of possession against defendants Nos. 2 to 9 but are content with a declaration against them that they are no longer in possession or occupation of the suit premises. Under these circumstances it is not possible to hold that the claim in the suit against defendants 2 to 9 is a claim against tenants for possession. Thus the suit against defendants Nos. 2 to 10 is not covered by the provisions of S. 28 of the Bombay Rent Act. This court therefore has jurisdiction to entertain the present suit not merely against defendant No. 1 but also against defendants Nos. 2 to 10.

9. The next preliminary objection raised on behalf of defendants Nos. 2 to 10 is to the effect that the plaint discloses no cause of action against defendants Nos. 2 to 10. The plaint should therefore be rejected under the provisions of O. 7, R. 11 of the Civil P. C. Now, the present suit is a suit for specific performance of an agreement for sale entered into between the plaintiff and defendant No. 1. Ordinarily in a suit for specific performance, persons who are not parties to the contract of which specific performance is sought, cannot be joined as party defendants. In this connection a reference may be made to a decision of this Court in the case of Luckumsey Ookerda v. Fazulla

Cassumbhoy reported in (1880) ILR 5 Bom 177 where it was held that a stranger to a contract of which specific performance is sought, cannot be a party to the suit. In that case the plaintiff had joined another person who claimed a charge on the land which was agreed to be sold and had asked for a declaration that that person was not entitled to any charge upon the said land. The court held that the latter defendant had been improperly made a party. Similarly in the case of Mt. Nagi v. Damodar Jagobaji reported in AIR 1948 Nag 181, Hidayatullah, J. (as he then was) held that in a suit for specific performance of agreement for sale of land, strangers claiming independent title are not proper parties to the suit. He observed that the scope of a suit for specific performance of an agreement for sale of land, coupled with a prayer for possession cannot be enlarged and the suit turned also into a title suit. The plaintiff could take action against strangers only after he had perfected his title by obtaining specific performance. He cited the observation of Lord Eldon in the case of Mole v. Smith (1820) Jac 490 to the effect that when a bill is filed for specific performance it should not be mixed with a prayer for relief against other persons claiming an interest in the estate. Lord Eldon observed:

"It is to be regretted that this opinion will prevent the parties from having the question between them so effectively decided as it might otherwise have been; but I cannot, to avoid an inconvenience in a particular case, sanction a proceeding which I consider to be inconsistent with the rules of pleading, and which, if recognised, might lead to much difficulty and confusion in the proceedings of the Court."

The only exception to this rule is in the case of a voluntary purchaser from the vendor and a purchaser who takes with notice of the agreement. Such persons can be joined as party defendants in a suit for specific performance. The reason is that any person who has taken the property subject to the plaintiff's rights can always be joined as a party defendant. In this connection a reference may also be made to the decision in Prem Sukh Gulgulia v. Habib Ullah, AIR 1945 Cal 355. There is therefore considerable substance in the contention of defendants Nos. 2 to 10 that they are not proper parties to a suit for specific performance.

Mr. Ashok Sen, learned counsel for the plaintiff submitted that just as a purchaser with notice and a voluntary purchaser can be joined in a suit for specific performance, in the present case, defendant No. 10 who has taken the property with notice of the plaintiff's agreement with defendant No. 1 can also be joined. But this submission cannot be accepted because defendant No. 10 is not a person who has purchased the right, title and interest of the vendor in the suit property with notice of the agreement of which specific performance is sought assuming for the time being that defendant No. 10 has taken possession with notice of the plaintiff's claim. The agreement for the sale between plaintiff and defendant No. 1 is an agreement for sale of a lessor's interest in the suit property. Admittedly at the date when the agreement of sale was entered into, there was a tenancy in respect of the property which was agreed to be sold subject to such existing tenancy. Defendant No. 10 purports to have agreed to acquire the tenant's interest in the suit property, from defendants 2 to 9. The agreements between defendants 2 to 10 inter se are in respect of the tenants' interest in the property. Defendants 2 to 10 therefore are not concerned with the landlord's interest in the premises at all. In that sense they are, therefore, strangers to the agreement of sale which is in terms only in respect of the landlord's interest in the property. Prima facie therefore the plaintiff cannot join defendants 2 to 10 in the present suit.

10. The matter may also be looked at from a slightly different angle. The plaintiff is merely a person who has entered into an agreement to purchase an immovable property. He has a right to obtain specific performance of the agreement of sale and perfect his title. But, by virtue of an agreement of sale the plaintiff does not get any interest in the property which is agreed to be sold to him. The plaintiff, therefore, does not have in praesenti any interest in the property which he has agreed to purchase. He cannot, therefore, take any action against the tenants of the property, the sub-tenants of the property or even trespassers on the property. He may be entitled to seek protection of the property which is agreed to be sold to him. By virtue of the agreement of sale he is entitled to the benefits of the obligations which arise out of the contract and which are annexed to the ownership of the immovable property which he has agreed to purchase. He may also be able to call upon the seller to protect the property in the same manner as an owner of ordinary prudence would, until the property is conveyed to him. In this connection a reference may be made to the case of Sashi Bhushan v. Rai Chand, AIR 1950 Cal 333. Since however, he does not himself have any interest in the property he cannot sue third parties who claim to have an interest in the property which is agreed to be sold. In that sense also it is possible that the plaintiff may not be able to sustain his cause of action against defendants Nos. 2 to 10.

11. These, however, are matters to be decided at the final hearing of the suit. It is not possible at the stage of the notice of motion to hold that under the provisions of O. 7, R. 11 of the Civil P. C. plaint should be rejected as not disclosing any cause of action. By and large the provisions of O. 7, R. 11 are contemplated to apply to the rejection of a plaint as a whole where it discloses no cause of action against the defendants. Where there is a joinder of causes of action and joinder of parties and a decree can be passed in respect of some of the causes of action against some of the defendants, provisions of O. 7, R. 11 cannot be invoked. My attention was drawn to the case of Balwant Singh v. State Bank of India (FB) reported in AIR 1976 Punj & Har 316 where a Full Bench of the Punjab High Court held that provisions of O. 7, R. 11 will be attracted only in a case where by reason of the plea that the plaint does not disclose a cause of action the plaintiff would be wholly non-suited. This rule would have no application to the cases where a plaint discloses a cause of action in respect of a part of the claim against some of the defendants. At the highest, in the present case a part of the cause of action would be found defective against some of the defendants. It is therefore not a fit case where the provisions of O. 7, R. 11 can be applied. In any case such provisions cannot be invoked in a notice of motion taken out by the plaintiff for appointment of a receiver and injunction.

12. Mr. S. D. Parekh, learned counsel for defendants Nos. 2 to 10 drew my attention to a decision of the Supreme Court in T. Arivandandam v. T. V. Satyapal, AIR 1977 SC 2421 in which the Supreme Court observed that if on a meaningful — not formal — reading of the plaint it is manifestly vexatious, and meritless, in the sense of not disclosing a clear right to sue, the trial court should exercise its power under O. 7, R. 11, of the Civil P. C., taking care to see that the ground mentioned therein is fulfilled. The case does not lay down that in a case where only a part of the claim may be defective against some of the defendants, it is the duty of the court to reject the plaint under O. 7, R. 11. The ratio of that case has no application to the facts of the present case.

13. Mr. Parekh, learned counsel for defendants Nos. 2 to 10 also submitted that the suit against defendants Nos. 2 to 10 should be dismissed at the stage of the notice of motion. It is not possible to accept this contention or to hold that in a notice of motion taken out by the plaintiff for receiver and injunction it is the duty of the court to dismiss the suit because it has prima facie come to a conclusion that the suit is not maintainable against some of the defendants. This is a matter which will be adjudicated upon at the hearing of the suit or in a proper proceeding and not at the stage of the present notice of motion.

14. The question whether a Receiver should be appointed of the said property is therefore required to be considered on the merits of the case. It is submitted by the plaintiff that the original tenants, whether statutory or contractual, have abandoned their rights; there is a trespasser viz. defendant No. 10 who is in occupation and therefore it is necessary to protect their rights and that a Receiver should be appointed of the property in dispute. The defendants Nos. 2 to 10 contend that defendant No. 10 is not a trespasser. According to these defendants, under the notification issued under S. 15 of the Bombay Rent Act it is possible for a party to transfer his business as a going concern together with stock-in-trade, goodwill and tenancy rights, even though the tenancy rights may be only as statutory tenants. The contention of these defendants is contrary to the decision of a Division Bench of this Court reported in Vasant Tatoba Hargude v. Dikkaya Muttaya Pujari reported in AIR 1980 Bom 341. Defendants

2 to 10 also contend that the tenancy continues to be a contractual tenancy as there is an alleged waiver of the notice to quit. It is not necessary to examine these contentions at the interlocutory stage. But they are relevant at present only for the purpose of showing that rightly or wrongly, defendant No. 10 claims to be in possession under a semblance of title and he claims to be in possession as a person who has entered into an agreement with defendants 2 to 9 to purchase the business of defendant No. 9 as a going concern together with stock-in-trade, goodwill and tenancy rights of the suit premises.

15. There is a dispute as to whether defendant No. 10 entered into possession prior to the agreement of sale between the plaintiff and defendant No. 1 or thereafter. There has been considerable argument on both sides on the question of possession of defendant No. 10 in respect of the suit premises. It seems that original tenant T. Tarachand was a partner in the defendant No. 9's firm. The 9th defendant had hired certain equipment and machinery for the studio from a third party, one Samulla Sunny. After the death of the said Sunny a suit was filed for the administration of his estate, being Suit No. 6053 of 1980 in the Bombay City Civil Court at Bombay. In that suit a Receiver was appointed inter alia of the equipment and machinery which were lying in the suit premises. Pursuant to the order in that suit the Court Receiver had gone to take an inventory of the said machinery lying in the suit premises and had sealed the said premises. Thereafter the plaintiff filed a suit in the Bombay City Civil Court being Suit No. 7303 of 1980 against some of the defendants as well as the L.I.C. in which also a Receiver was appointed. There are various reports of the Receiver in that suit as well as at the ad interim stage in the present suit. Both the parties are relying upon various reports which have been made by the Receiver. From a perusal of these reports one thing at least is clear viz. that the Receiver had not put her lock on the premises. The premises were locked when the Receiver went there and she put her seal on the premises. Ultimately when the studio premises which had been locked throughout and on which there were seals of the Receiver appointed in these various litigations were opened by the Receiver, the premises were opened with the keys which were in the possession of defendant No. 10. It is not necessary to go into the question as to how defendant No. 10 obtained the keys of the premises, but the fact remains that the keys of the locks on the premises were with defendant No. 10.

In view of this fact, prima facie, it is not possible to hold, as contended by the plaintiffs, that the premises were abandoned premises and that nobody was in possession of these premises, either when a Receiver was appointed in the City Civil Court Suit No. 6053 of 1980 or at any time thereafter. Self-occupied premises in the city of Bombay are extremely valuable. They may fetch for its occupier a large sum of money. It is difficult to accept the contention of the plaintiff that such valuable premises which may fetch for its possessor an amount running into lacs of rupees would be simply abandoned by anybody, and would require a Receiver to take possession of the same in order to preserve them. Defendants 2 to 9 cannot be said to have abandoned the premises. They have entered into an agreement to transfer inter alia their rights in these premises to defendant No. 10. Defendant No. 10 appears to have been in possession of the suit premises under such an agreement before the filing of the suit. At present, therefore, the premises are not in an abandoned state.

16. We have next to examine whether the plaintiff has a present right to possession of these premises. Assuming for the sake of argument that the possession of defendant No. 10 is wrongful the plaintiff today has no interest in the property in dispute. He is merely a person who has entered into an agreement to purchase the property. He has not paid the full purchase price to the vendor nor has he obtained a conveyance in his favour. As such, he cannot claim any right to immediate possession of the suit property.

17. Mr. Parekh, learned counsel for the defendants Nos. 2 to 10 has challenged the plaintiff's right to obtain specific performance of the agreement of sale. He has alleged that the terms of the agreement of sale are different from the terms on which tenders were invited. He has alleged certain breaches of the agreement on the part of the plaintiff and he has also submitted that L.I.C.; the first defendants are in the position of trustees of the property because they hold this property for the benefit of their policy holders. He has further submitted that at the stage when the tenders were opened, and before the tender of the plaintiff was accepted, defendant No. 9 had raised his bid to Rs. 38,50,000 which was Rs. 1 lac more than the bid of the plaintiff. Relying upon the ratio of the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of M/s. Kasturi Lal v. State of Jammu & Kashmir, AIR 1980 SC 1992 as well as Ramana Dayaram Shetty v. The International Airport Authority, reported in AIR 1979 SC 1628, he has submitted that it was the duty of the Life Insurance Corporation to accept the highest bid and they acted wrongfully in accepting the bid of the plaintiff. According to him this could be a fit case where the court should not exercise its discretion in granting specific performance of the agreement of sale in favour of the plaintiff.

18. At the interlocutory stage it is not necessary to examine the merits of the case. But these submissions merely highlight the fact that the plaintiff does not have an immediate right to possession of the property in respect of which they have entered into an agreement of sale. In fact specific performance of an agreement of sale is a discretionary remedy which may or may not be granted. It is quite possible that in a given case the party who asks for specific performance may, even when successful, get only damages in lieu of specific performance. Therefore, unless the plaintiff gets a decree of specific performance in his favour, he does not get a right to possession. He cannot, therefore, at the interlocutory stage, dispossess somebody who is in possession prior to the filing of the suit. In view of this position, it is not possible to uphold the contention of the plaintiff that a receiver should be appointed of the property described in Exhibit "A" to the plaint. It may be noted that in the present proceedings the landlord namely, the Life Insurance Corporation has not advanced any arguments and has submitted to the orders of the court. The plaintiff is, however, entitled to some protection in respect of the property which he has agreed to purchase so that his rights may be protected in the event of his succeeding in the suit. Accordingly, I pass the following order:

Defendants 2 to 10, their servants and agents are restrained from in any manner disposing of alienating, encumbering, inducting any third party or creating or recognising any right in favour of any third party in respect of the property described in Exhibit "A" to the plaint or parting with possession thereof or any part thereof. Defendants 2 to 10, their servants and agents are also restrained from altering the condition of the property described in Exhibit "A" to the plaint or any part thereof.

Defendant No. 10 his servants and agents are further restrained from parting with the possession of the said premises or any part thereof in favour of defendants Nos. 2 to 9 or any of them.

Defendants 2 to 10, their servants and agents are restrained further from executing a deed of assignment pursuant to the agreement in question entered into between them.

The undertaking given by defendants 2 to 10 on 22nd Sept. 1981 is vacated.

Ad interim orders to continue till 15th June 1982. The receiver to make an inventory in respect of the property Exhibit "A" to the plaint including the goods lying in the studio premises and to prepare a list of all persons in occupation of the property Exhibit "A". Inventory to be made by the Court Receiver immediately by removing the seal of the studio premises and re-fixing the same after the inventory is completed.

Ad interim orders to stand vacated on 15th June 1982 and the Receiver to remove her seal forthwith thereafter.

Mr. Parekh learned counsel for the defendants 2 to 10 applies that the plaintiff should deposit in court a sum of Rs. 28,12,500 which, according to him, is the balance purchase price payable in respect of the agreement for sale.

Mr. Amin, learned counsel for the plaintiff states that the balance purchase price of Rs. 23,12,500 has been deposited by the plaintiffs with their attorneys M/s. Bachubhai Munim & Co. In view of this statement application rejected.

Costs to be costs in the cause.

Ordered accordingly.

AIR 1982 BOMBAY 532SHARAD MANOHAR, J.*Kalyandas Manilal Shah, Petitioner v. S. M. Kankaria and another, Respondents.*Writ Petn. No. 89 of 1981, D/- 17-3-1982.

Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act (57 of 1947), Sections 12, 13 — Consent decree — Executability — Decree of eviction on basis of compromise entitling plaintiff to recover possession after expiry of 7 years from date of compromise but decree not snapping relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties — Held, in circumstances, compromise decree was inexecutable. (Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), S. 47, O. 23, R. 3).

In the instant case, under the compromise decree the plaintiff was to recover possession after the expiry of 7 years from the date of the compromise. During that period the defendant was supposed to pay standard rent. The standard rent was fixed by the Compromise Decree itself. If the defendant was not to be made a tenant but was to occupy the premises only by concession, the provisions pertaining to the fixation of standard rent would have been wholly irrelevant. But the Compromise Decree had taken care to fix the standard rent and what was made payable by the defendant per month for the future period of 7 years was the standard rent determined by the Compromise Decree itself. Further, by the Compromise Decree, the plaintiff was to resume the water supply and the defendant was to withdraw the complaint filed by him under Section 24 of the Rent Act. There was, however, no default clause whatsoever in the compromise. Thus, every right that was given to a statutory tenant was given by the compromise terms by the plaintiff to the defendant. But that was not all. Even in the subsequent suit for eviction filed before the expiry of the said 7 years, the plaintiff stated that the defendant was his statutory tenant with effect from the date of compromise. Thus, both the terms of the Compromise Decree as well as the subsequent conduct of the parties clearly indicated the complete absence of snapping of the landlord-tenant relationship. In fact the relationship of landlord and tenant, may be that of a statutory tenant, was very much retained by the Compromise Decree.

Held in the circumstances, the compromise decree became inexecutable. This was so because a normal Compromise Decree (as distinct from the instant Compromise Decree) snapped the relationship of landlord and tenant, whether contractual or statutory, between the parties with effect from the date of the decree and from that date the tenant was not expected to get any protection under the Rent Act as such. But as it happened in this case if the Compromise Decree did not intend to snap the erstwhile relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties, but either same previous relationship was continued or a new contract of tenancy was brought about, the provision of Sections 12 and 13 of the Rent Act would spring back into operation and hence the decree for possession became inexecutable. Sections 12 and 13 of the Rent Act put an embargo upon the powers of the Court to hand over possession of the premises by the tenant to the landlord without satisfying itself that the conditions mentioned in the said Sections 12 and 13 of the Rent Act existed. ORDER :— This is a writ petition filed by the judgment-debtor whose contention that the Compromise Decree passed against him for possession was not executable against him on account of various reasons, has been negated by both the Courts below.

For the reasons which are somewhat peculiar to the case before me I am required to allow this petition by accepting at least one of the contentions urged on behalf of the petitioner-judgment-debtor.

2. The facts of the case which are not in dispute are as follows :—

(a) The suit premises consist of a shop situate in village Choti, Taluka Igatpuri, District Nashik. There is no dispute that Rent Act is applicable to the premises situate in this village. Admittedly the present petitioner (referred to hereafter as "the defendant") was a tenant in respect of the premises which belong to the plaintiff. In the year 1969, the plaintiff filed Regular Civil Suit No. 119 of 1969 for recovery of possession of the suit premises on the ground that he required the said premises for his bona fide occupation. It is not disputed that the suit was resisted by the defendant but that even before the framing of the issues meaning thereby that even before the Court had any occasion to apply its mind to the respective rights of the parties, a consent decree came to be passed on 10-8-1970. Its intention and its legal consequence in the light of the subsequent conduct of the parties are the questions falling for determination in this petition.

(b) The consent decree starts with a statement that there was a settlement arrived at between the parties and that as per the settlement the plaintiff was to recover the possession of the suit premises on 10-8-1977, that is to say, after the expiry of 7 years from the date of the compromise. By the said compromise standard rent of the premises was fixed at Rs. 58.42. Reference is made to the fact that the defendant had filed a criminal case against the plaintiff under Section 24 of the Rent Act complaining about the unlawful cutting of the water supply. By the compromise it was agreed that the plaintiff should resume the water supply. Reference was made to the application for fixation of standard rent filed by the tenant (Application No. 16 of 1969) but the standard rent was fixed by the compromise itself at the rate of Rs. 58.42 as mentioned above.

(c) There was no default clause in the said compromise terms, nor did the compromise terms specifically provide that in case possession was not delivered by the tenant to the plaintiff on the expiry of the period of 7 years, the possession was to be recovered by the plaintiff by execution of the compromise decree.

(d) Upon the settlement between the parties the compromise decree came to be passed by the Court on 10-8-1970. The compromise decree, however, provided separately that if the possession was not handed over by the defendant to the plaintiff on 10-8-1977 the same should be given to him by the Court.

(e) It is common ground that till about the year 1971 the defendant did pay the monthly dues payable as per the compromise decree. In 1971 or around there started a dispute between the parties. The nature of the dispute was that the defendant was offering rent to the plaintiff but insisted upon a receipt. The plaintiff was agreeable to give a receipt only by mentioning the amount he received as mesne profits. The tenant refused to pay rent as such. The result was that on 28-2-1972 the plaintiff gave to the defendant a notice. In the said notice it was mentioned that what was payable by the defendant was by way of mesne profits. It may be mentioned here that in the notice the mesne profits were computed on the basis of the standard rent. The notice stated that even assuming that the defendant was a statutory tenant still he was liable to pay mesne profits as per the compromise decree and he was called upon to pay the amount of mesne profits as per the compromise decree. There was another mention in the notice, namely, that the defendant had inducted some other person in the suit premises and that this was a breach of the provisions of the compromise decree. On these grounds the defendant was called upon to hand over the possession of the suit premises to the plaintiff. Finding that the defendant would not oblige, the plaintiff filed a second suit against the defendant in spite of the decree already obtained by him on 10-8-1970 for recovery of the possession of the suit premises from the defendant. The said suit was Regular Civil Suit No. 52 of 1972. The relevant averments may be elaborated as follows:—

In para 3 of the plaint it was specifically mentioned by the plaintiff that the defendant was his statutory tenant with effect from 10-8-1970.

In para 5 of the plaint it was no doubt mentioned that the defendant was entitled to occupy the suit premises till 10-8-1977 as a matter of concession, but this statement was made in the context of the further grievance that the defendant had inducted another person (defendant No. 2 in that suit) on the roof of the shop with a view to profiteering by taking monthly payments from him.

In para 6 of the plaint it was stated that the cause of action for the suit for possession accrued to him on the expiry of the period mentioned in the notice dated 28-2-1972, that is to say on 31-2-1972.

The suit was specifically filed under the Bombay Rent Act and an averment to that effect was made in para 7 of the plaint by stating that the suit was filed for possession as per the provisions of the Rent Act and also for recovery of mesne profits.

Para 8 of the plaint discloses that the suit was filed on the basis that the same was against a tenant, whose tenancy had expired, and not against a trespasser.

(f) In that suit issues were framed. Issue No. 1 which was evidently invited by the plaintiff himself runs as follows:—

"1. Does the plaintiff prove that the defendant No. 1 has become a statutory tenant up to 10-8-1977 under the compromise decree in R. C. S. No. 119/1969?"

Issue No. 3 runs as follows:—

"3. Does he further prove that the defendant No. 1 has sublet the suit property to defendant No. 2?"

In the said suit the defendant had taken the plea that the rent charged against the defendant was excessive. Hence issue No. 5 was framed as follows:—

"5. Does he further prove that the rent of the suit property as agreed in the decree in R. C. S. No. 119/69 is excessive?"

Issue No. 6 runs as follows:—

"6. If yes, what is the standard rent of the suit property?"

(g) It may be mentioned here that according to the defendant he was not a statutory tenant but a contractual tenant and that that was the reason why issue No. 1 was framed as set out above. The trial Court recorded its finding on issue No. 1 against the plaintiff meaning thereby that the plaintiff's contention that the defendant was only a statutory tenant of the premises was held to be legally invalid. The trial Court recorded a finding on issue No. 3 that the defendant had not sublet the suit premises. So far as issues 5 and 6 are concerned it was held that in view of the standard rent having been fixed by the compromise decree in the previous suit. Issue No. 6 did not arise. On Issue No. 5 the finding was that the rent was not excessive.

(h) The plaintiff filed an appeal to the District Court. The District Court also seems to have taken the view that the plaintiff had no right to recover possession of the suit premises from the defendant at least for the said period of 7 years, having regard to the provisions of the compromise decree. The District Court was, however, inclined to observe that the contentions of both the parties were kept open to be agitated in the proceedings for execution of the compromise decree which would arise only after the expiry of the said period of 7 years. With these observations the appeal filed by the plaintiff was dismissed by the District Court.

(i) This order of dismissal of the appeal was passed on 16th January, 1978. By this time the period provided by the compromise decree had already expired. Hence the plaintiff filed a Darkhast for the execution of the compromise decree for the recovery of the suit premises from the defendant. The defendant raised objections to the execution. Firstly, it was contended that the compromise decree in fact brought about a new contractual relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties with effect from 10-8-1970 and having regard to the provisions of Sections 12 and 13 of the Bombay Rent Act, the decree had become non-executable. Secondly, it was contended that the compromise decree which was passed in Suit No. 119/1969 was without jurisdiction inasmuch as the Court had no jurisdiction to pass a decree against a tenant just by compromise of the parties without satisfying itself that the conditions for a decree mentioned in Ss. 12 and 13 of the Rent Act were existent.

These contentions taken by the defendant were rejected by the trial Court and the appeal filed by the defendant in the District Court met with the same fate. The present petition is directed against the view taken by both the Courts below.

3. At the time of the hearing of this petition it was argued by Shri Kapasi, the learned Advocate for the petitioner, that the decree was not just executable having regard to the law declared by the Supreme Court in the case of K. K. Chari v. R. M. Seshadri, AIR 1973 SC 1311, and in the other cases of the Supreme Court, inasmuch as the Civil Court did not have jurisdiction to pass a decree against a tenant governed by the Bombay Rent Act merely by compromise of the parties without satisfying itself that the conditions mentioned in Sections 12 and 13 of the Rent Act for a tenant's eviction existed on the date of the suit, or at any other relevant time. He secondly contended that a careful examination of the compromise decree would show that a new contract of tenancy was in fact brought about between the parties with effect from 10-8-1970 by virtue of the settlement arrived at on that date.

4. To my mind, it is unnecessary to examine both the above contentions urged by Shri Kapasi in view of the fact that the petition must succeed on a third point which was somewhat casually suggested by Shri Kapasi himself. The point is that on the plaintiff's own showing the defendant was at least a statutory tenant with effect from 10-8-1970 if not a contractual tenant. The legal significance of this position is that the defendant is entitled to take all the protection afforded to a statutory tenant under the Bombay Rent Act and, if that is so, the instant compromise decree for possession cannot be of any legal consequence whatsoever.

5. I will first refer to the various circumstances showing that as per the intentment and contemplation of the parties evidenced by the compromise decree itself as also by the subsequent assertions and conduct of the parties, the defendant was at least a statutory tenant of the suit premises. After pointing out this position which emerges from the peculiar facts of the present case, I will refer to the various statutory provisions which culminate into the inevitable legal position that the decree for possession against the defendant cannot be executable at all.

6. I will first examine the compromise decree. The substance of the compromise decree is already set out. From the mandate of the decree it is clear that a very long period was given by the plaintiff to the defendant, a period of 7 years, for staying in the suit premises. During that period the defendant was supposed to pay standard rent. The standard rent was fixed by the compromise decree itself. If the defendant was not to be made a tenant but was to occupy the premises only by concession, the provisions pertaining to the fixation of standard rent would be wholly irrelevant. But the compromise decree has taken care to fix the standard rent and what is made payable by the defendant per month for the future period of 7 years is the standard rent determined by the compromise decree on 10-8-1970 itself. Further, by the compromise decree, the plaintiff was to resume the water supply and the defendant was to withdraw the complaint filed by him under Section 24 of the Rent Act. There was, however, no default clause whatsoever in the compromise.

It could be seen that every right that is given to a statutory tenant was given by the compromise terms by the plaintiff to the defendant. But that was not all. If the compromise decree stood all by itself, the question would have been somewhat arguable at least that the intention of the parties was somewhat equivocal on the question as to whether the rights available to a tenant under the provisions of the Rent Act was or was not intended to be made available to the defendant. But if there were any doubts about this position those doubts had completely been dispelled by the plaintiff's own contention in the suit filed by him subsequently. I have already referred to various averments made by the plaintiff in the Second Suit No. 52/1972. In the said suit plaintiff stated in so many unmincing words that the defendant was his statutory tenant with effect from 10-8-1970. The suit was filed against the defendant on the basis that he was a tenant. Cause of action was stated to have arisen in favour of the plaintiff in that suit because the tenant's tenancy was terminated by virtue of notice dated 28-2-1972. Para 6 relating to the statement of cause of action mentions in so many words that the cause of action in that suit arose after the expiry of the period mentioned in the notice. It follows that according to the plaintiff that the defendant was at least a statutory tenant of the suit premises. The court-fee paid for the purpose of the suit further makes it clear that the plaintiff treated the defendant as a tenant within the contemplation of the Rent Act at the time of that suit. In addition to the above, an issue was specifically got framed on the question as to whether the defendant was a statutory tenant.

Allegations were made against the defendant, in effect, that the defendant had sublet the suit premises to defendant No. 2 in that suit. This definitely postulated that the defendant was a tenant, though only a statutory tenant as specifically alleged. The contention of the plaintiff was that during the said period of 7 years the defendant was entitled to all the rights of a statutory tenant and was also subject to all the liabilities and obligations of a statutory tenant.

If all these facts are taken in conjunction with each other, it is impossible to hold that it was not the intention of the plaintiff, when he entered into the compromise on 10-8-1970, not to confer upon the defendant all the rights that are available to a statutory tenant under the Bombay Rent Act. If this was so, the only question that requires to be considered by the Executing Court is as to whether the Statute left any scope for the Court to disregard the provisions of the Rent Act and to execute the compromise decree by ignoring the specific inhibitions contained in the Act.

7. This brings me to the question of analysis of the various relevant provisions of the Rent Act which, to my mind, put a complete embargo upon the power of the Executing Court to allow the execution to proceed so as to dispossess the tenant of the suit premises.

The first relevant provision is Section 5, sub-section (11) of the Bombay Rent Act which defines the word "tenant". The said sub-section (11) defines "tenant" as follows:—

"(11) "tenant" means any person by whom or on whose account rent is payable for any premises and includes—

(a) xx xx

(b) any person remaining, after the determination of the lease, in possession, with or without the assent of the landlord, of the premises leased to such person * * * It is well-known that the person whose contractual tenancy has been terminated but continues to be in possession as a tenant as per the above mentioned provision is known by the words "statutory tenant" in the legal parlance.

Under the Rent Act a landlord becomes entitled to the possession of the suit premises either from a statutory tenant or a contractual tenant only under two sections, viz., Ss. 12 and 13 of the Rent Act. Section 12 (1) provides—

"12 (1) A landlord shall not be entitled to the recovery of possession of any premises so long as the tenant pays, or is ready and willing to pay, the amount of the standard rent and permitted increases, if any, and observes and performs the other conditions of the tenancy, in so far as they are consistent with the provisions of this Act."

The said section thereafter goes to make provisions for notice, in respect of arrears of rent, to be given by the landlord to the tenant and a decree to be passed by the Court in the event of any default by the tenant in the matter of payment of rent. But what is to be noted is that Section 12 refers essentially both to contractual as well as statutory tenant, meaning thereby that the protection envisaged by the said section is available both to the contractual as well as to the statutory tenant.

Coming to Section 13 of the Act it is clear that unless conditions mentioned in Sec. 13 existed in favour of the landlord, the landlord is not entitled to recover possession from the tenant irrespective of the question as to whether a tenant was a contractual or a statutory tenant.

Reading these two Sections 12 and 13 together with the other provisions of the Act, it is clear that between the two provisions, the circumstances in which the landlord is entitled to dispossess a statutory tenant of possession of the premises in his occupation as a statutory tenant are exhausted. This means that even when a person becomes the statutory tenant, the Court cannot pass a decree of eviction even against him unless the conditions mentioned in the said Ss. 12 and 13 are found to be existent.

8. The question thus arises as to whether the decree passed against the defendant on 10-8-1970 at the time when the defendant was already a statutory tenant had any legal consequence or not. The contention before me is that once the decree is passed the provisions of the Rent Act are to be ignored and the rights of the parties are to be ascertained from the decree alone. In support of this contention reliance was placed upon the judgment of the Supreme Court in Bai Chanchal v. Syed Jalaluddin, AIR 1971 SC 1081. Para 6 of the judgment runs as follows :—

"6. The second point urged by learned counsel was that, by the consent decree itself, a new tenancy was created which was to continue for five years and, in the meantime, the Bombay Rents Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act, 1947 came into force and the appellants were protected from ejectment under the provisions of that Act. The consent decree does not state that a new tenancy is being created. The argument was that the terms of that consent decree should be interpreted as indicating an intention to create a new tenancy. We are unable to find any such terms. On the face of it, all that the consent decree envisaged, was that, though the judgment-debtors were liable to immediate eviction, the decree-holders agreed to let them continue in possession for period of five years. Since this concession was being granted as a special case, the decree-holder insisted that mesne profits should be paid at a much higher rate so much so that between all the defendants, governed by the two decrees of 8th July, 1946 and 28th January, 1949, the amount payable as mesne profit became Rs. 7,314-8-0 per annum which has no relation with the original rent of Rs. 199/- per annum for the entire land fixed by the lease of 1895. In fact, the decree-holders sought further protection by requiring the judgment-debtors to pay the mesne profits in monthly instalments, and the instalments were so fixed that the mesne profits due for five years were to be paid within a period of three years. There was the further clause that, in case of default of payment of the mesne profits, the defaulting judgment-debtors could be immediately called upon to deliver possession. These terms can, in no way, be interpreted as creating a new tenancy constituting the decree-holders as landlords and the judgment-debtors as their tenants. The terms of the consent decree neither constituted a tenancy nor a licence. All that the decree-holders did was to allow the judgment-debtors to continue in possession for five years on payment of mesne profits as a concession for entering into a compromise. The argument advanced must, therefore, be rejected."

The above decision really turned upon the words obtaining in the relevant compromise decree. The compromise decree read as a whole is entirely different in the instant case. Moreover, if there was any ambiguity about the parties' intention it is wholly resolved by the plaintiff's own subsequent conduct. The ratio of the above judgment might, perhaps, have been helpful for the plaintiff if on the plaintiff's own showing he had not continued to treat the defendant as his statutory tenant for the period from 10-8-1970. What we find in the usual compromise decree is that decree snaps the relationship of tenant and landlord between the parties with effect from the compromise decree and even if the judgment-debtor continues to be in possession after the compromise decree, he is not in possession of the same as a contractual tenant or as a statutory tenant. A compromise decree of the normal type intends to deny the judgment-debtor any protection of the statute. The instant compromise decree on the other hand purported to give every protection to the defendant. It is clear from the established facts that

(a) the amount to be paid by the defendant to the plaintiff from 10-8-1970 per month is the standard rent and for the purpose of the measurement of the dues in fact standard rent has been got fixed by compromise;

(b) there is no default clause whatsoever;

(c) the compromise decree does not even mention that the relationship of landlord and tenant has been put an end to;

(d) a provision that usually obtains in a lease for imposition of the obligation upon the tenant to hand over possession to the landlord after the expiry of the period of lease is incorporated in the instant compromise decree, hence from the compromise decree it is not at all difficult to infer or spell out an ordinary monthly lease for the specific period of seven years.

As a matter of fact that compromise as a whole could be legitimately constructed as a new contract of lease; but since the plaintiff has never stated that the defendant was granted a new lease by him, that aspect of the question becomes controversial. But so far as the statutory tenancy is concerned, in fact, the plaintiff himself has been crying from house tops that the defendant continued to be a statutory tenant with effect from 10-8-1970 for a period of 7 years. If that was so, it is futile on the plaintiff's part to contend that the defendant would in no way be entitled to the protection ensured by the Rent Act.

A normal compromise decree (as distinct from the instant compromise decree) snaps the relationship of landlord and tenant, whether contractual or statutory, between the parties with effect from the date of the decree and from that date the tenant is not expected to get any protection under the Rent Act as such. In the instant case both, the terms of the compromise decree as well as the subsequent conduct of the parties, clearly indicate the complete absence of snapping of the relationship. In fact the relationship of landlord and tenant, may be that of a statutory tenant, is very much retained by the compromise decree. The very fact that during the relevant period suit was filed on the basis of tenancy shows that he was not only intended to be retained as a tenant but was in fact regarded and treated as a tenant within the meaning of the Rent Act. If that was so, it is futile on the part of the plaintiff to contend that the defendant was not entitled to the protection of the provisions of the Rent Act.

9. At the very outset in this judgment, I have stated that this conclusion has been arrived at by me in view of the peculiar facts of this case. The peculiarity that I have in mind is in the context of the judgment of a Division Bench of this Court in the case of Ramjibhai Virpal v. Govardhandas, (1954) 56 Bom LR 365 : (AIR 1954 Bom 370). In that case the Court was called upon to examine the effect of a compromise decree in a suit between the landlord and the tenant. After examining the effect of the compromise embodied in the decree, the Court had, in effect, found that the intendment of the parties was to snap the relationship of landlord and tenant. The Court did not state as to what exact nomenclature could be or should be used for the relationship between the parties as from that date, but they could see the negative intendment for certain, viz. not to keep alive the relationship of landlord and tenant. They no doubt stated the law by emphasizing that the question was one of the intention of the parties. But the same thing could be stated also in other words, viz. that if the compromise decree did not intend to snap the erstwhile relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties, but either same previous relationship was continued or a new contract of tenancy was brought about, the provision of Sections 12 and 13 of the Rent Act will spring back into operation and hence the decree for possession shall become inexecutable.

As pointed out above, Sections 12 and 13 of the Rent Act put an embargo upon the powers of the Court to hand over possession of the premises by the tenant to the landlord without satisfying itself that the conditions mentioned in the said Sections 12 and 13 of the Rent Act existed. To my mind, therefore, the view taken by the Courts below cannot be sustained.

10. In view of this above finding it is really unnecessary for me to examine the question raised by Shri Kapasi as to whether the Court had power to pass a decree of eviction by compromise. Shri Kapasi has argued that in the instant case the compromise decree was passed even before any issue was framed and, according to him, this fact clearly brings the case within the ambit of the dictum pronounced by the Supreme Court in the case of K. K. Chari v. R. M. Seshadri, AIR 1973 SC 1311. I may state here that the contention urged by Shri Kapasi is not without substance. However, I did not call upon Shri Kankaria, the learned Advocate for the respondents, to answer this question because, to my mind, the petition is capable of being disposed on the first point mentioned above.

11. In the result, the petition succeeds. The rule earlier issued is made absolute. However, in the circumstances of the case, there will be no order as to costs.

Petition allowed.

JUDGMENT:— 1. to 7. * * *

8. In support of his contention that even at this stage the complaint can be dismissed and the process issued by the learned trial Magistrate can be quashed, Mr. Rajani sought to rely upon a judgment of this Court in Bomanji v. Mehernosh, 1980 Bom CR 503. Before Mr. Rajani proceeded to read this judgment, I stopped him because it is my consistent practice not to allow this journal to be cited in my Court. As the preface of this volume shows, the publication of this journal, namely, Bombay Cases Reporter, was originally published under the caption "Unreported Cases Reporter (Bombay)". Under the practice of this Court, copies of judgments of this Court which are marked by the Judges to be referred to the law reporters are given to the Bombay Law Reporter and the Maharashtra Law Journal. The All India Reporter obtains certified copies of the judgments of this Court and thereafter publishes the judgments in its journal. There is nothing in this journal called Bombay Cases Reporter to indicate on what basis this journal has obtained the copies of the judgments of the Court. There is no guarantee that what has been reported in this journal is authentic. It is not indicated by the publishers of this journal or the editor that the copies of the judgments on the basis of which they are reported in this journal are certified copies of the judgments. I have often seen grave grammatical and other mistakes appearing in the pages of this journal. I have, therefore, regarded it as hazardous to rely upon this journal and, therefore, it is my consistent practice not to allow this journal to be cited in my Court. This is apart from the question involved under the Indian Law Reports Act, 1875.

AIR 1982 BOMBAY 539MADON AND PENDSE, JJ.

National Textile Corporation (Maharashtra North) Ltd., Appellants v. Khushalchand Bissessardas Daga, Respondent.

Appeal No. 297 of 1976, D/- 21-7-1982.

(A) Sick Textile Undertakings (Nationalisation) Act (57 of 1974), Ss. 4 (6) and 5 (2) — Suit filed by company, a sick textile undertaking, against managing director for recovery of amount embezzled by him — National Textile Corporation is entitled to continue suit — Corporation's right to continue suits is not restricted only to suits mentioned in Section 4 (6). Judgment of Vimadalal, J. in Suit No. 35 of 1963 (Bom), Reversed.

The view of the trial Court, that it is only the types of suits mentioned in Section 4 (6) which could be maintained and continued by the National Textile Corporation is erroneous. S. 4 (6) was designed for a very different purpose. As will be seen on a perusal of sub-secs. (1) and (2) of S. 5, every liability of the owner of a sick textile undertaking, other than the liability specified in Section 5 (2), in respect of a period prior to April 1, 1974 is to be the liability of such owner and is to be enforceable against him and not against the Central Government or the National Textile Corporation. The only liabilities which could be enforced against the Central Government or the National Textile Corporation are the liabilities set out in Section 5 (2). S. 4 (6) was specially enacted to provide that if in respect of a liability mentioned in S. 5 (2) a suit, appeal or other proceeding instituted or preferred by or against the textile company was pending, the same was not to abate or to be discontinued or be in any way prejudicially affected by reason of the transfer of the sick textile undertaking but it could be continued, prosecuted and enforced by or against the National Textile Corporation. From this, however, it does not follow that if the sick textile undertaking had assets to recover in respect of which it had filed a suit, the suit could not be continued by the National Textile Corporation. Neither Parliament could have intended nor the ordinary canon of construction of statutes permit such an interpretation to be placed upon the provisions of the Act. The trial Court was not right in law in holding that the National Textile Corporation can prosecute only the suits mentioned in S. 5 (2) and not other types of suits. The National Textile Corporation and its subsidiary corporation when any sick textile undertaking is transferred to it is entitled to continue all suits filed by such undertaking to recover any of its assets or properties or to enforce any of its rights. The amount embezzled by the respondent (defendant) from the funds of the Company (original plaintiff) by perpetrating a fraud upon the Company was the property of the Company and the Company was entitled to have the benefit and advantage of such property restored to it by the respondent who was its managing director and the director-in-charge of the company and thus stood in a fiduciary relation to the Company. The Appellants (National Textile Corporation) were, therefore, clearly entitled to have themselves substituted on the record of the suit under R. 10 of O. 22 of the Civil P. C., and to prosecute further the suit and if successful therein to have a decree passed in their favour. Judgment of Vimadalal J. in Suit No. 35 of 1963 (Bom), Reversed.

Aspi Chinoy with M. H. Shah, for Appellants; R. V. Mehta, for Respondent.

MADON, J.— This is an appeal against the judgment and decree of Mr. Justice Vimadalal dismissing a suit filed on the Original Side of this High Court on the ground that the appellants were not entitled to be substituted as the plaintiffs and to continue the suit.

2. The suit was originally filed by the Model Mills Nagpur Limited (hereinafter referred to as "the Company") against the respondent, who was the managing director of the Company until July 18, 1969, to recover from him a sum of Rupees 48,08,329.69 P. with interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum on Rupees 35,55,600 from February 11, 1963 up to the date of the judgment and thereafter at the rate of 4 per cent per annum till payment. According to the case made out in the plaint, the said sum of Rs. 35,55,600 represented the aggregate of the amounts fraudulently taken away by the respondent in his capacity as the managing director of the Company. At the hearing of the suit the claim for interest on the said sum of Rupees 35,55,600 for the period prior to February 11, 1963 was given up and the suit was confined to the said sum of Rupees 35,55,600 with interest thereon from February 11, 1963 at the rates as aforesaid.

3. The facts which have given rise to this appeal have not been disputed before us, and it will be, therefore, sufficient, instead of setting them out in elaborate details, to sketch them in order to understand the points which were argued at the hearing of this appeal. The company was incorporated in Aug. 1920. Prior to the coming into force of the Companies Act, 1956, Messrs. Bansilal Abirchand Dadabhoy and Company a Partnership firm, were the managing agents of the Company. The respondent was a partner in the said firm. As appears from the evidence of the appellants' witness Dinshaw Dorabji Patel, in about Dec. 1950 Sir Maneckji D. Dadabhoy who was the chairman and managing director submitted his resignation and in his place the respondent was appointed as the director-in-charge. After the respondent was so appointed, the system of purchasing cotton till then followed of asking for samples from merchants and brokers, selecting the samples and then placing the orders was discontinued and Messrs. Hari Cotton and Company were appointed the sole suppliers of cotton to the Company. The said firm of Messrs. Hari Cotton and Company was managed by the respondent's brother Naraindas Bissessardas Daga. Against cotton alleged to be supplied to the Company large advances were made to the said Messrs. Hari Cotton and Company and were owing by the said firm to the Company. In view of the restraints contained in the new Companies Act, 1956, on dealings by a company with concerns owned or controlled by relatives of directors the said Messrs. Hari Cotton and Company were replaced by Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal, a sole proprietary concern, of which the proprietor was one Mohanlal Daga. Mohanlal Daga's brother Laxmichand Daga was the munim in the respondent's Bombay concern, namely, Messrs. Daga and Sons. The amounts fraudulently taken away by the respondent have been through the instrumentality of the said firm of Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal. The uncontroverted evidence on the record shows that in May 1956 Laxmichand met Mohanlal Daga and told him that the respondent and his brother Naraindas were withdrawing moneys from the Company for their own purposes at Nagpur in the name of the said Messrs. Hari Cotton and Company and that in view of the provisions of the new Companies Act which had come into force on April 1, 1956 the said firm of Messrs. Hari Cotton and Company would have to be replaced by another entity. Thereafter a meeting took place between the said Mohanlal and the respondent, and it was agreed that a new proprietary concern should be started by the said Mohanlal in the name of Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal and that Mohanlal would sign whatever documents were required of him and that the rest of the work would be managed by the respondent. Thereupon under the respondent's instruction Mohanlal was taken to the branch of the Bank of Bikaner in Bombay and an account in the name of Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal was opened.

4. It may be mentioned at this stage that on Sept. 22, 1956 the Central Government gave its approval to the appointment of the respondent as managing director of the Company, and at the general body meeting of the Company held on Dec. 17, 1956 the respondent was appointed as such managing director and an agreement relating to this appointment was executed between the Company and the respondent on Dec. 13, 1956.

5. After the concern of the said Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal had started, orders were placed with it for supply of cotton to the Company. The modus operandi which was adopted was that against orders placed amounts were credited to the said Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal in the books of account of the Company towards the price of cotton alleged to be in transit to the mills of the Company in Nagpur. Against such credits Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal drew hundis upon the Company in favour of either Messrs. Hari Cotton and Company or the Bank of Bikaner or Messrs. Girdharlal Sunderlal. The firm of Messrs. Girdharlal Sunderlal consisted of two brothers, namely, Girdharlal and Sunderlal. The father of those two was one Asaram Rathi. Asaram was the munim in Messrs. Bansilal Ramchandra, a sole proprietary concern of the respondent. It is not disputed that the amounts of the hundis so drawn have all found their way into the pockets of the respondent, and the cotton alleged to be in transit to the Company never found its way to the mills. In certain cases instead of following the above modus operandi payments were made by cheques to Mohanlal, put into the bank account of the said Harakchand Mohanlal and then the amounts withdrawn and handed over to the respondent. Elaborate evidence of the fraud so practiced upon the Company was led in the trial Court, and so far as the amounts thus fraudulently taken away by the respondent and proved in Court are concerned, they aggregated to Rs. 38,17,600, or, in other words, the total amount claimed in the plaint except an item of Rs. 38,000. This has not been disputed before us by the respondent.

6. The fact that the books of account of the Company showed advances made to Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal against cotton in transit which had not at any time arrived and thus a large debit stood against the said Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal in the said books of account caused concern, and the manager of the mills, Jamshedji Pestonji Dordi, wrote letters to the respondent requesting him to see that the amount of outstandings was recovered from the said Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal. Two of these letters are on the record. It is also in evidence that the auditors of the Company had also raised queries about such large amounts being allowed to be left outstanding. In order to get over those objections another plan was hit upon. A company called Storage Batteries Manufacturing Private Limited (hereinafter referred to as "Storage Batteries") was got incorporated on May 27, 1958 with an authorized share capital of Rupees 20,00,000. The promoters of the said Company were one G. M. Mukerjee and L. M. Dhandotiya, and the said Mukerjee advanced Rs. 2,000 for initial expenses. The address of the said Company was 15, Narayan Dhabolkar Road, Bombay-6, which was the address of one Haridas Mundhra who was a friend of the respondent. Evidence on the record is clear that Storage Batteries was a sham Company got floated by the respondent to stave off the evil day when the fraud perpetrated by him upon the Company would be discovered. In further pursuance of his plan to defraud the Company and to prevent the Company from coming to know of his fraud a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Company was called on June 11, 1958. The said meeting was attended by the respondent, his son Laxmichand, one J. R. Motishaw and the said Asaram Rathi the munim of the respondent's sole proprietary concern. At the said meeting the resignations from the Board of two Directors, Lachhmandas H. Daga and Jaykrishnadas Harivallabhdas, were accepted. Amongst the business said to be executed at the said meeting as recorded in the minutes of the said meeting was the consideration of a letter dated Jan. 9, 1958 addressed by the Company's auditors to the Board of Directors with respect to the accounts for the year ended June 30, 1957. Item 1 of the report of the auditors referred to the advances made to the said Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal. The explanation given by the Respondent at the said meeting was that advances were made to the said Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal in accordance with the usual practice followed in the past in the matter of purchases of cotton and that out of the bales of cotton purchased from the said M/s. Harakchand Mohanlal all except a small lot of 330 bales of cotton had been received and the said Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal had assured that the remaining 300 bales would be delivered to the mills very soon. When asked about the constitution of the said firm of Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal, the respondent stated that he had no interest whatever in the said firm and that the said Mohanlal was its sole proprietor. According to the said minutes, in view of the explanation given by the respondent the Board ratified the respondent's action in making the above purchases and granting the above advances. Apart from the said minutes there is no direct evidence of what transpired at the said meeting. Rajendra Thakorlal Desai, the secretary of the Company, who had given evidence at the trial of the suit, was unwell and was unable to remain present at the said meeting held on June 11, 1958. According to his evidence, he had not attended work on June 11, 1958 but had resumed duties on June 12, 1958 when the respondent gave him a draft of the minutes of the said meeting which the respondent had prepared and asked him to incorporate it in the minutes book. Another meeting of the Board of Directors was held on June 19, 1958 at which the said Desai was present and of which the minutes were dictated by him to his stenographer. At the said meeting the directors present were the Respondent, the said Motishaw, the said L. K. Daga, the Respondent's son, and the said Asaram Rathi, the respondent's munim. The minutes of the said meeting record that the Board considered the question of advances to the said Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal made up to July 1, 1957 which were referred to in the auditors' report. Mostly the same explanation as was stated to be given by the respondent at the said meeting of the Board held on June 11, 1958 is stated to have been given at this meeting. The respondent is further stated to have informed the Board that he was doing his best to compel the said Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal to pay the amounts due as early as possible and that after considerable negotiations the said Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal had proposed to discharge its liability by giving to the Company 5,000 fully paid-up shares of the face value of Rs. 100 each of Storage Batteries, assigning to the Company loans and advances in the sum of Rs. 7,00,000 "by way of assigning through the Company the party's loans and advances to the Storage Batteries.

Payments of Rupees five lacs in cash within one year and Rs. 15 lacs in cash within two years." At the said meeting the other three directors who were present pointed out that the advances in question were made to Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal prior to their joining the Board. They demanded from the respondent a personal guarantee for the amount due to the Company, which the respondent did not accept but ultimately agreed to give a guarantee in the sum of Rs. 10,00,000. The said Mohanlal had been called to the meeting and was made to wait outside. After the proposal made by the respondent was accepted by the Board, the said Mohanlal was called in and agreed to the proposed arrangement. At the said meeting of the Board the respondent was authorised to write a letter to the said Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal setting out the terms which the Board had accepted and to obtain Mohanlal's confirmation in writing thereto as also to confirm in writing the guarantee of Rs. 10,00,000 which he had given to the Company. The said Mohanlal wrote a letter to the Company in which he stated that he had received the Company's letter dated June 20, 1958 along with the draft agreement and that he accepted the terms thereof without reservation. Along with the said letter the said Mohanlal returned the agreement enclosed in duplicate and signed by him, with a request that the Company should sign the counterpart and return it to him. The said agreement is dated June 23, 1958 and is made between the said Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal and the Company and signed on behalf of the Company by the respondent. Under the said agreement the said Mohanlal agreed to repay the advances of about Rs. 33,00,000 by paying a sum of Rs. 10,00,000 within four months of the date of the said agreement and a further sum of Rupees 10,00,000 within a period of 12 months from the date of the said agreement and forthwith to deliver to the Company 5,000 fully paid-up shares of the face value of Rs. 100 each of Storage Batteries with transfer forms duly executed in favour of the Company and to secure transfer and registration of the said shares in the name of the Company and to arrange and secure to the Company a havalala or transfer of a credit of Rupees 7,00,000 which the said Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal declared was due, owing and payable by Storage Batteries to it as and by way of loans and advances. The letter dated June 23, 1958 from the said Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal to Storage Batteries shows that Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal had sold a complete battery manufacturing plant to Storage Batteries for a sum of Rs. 12,00,000. The bill in the said sum of Rs. 12,00,000 was enclosed with the said letter. The said letter records that the said Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal had agreed to accept payment by receiving 4,999 fully paid-up shares of Rs. 100 each of Storage Batteries in the name of the sole proprietor of the said concern, the said Mohanlal, and by a credit for the balance of Rs. 7,00,200 in the books of account of Storage Batteries, carrying interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum. The said letter further records that it was agreed that the said Mohanlal would be invited to join the Board of Directors of Storage Batteries. It is needless to mention that all the shares of Storage Batteries and the plant alleged to be sold by the said Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal to Storage Batteries existed purely in the said letters and the agreement. To lend further verisimilitude to the fraud perpetrated upon the Company the said Mohanlal wrote a letter dated June 26, 1958 purporting to forward along with it 6,000 fully paid-up shares of Storage Batteries. It is equally needless to mention that no such shares were at all forwarded to the Company along with the said letter.

7. On March 10, 1959 a notice of closure on account of the losses suffered by the Company was put up and on April 6, 1959 the mills closed their doors. On April 24, 1959 the Central Government appointed a committee under Section 15 of the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act, 1951, to make an investigation into the circumstances which led to the closure of the Company. On June 25, 1959 all the books and records of the Company, including the books of account and minute-books of the meetings of the Board of Directors, were seized by the police. Several other documents were also seized from the said Mohanlal and from the Bank of Bikaner and others. On July 18, 1959 the Central Government issued a notification under S. 18A of the said Act authorizing one Hanuman Prasad Nevatia to take over the management of the whole of the undertaking, namely, the Model Mills Nagpur Limited, on the ground that it was being managed in a manner highly detrimental to public interest. The authorized controller, Nevatia, thereafter took charge of the management of the Company. In the absence of books of the Company which had been seized by the police, the accountant Dordi prepared provisional statements of account from the last balance-sheet. On March 7, 1960 a charge-sheet was filed by the police inter alia against the respondent. On July 6, 1960 the respondent was adjudicated an insolvent. Two criminal cases, namely, Criminal Cases Nos. 307 of 1962 and 309 of 1962, were registered by the police against the respondent and some others in which the accused were committed to the Court of Session. On Feb. 8, 1963 leave was granted by the Insolvency Judge to the Company to file the suit against the respondent and the suit was filed on Feb. 9, 1963.

8. When the cases against the respondent and the other accused came up for trial before the Court of Session, the respondent pleaded guilty to all the charges and was convicted and sentenced on his plea of guilty. The charges against the respondent and the other accused were entering into a criminal conspiracy with the said Mohanlal and Lakhmichand Daga to commit criminal breaches of trust of the funds of the Company over which the respondent in the way of his business as agent of the Company and in his capacity as director-in-charge or the managing director was entrusted with dominion and committing in pursuance of such criminal conspiracy the acts of criminal breaches of trust charged against the respondent. The other heads of charges set out the specific acts of criminal breaches of trust so committed by the respondent.

9. By a notification dated July 14, 1970 the Maharashtra State Textile Corporation was appointed the authorised controller of the Company in place of the said Nevatia. On Dec. 21, 1974 the Sick Textile Undertakings (Nationalisation) Act, 1974 (No. 57 of 1974), was passed by Parliament replacing an Ordinance which had been promulgated earlier by the President of India. The said Act came into force with retrospective effect from April 1, 1974. The Company is mentioned in item 63 of the First Sch. to the said Act. By reason of the provisions of the said Act the appellants applied for and were by an order dated March 24, 1975 substituted as plaintiffs to the said suit in place of the Company.

10. At the hearing of the suit no evidence whatever, either oral or documentary, was led on behalf of the respondent. The appellants led voluminous evidence to prove each item of defalcation committed by the respondent and pleaded in the plaint except an item of Rupees 38,000. After the evidence was closed and during the course of the arguments learned counsel for the respondent applied for leave to amend the written statement by raising a contention that the appellants were not entitled to maintain the suit as the right to sue had not become vested in them. This application was opposed on behalf of the appellants on the ground that the point sought to be raised by the amendment would, were it upheld, displace the appellants' suit and was taken at a very late stage. By his order made on March 24, 1976 Mr. Justice Vimadalal rejected the said application for amendment but further stated in the said order, "it will, however, be open to Mr. Bharucha (learned counsel for the respondent who appeared at the trial of the suit) to contend that notwithstanding the rejection of the application for amendment the Court should not pass a decree in favour of a party who has no right to maintain the suit". The learned Judge then heard the arguments on the question of maintainability of the suit and came to the conclusion that the appellants had no right to continue the suit inasmuch as the Company's right to sue the respondent had not become vested in them under the provisions of the said Sick Textile Undertaking (Nationalisation) Act. As, however, a complete trial had taken place, the learned Judge proceeded to give his findings on all the issues which had been raised. He held that the appellants had on the facts proved their case but a part of the appellants' claim was barred by the law of limitation. According to the learned Judge, the suit was in substance under Sec. 88 of the Indian Trusts Act, 1882, in respect of which no specific period of limitation had been provided in the old Indian Limitation Act 1908 by which the case was governed and therefore, the residuary Article 120 of the said Act applied. In the plaint postponement of the starting point of limitation had been sought by relying upon Section 18 of the Indian Limitation Act by pleading that the respondent had throughout fraudulently concealed the true facts from the Company and that the Company was by the fraud of the respondent kept from the knowledge of its right to take proceedings to recover the amounts claimed, until some time after March 7, 1970 when the Company for the first time became aware of the true facts. The learned Judge held that Section 18 had no application because all the directors of the Company had knowledge of the fraud committed by the respondent and that the knowledge of the directors was the knowledge of the Company. The learned Judge, therefore, opined that were the suit maintainable he would pass a decree in the sum of Rs. 23,35,600, being the aggregate of the amounts embezzled by the respondent within a period of six years prior to the date of the filing of the suit. It is against this judgment and decree of the trial Court that the present appeal has been preferred.

11. At the hearing of this appeal only two contentions have been urged on behalf of the Respondent, namely, (1) that the right to sue the respondent which the Company possessed had not become vested in the appellants and, therefore, the appellants were not entitled to continue the suit or to have any decree passed in their favour, and (2) that the whole suit was barred by the law of limitation.

12. Turning now to the first point, namely, that of maintainability, before we refer to the relevant sections of the Sick Textile Undertakings (Nationalisation) Act, 1974 (hereinafter for the sake of brevity referred to as "the Act"), we may observe that it is somewhat difficult to understand the order passed by the trial Court on the application for amendment of the written statement made on behalf of the respondent on June 24, 1976. As mentioned earlier, the application for amendment was opposed on the ground that if the application were allowed and the points raised thereby sustained, the appellants' suit would be displaced and that the application was made at too late a stage of the proceedings and, therefore, should not be permitted. The contention on behalf of the appellants was one founded on a principle well settled in law and in respect of which no discussion is necessary. This contention apparently found favour with the learned Judge, for he rejected the application for amendment. It, however, appears from the order passed by the learned Judge that he gave the respondent's counsel liberty to urge this contention orally. We are unable to understand how, if the points sought to be raised by the amendment was one which could not be permitted to be taken in writing, namely, by incorporating it in the written statement, it could be allowed to be taken orally. It is needless to dwell further upon this aspect, because on a perusal of the relevant sections of the Act we find no substance in the contention of non-maintainability of the suit. Cl. (i) of S. 2 of the Act defines a "sick textile undertaking". That definition is in the following terms:

"(j) 'sick textile undertaking' means a textile undertaking, specified in the First Schedule, the management of which has, before the appointed day, been taken over by the Central Government under the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act, 1951, or as the case may be, vested in the Central Government under the Sick Textile Undertakings (Taking Over of Management) Act, 1972;"

It is not disputed that the Company is a "sick textile undertaking" within the meaning of the said cl. (j) of S. 2 of the Act. In fact, as mentioned earlier, it is one of the undertakings mentioned in the First Sch. to the Act. S. 3 of the Act provides as follows:

"3. Acquisition of rights of owners in respect of sick textile undertaking:

(1) On the appointed day, every sick textile undertaking and the right, title and interest of the owner in relation to every such sick textile undertaking shall stand transferred to, and shall vest absolutely in, the Central Government.

(2) Every sick textile undertaking which stands vested in the Central Government by virtue of sub-sec. (1) shall, immediately after it has so vested, stand transferred to, and vested in, the National Textile Corporation."

Clause (h) of S. 2 of the Act defines the term 'owner' as follows:

"(h) 'owner', when used in relation to a sick textile undertaking, means any person or firm who or which is, immediately before the appointed day, the immediate proprietor or lessee or occu-pier of the sick textile undertaking or any part thereof, and in the case of a textile company which is being wound up or the business whereof is being carried on by a liquidator or receiver, includes such liquidator or receiver, and also includes any agent or manager of such owner but does not include any person or body of persons authorised under the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act, 1951, or the Sick Textile Undertakings (Taking Over of Management) Act, 1972, to take over the management of the whole or any part of the sick textile undertaking;"

Thus on April 1, 1974, which was the appointed day, the undertaking, namely, the Company, and the right, title and interest of its owners in relation to such undertaking stood transferred to and were vested absolutely in the Central Government and thereafter stood transferred to and vested in the National Textile Corporation. Under S. 6 (1) the National Textile Corporation may, if it considers it necessary so to do, form subsidiary corporations under the Companies Act, 1956, and register them under that Act and may, by an order in writing, transfer any sick textile undertaking or part thereof to such subsidiary textile corporation, and thereafter such subsidiary corporation becomes substituted for all practical purposes in place of the National Textile Corporation. The Appellants are a subsidiary corporation formed and registered by the National Textile Corporation to whom the sick undertaking of the Company has been transferred. Sub-sec. (1) of Sec. 4 contains an extensive definition of the expression "sick textile undertaking referred to in S. 3". That sub-section is in the following words:

"4. General effect of vesting.

(1) The sick textile undertaking referred to in S. 3 shall be deemed to include all assets, rights, lease-holds, powers, authorities and privileges and all property, movable and immovable, including lands, buildings, workshops, stores, instruments, machinery and equipment, cash balances, cash on hand, reserve funds, investments and book debts and all other rights and interests in, or arising out of, such property as were immediately before the appointed day in the ownership, possession, power or control of the owner of the sick textile undertaking, whether within or outside India, and all books of account, registers and all other documents of whatever nature relating thereto and shall also be deemed to include the liabilities and obligations specified in sub-sec. (2) of S. 5."

It is obvious on a bare reading of sub-sec. (1) of S. 4 that all assets, rights and property of the Company became vested in the Central Government and consequently in the National Textile Corporation and then in the Appellants. Such assets, rights and property included the right to recover from the respondent the moneys of the Company which had been misappropriated and embezzled by the respondent. The trial Court has, however, placed reliance upon sub-sec. (6) of the said S. 4. It, therefore, becomes necessary to reproduce that sub-section. That sub-section is as follows :

"(6) If, on the appointed day, any suit, appeal or other proceeding of whatever nature in relation to any matter specified in sub-sec. (2) of S. 5 in respect of the sick textile undertaking, instituted or preferred by or against the textile company, is pending, the same shall not abate, be discontinued or be, in any way, prejudicially affected by reason of the transfer of the sick textile undertaking or of anything contained in this Act but the suit, appeal or other proceeding may be continued, prosecuted and enforced by or against the National Textile Corporation."

In order to understand sub-sec. (2) of S. 5 it is also necessary to have a look at sub-sec. (1) of S. 5. These two sub-sections provide as follows :

"5. Owner to be liable for certain prior liabilities.

(1) Every liability, other than the liability specified in sub-sec. (2) of the owner of a sick textile undertaking, in respect of any period prior to the appointed day, shall be the liability of such owner and shall be enforceable against him and not against the Central Government or the National Textile Corporation.

(2) Any liability arising in respect of—

(a) loans advanced by the Central Government, or a State Government, or both, to a sick textile undertaking (together with interest due thereon) after the management of such undertaking had been taken over by the Central Government,

(b) amounts advanced to a sick textile undertaking (after the management of such undertaking had been taken over by the Central Government), by the National Textile Corporation or by a State Textile Corporation, or by both, together with interest due thereon,

(c) wages, salaries and other dues of employees of the sick textile undertaking, in respect of any period after the management of such undertaking had been taken over by the Central Government shall, on and from the appointed day, be the liability of the Central Government and shall be discharged, for and on behalf of that Government, by the National Textile Corporation as and when repayment of such loans or amounts becomes due or as and when such wages, salaries or other dues become due and payable."

According to the trial Court, it is only the types of suits mentioned in S. 4 (6) which could be maintained and continued by the National Textile Corporation. In our opinion, sub-sec. (6) of S. 4 was designed for a very different purpose. As will be seen on a perusal of sub-secs. (1) and (2) of S. 5, every liability of the owner of a sick textile undertaking, other than the liability specified in Section 5 (2), in respect of a period prior to April 1, 1974 is to be the liability of such owner and is to be enforceable against him and not against the Central Government or the National Textile Corporation. The only liabilities which could be enforced against the Central Government or the National Textile Corporation are the liabilities set out in sub-sec. (2) of S. 5. These are the liabilities for repayment of loans advanced by the Central or State Government to a sick textile undertaking after the management of such undertaking had been taken over by the Central Government, amounts advanced to the undertaking by the National Textile Corporation or by a State Textile Corporation after the management of such undertaking had been taken over by the Central Government and wages, salaries and other dues of employees of the undertaking in respect of any period after the management of such undertaking had been taken over by the Central Government. Now, the taking over of the management by the Central Government in sub-section (2) of S. 5 refers to taking over the management inter alia under S. 18A of the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act, 1951. Under Sec. 5 (2) the liabilities to repay loans given by the Government or by the National Textile Corporation or a State Textile Corporation after the management of the undertaking was so taken over and to pay the wages and salaries and other dues of employees of the undertaking in respect of a period after the management was so taken over is not to be the liability of the previous owner of the undertaking but is to be the liability of the Central Government and is to be discharged on behalf of that Government by the National Textile Corporation. All other liabilities are, however, to be those of the owner of the undertaking and become enforceable against him and not against the Central Government or the National Textile Corporation. Sub-section (6) of S. 4 was specially enacted to provide that if in respect of a liability mentioned in S. 5 (2) a suit, appeal or other proceeding instituted or preferred by or against the textile company was pending, the same was not to abate or to be discontinued or be in any way prejudicially affected by reason of the transfer of the sick textile undertaking but it could be continued, prosecuted and enforced by or against the National Textile Corporation. Now a question might well arise as to what are the suits of the nature specified in S. 5 (2) which the National Textile Corporation can maintain by reason of the provisions of S. 4 (6) of the Act. It is not possible to categorize all such suits, but a suit that immediately strikes one is a suit for redemption of a mortgage in respect of a secured loan advanced to the sick textile undertaking by the Government. Further, it is pertinent to bear in mind that S. 4 (6) does not speak only of suits. It also speaks of appeals and other proceedings of whatever nature. Thus it may be that a decree might have been passed against the sick textile undertaking in respect of a suit filed against it to enforce one of the liabilities specified in S. 5 (2) and against that decree the sick textile undertaking might have gone in appeal. Such an appeal could be continued by the National Textile Corporation. Other examples would be applications in execution. From this subsection, however, it does not follow that if the sick textile undertaking had assets to recover in respect of which it had filed a suit, the suit could not be continued by the National Textile Corporation. To take an example, supposing a sick textile undertaking owned an immovable property and was wrongfully deprived of the possession of such property by trespass and had filed a suit to recover it, on the appointed day the suit property being an asset of the undertaking would vest forthwith in the Central Government and thereafter immediately vest in the National Textile Corporation and the owner of the undertaking would cease to be the owner of the suit property and would have no right to obtain possession of the said property. If the construction placed by the trial Court upon S. 4 (6) were correct, the result would be startling. The owner of the undertaking could not continue the suit because he is no more the owner of the property. The person in whom the property had become vested, namely, the National Textile Corporation, could not bring itself on the record of the suit because it was not a suit of the type referred to in sub-sec. (2) of S. 5. The astounding result would be that the trespasser would continue to remain in possession of and enjoy for all time the property which belonged to the National Textile Corporation. Neither Parliament could have intended nor the ordinary canon of construction of statutes permit such an interpretation to be placed upon the provisions of the Act above referred to. What we have said with respect to an immovable property would apply equally to recovery of movable property belonging to the undertaking. The trial Court was not right in law in holding that the National Textile Corporation can prosecute only the suits mentioned in S. 5 (2) and not other types of suits. In our opinion, the National Textile Corporation and its subsidiary corporation when any sick textile undertaking is transferred to it is entitled to continue all suits filed by such undertaking to recover any of its assets or properties or to enforce any of its rights. The amount embezzled by the respondent from the funds of the company by perpetrating a fraud upon the Company was the property of the Company and the Company was entitled to have the benefit and advantage of such property restored to it by the respondent who was its managing director and the director-in-charge of the company and thus stood in a fiduciary relation to the Company. The appellants were, therefore, clearly entitled to have themselves substituted on the record of the suit under R. 10 of O. XXII of the Civil P. C., 1908, and to prosecute further the suit and if successful therein to have a decree passed in their favour.

13. We next turn to the question of limitation. The learned Judge has held that the suit was under Sec. 88 of the Indian Trusts Act, 1882 (2 of 1882). The said S. 88 provides as follows :

"88. Advantage gained by fiduciary.—Where a trustee, executor, partner, agent, director of a company, legal adviser, or other person, by availing himself of his character, gains for himself any pecuniary advantage, or where any person so bound enters into any dealings under circumstances in which his own interests are, or may be, adverse to those of such other person and thereby gains for himself a pecuniary advantage, he must hold for the benefit of such other person the advantage so gained."

The section expressly mentions director of a company as being a person bound in a fiduciary capacity to protect the interests of another person, which in the case of the director would be the company of which he is the director. The respondent was not only the managing director but the director-in-charge of the Company. All unknown to the Company, he was also through his nominees the supplier or rather non-supplier of cotton to the Company and the person who received payment in respect of such non-supplies. It was argued before us that the article of the old Limitation Act which would apply would be either Art. 36 or Art. 95 of the First Sch. to that Act, and in either event the entire claim was time-barred. These articles provided as follows :

Mr. Mehta, learned counsel for the respondent, submitted that the acts of the respondent amounted to malfeasance and, therefore, Art. 36 applied to the suit and the period of limitation would be two years from the date when the malfeasance took place. In the alternative, Mr. Mehta submitted that as the plea in the plaint was that of fraud, Art. 95 would apply and the period of limitation would be three years.

14. The appellants have sought to postpone the starting point of limitation by placing reliance upon S. 18 of the Indian Limitation Act. If they are right in this, the period of limitation would not begin to run until the Company obtained knowledge of the fraud, and it would be immaterial whether Art. 95 or Art. 120 applied, because in either event the suit would be in time since it was filed within three years of the date on which according to the plaint the company acquired knowledge of the fraud. If, however, Art. 36 applies, the suit would be barred by limitation, because according to the plaint the company came to learn about the fraud of the respondent more than two years prior to the date of the suit. Turning, therefore, first to Art. 36, the condition for the applicability of Art. 36 is that the malfeasance, misfeasance or nonfeasance must be independent of contract, which is not the case here as will be presently shown. Contentions similar to those taken before us were advanced before a Division Bench of this Court in Govind Narayan v. Rangnath Gopal, ILR 54 Bom 226 : (AIR 1930 Bom 572). In that case the liquidator of a bank filed an application under S. 235 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, to recover from the agents and directors of the bank various sums of money on the ground of breach of trust, negligence and misfeasance, resulting in loss to the bank. It was contended that the said application was barred by the law of limitation. The Division Bench held that neither Art. 36 nor Art. 115 nor Art. 116 of the Limitation Act applied and the application was governed by Art. 120. Marten, C. J., disposed of the contention based upon Article 36 in these words (at pp. 246-7):

	"Description of suit	Period of limitation	Time from which period begins to run

"As regards Art. 36 I feel no difficulty. In my judgment the present claim against the Directors for misfeasance or breach of trust is clearly not 'independent of contract' and consequently Article 36 does not apply. In this respect, therefore, I agree with the view of the Allahabad High Court in In the matter of the Union Bank, Allahabad, Ltd., 47 All 669 : (AIR 1925 All 519), in preference to that expressed by the Lahore High Court in Bhim Singh v. Liquidator, Union Bank of India, ILR 8 Lah 167 : (AIR 1927 Lah 433). I say this because the relations between the Bank and its Directors are in part governed by numerous Articles in the Articles of Association, including their qualification shares and remuneration, and indeed the very indemnity which they are relying in this case. In my opinion these articles constitute part, though not the whole, of a contract between the Company and its Directors."

As we have seen, the respondent was not only a director but the managing director of the Company. Further, he had entered into an agreement dated Dec. 18, 1956 with the Company containing the terms and conditions of his appointment as managing director. Under cl. 2 of the said agreement the respondent had agreed to manage the business and affairs of the Company faithfully, diligently, honestly and to the best of his ability and power. The fraud and breaches of trust committed by the respondent cannot, therefore, be said to be independent of contract. In India Sugar and Refineries Ltd. v. Estate of the late V. Ramalingam, AIR 1953 Mad 694, it was held that Art. 36 contemplates an action for compensation for a wrong in the nature of a tort and that the suit to which that article would apply is a suit for compensation, but if the suit was for the recovery of a particular property or a sum of money as such, then the suit cannot fall within the scope of Art. 36. The case before the Madras High Court was also the case of a director and the sole managing agent of a company who had gained for himself a pecuniary advantage by availing himself of his fiduciary character. The Court held that in view of the nature of the claim made against him, the suit was under S. 88 of the Indian Trusts Act and the only article applicable to such a suit was Art. 120.

15. We are in respectful agreement with what was laid down in the above two cases, and in our opinion the trial Court was right in holding that Art. 120 applied to the suit.

16. The only question which now remains to be considered is whether the appellants were entitled to postpone the starting point of limitation under S. 18 of the Limitation Act, 1908. The said section provided as follows :

"18. Effect of fraud.— Where any person having a right to institute a suit or make an application has, by means of fraud, been kept from the knowledge of such right or of the title on which it is founded, or where any document necessary to establish such right has been fraudulently concealed from him, the time limited for instituting a suit or making an application —

(a) against the person guilty of the fraud or accessory thereto, or

(b) against any person claiming through him otherwise than in good faith and for a valuable consideration, shall be computed from the time when the fraud first became known to the person injuriously affected thereby, or, in the case of the concealed document, when he first had the means of producing it or compelling its production."

The learned Judge, relying upon a decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Rahimbhoy Habibbhoy v. Turner, (1893) 20 Ind App 1 : ILR 17 Bom 341, and a decision of the Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in Biman Chandra v. Promotho Nath, ILR 49 Cal 886 : (AIR 1922 Cal 157), held that it was for the plaintiff to prove in the first instance the circumstances which would prevent the statute from having its ordinary effect and a person who desired to invoke the aid of S. 18 must establish that there had been fraud and by use of such fraud he had been kept from the knowledge of his right to sue. The learned Judge further held that it was only when the initial onus was discharged by the plaintiff that the burden was shifted on the other side to show that the plaintiff had clear and definite knowledge of the transaction beyond the period of limitation and that in that connection it was not sufficient for the defendant to show that the plaintiff had nearly some 'clues' and 'hints' which perhaps might have led to a complete knowledge of the fraud. Applying the above ratio to the facts of this case, the learned Judge held that in view of his finding that the appellants had no right to continue the suit, the fact when the Authorised Controller Newatia acquired knowledge of the alleged fraud was irrelevant, and to have had him examined on commission as the appellants wanted to do both before and at the time of trial by reason of the serious illness of Newatia would have been futile. The learned Judge further held that for the purpose of question of limitation what was relevant was the knowledge of the directors of the Company. The learned Judge further held that the initial fraud had been committed at the time when each individual particular sum of money was fraudulently taken away by the respondent. According to him, the fraud which was committed by holding the said meeting of the Board of Directors on June 19, 1958 was not the initial fraud but was merely a consequential fraud, being a device to cover up the fraud initially practised. The learned Judge further held that the directors of the Company who attended the said meeting held on June 19, 1958 knew that it was a sham meeting and they had, therefore, knowledge of this fraud and their knowledge must be attributed to the Company. On this line of reasoning the learned Judge held that the part of the plaintiffs' claim which was more than 6 years prior to the date of the filing of the suit was barred by the law of limitation. With respect, we are unable to agree with any of the conclusions reached by the learned Judge on this aspect of the case. In holding that because the appellants had no right to continue the suit, the knowledge of the Authorised Controller Nevatia was irrelevant to the question, the learned Judge overlooked the fact that the suit as originally filed was filed by the Company in its own name and not in the name of the appellants, namely, National Textile Corporation (Maharashtra North) Ltd. The learned Judge also overlooked that under the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act, 1951, the entire management of the undertaking, namely, the Company became vested in the Authorised Controller and that after the notification dated July 18, 1959 under S. 18A of the said Act was issued the Company could only act through the Authorised Controller and not through anyone else. Assuming the learned Judge was right in the conclusion on facts which he arrived at, namely, that the directors had knowledge that the meeting held on June 19, 1958 was sham one, the learned Judge overlooked that if knowing this the directors closed their eyes to such fraud and failed to take any steps to recover the property of the Company from the respondent, they thereby became parties to that fraud, and their knowledge of the fraud perpetrated by the respondent could not be attributed to the Company or characterised as knowledge of the Company. The knowledge of the directors of a company is knowledge of the company when it relates to acts which are intra vires the directors. It is no part of the duties or functions of a director to embezzle the funds of the company or to aid and abet a co-director or the managing director in embezzling the funds of the company or to join hands with him in ensuring that such fraud does not come to light. That would be an act on the part of the directors directly contrary to the interests of the company, and in committing such acts the directors would themselves be abusing the fiduciary character which they hold vis-a-vis the company in their capacity as its directors. We must also observe that the two decisions relied upon by the learned Judge have not been correctly appreciated and applied by him to the facts of this case. The facts of the case before the Judicial Committee were that a suit was brought by the Official Assignee in 1887, in which suit it was established that the defendant had received in 1869 upon a voluntary transfer some of the insolvent's assets, had joined and assisted the insolvent in defrauding his creditors and that no disclosure of this fraud was made to the Official Assignee, while the defendant did what he could to prevent the Official Assignee from seeing the accounts of the assets transferred. Dealing with the question of the onus of proof, the Judicial Committee observed (20 Ind App 1 at p. 5: ILR 17 Bom 341 at p. 347):

"Their Lordships consider that when a man has committed a fraud and has got property thereby, it is for him to show that the person injured by his fraud and suing to recover the property has had clear and definite knowledge of those facts which constitute the fraud, at a time which is too remote to allow him to bring the suit. That is attempted in the present case. But their Lordships consider, and in this they agree with both the Courts below, that all that the appellant Rahimbhoy has done is to show that some clues and hints reached the assignee in the year 1881, which perhaps, if vigorously and acutely followed up, might have led to a complete knowledge of the fraud, but that there was no disclosure made which informed the mind of the assignee that the insolvent's estate had been defrauded by Rahimbhoy of these assets in the year 1867." (that being the year in which Rahimbhoy was adjudicated insolvent).

In the Calcutta case referred to by the learned Judge, it was held that S. 18 of the Limitation Act was not precisely identical with the provisions of S. 26 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833, of the United Kingdom which made time run from the date when the fraud was, or with reasonable diligence might have been, first known or discovered. The Full Bench further held that the true position was that when a suit was on the face of it barred, it was for the plaintiff to prove in the first instance the circumstances which would prevent the statute from having its ordinary effect, and if a person who in such circumstances desired to invoke the aid of Section 18, he must establish that there had been fraud and that by means of such fraud he had been kept from the knowledge of his right to sue, or of the title whereon it is founded, and once that was established, the burden was shifted on to the other side to show that the plaintiff had knowledge of the transaction beyond the period of limitation and that such knowledge must be clear and definite knowledge of the facts constituting the particular fraud.

17. The evidence led by the appellants which was not controverted by the respondent clearly establishes that fraud was committed right from the date when the said proprietary concern of Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal was formed up to the end and that the whole thing formed but one integral fraud having as its central object the embezzlement of the funds of the Company by the respondent. In a fraud so conceived, planned and systematically carried out over a period of three years each act is linked with the other and forms part of a continuous chain and must be taken as the components of an integrated whole. In such a case it is not open to the Court to pick up individual acts of fraud and apply to each the period of limitation and say that the period of limitation commenced from the date of the commission of that particular act. Here, there was no question of any initial fraud or any fraud committed to cover up such fraud. The fraud lay in Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal taking away by way of advances moneys from the Company against cotton alleged to be in transit and routing the moneys to the respondent. In the books of the Company these would be shown as advances made to Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal against the cotton said to be in transit. As the cotton was not received by the Company, ultimately a large amount would be outstanding against Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal, but neither in the books of account of the Company nor in any of its other books or papers would it ever appear that the moneys advanced to Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal had gone into the pockets of the respondent. No officer or member of the Company nor even a director, unless he was a privy to the fraud, could have knowledge of this type of fraud practised by the respondent. It was sought to be argued by Mr. Mehta, learned counsel for the respondent, that the Company had knowledge of the fraud because the auditors of the Company had raised certain objections. It was also sought to be argued by Mr. Mehta that the Company had knowledge because the manager of the Company, J. P. Dordi, had written two letters dated Oct. 1, 1958 and May 20, 1958 respectively to the respondent. It was further contended by Mr. Mehta that when the Central Government appointed a Committee to investigate into the closure of the mills, the Central Government came to know about the respondent's fraud and, therefore, the Company must be deemed to have knowledge of the fraud. None of these contentions need detain us long. The auditors' objections related to the Board of Directors allowing the amount due from Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal to remain outstanding and to the failure of the directors to take steps to recover such amount. From this it does not and cannot follow that the auditors knew that the amounts outstanding against Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal had gone into the coffers of the respondent. The theme of both the said letters of Dordi related to the bleak position which faced the mills by reason of paucity of funds, and in each of these two letters Dordi had made an earnest appeal to the respondent to recover the amounts due from Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal. The very fact that the auditors and the manager wanted the directors to recover the outstandings of Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal shows that they were not and could not be aware that these amounts had really been taken away by the respondent. The investigation which was conducted by the Central Government prior to the issue of the notification under S. 18A of the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act, 1951, was for the purposes specified in S. 15 of the said Act. It was not an investigation into the fraud committed by the respondent. The object of the said Act is to provide for the development and regulation of certain industries set out in the First Schedule to the said Act. As a result of the enquiry which was triggered by the closure of the mills, the Central Government came to the conclusion that the undertaking, namely, the Company, was being managed in a manner highly detrimental to the scheduled industry, namely, textile industry, and the management of the Company was vested by the Central Government in the Authorised Controller so that the mills could be revived. The question of the knowledge on the part of the directors of the fraud practised by the respondent is irrelevant. If they were not aware of the fraud practised by the respondent, they themselves were victims of such fraud and dupes of the respondent. If they or any of them knew of the fraud and took no steps with respect thereto, they became privy to the fraud and privy to concealing the knowledge of it from the Company. The question is when was anyone in charge of the management of the Company who was not a party to the fraud came to learn about it. On June 25, 1969 all books, papers, vouchers and documents of the Company, including the books of account and the minute-books of the meeting of the Board of Directors, were seized by the police and continued to remain in the custody of the police. Thereafter on July 18, 1959 Nevatia was appointed Authorised Controller. No books of account or other relevant documents or papers were available to Nevatia, and even had they been available, all that Nevatia would have discovered from them would have been that a large amount was due to the Company from Messrs. Harakchand Mohanlal. That the respondent had committed criminal breach of trust in respect of the property of the Company and for the purpose of the commission of such fraud had entered into a criminal conspiracy came to light only when a copy of the charge-sheet which was filed by the police came to the knowledge of the Authorised Controller Nevatia. The charge-sheet was filed in Court on March 7, 1960 and a copy of it was forwarded to the Company and was received on March 11, 1960 by the said Desai who, after the issue of the notification under S. 18A of the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act, was appointed by Nevatia as his secretary. Desai thereafter forwarded the said copy to Nevatia, who thereupon discovered the fraud committed by the respondent. We do not have on record the date when Nevatia received the said copy of the charge-sheet, but in no event could it have been prior to March 11, 1960 when Desai himself received the said copy. The period of limitation must, therefore, be taken to have commenced on March 11, 1960. The suit having been filed on Feb. 9, 1963 was, therefore, well within time, whether Art. 120 or Article 95 applied. On this finding, the entire claim of the appellants would be in time, and in view of what we have held earlier that the appellants were entitled to continue the suit, a decree should have been passed in favour of the appellants in the sum claimed by them less a sum of Rs. 38,000 in respect of which there was no evidence and which position has been accepted by Mr. Chitoy. learned counsel for the appellants. This appeal must, therefore, succeed.

18. In the result, we allow this appeal, set aside the judgment and decree appealed against and in place of the decree passed by the trial Court, we pass in favour of the appellants and against the respondent a decree in the sum of Rs. 35,17,600 with interest thereon at the rate of 6 per cent per annum from Feb. 11, 1963 up to the date of the judgment, namely, July 21, 1982, and thereafter at the rate of 4 per cent per annum till payment or realization, that being the interest on the principal amount claimed by the appellants after giving up interest on the principal sum prior to the date of the suit. The respondent will also pay to the appellants the costs throughout.

19. So far as the costs of the suit are concerned, the suit was filed and disposed of much prior to Jan 1, 1977, when the dual system was abolished, and the bill of costs of the then attorneys for the appellants would be required to be taxed by the Taxing Master of this Court. In view, however, of the long pendency both of the suit and the appeal, Mr. Chinoy, learned counsel for the appellants, has applied that the Court itself should tax the bill of costs. Several factors have to be borne in mind in taxing the bill of costs of this suit. They are the elaborate evidence which was required to be led in respect of each item in the account of the said Messrs Harakchand Mohanlal, linking such item with the particular voucher, invoice, hundi and the respondent's bank account, the voluminous nature of such evidence produced at the trial, the fact that until the appellants' evidence closed, the appellants could not be aware whether the respondent was going to step into the witness-box or not and whether he was going to lead any evidence or not, and the fact that in his written statement the respondent had denied fraud and had denied that he had misappropriated any money whatever from the funds of the Company, the labour which attorneys and counsel would have had to put in for the preparation of the case, the time which was taken for proving each of the above documents, the number of days which the hearing lasted and the number of days which were taken in the benesse examination of the said Mohanlal. Taking into consideration all these factors and the out-of-pocket-expenses incurred, we fix the costs of the suit, including the out-of-pocket-expenses and the instructions item, at Rs. 1,26,000. So far as the costs of the appeal are concerned, under R. 503 of the Rules of the High Court of Judicature at Bombay (Original Side), 1980, the Court will have to quantify the amount of such costs after taking into consideration the work done through attorneys prior to Jan. 1, 1977. This appeal was filed on Nov. 5, 1978. We have seen the various items of expenditure, including the amount of the Court-fees paid by the appellants, and such out-of-pocket-expenses come to Rs. 25,000. According to the present scale of taxation, the advocates' fees would be Rs. 23,550. This, together with the out-of-pocket-expenses, would aggregate to Rs. 48,550. Bearing this in mind and the work which would have been done by the attorneys in filing this appeal, we quantify the costs of this appeal at Rs. 55,000.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1982 BOMBAY 553

DESHPANDE, C. J. AND REGE, J.

Empire Industries Ltd. and another, Petitioners v. M. C. Subarna and others, Respondents.

Misc. Petns. Nos. 677, 692, 725, 726, 814, 822, 1039 and 747 of 1977, D/- 16-1-1981.

(A) Essential Commodities Act (1955), Section 3 — Cotton Textiles (Control) Order (1948), Clause 20 and Notification No. CER/24/77 dated 15-4-1977 issued thereunder — Vires — Said clause and notification are not ultra vires the powers conferred under Section 3 of the Act.

Clause 20 of the Cotton Textiles (Control) Order, 1948, cannot be said to be beyond the scope of powers conferred on the Joint Textile Commissioner under Section 3 of the Act of 1955. It is clear that the Order and Notification No. CER/24/77 dated 15-4-1977 issued thereunder is intended to protect essentially the hand printers. This work provides employment to a large number of hand printers residing in villages and the impugned Notification seeks to protect this village industry. Hand printed saris are very much in demand in rural area. The hand printed cloth is thus one of the essential supplies for the rural community. Section 3 of the Act of 1955 aims amongst others at ensuring maintenance of essential supplies. The impugned Notification seeks to ensure the supply of hand printed cloth so needed particularly in villages. It thus carries out the object of Section 3 of the Act of 1955. It cannot be said to be ultra vires of the powers conferred under Section 3 of the said Act. Judgment D/- 10-10-1978 in Spl. Civil Appls. 2732 of 1977 and 93 of 1978 (Bom) and Judgment dated 12th and 13th Nov., 1968 in Misc. Petn. No. 274 of 1968 (Bom), Rel. on. (Para 9)

(B) Constitution of India, Art. 19 (1) (g) — Cotton Textiles (Control) Order (1948), Cl. 20 — Notification No. CER/24/77 dated 15-4-1977 issued under — Validity — Notification prohibiting printing of powerloom produced cloth — Is not violative of Art. 19.

IZ/IZ/D975/82/HR/RSK

The contention that Notification No. CER/24/77 dated 15-4-77 issued under Cl. 20 of the Cotton Textiles (Control) Order, 1948, is violative of Article 19 (1) (g) is without any force. It is true that the Notification does not prohibit printing with the aid of power on the hand-made cloth. In other words, prohibition is not absolute but is restricted against printing the powerloom produced cloth. But this by itself cannot affect the validity. Even the limited prohibition is enough to subserve the underlying purpose. The remote possibility of handloom cloth being printed with the aid of the power appears to be the basis of this limited prohibition. It is also consistent with the restriction being limited to the need of the situation to avoid the possible breach of Art. 19 of the Constitution. Judgment D/- 10-10-1978 in Spl. Civil Appns. Nos. 2732 of 1977 and 93 of 1978 (Bom) and Judgment D/- 12th and 13th Nov., 1968 in Misc. Petn. No. 274 of 1968 (Bom), Rel. on.

(C) Constitution of India, Article 14 — Cotton Textiles (Control) Order (1948), Cl. 20 and Notification No. CER/24/77 dated 15-4-1977 issued thereunder — Validity — Power conferred on the authorities by Cl. 20 of said order and provisions of Notification — Are not uncanalised or unguided as to be violative of Article 14. Judgment D/- 10-10-1978 Spl. Civil. Appns. Nos. 2732 of 1977 and 93 of 1978 (Bom) and Judgment D/- 12th and 13th Nov., 1968 in Misc. Petn. No. 274 of 1968 (Bom), Rel. on. (Para 10)

(D) Constitution of India, Art. 14 — Cotton Textiles (Control) Order (1948), Cl. 20 — Notification No. CER/24/77 dated 15-4-1977 issued under — Validity — Notification differentiating between hand printers and printers with the aid of power — Is not discriminatory and violative of Art. 14.

The classification between hand printers and printers with the aid of power made under Notification No. CER/24/77 dt. 15-4-1977 issued under Cl. 20 of the Cotton Textiles (Control) Order, 1948, is based on intelligible differentia and the said classification is aimed at ensuring protection of the village industries so essential for the development of village economy. Therefore, the notification cannot be said to be violative of Article 14. (Para 10) portunity of hearing to adversely affected persons — Is not violative of principles of natural justice.

The contention that Notification No. CER/24/77 dated 15-4-1977 issued under Cl. 20 of the Cotton Textiles (Control) Order, 1948, is violative of rules of natural justice on the ground that the same was issued without giving any opportunity of hearing to the class of persons who were thereby affected adversely is devoid of any substance. The question of giving hearing to a class of persons does not arise where the Government is required to do something to implement its policies. Policy decisions of the Government fall in a different class altogether and are distinct from the administrative Order of the Government affecting the citizens of the country. (Para 10)

P. L. Nain, for Petitioners; C. J. Shah with M. I. Sethna, for Respondents.

DESHPANDE, C. J.:— These seven Miscellaneous Petitions along with Miscellaneous Petn. No. 747 of 1977 were referred to a Division Bench, in view of the complexity of the questions involved therein, by a learned single Judge at the time of granting rule itself. When these petitions were taken up for hearing Mr. Nain, the learned Advocate appearing for the petitioners, stated that he wanted to withdraw Miscellaneous Petition No. 747 of 1977. We accordingly allowed Mr. Nain to withdraw the said petition. The surviving seven petitions involved the same points of law and can, therefore, be conveniently disposed of by this common judgment.

2. It is necessary to refer to certain background to appreciate the contentions raised by Mr. Nain before us in these petitions. All the petitioners are processors. They print cloth with the aid of power. The petitioners challenge the validity of Notification No. CER/24/77 issued by the Joint Textile Commissioner on 15th Aprl., 1977. The said Notification is issued by the Joint Textile Commissioner in exercise of the powers conferred on him under Cl. 20 of the Cotton Textiles (Control) Order of 1948 (hereinafter referred to as "the Order"). The said Order, in turn, is promulgated under Section 3 of the Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act, 1946 (hereinafter referred to as "the Act"). The said Act was repealed with effect from 25th Jan., 1955 firstly by the Essential Commodities Ordinance of 1955 and subsequently by the Essential Commodities Act of 1955, which became effective from 1st Apr., 1955. The Ordinance saved the Orders passed earlier under the said Act while the Essential Commodities Act of 1955 (hereinafter referred to as "the Act of 1955") saved the said Orders as if the same have been made or issued under the provisions of the Act of 1955.

3. Before the present Notification dated 15th Apr., 1977, two Notifications were issued by the Deputy Textile Commissioner on 22nd Dec., 1966 and 12th Apr., 1967. The language of the impugned Notification dated 15th Apr., 1977 is substantially identical with that of the Notification dated 12th Apr., 1967. The alterations and modifications therein are not really relevant to the points that are raised by Mr. Nain in these petitions. The validity of the Notification dated 12th Apr., 1967 was challenged earlier in this Court by several petitioners in their petitions. One of the said petitions i.e. Miscellaneous Petition No. 274 of 1968, was disposed of by Tulzapurkar J. (as he then was) sitting as a single Judge on the Original Side of this Court, by his judgment dated 12th and 13th Nov., 1968. Appeal No. 6 of 1969 came up for hearing before us on 5th Jan., 1981.

4. The very same Notification was also challenged by some petitioners in the Gujarat High Court in Special Civil Application No. 1346 of 1969. The learned Judges of the Gujarat High Court did not deal with the several points raised in the petition as two points out of them appeared to them to be sufficient to dispose of the said petition. The Gujarat High Court quashed the said Notification firstly on the ground that the Notification dated 12th Apr., 1967 did not indicate any period during which the said Notification was to remain in operation, though prescribing of such period was necessary under Clause 20 of the said Order and secondly on the ground that what the petitioners before the Court were printing were not saris at all. The Union Government preferred an appeal against the said judgment of the Gujarat High Court before the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court upheld the judgment of the Gujarat High Court on the point that omission to prescribe such period in the said Notification was fatal to the validity thereof. The Supreme Court did not feel it necessary to go into the correctness of the other point decided by the Gujarat High Court. This judgment of the Supreme Court is reported in the case of Textile Commr. v. Sagar Textile Mills (P.) Ltd. (AIR 1977 SC 1516). Following the said judgment of the Supreme Court, we allowed the said Appeal No. 6/69 upholding the same point raised by the petitioners in the said appeal.

5. It is after the said judgment of the Supreme Court that the Joint Textile Commissioner issued the impugned Notification. The Notification makes it clear that the same will remain in operation up to 31st March, 1982. The defect with which the earlier Notification dated 12th Apr., 1967 was found to have suffered thus is now eliminated in this fresh Notification impugned in these petitions. The validity of this Notification, however, is challenged in all these petitions on several other grounds.

6. Mr. Nain raised the following points, in support of the alleged invalidity of the Notification :

(1) The Clause 20 of the said Order is ultra vires of the powers conferred on the Joint Textile Commissioner under Section 3 of the Act of 1955 under which the said Order is deemed to have been issued;

(2) The said Clause 20 cannot be said to have been saved by the provisions of the Act of 1955, as the provisions of the said clause are inconsistent with the provisions of the Act of 1955.

(3) The provisions of Clause 20 of the said Order as also the impugned Notification place unreasonable restrictions on the fundamental rights of citizens, to carry on business, guaranteed under Art. 19 (1) (g) of the Constitution of India.

(4) The impugned Notification is violative of Article 14 of the Constitution, in that it discriminates the printers by machine and favours hand printers without any rational basis.

(5) The impugned Notification is violative of principles of natural justice as the same was issued without giving any opportunity to the class of persons who are thereby affected adversely.

(6) The petitioners did not print saris but merely rolls of cloth and as such the impugned Notification is not applicable to them.

7. Coming first to the last point, Mr. Nain strongly relied on the judgment of a Division Bench of the Gujarat High Court dated 4th Aug., 1971 referred to above. The Gujarat High Court did hold that the petitioners before it were not printing saris and as such the Notification dated 12th April, 1967 did not apply to them. The question whether the petitioners herein print saris or merely rolls of cloth is purely a question of fact and the answer depends on what is pleaded in this behalf. Our attention was drawn by Mr. Nain not to any detailed averments in support of this contention but only to ground (1) of para 16 of the petition. This ground was introduced by amending the petition with the leave of the Court. The averments merely disclose how the printing is made on the cloth lengthwise. These do not disclose the instructions under which printing is done or the terms of the contract of the printing or in what manner widthwise printing is effected on the cloth. In the absence of these details it is difficult for us to decide whether the petitioners print saris or merely rolls of cloth. We are also unable to see how any occasion is furnished to the petitioners for challenging the Notification in question, if, in fact, the processes carried on at their workshop do not involve printing of saris which alone is prohibited under Clause (3) of the impugned Notification. No action is taken by the authorities against the petitioners for printing such saris. On the scanty material before us, we do not think it safe to record any finding on this point raised by the petitioners.

8. The averments in the petition also do not show in what manner the Notification or the Order is in conflict with the provisions of the Act of 1955. It cannot, therefore, be said that the Order is not saved under the Act of 1955.

9. Each of the remaining four points raised by Mr. Nain before us is covered by a Division Bench judgment of this Court consisting of Dharmadhikari and Kurdukar, JJ. delivered in Spl. Civil Appns. No. 2732 of 1977 and 93 of 1978 on 10th Oct., 1978. The contentions to the same effect raised by the learned Advocate for the petitioners in these cases have been expressly overruled by the Division Bench. We are unable to see any reason why we should differ from the view taken by the Division Bench in the above case. The same points have also been overruled by Tulzapurkar J. in his judgment dated 12th and 13th Nov., 1968 in the case referred to above. The contention that Clause 20 of the said Order is beyond the scope of powers conferred on the Joint Textile Commissioner under S. 3 of the Act of 1955 is held to have been without substance. It is clear that the Order and the impugned Notification issued thereunder is intended to protect essentially the hand printers. This work provides employment to a large number of hand printers residing in villages and the impugned Notification seeks to protect this village industry. Hand printed saris are very much in demand in rural areas. The hand printed cloth is thus one of the essential supplies for the rural community. Section 3 of the Act of 1955 aims amongst others at ensuring maintenance of essential supplies. The impugned Notification seeks to ensure the supply of hand printed cloth so needed particularly in villages. It thus carries out the object of Section 3 of the Act of 1955. It cannot be said to be ultra vires of the powers conferred under Section 3 of the said Act.

10. While overruling the contentions as to the impugned Notification being violative of Articles 19 and 14 of the Constitution, Dharmadhikari J. and Tulzapurkar J. have in their judgments traced the genesis of the Order and the Notification issued thereunder including the one impugned before us. The learned Judges in their elaborate judgments have indicated how protection to village industries and to a large number of hand printers is essential to the smooth functioning of our village economy. In their judgment both the learned Judges have extensively referred to the reports of various Committees constituted by the Government of India for the purpose of ascertaining as to what extent these industries can be developed and what protection is called for in the interests of village community. The contention as to the impugned Notification being violative of Article 19 (1) (g) of the Constitution has been overruled in both these cases, and we are unable to see any good reason to take a different view of the matter. The contention as to violation of Article 14 of the Constitution is equally misconceived. The contention that Clause 20 of the said Order and the provisions of the impugned Notification confer uncanalised or unguided powers on the authorities has been held to be devoid of any substance. Similarly, the classification between hand printers and printers with the aid of power, appears to us to have been based on intelligible differentia and the said classification is aimed at ensuring protection of the village industries so essential for the development of village economy. The contention as to the impugned Notification being violative of the principles of natural justice appears to us to be equally devoid of any substance. It is well settled that the question of giving hearing to a class of persons does not arise where the Government is required to do something to implement its policies.

Policy decisions of the Government falls in different class altogether and are distinct from the administrative Order of the Government affecting the citizens of the country.

11. It is true that the Notification does not prohibit printing with the aid of power on the hand-made cloth. In other words, prohibition is not absolute but is restricted against printing the powerloom produced cloth. But this by itself cannot affect the validity. Even the limited prohibition is enough to subserve the underlying purpose. The remote possibility of handloom cloth being printed with the aid of the power appears to be the basis of this limited prohibition. It is also consistent with the restriction being limited to the need of the situation to avoid the possible breach of Art. 19 of the Constitution.

12. Mr. Nain contends that the provisions of the impugned Notification go to impose restrictions on the petitioners in the matter of printing cloth with the aid of power. It was obligatory on the Joint Textile Commissioner to find out what the situation exactly in this behalf was in the year 1977 when the Notification is issued afresh. Reliance by the Joint Textile Commissioner on the situation, as was existing in 1965 or when the reports of Shreeraman Committee and Ashok Mehta Committee were made, was not sufficient, so contends Mr. Nain, to make the restrictions reasonable. Now, it is true that the original Notifications issued in the year 1966 were based on the reports of several of those Committees. The affidavit filed on behalf of the respondents does not expressly indicate that the Government had made any attempt to review the position in this behalf afresh at the time when the impugned Notification of 1977 was issued. The affidavit further makes it clear that implementation of the Notifications issued in the year 1966 was virtually stayed because of the challenge to them in several Courts and therefore fresh notification had become necessary. This creates an impression as if the situation as in existence in 1966 alone is relied on. But the affidavit also avers that the situation as it existed at the time of issuing of the said Notifications in 1966 continued to exist even till this day. We have no material to doubt this and justify our taking a different view from the one indicated in the affidavit filed on behalf of the respondents. The contention thus is untenable.

13. Before we close, it is necessary to notice how measures initiated to meet the urgent and crying needs of the society get bogged down due to sheer indifference or incapacity of the department to adjust its pursuit with the requirements of the rule of law. As such measures affect the vested interests, challenges to them in the Court are inevitable. Every citizen has a right to get the validity of such measures tested by judicial reviews in the High Court and the High Court has a duty to examine and pronounce its views on the challenges, hurled against them. The authors of the measures and the administration have to be vigilant and pursue the challenges in the Court vigilantly and defend or rectify the same if found necessary in time. The original Notification dated 12th Aprl., 1967 is struck down by the Gujarat High Court on 4th August, 1971, because the period for its operation was not indicated in the Order. The judgment of the Supreme Court dated 27th Jan., 1977 in Textile Commissioner v. Sagar Textile Mills (AIR 1977 SC 1516), approving this view, does not show that Government had any answer to the defect discovered by the Gujarat High Court. Why the Government wasted so many years and did not remove the defect discovered from 4th Aug., 1971 to 15th Aprl., 1977 passes one's imagination when the measures are claimed to be so essential.

14. When the said Notification was challenged in this case, admission Court was cautious enough on 30th June, 1977 in expediting the hearing and directing Government to file affidavit in reply within four weeks. The Government filed its affidavit in reply on 9th January, 1981 and thus itself prevented early disposal of this petition. Mr. Shah, the learned counsel for the Government, could not explain why no affidavit in reply was filed within four weeks and why opportunity to have the matter disposed of immediately was not availed of. In fact another Division Bench upheld the validity of the Notification on Aug., 1978. Government slept over the matter for two years without any move. Judicial process thus comes into disrepute due to sheer negligence and inaction of the Government.

15. In the result, the petitions are liable to be rejected. Rules accordingly discharged in all the petitions. There will be no order as to costs in all the petitions.

16. Mr. Nain applies for leave to appeal to the Supreme Court under Art. 133 of the Constitution of India. Leave refused.

Petitions dismissed.

AIR 1982 BOMBAY 558

WAIKAR, J.

Taj Mohammad and others, Applicants v. Agricultural Produce Market Committee, Nagpur, Non-Applicant.

Civil Revn. Appns. Nos. 818 and 819 of 1980 and C. R. As. Nos. 2 to 12 of 1981, D/-28-1-1981.

Maharashtra Agricultural Produce Marketing (Regulation) Act (20 of 1964), Ss. 29, 46 — Maharashtra Agricultural Produce Marketing (Regulation) Rules (1967), Rr. 7 (4), 120 (e) — Agricultural Produce Market Committee — Power to file civil suits — Committee filing civil suits restraining persons from encroaching its statutory right — Mere remedy of criminal prosecution provided under Section 46 — Jurisdiction of Civil Court would not be barred — Committee would be justified in moving Civil Court. (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9, O. 39, R. 1).

Where an Agricultural Produce Market Committee had filed separate civil suits restraining the certain persons who had no valid licence from working as commission agents within the market area and restraining the rest of certain persons from recovering the commission from the cultivators in excess of the rate prescribed under the licences, the Committee would not be said to be unjustified in moving the Civil Court for issue of a writ of temporary injunction against such persons when the Committee wanted to prevent such persons from encroaching upon its statutory right to regulate the marketing of agricultural and other produce in the market areas, for the proper and efficacious enforcement of which, the criminal prosecution as provided under Section 46 could not be a remedy. Therefore, merely because the statute provides for a remedy at criminal law, the jurisdiction of the Civil Court would not be barred by necessary implication. Case law discussed.

Further, the jurisdiction of the Civil Court would not be ousted either expressly or by necessary intendment, as the Committee is endowed with certain monopoly powers for regulating the marketing of agricultural produce within the specified market areas. It is also charged with a duty to enforce the provisions of the Act. The conferral of such plenary powers and right, though by a statute, certainly constitutes a civil right in the Committee, and merely because penal consequences are provided for that, by itself, would not deprive the Committee of its civil right to seek enforcement of the provisions of the Act or to prevent breach or infringement of its civil right. Therefore so far as the Commission agents who were acting in flagrant violation of the terms of the licence and trying to fleece the poor agriculturists were concerned, the Committee would be entitled to ask the issue of a writ of temporary injunction to prevent the breach of the terms of the licence by which those persons had bound themselves. M. G. Bhangde, for Applicants; K. H. Deshpande, for Non-Applicant in all C. R. Applications.

ORDER:— This judgment shall dispose of Civil Revision Applications Nos. 818 and 819 of 1980 and Civil Revision Applications Nos. 2 to 12 of 1981.

2. The non-applicant (original plaintiff), namely Agricultural Produce Market Committee, Nagpur, is common in all these revision applications. This non-applicant had filed separate suits against each of these applicants for perpetual injunction and had applied for a writ of temporary injunction. The trial Court rejected these applications, but the first appellate Court allowed them and hence these revisions by the original defendants. As common question of law and fact was involved in all these matters, the trial Court as well as the first appellate Court also disposed of these applications for temporary injunction by common judgment.

3. The Non-applicant Agricultural Produce Market Committee (hereinafter called the Committee) was duly established under Section 11 of the Maharashtra Agricultural Produce Marketing (Regulation) Act, 1963 (hereafter called the Act). The present revisions fall in two categories. Four revision applications Nos. 5, 10, 11 and 12 fall in one category, in that the applicants in these revision applications admittedly have been operating as commission agents in the market area, without any valid licence. The applicants in the rest of the revisions, no doubt, hold a valid licence as Adtiyas or Commission Agents, but admittedly again they have been recovering the commission from the agriculturists at a higher rate of 6 per cent in contravention of the terms of their licences.

4. The non-applicant-Committee, therefore, filed separate suits restraining the first four applicants from working as Commission Agents within the market area and restraining the rest of the applicants from recovering the commission from the cultivators in excess of the rate prescribed under the licences.

5. The applications made by the Committee for temporary injunction were all dismissed by the trial Court holding that the plaintiff-Committee has no locus standi or right to file the civil suits as Section 46 of the Act provides for a penalty.

6. In the appeals preferred by plaintiff-Committee, the first appellate Court found that the plaintiff-Committee had made out a prima facie case that the Civil Court has jurisdiction to entertain the suits and to issue injunction and allowed the applications of the plaintiff.

7. In these revisions preferred by the original defendants, Shri Bhangde, the learned counsel, submitted that Section 6 of the Act itself enacts a prohibition and an injunction against all persons not to operate without licence or in violation of the terms of the licence issued. Thus this statutory provision itself operates (as) an injunction against such persons and the first appellate Court by granting temporary injunction against these applicants in a way only re-enacted the provisions of Section 6 of the Act. He further submitted that there could be no injunction to prevent the breach of any provision of law. In other words, what was complained of was prevention of a public wrong and there was no infringement of any private right. The Committee, according to him, receives cess from the purchasers and if these applicants are charging more commission from the cultivators, or are operating as Commission Agents within the market area without licences, there is no damage or loss to the Committee. The alleged conduct of the applicants, therefore, does not entail in civil wrong to the Committee. His further argument is that the Act itself is a self-contained code creating rights and liabilities and also providing remedies in case of breach of the provisions of the said Act. He also submitted that grant of a licence by the committee in favour of an applicant does not constitute a contract and as such the provisions of O. 39, R. 2 of the Civil P. C. dealing with cases of breach of contract can have no application. So far as cases of those who are operating without a licence, there is no question of any contract at all, or of breach of any contract. Thus, according to him, neither the provisions of R. 1 or R. 2 of O. 39 of the Civil P. C. are attracted. He relied upon several authorities which would be referred to in due course.

8. Shri K. H. Deshpande, the learned counsel appearing for the non-applicant-Committee, submitted that the object of the Act is to regulate the marketing of agricultural produce in market areas and to confer powers upon market committees to be constituted for the purposes connected with such markets. The various provisions of the Act, he submitted, make it clear that the Market Committee is endowed with certain powers and is also enjoined certain duties to enforce the provisions of the Act for the above purposes. He submitted that if the Market Committee cannot take steps to prevent violation of its monopoly rights, the object of investing the Committee with such powers would be defeated. He submitted that there is no doubt a remedy in Criminal Law as provided by Section 46 of the Act, but there is no provision in the Act itself to prevent recurrence of such acts. Again there is no provision in the Act which ousts the jurisdiction of the Civil Court, either expressly or by necessary implication. The Act in that sense, therefore, cannot be said to be a self-contained Code as to oust the jurisdiction of the Court. The impugned conduct of the applicants, he submitted, constituted a wrong, in that they had directly infringed the right that is conferred on the Committee and in the absence of any such provision in the Act itself, expressly or by necessary implication ousting the jurisdiction of the Civil Court, the plaintiff could file a civil suit in vindication of such civil right.

9. The crux of the matter is whether the Committee has or has no civil right under the provisions of this Act, and whether these civil suits that are filed are in vindication of a civil right, or only for enforcing the penal provisions of Section 46 of the Act and as such barred.

10. To begin with, I may refer to certain provision of the Act. Firstly, the object of the Act, as can be seen, is to regulate the marketing of agricultural and certain other produce in market areas and to establish markets therefor in the State and to confer powers on the Market Committee to be constituted in connection with or acting for purposes connected with such markets. Section 6 of the Act which deals with regulation of marketing of agricultural produce prohibits or injuncts any person from operating in the market area as a trader or commission agent, or a broker without any licence or otherwise than in conformity with the terms of the licence. Section 11 then refers to establishment of Market Committees and says that the Market Committee so established shall have all such powers and discharge all such functions as are vested in it by or under the Act. Section 12 says that every Market Committee shall be a body corporate and shall have perpetual succession and a common seal and may in its corporate name sue or be sued and shall be competent to contract, acquire and hold property and do all other things necessary for the purposes for which it is established. Section 29 deals with the powers and duties of a Market Committee and sub-cl. (k) of sub-section (2) of Section 29 is in these words :

"29 (2) (k) enforce the provisions of this Act and rules, bye-laws and conditions of the licences granted under this Act;"

Section 46 provides penalty for contravention of the provisions of Section 6. Thus a person operating without any licence or acting in contravention of the terms of the licence is no doubt liable for criminal prosecution and for punishment as is prescribed under this section.

11. Rule 7 (4) of the Maharashtra Agricultural Produce Marketing (Regulation) Rules, 1967 is in these terms :

"7. (4). The applicant, on a licence being granted, shall execute an agreement in such form as may be approved by the Director or under the bye-laws, agreeing to abide by the provisions of the Act, these rules and the bye-laws."

Rule 120 (e) empowers a Committee to make bye-laws in respect of the form of an application for grant and renewal of a licence and an agreement to be executed before the grant of a licence. Under the prescribed form of the agreement a licensee has to give an undertaking that he would abide by and observe the conditions and terms of the licence. It is thus clear that the Committee is not only endowed with certain power but charged with a duty to enforce the provisions of this Act. The Committee is thus constituted the sole authority to regulate the marketing of the agricultural produce in market areas and the persons who are granted the licence to operate as commission agents or brokers or traders are also bound to act in accordance with the terms thereof. Section 46, no doubt, prescribes penal consequences for a person who uses any place in market area for marketing agricultural produce, or operates as a trader or a commission agent without any valid licence, but that would not necessarily mean that no civil action can, therefore, lie. The answer to the question whether an action in a Civil Court for an injunction can lie or not depends on a proper answer to the question whether the plaintiff has or has no civil right and not by pointing out to the penal provision as contained in Section 46 of the Act. Existence of a penal provision rendering certain acts punishable under the criminal law does not necessarily imply negation of a civil liability, for it is well known that a certain act may give rise to a criminal action and at the time to an actionable civil wrong.

12. In Gouriet v. Union of Post Office Workers (1977-3 All ER 70), which was relied upon by Shri Bhangde, an action was commenced by a citizen seeking an injunction as the Union of the Post Office Workers had resolved not to accept mail from England to South Africa from a particular date. Though such an action was punishable, the Attorney General took no steps and the question posed was if the Attorney General does not act himself, "Are the Courts to stand idly by?" as such suggesting impliedly that the Civil Courts have some executive authority in relation to the criminal law. The injunction prayed for was refused as it was an offence against the public and no remedy was provided for enforcement of the public wrong. Though this ruling has no application to the facts of the present case, the following observations of Lord Diplock are, however, relevant and apposite :

"The second reason why they are important is that they are relevant to the distinction between an injunction in restraint of crime simpliciter and an injunction to restrain conduct which although amounting to a crime would also infringe some right belonging to the plaintiff who is applying for the injunction which is enforceable by him in private law. The supersession of private revenge for wrongs by remedies obtainable from Courts of justice and enforceable by the executive authority of the State lies at the common origin both of the criminal law and of the civil private law of tort. So from the outset there have been many crimes which at common law were private wrongs to the person who suffered particular damage from them as well as public wrongs; and the policy of the law has been not to deprive the victim of a private wrong of his redress in civil private law against the wrong-doer merely because the wrong-doer is subject also to punitive sanctions under the criminal law for the same conduct, ...

13. Next ruling Rohtas Industries Ltd. v. Rohtas Industries Staff Union (AIR 1976 SC 425) that was relied upon by Shri Bhangde was a decision under the Industrial Disputes Act. There was a strike and the terms of the agreement inter alia provided that the employees' claim for wages and salaries for the period of strike and the Company's claim for compensation for losses due to strike shall be submitted to the Arbitrators. The award that was passed said that the workmen were not entitled to wages and salaries, but the Company was found entitled to recover from the striking workmen the compensation assessed at Rs. 80,000/-. As the strike was held illegal and the Industrial Disputes Act nowhere provided payment of compensation to the employer, the award, as the Supreme Court held, could not be enforced with these observations (para 27):

"It is common case that the demands covered by the strike and the wages during the period of the strike constitute an industrial dispute within the sense of S. 2 (k) of the Act. Section 23, read with S. 24, it is agreed by both sides, make the strike in question illegal. An 'illegal strike' is a creation of the Act. As we have pointed out earlier, the compensation claimed and awarded is a direct reparation for the loss of profits of the employer caused by the illegal strike. If so, it is contended by the respondents, the remedy for the illegal strike and its fall-out has to be sought within the statute and not dehors it. If this stand of the workers is right, the remedy indicated in S. 26 of the Act, viz, prosecution for starting and continuing an illegal strike, is the designated statutory remedy. No other relief outside the Act can be claimed on general principles of jurisprudence. The result is that the relief of compensation by proceedings in arbitration is contrary to law and bad."

14. Relying upon The Premier Automobiles Ltd. v. Kamalakar Shantaram Wadke (AIR 1975 SC 2238) Shri Bhangde submitted that where the statute creates a liability not existing at common law, and gives also a particular remedy for enforcing it, the party must adopt the form of remedy given by the statute and the jurisdiction of the Civil Court is impliedly barred. This was again a case under the Industrial Disputes Act and it was observed that the object of the Act, as its preamble indicates, is to make provision for the investigation and settlement of industrial disputes, which means adjudication of such disputes also. The Act envisages collective bargaining, contracts between Union representing the workmen and the management, a matter which is outside the realm of the common law or the Indian law of contract. Thus having observed that the powers of the authorities deciding industrial disputes under the Act were very extensive — much wider than the powers of a Civil Court while adjudicating a dispute which may be industrial dispute, the party must adopt the form of remedy given under the statute itself.

15. Shri Bhangde relying upon The Pigment Lakes and Chemical Mfg. Co. Pvt. Ltd. v. Sitaram Kashiram, 1969 Mah LJ 710 : (1970 Lab IC 115) referred me to the following observations of Willes J. in The Wolverhampton New Waterworks Co. v. Hawkesford ((1859) 6 CB (NS) 336 at p. 356) appearing in this decision which are extracted therein (at p. 119 of Lab IC):—

"There are three classes of cases in which a liability may be established founded upon a statute. One is, where there was a liability existing at common law, and that liability is affirmed by a statute which gives a special and peculiar form of remedy different from the remedy which existed at common law; there, unless the statute contains words which expressly or by necessary implication exclude the common law remedy, the party suing has his election to pursue either that or the statutory remedy. The second class of cases is, where the statute gives the right to sue merely; but provides no particular form of remedy; there, the party can only proceed by action at common law. But there is a third class, viz. where liability not existing at common law is created by a statute which at the same time gives a special and particular remedy for enforcing it. The remedy provided by the statute must be followed and it is not competent to the party to pursue the course applicable to cases of the second class."

16. It may be pointed out in this connection that S. 29 (2) of the Act confers two kinds of powers on the Committee under clauses (e) and (k) which are in these terms:

"(e) Prosecute persons for violating the provisions of this Act, the rules and bye-laws made thereunder;

(k) enforce the provisions of this Act and Rules, Bye-laws and conditions of the licences granted under this Act";

Thus two distinct types of remedies are contemplated under these clauses. Section 46 of the Act, no doubt, provides for a remedy of criminal prosecution, but there is no remedy either sufficient or efficacious for enforcing the provisions of the Act. The remedy that is provided under Section 46 cannot be said to be a remedy at all so as to enable the Committee to regulate the marketing within its limits in an orderly manner for which no specific provision is made. As such it cannot be said that the present case falls under the third category of cases as submitted by Shri Bhangde, or that the jurisdiction of the Civil Court is impliedly barred.

17. As observed in Firm Kishore Chand Shiva Charan Lal v. Budaun Electric Supply Co Ltd. (AIR 1944 All 66) it would not be correct to say that there is no remedy in India for the breach of statutory obligation where the statute itself has not provided for the remedy. What the Committee prays for in the present action is to prevent persons from encroaching upon its statutory right to regulate the marketing of agricultural and other produce in the market areas, for the proper and efficacious enforcement of which, the criminal prosecution as provided under Section 46 of the Act cannot be a remedy. In my opinion, therefore, merely because the statute provides for a remedy at criminal law, the jurisdiction of the Civil Court is not barred by necessary implication and the Committee was justified in moving the Civil Court for issue of a writ of temporary injunction against those who tried to infringe the statutory right of the Committee and which the Committee is entitled to seek in effective and efficacious enforcement of its statutory right.

18. Shri Bhangde then relied upon Thana Borough Municipality v. Akbaralli (AIR 1957 Bom 34). This case was under Bombay Municipal Boroughs Act where an owner of the building had started construction of a second floor in contravention of the bye-laws and in spite of the refusal by the Municipality. The Municipality thereupon filed a criminal complaint against him under S. 123 (7), but inasmuch as there was a congestion in the Criminal Courts, it filed simultaneously a civil suit for an injunction restraining the owner from occupying the suit building either by himself or his tenants and for a direction to demolish the unauthorised construction. On the question whether the civil suit was maintainable, it was held that the obligation imposed upon the owner by the bye-laws was not for the benefit of the Municipality and injunction, therefore, was refused. It is pertinent to note that the provisions of the Bombay Municipal Boroughs Act did not provide for the consequences of building without permission and as such it was held that a direction as prayed for could not be issued.

19. The decision in Thana Borough Municipality v. Akbaralli (supra) was referred to in The Agricultural Produce Market Committee, Sholapur v. Pantappa Sayanna (AIR 1973 Bom 348) which was also relied upon by Shri Bhangde. It appears that certain traders were prosecuted and convicted for trading without licence and the limited question was whether a civil suit therefor was barred for recovery of the licence fee from them at the instance of the Market Committee. It was held that there was no express bar in the Act or in the Rules made thereunder for filing such a suit. It was observed that trading without a licence is a public wrong and therefore such a trader is liable to be prosecuted. But non-payment of fees is also a wrong to the corporate body the funds of which are meant for services under the Act. The Civil Court's jurisdiction, therefore, it was held, was not impliedly barred. The observations made in Thana Borough Municipality's case were pressed into service for non-suiting this claim for recovery of licence fee, but the said argument was repelled by Vaidya, J. with these observations (para 20):

"That case can have no application to the present case where the suit is for the recovery of licence fees or damages. The suit is not for damages or for an injunction regarding trading without a licence which is a public wrong."

Though the above observations are relied upon by Shri Bhangde to show that a suit for injunction regarding trading without a licence would not lie, I find that no such principle was laid down in this decision. In repelling the argument that no suit for recovery of licence fee can lie in view of the decision reported in the aforesaid case, the above observations came to be made. This decision, therefore, cannot be taken as an authority for the decision that no suit for injunction under the Act can lie.

20. In the present cases so far as the applicants, who admittedly are charging at a higher rate than agreed as per terms of the licence, are concerned, they are obviously violating their legal obligation. This legal obligation as contained in the terms of the licence not only restrict their freedom to charge more, but it is impliedly co-related to a right in the plaintiff. In this connection Shri K. H. Deshpande relied upon the following observations to be found in Bhudeb Mookerjee v. Kalachand Mallik (AIR 1921 Cal 129):

"Obligation may be taken to be a tie or bond which constrains a person to do or suffer something; it implies a right in another person to which it is correlated, and it restricts the freedom of the obligee with reference to definite acts and forbearances; but in order that it may be enforced by a Court, it must be a legal obligation, and not merely moral, social or religious."

21. As observed by the Supreme Court in Dhulabhai v. State of Madhya Pradesh (AIR 1969 SC 78) (para 32):

"Where there is no express exclusion the examination of the remedies and the scheme of the particular Act to find out the intentment becomes necessary and the result of the inquiry may be decisive. In the latter case it is necessary to see if the statute creates a special right or a liability and provides for the determination of the right of liability and further lays down that all questions about the said right and liability shall be determined by the Tribunals so constituted, and whether remedies normally associated with actions in Civil Courts are prescribed by the said statute or not."

22. In the instant case, as pointed out earlier though Section 46 of the Act provides for criminal prosecution there is no remedy provided to the Committee to enforce its statutory right as contemplated under Section 29 (e) to enforce the provisions of the Act, the Rules or the Bye-laws and the conditions of the licence granted under the Act.

23. On a conspectus of all the relevant provisions of the Act referred to above, it is manifest that the Committee is endowed with certain monopoly powers for regulating the marketing of agricultural produce within the specified market areas. It is also charged with a duty to enforce the provisions of the Act. The conferral of such pleary powers and right, though by a statute, certainly constitutes a civil right in the plaintiff, and merely because penal consequences are provided for that, by itself, would not deprive the plaintiff of its civil right to seek enforcement of the provisions of the Act or to prevent breach or infringement of its civil right. The jurisdiction of the Civil Court, therefore, is not ousted either expressly or by necessary intendment. So far as the commission agents who are acting in flagrant violation of the terms of the licence and trying to fleece the poor agriculturists are concerned, the Committee is entitled to ask for issue of a writ of temporary injunction to prevent the breach of the terms of the licence by which these persons have bound themselves.

24. In the result, I find that the non-applicant-plaintiff made out a prima facie case and the lower appellate Court was justified in granting the applications for temporary injunction. These revisions, therefore, have to be dismissed. All these revisions are dismissed with costs.

25. Shri Bhangde prays for grant of leave to appeal to the Supreme Court. Leave refused.

Revisions dismissed.

Special Civil Appns. Nos. 1812 and 1866 of 1977, D/- 16/17-3-1982.

(A) Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act (57 of 1947), Section 12 (3) (a) and Explanation 1 — Mode of raising dispute with regard to standard rent — Dispute raised in reply to S. 12 (2) notice within one month from receipt of S. 12 (2) notice — Cannot take case out of S. 12 (3) (a). AIR 1980 Bom 307 : 1980 Bom CR 716 Overruled; AIR 1977 Guj 15 : 18 Guj LR 32 (FB) Dissented from.

Considering the legal position as now settled by the decisions of the Supreme Court, it is clear that the only way to prevent a decree for eviction being passed under the provisions of S. 12 (3) (a) is that the tenant must make an application raising a dispute regarding standard rent and must ask for fixation of standard rent under Section 11 (3) as required by Explanation I to Section 12. There is no other mode permissible for raising a dispute as to standard rent for the purposes of Section 12. By raising a dispute with regard to standard rent by the tenant in a reply to the demand notice before the expiry of one month without making an application under Section 11 (3) read with Explanation I to Section 12, the Court will not be prevented from passing a decree for eviction under the provisions of S. 12 (3) (a). The fact that there was some dispute about standard rent prior to the notice under Section 12 (2) would also be immaterial and would not affect the power of the Court to pass a decree under Section 12 (3) (a) if the conditions referred to in Section 12 (3) (a) are satisfied if no application has already been made under Section 11 (3) of the Act. S. M. Dange for M. V. Sali, for Petitioner; V. P. Tipnis, for Respondent No. 1.

CHANDURKAR, J.:— These two petitions have been referred to the Division Bench on an order of reference made by a learned single Judge, who experienced some difficulty in following decision of Jahagirdar, J. in Gulabchand v. Noorbeg, AIR 1980 Bom 307. The questions referred relate to the construction of the provisions of Section 12 (3) (a) of the Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act, 1947 (hereinafter referred to as the "Rent Act") and the determination of the correct ratio of two decisions of the Supreme Court in Dhan-sukhlal Chhaganlal v. Dalichand Virchand, AIR 1968 SC 1109 and Harbanslal Jag-mohandas v. Prabhudas Shivilal, AIR 1976 SC 2005. Since the only points on which the decisions of both the petitions will really turn related to the construction of the provisions of Sections 12 (3) (a) and 12 (3) (b) of the Rent Act, we have heard the learned Counsel for the petitioners and the respondents in these cases not only on the questions of law referred but also on the merits of the two petitions and this judgment will, therefore, dispose of both the petitions.

2. The three questions of law which have been referred by the learned single Judge in his order of reference are as follows:—

(1) Whether in order to take the case out of the provisions of Section 12 (3) (a), it is obligatory on the tenant to make an application for fixation of standard rent under Section 11 (3) of the Bombay Rent Act as required by the 1st Explanation to Sec. 12?

(2) Whether the raising of the standard rent dispute by the tenant by reply to the demand notice before expiry of one month without making an application under Sec. 12 and the Explanation, or existence of such a dispute prior to the demand notice without the tenant making an application under Section 11 (3) would take the case out of the provisions of Section 12 (3) (a)?

(3) Whether it is obligatory for the tenant to make an application under Section 11 (3) before the expiration of the period of one month from the date of service of demand notice even when his application under Section 11 (1) is pending on the date of demand notice?

3. We shall briefly refer to the facts in the two petitions before us. Special Civil Application No. 1812 of 1977 is filed by the landlords and it arises out of a suit filed by them claiming possession of the suit premises which consist of house property which was occupied by the tenant-respondent on a monthly rent of Rs. 55/- in Ward B of Kolhapur. The notice terminating the tenancy on the ground of arrears of rent was issued by the landlords on 29th January, 1973 and the arrears claimed were for the period 1st Aug., 1970 to 31st Dec., 1972. The tenant by a notice dated 15th Feb., 1973 disputed that Rs. 50/- was standard rent and claimed that the standard rent was Rs. 45/-. The suit for possession was filed on 4th September, 1973. The trial Court held that the standard rent of the premises was Rs. 50/- per month and that the tenant was entitled to the benefit of Section 12 (3) (b) of the Rent Act. Giving credit for the amount of Rs. 252.56. which was paid by the defendant by way of municipal taxes, the trial Court passed a money decree for Rs. 1,547.44 but dismissed the suit for possession.

4. In appeal filed by the landlord, the Appeal Court relying on a Full Bench decision of the Gujarat High Court in Ramniklal Dwarkadas Modi v. Mohanlal Laxmichand, AIR 1977 Guj 15, took the view that the tenant having raised a dispute with regard to standard rent in the reply to the notice under Section 12 (2) of the Rent Act within one month of the receipt of the notice, the tenant was not obliged to make a full payment immediately or file a separate application for fixation of standard rent under the provisions of Section 11 (3) of the Rent Act read with Explanation 1 to Section 12 of the Rent Act. The Appeal Court further held that when the tenant gives a reply to the landlord's notice within one month disputing the standard rent, it becomes obligatory on the landlord to apply to the Court and get the standard rent fixed. The claim of the landlord under Section 12 (3) (a) was thus negatived, recording a finding that non-payment of arrears of rent did not amount to neglect since the evidence showed that the tenant was always ready and willing to pay the rent. It does not appear that the question as to whether the tenant was entitled to the protection of Section 12 (3) (b) of the Rent Act was agitated before the Appeal Court.

5. Special Civil Application No. 1866 of 1977 is filed by the tenant. The tenant is in occupation of a ground floor of the suit house as a monthly tenant at Rs. 4/-. Claiming that the tenant was in arrears of rent for 28 months, a notice terminating the tenancy of the tenant was issued on 5th January, 1968 by the landlord. The tenant replied to this notice on 21st January, 1968 disputing that Rs. 4/- per month was the standard rent. After the suit was filed on 11th January 1971, a written statement came to be filed on 27th August, 1971 and an application for determination of standard rent also came to be filed by the tenant on the same day. The trial Court fixed the standard rent of the premises at Rs. 4/- per month and passed a conditional decree for possession if the tenant failed to pay rent of Rs. 176/- within one month from the date of the decree. The trial Court took the view that the tenant was not a wilful defaulter and that he was willing to pay the rent of the suit premises to the plaintiff. In appeal filed by the plaintiff, the District Judge, Jalgaon, took the view that though the tenant had "raised a dispute about standard rent in the written statement or by an application filed on the same day", he had not preferred any application within the period of one month from the date of the notice and, therefore, in view of the decision in Harbanslal's case cited (AIR 1976 SC 2005) (supra), it could not be said that there was a dispute about standard rent within the meaning of Section 12 (3) (a) of the Rent Act. He, therefore, held that the case would be covered under Sec. 12 (3) (a) of the Rent Act and the plaintiff would be entitled to a decree for possession. With regard to Section 12 (3) (b) of the Rent Act, the District Judge held that he had not complied with the provisions of Section 12 (3) (b) also inasmuch as he had not paid rent regularly as required and the defendant would, therefore, not be entitled to the benefit of Section 12 (3) (b).

6. When both these petitions were taken up for hearing by the learned single Judge, it was argued on behalf of the landlord that in view of the decision in Dhansukhlal's case (AIR 1968 SC 1109) and Harbanslal's case cited (AIR 1976 SC 2005) (supra), the tenant can only be considered to be ready and willing to pay rent if before the expiry of the period of one month after the notice referred to in sub-section (2) of S. 12 he makes an application to the Court under S. 11 (3) of the Rent Act and thereafter pays or tenders the amount of rent and permitted increases specified by the Court. Apart from the two decisions of the Supreme Court, a decision of a Division Bench of this Court in Special Civil Appln. No. 2810 of 1971 (Champalal Pratapmal by his Vahiawatdar Mishrilal Chhogalal v. Municipal School Board (Primary School, Nandurbar) decided on 28th June, 1977* was also brought to the notice of the learned Judge. In that decision, the Division Bench after referring to the decision in Harbanslal's case (AIR 1976 SC 2005) observed as follows:—

"It is therefore now clear that where rent is payable by month and there are arrears of more than six months and the tenancy is terminated by valid notice, either the entire arrears of rent must be paid within one month or if a dispute regarding standard rent has to be raised, the tenant must apply within one month of the date of the receipt of the notice under S. 11 (3) and obtain appropriate direction from the Court. If he complies with those directions, he must be deemed to be a person who is ready and willing to pay. No third mode is now available for getting the protection of the Rent Act on the basis that the tenant is one who is ready and willing to pay."

7. On behalf of the tenants the contention raised before the learned single Judge was that if the dispute exists either on the date of the notice or if such dispute is raised within one month after the notice by a proper reply to the said notice, even without making an application under S. 11 (3) of the Rent Act, the tenant was entitled to protection under S. 12 (3) (b) of the Rent Act and the matter was taken out from the mischief of S. 12 (3) (a). This argument was advanced on the basis of the decision of Jahagirdar J. in Gulabchand's case cited (AIR 1980 Bom 307) (supra). The learned single Judge could not persuade himself to agree with the view taken by Jahagirdar J.

8. Mr. Shah appearing on behalf of the petitioner in Spl. Civil Appln. No. 1812 of 1977 and Mr. Tipnis appearing on behalf of the landlord in the other petition have contended that in view of the decision in Dhansukhlal's case (AIR 1968 SC 1109) and Harbanslal's case (AIR 1976 SC 2005) as well as the Division Bench decision of this Court in Champalal Pratapmal v. Municipal School Board (Primary School), Nandurbar, decided on 28th June, 1977* it is no longer open to a tenant to contend that even if the tenant does not make an application under S. 11 (3) of the Rent Act, as required by Explan. I to S. 12, he could still contend that there is a dispute with regard to standard rent because the tenant has raised the dispute in a reply to the notice served on him under S. 12 (2) and, therefore, his case does not fall within the provisions of S. 12 (3) (a) of the Rent Act.

9. On the other hand, Mr. Apte and Mr. Dange appearing on behalf of the tenants in the two petitions have wholly relied on the decision of Jahagirdar J. in Gulabchand's case (AIR 1980 Bom 307) and, according to the learned counsel, that decision takes the correct view that making an application under Sec. 11 (3) after the receipt of the notice under S. 12 (2) of the Rent Act is not the only mode of raising a dispute with regard to standard rent and that even if a dispute with regard to standard rent is raised in a reply to the notice given within one month from the date of the receipt of the notice under S. 12 (2), the Court must find that the tenant is ready and willing to pay rent and that in such a case, the provisions of S. 12 (3) (a) of the Rent Act will not be attracted. The learned counsel have contended that the only ratio of Harbanslal's case (AIR 1976 SC 2005) is that a dispute with regard to standard rent cannot be raised beyond one month from the date of the receipt of the notice and the decision of the Supreme Court in Abbasbhai v. Gulamnabi, AIR 1964 SC 1341, had specifically laid down that a dispute with regard to standard rent can be raised by giving a reply to the notice issued by the landlord under S. 12 (2) of the Rent Act within one month of the receipt of the notice and this view has been upheld by the Supreme Court in Dhansukhlal's case (AIR 1968 SC 1109). In other words, the contention appears to be that in Harbanslal's case, the Supreme Court only decided that the dispute should be raised within one month and the Supreme Court was not concerned with the mode of raising a dispute and so far as the mode of raising a dispute was concerned, there was express authority in the decision in Abbasbhai's case that such a dispute could be raised by a reply to a notice under S. 12 (2).

10. Since the correctness of the view taken by Jahagirdar J. in Gulabchand's case is challenged, it is necessary to refer in some detail to that judgment. Prior to that, it would be necessary to refer to the material provisions in S. 12 and S. 11 (3) of the Rent Act which read as follows:—

*Reported in (1978) 2 Mah LR 175.

"12. (1) A landlord shall not be entitled to the recovery of possession of any premises so long as the tenant pays, or is ready and willing to pay, the amount of the standard rent and permitted increases, if any, and observes and performs the other conditions of the tenancy, in so far as they are consistent with the provisions of this Act.

(2) No suit for recovery of possession shall be instituted by a landlord against tenant on the ground of non-payment of the standard rent or permitted increases due, until the expiration of one month next after notice in writing of the demand of the standard rent or permitted increases has been served upon the tenant in the manner provided in Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882.

(3) (a) Where the rent is payable by the month and there is no dispute regarding the amount of standard rent or permitted increases, if such rent or increases are in arrears for a period of six months or more and the tenant neglects to make payment thereof until the expiration of the period of one month after notice referred to in sub-section (2), the Court shall pass a decree for eviction in any such suit for recovery of possession.

(b) In any other case, no decree for eviction shall be passed in any such suit if, on the first day of hearing of the suit or on or before such other date as the Court may fix, the tenant pays or tenders in Court the standard rent and permitted increases then due and thereafter continues to pay or tender in Court regularly such rent and permitted increases till the suit is finally decided and also pays costs of the suit as directed by the Court.

Explanation I.— In any case where there is a dispute as to the amount of standard rent or permitted increases recoverable under this Act the tenant shall be deemed to be ready and willing to pay such amount if, before the expiry of the period of one month after notice referred to in sub-section (2), he makes an application to the Court under sub-section (3) of Section 11 and thereafter pays or tenders the amount of rent or permitted increases specified in the order made by the Court."

"11 (3). If any application for fixing the standard rent or for determining the permitted increases is made by a tenant who has received a notice from his landlord under sub-section (2) of S. 12, the Court shall forthwith specify the amount of rent or permitted increases which are to be deposited in Court by the tenant, and make an order directing the tenant to deposit such amount in Court or at the option of the tenant make an order to pay to the landlord such amount thereof as the Court may specify, pending the final decision of the application. A copy of the order shall be served upon the landlord. Out of any amount deposited in Court, the Court may make an order for payment of such reasonable sum to the landlord towards payment of rent or increases due to him as it thinks fit. If the tenant fails to deposit such amount or, as the case may be, to pay such amount thereof to the landlord, his application shall be dismissed."

11. In Gulabchand's case (AIR 1980 Bom 307), the petitioner before this Court was the tenant who was in occupation of house premises at a rent of Rs. 500/- per annum. A suit was filed by the landlord for possession on the ground that the tenant had failed to pay arrears of rent which were for a period of more than six months within a month after the notice under S. 12 (2) of the Rent Act was served upon him. The other grounds on which possession was claimed are not relevant for our purpose. The tenant denied that there was any default on his part. The suit was decreed by the trial Court on the ground that the tenant was in arrears of rent and the landlord was held entitled to a decree for eviction in view of the provisions of S. 12 (3) (a) of the Rent Act. This part of the decree was upheld in appeal. The tenant then filed a writ petition in this Court. The contention of the tenant was that there was a dispute with regard to standard rent even before the issue of the notice by the landlord and the case should have been dealt with as one falling under S. 12 (3) (b) of the Rent Act. It may be pointed out that the Appeal Court had recorded a finding that the tenant had not complied with the conditions under Section 12 (3) (b) of the Rent Act. An additional fact which has to be noticed is that prior to the issue of the notice following which the suit for eviction was filed, the landlord had issued a notice earlier on 1st May, 1968 calling upon the tenant to pay rent and to this notice, the tenant had sent a reply dated 24th May, 1968 mentioning therein that the landlord was demanding excessive rent and that agreed rent was not the standard rent. No action was, however, taken by the landlord on this notice and the suit was filed only after the second notice was issued. While disposing of the writ petition the learned Judge found that on the date on which the suit notice was sent on 12th March, 1971, there was already a dispute relating to the standard rent. The learned Judge then posed a question, namely, "whether it is necessary that the dispute about the standard rent should be raised after the notice under S. 12 (2) of the Bombay Rent Act is issued or whether it is sufficient that such a dispute existed on the date on which the notice is issued or even prior to that". The learned Judge referred to the decision in Abbasbhai's case and read that decision as an authority for the proposition that "in order to establish that there is a dispute about the standard rent, it is not necessary for a tenant to make an application under S. 11 (3) read with Explanation I of Section 12 of the Bombay Rent Act within one month after the receipt of the notice under S. 12 (2)." The learned Judge further went on to observe: "Such a dispute could be raised in a manner other than by the filing of an application for fixation of standard rent". It is the correctness of this view which has been the subject of debate at the bar before us. The learned Judge then referred to the decision in Harbanslal's case (AIR 1976 SC 2005) and found that in Harbanslal's case, the Supreme Court had approved of the law laid down by the Gujarat High Court in Ambalal v. Babaldas, AIR 1964 Guj 9. The law laid down in Ambalal's case, according to the learned Judge, was as follows (at p. 2010):—

"In order to attract the applicability of S. 12 (3) (a) of the Act there must be non-existence of the dispute at the date of the notice and such non-existence must continue right up to the expiration of one month from the date of service of the notice so that if the dispute is raised at any time prior to the expiration of the said period of one month, the operation of S. 12 (3) (a) would be excluded."

The learned Judge noticed the observations of the Supreme Court in Harbanslal's case (AIR 1976 SC 2005) that in order to escape from the consequences mentioned in Section 12 (3) (a) of the Rent Act, the tenant should make an application under Sec. 11 (3) of the Rent Act within one month of the service of the notice under S. 12 (2) but went on to observe: "This of course is one of the ways in which a case is taken out of the clutches of S. 12 (3) (a) of the Act" and then further observed as follows (at p. 311 of AIR Bom):—

"Since it has been in unmistakable terms mentioned by the Supreme Court (reference is to Harbanslal's case) that a dispute can exist either on the date of the notice or within one month after the notice by an appropriate reply to the notice (without making an application under S. 11 (3) of the Bombay Rent Act), it is clear that an application under S. 11 (3) read with Explan. I to Section 12 of the Bombay Rent Act is not the only way of showing that there is a dispute about the standard rent."

In support of this, the learned Judge quoted the decision of the Full Bench of the Gujarat High Court in Ramniklal's case.

12. It will be our endeavour to find out and ascertain on a reading of the two judgments of the Supreme Court in Dhansukhlal's case (AIR 1968 SC 1109) and Harbanslal's case (AIR 1976 SC 2005) whether the proposition which has been laid down by the learned single Judge that if a reply has been given by a tenant to a notice issued by the landlord under S. 12 (2) of the Rent Act and in that reply he had disputed the standard rent, that is a permissible way of raising a dispute for the purposes of taking the case out of the clutches of S. 12 (3) (a) of the Rent Act.

13. Before we refer to the two decisions of the Supreme Court, it would be appropriate to refer to a Full Bench decision of this Court in Dattu Subhana v. Gajanan Vithoba, 73 Bom LR 371: (AIR 1971 Bom 396), in which the Full Bench was considering the provisions of Ss. 12 (3) (a) and 12 (3) (b) of the Rent Act and the Full Bench took the view that a tenant can raise a dispute as to the standard rent even after a suit is filed against him for eviction on the ground of non-payment of rent for more than six months, by his written statement and that would be a dispute for the purposes of Sec. 12 of the Act. The Full Bench further took the view that the dispute contemplated in S. 12 (3) (a) is not limited to the dispute within one month of the notice under S. 12 (2) as required by Explan. I.

14. Now, the decision in Harbanslal's case (AIR 1976 SC 2005) was given in two appeals. The appeal of Harbanslal was an appeal from a judgment of the Gujarat High Court, while the other appeal Rev. Everett M. Fasanachat v. West End Works was an appeal from a decision of this Court in Special Civil Appln. No. 859 of 1967 decided on 31st March, 1971. We have sent for the original record of that petition. The facts in that case show that the tenancy of the tenants was terminated by notice dated 5th April, 1963 because they were in arrears of rent from 15th March, 1960 to 15th March, 1963 amounting in all to Rs. 3,600/-. Some amounts by way of insurance premia were also claimed from the tenant. Apart from other grounds on which the suit was contested, a plea introduced by way of amendment to the written statement was that the standard rent of the premises was Rs. 50/- and the landlords could not demand anything more. The trial Court found in favour of the plaintiffs and found the standard rent to be Rs. 100/- per month and the tenants were found to be defaulters in respect of rent from March 15, 1960. A decree for possession came to be passed along with the decree for arrears. The tenant's appeal against the decree came to be dismissed by the Assistant Judge who held that the provisions of the Bombay Rent Act were not applicable as the suit premises were used for the purpose of manufacture, but a finding was recorded, if necessary, that the case fell under S. 12 (3) (a) and not under S. 12 (3) (b) and that the standard rent was Rs. 100/-. The tenant then filed a petition under Art. 227 of the Constitution of India in this Court. One of the arguments advanced on behalf of the tenant was that though the tenancy was validly terminated, no decree for eviction could be passed against the tenants because the tenants were always ready and willing to pay the rent and there was a dispute with regard to the amount payable by the tenants in view of the damage caused to the building and also in view of the fact that in 1939, the rent was fixed at Rs. 50/- per month for the same premises and in 1951 the rent was increased to Rs. 100/-. The learned Judge, who decided the petition, took the view that the Assistant Judge was in error in applying the provisions of S. 12 (3) (a) to the facts of the case as there was a dispute about standard rent payable by the tenants and in such a case, S. 12 (3) (a) would not apply. The learned Judge noticed the view taken by the learned Assistant Judge that a dispute raised by the tenant was not a bona fide dispute and went on to observe that the words "bona fide dispute" were not to be found in Section 12 (3) (a) and that if there is a dispute, whether the dispute is bona fide or mala fide, it is a dispute within the meaning of Section 12 (3) (a). The learned Judge found that the written statement having been allowed to be amended, the Assistant Judge was not right in referring to the original written statement and in holding that there was no bona fide dispute. The learned Judge then made the following observations:—

"It is now settled by the decision of the Full Bench of this Court in Special Civil Application No. 781 of 1968 decided on Aug. 17, 1970 (Dattu Subhana v. Gajanan Vitthoa, 73 Bom LR 371: (AIR 1971 Bom 396)):

'Explanation I is not the only mode in which the tenant's readiness and willingness to pay can be established. It is no doubt one mode and if fulfilled will give the tenant protection under Sec. 12 itself, but there is nothing in the provisions of S. 12 to indicate that the tenant cannot raise a dispute such as is contemplated in S. 12 when he comes to be sued in the Court for recovery of rent by raising the issue as to standard rent in his written statement in answer to the suit. In our opinion, the cumulative effect of Section 11 (4) read with the provisions of Sec. 12 squarely will be that he can do so.'

The defendants in the present case did so. Therefore, the learned Assistant Judge was wrong in applying the provisions of Section 12 (3) (a) to the facts of the case."

The observations quoted above will thus clearly indicate that when the learned Judge took the view that the case was not covered by S. 12 (3) (a) of the Rent Act, he had taken the view that it was permissible to raise a dispute in a mode other than the one prescribed by Explan. I to S. 12 read with Section 11 (3) of the Rent Act and for this he found support in the decision of the Full Bench. That is how the applicability of Sec. 12 (3) (a) of the Rent Act to the facts of the case was negated. Now, it was this decision which became the subject matter of appeal before the Supreme Court in Harbanslal's case and that decision must now be read in the light of these facts.

15. It is important to point out that in the other appeal with which the Supreme Court was dealing and which had come to the Supreme Court from the Gujarat High Court, the view taken by the Gujarat High Court was that the dispute as to standard rent was to be raised within one month from the service of the notice on the tenant. It appears that the finding in the Gujarat case was that after the notice was given by the landlord on 6th Dec., 1966 to the tenant, a letter was alleged to have been sent by the tenant on 16th Feb., 1967 though two earlier letters mentioned in that letter were found to have been fabricated. Referring to the decision of this Court the Supreme Court observed as follows (at p. 20 of AIR 1977 Guj):—

"The view of the Bombay High Court overlooks the limitation of time within which a dispute is to be raised as to standard rent. The view of the Bombay High Court is that disputing within one month of the service of the notice terminating the tenancy is one mode of raising a dispute and there is another mode of raising the dispute at any stage of the suit. The view of the Bombay High Court nullifies the provisions contained in Sec. 12 and Explanation thereto and confers a right on the tenant where the legislation does not contemplate such a right."

Now, when the Supreme Court in the above quoted paragraph did not approve of the view taken by this Court that disputing the standard rent within one month of the service of the notice is one mode of raising a dispute and observed that this view nullifies the provisions contained in Sec. 12 and Explanation thereto, the Supreme Court must be held to have positively taken the view that apart from the mode referred to in the Explanation to S. 12, the tenant has no other mode in which the tenant can raise a dispute about standard rent for the purposes of S. 12 (3) (a). When the Supreme Court observed that the view of this Court nullifies the Explanation and overlooks the limitation, it is obvious that the reference was to the limitation of one month prescribed by Explan. I to Sec. 12. That Explanation in unmistakable terms requires that in any case where there is a dispute as to amount of standard rent or permitted increases recoverable under the Act, the tenant shall be deemed to be ready and willing to pay such amount if before the expiry of the period of one month after notice referred to in sub-section (2) of S. 12, he makes an application to the Court under sub-section (3) of Sec. 11 and thereafter pays or tenders the amount of rent or permitted increases specified in the order made by the Court. When the Supreme Court observed that the provisions of S. 12 were being nullified, the reference was to the provisions of Sec. 12 (1) and S. 12 (3) (a).

16. Section 12 (1) disables a landlord from recovering possession of any premises so long as the tenant pays or is ready and willing to pay the amount of standard rent and permitted increases and observes and performs the other conditions of the tenancy so far as they are consistent with the provisions of the Rent Act. In a case where there is a dispute, the Legislature has provided for a deeming fiction whereby a tenant can be considered to be ready and willing to pay only if he acts in the manner provided by Explan. I. Explanation I contemplates two things. It firstly requires the tenant to make an application for fixation of standard rent within the specified period, namely, before the expiry of one month after the notice under S. 12 (2) is received by him and the second condition is that he has to pay or tender the amount of rent or permitted increases specified in the order made by the Court. Unless these two conditions are satisfied, it cannot be said that the tenant is ready and willing to pay the amount of standard rent as contemplated by Sec. 12 (3) (a). The Explanation clearly provides for what the tenant is to do where he wants to raise a dispute about the standard rent before he can claim to be out of the rigour of S. 12 (3) (a) of the Rent Act.

17. When the appeal of the landlord was allowed by the Supreme Court in the West End Works' case and Harbanslal's case (AIR 1976 SC 2005), the only result of the decision of the Supreme Court can be that the view which this Court had taken in the judgment appealed against that the mode provided by Explanation I to Sec. 12 was only one of the modes of raising a dispute and that there were other modes and the first mode was not the exclusive mode, must naturally be taken to have been overruled.

18. The matter, in our view, is clinched by the observations of the Supreme Court in para 25 of the judgment in Harbanslal's case (AIR 1976 SC 2005). These observations are as follows (at p. 211):—

"The provisions in S. 11 (3) of the Act deal with orders which may be passed by the Court during the pendency of the application disputing the rent. Provisions in Sec. 11 (4) of the Act deal with orders which may be passed consequent upon dispute as to rent. It is only when an application disputing rent is made within the time contemplated by Explan. I to S. 12 of the Act that the provisions in sub-sections (3) and (4) of S. 11 are attracted."

(Underlining ours.)

The Supreme Court in these observations has emphasised the time element which is prescribed by Explan. I because it is by this Explanation that there is an obligation on the tenant, if he wants to raise a dispute with regard to standard rent, that he must make an application under S. 11 (3) within a period of one month.

19. Now, if you go to S. 11 (3) of the Rent Act, it expressly refers to an application for fixing standard rent by a tenant who has received a notice from his landlord under sub-section (2) of S. 12. When such application is made, there is an obligation on the Court to forthwith specify the amount of rent or permitted increases which are to be deposited in Court by the tenant and the Court is further obliged to make an order directing the tenant to deposit such amount in Court or at the option of the tenant make an order to pay to the landlord such amount thereof as the Court may specify pending the final decision of the application. It is important to point out that under S. 11 (3) it is provided that if the tenant fails to deposit such amount or, as the case may be, to pay such amount thereof to the landlord, his application shall be dismissed. In other words, the effect of the provisions of Section 11 (3) is that if the tenant fails to comply with the order made by the Court in the application under S. 11 (3), the tenant will be relegated to the same position in which he was before making the application and the result will be that it will have to be held that no dispute has been raised by him.

20. Now, in Harbanslal's case (AIR 1976 SC 2005), the Supreme Court has referred to the earlier decision in Dhansukhlal's case. In Dhansukhlal's case (AIR 1968 SC 1109), the Supreme Court has considered the provisions of S. 12 (1) and the Explanation and the following observations are relevant (at p. 1112):—

"Section 12 (1) must be read with the Explanation and so read it means that a tenant can only be considered 'to be ready and willing to pay' if, before the expiry of the period of one month after notice referred to in sub-section (2), he makes an application to the Court under sub-section (3) of S. 11 and thereafter pays or tenders the amount of rent or permitted increases specified by the Court."

In that case, it was found as a fact that the tenant had made no payment within the period of one month of the notice of ejectment and although in his written statement he raised a dispute about the standard rent, he had made no application in terms of Section 11 (3) of the Rent Act. In that context, the Supreme Court pointed out that where a suit is filed on the ground that the tenant was in arrears for a period of more than six months and although raising a dispute as to the standard rent or permitted increases recoverable under the Act, the tenant makes no application in terms of Section 11 (3), he cannot claim the protection of S. 12 (1) by merely offering to pay or even paying all arrears due from him when the Court is about to pass a decree against him. The Supreme Court then observed as follows (at p. 1112):—

"..... if sub-section (3) (a) is not attracted the tenant, if he is in arrears, cannot sit quiet and offer to pay all the amount due from him at the time of the hearing of the suit so as to get the protection of Sec. 12 (1). To be within the protection of sub-sec. (1) where he raises a dispute about the standard rent payable he must make an application to the Court under sub-section (3) of S. 11 and thereafter pay or tender the amount of rent and permitted increases, if any, specified in the order made by the Court. If he does not approach the Court under S. 11 (3), it is not open to him thereafter to claim the protection of S. 12 (1)."

The observations quoted by us, in our view, clearly indicate that the tenant can only be considered ready and willing to pay if he makes an application to the Court under sub-section (3) of S. 11 and thereafter pays or tenders the amount of rent or permitted increases specified by the Court. We shall presently refer to the decision of the Full Bench of the Gujarat High Court where a view has been expressed that the use of the word 'only' by the Supreme Court in its decision was not intended to exclude any other mode of raising a dispute, though we are inclined to take the view that this controversy is now academic in view of the observations of the Supreme Court in Harbanslal's case. As we have already pointed out, that decision has the effect of overruling the earlier decision of this Court which had taken the view that there was more than one mode of raising the dispute as to standard rent.

21. Referring to the decision in Dhansukhlal's case (AIR 1968 SC 1109), the Supreme Court in paragraph 23 has observed as follows:—

"This Court found in Chhaganlal's case (AIR 1968 SC 1109) (supra) (Reference is to Dhansukhlal Chhaganlal's case) that the tenant made no payment within the period of one month of the notice of ejectment and further that although in his written statement he raised a dispute about the standard rent he made no application in terms of Sec. 11 (3) of the Act. The tenant can claim protection from the operation of S. 12 (3) (a) of the Act only if the tenant makes an application within one month of the service of the notice terminating the tenancy by raising a dispute as to standard rent."

(Underlining ours.)

It is significant to point out that the decision in Dhansukhlal's case has been so read by the Supreme Court as laying down that the only way in which a tenant can claim the protection from the operation of Section 12 (3) (a) is that the tenant must make an application within one month of the service of the notice terminating the tenancy by raising a dispute as to standard rent. Apart from the other observations of the Supreme Court in Harbanslal's case (AIR 1976 SC 2005), it is difficult for us to see how any controversy can now survive as to whether there is any other mode of raising a dispute in view of the above quoted observations of the Supreme Court while construing Dhansukhlal's case.

22. Referring to these above quoted observations, Jahagirdar J. has in para 10 observed: "It is true that in Harbanslal's case the Supreme Court has mentioned that in order to escape from the consequences mentioned in S. 12 (3) (a) of the Bombay Rent Act, the tenant should make an application under S. 11 (3) of the said Act within one month of the service of the notice under Sec. 12 (2). This of course is one of the ways in which a case is taken out of the clutches of S. 12 (3) (a) of the Act." With respect, in our view, the construction placed on the observations of the Supreme Court that the Supreme Court was referring to only one of the modes in which a case is taken out of the clutches of S. 12 (3) (a) is not justified. The consequence which must necessarily follow from the use of the word 'only' by the Supreme Court in the observations quoted above at the end of para 23 has not been given effect to by the learned Judge and if the observations in para 24 are properly read, they, in our view, leave no room for doubt that the only mode of raising a dispute is by making an application under S. 11 (3) of the Act. We are, therefore, unable to concur with the view taken by the learned Judge that an application under S. 11 (3) is only one of the ways in which the case is taken out of the clutches of Sec. 12 (3) (a) of the Rent Act. These observations, in our view, are directly contrary to the decision of the Supreme Court in Harbanslal's case.

23. It is no doubt true that such a view has been taken by the Full Bench of the Gujarat High Court in Ramniklal's case (AIR 1977 Guj 15). In Ramniklal's case, the Full Bench of the Gujarat High Court has approved of the view taken in an earlier decision in Ambalal v. Babaldas, AIR 1964 Guj 9, as regards the stages at which the dispute as to the standard rent could be raised and also the manner in which it could be raised and three propositions of law were laid down. The third proposition is the relevant proposition for our purpose and it was as follows:—

"The tenant can also claim protection from the operation of S. 12 (3) (a) of the Act by raising a dispute as to the standard rent either prior to the notice under Section 12 (2) of the Act or by reply to the notice but in this case the tenant must do so within one month from the receipt of the notice referred to in S. 12 (2) of the Act."

We have already pointed out that in view of the fact that the decision in Harbanslal's case (AIR 1976 SC 2005) was given in an appeal directed against the judgment of this Court which followed a Full Bench decision of this Court in which it was held that an application under S. 11 (3) was only one of the modes of raising a dispute and that decision has been set aside, the third proposition in so far as it holds that the dispute can be raised by a reply to the notice under Section 12 (2) of the Rent Act within one month must now, in our view, be no longer held to be good law. Apart from the controversy as to whether there can be any other mode than the one provided by Explan. I read with S. 11 (3), it is difficult for us to find any sanction for the element of limitation introduced in this proposition for giving a reply to the notice. The period of one month is statutorily fixed by Explan. I to Section 12, but that is for making an application under S. 11 (3). The other reference to a period of one month is in S. 12 (3) (a), but that is in the context of the tenant neglecting to make a payment of the arrears. No other provision under the Rent Act has been brought to our notice on the basis of which this element of limitation for replying to the notice can be substantiated.

24. One of the decisions on which Jahagirdar J. has relied for holding that a dispute with regard to standard rent could be raised in a manner other than by filing of an application under S. 11 (3) of the Rent Act is the decision of the Supreme Court in Vora Abbasbhai's case (AIR 1964 SC 1341). In Vora Abbasbhai's case, the notice served by the landlord on the defendant (tenant) calling upon him to deliver possession of the premises on the ground that he had failed to pay rent since Oct. 1, 1955 was given on 1st Dec., 1956 and was served on 3rd Dec., 1956. On 7th Dec., 1956 the tenant sent a reply that he had paid rent at the agreed rate up to 1st April, 1956 and on 5th Jan., 1957 he made an application under S. 11 (1) of the Bombay Rent Act for an order fixing the standard rent and also for an order under S. 11 (3) specifying interim rent. The tenant sent a letter to the landlord on 7th Jan., 1957 informing him about the application moved by him. The suit for ejectment was instituted on 27th Jan., 1957. The suit was dismissed by the trial Court which held that the standard rent was Rs. 50/- and taking into account the aggregate amount deposited, it was held that the defendant was not liable to be evicted for non-payment of standard rent and in any event, it was established that the defendant was ready and willing to pay the amount of standard rent and permitted increases. The Appeal Court treated the case as one under Section 12 (3) (b) and the decree of dismissal was confirmed. However, in revision, the High Court set aside the dismissal holding that the defendant was not ready and willing to pay the standard rent at the date of the suit and that he did not comply with the requirement of S. 12 (3) (b) of the Rent Act because he had not deposited in Court the amount of standard rent at the rate determined by the order of the District Court and had not paid even the interim rent at the rate fixed by the Court of first instance and further that he had not paid costs of the suit which he was bound to pay under Section 12 (3) (b).

25. Referring to Explan. I to S. 12 of the Rent Act, the Supreme Court observed that the Explanation enacts a rule of evidence and if after service of the notice upon the tenant by the landlord under sub-section (2) of S. 12 the tenant makes an application under sub-section (3) of S. 11 before the expiry of a month and thereafter pays or tenders regularly the amount of interim rent specified by the Court till the disposal of the suit, the Court is bound to presume that the tenant is at the date of the decree ready and willing to pay the standard rent and permitted increases. The judgment discloses that the question as to whether the case was covered by S. 12 (3) (a) or not was never debated before the Supreme Court. What was contended on behalf of the plaintiff in that case was that the dispute concerning standard rent contemplated by S. 12 (3) (b) should have been raised before the service of the notice under S. 12 (2). This contention was rejected. The observations in paragraph 13 of the judgment were as follows:—

“The claim made by the defendant fell within the terms of S. 12 (3) (b) and not S. 12 (3) (a). The defendant had contended by his reply dated Dec. 7, 1956, to the notice served by the plaintiff, that the contractual rent was excessive; he had then raised the same contention in the application filed for fixation of standard rent and in his written statement filed in the suit. There is nothing in S. 12 to support the contention raised by Mr. Chatterjee on behalf of the plaintiff that the dispute concerning standard rent contemplated by Cl. (b) of sub-section (3) is one which must have been raised before service of the notice under S. 12 (2). The entire tenor of the section is against that interpretation.”

We are unable to find anything in the decision of the Supreme Court in Vora Abbasbhai's case (AIR 1964 SC 1341) which can be read as an authority for the proposition that a dispute for the purposes of S. 12 (3) (a) need not necessarily be raised only by an application under S. 11 (3) but that even if a reply is given by the tenant to the landlord disputing the standard rent, the case will be taken out of the provisions of S. 12 (3) (a).

26. What was exactly decided in Vora Abbasbhai's case has been considered by the Supreme Court in the decision in Harbanslal's case (AIR 1976 SC 2005). In para 21, the Supreme Court observed as follows:—

“The only point in controversy in Abbasbhai's case (AIR 1964 SC 1341) (Reference is to Vora Abbasbhai's case) was whether the second condition in S. 12 (3) (a) of the Act, viz., that there was no dispute regarding the amount of standard rent was fulfilled. The landlord's contention was that the dispute concerning standard rent is one which must have been raised before service of the notice and since there was admittedly no dispute in regard to standard rent or permitted increases at the date of service of the notice under S. 12 (2) of the Act the second condition in S. 12 (3) (a) that there was no dispute was satisfied. The Court did not accept the landlord's contention there and held that the defendant in that case raised the contention by reply dated 7th Dec., 1956 that the contractual rent was excessive and raised the same contention in the application filed for fixation of standard rent.”

27. It is important to point out that if we read the decision in Vora Abbasbhai's case (AIR 1964 SC 1341) as an authority for the proposition that a dispute with regard to standard rent can be raised by more than one mode, that would run counter to the ratio of Harbanslal's case (AIR 1976 SC 2005) in which we have already pointed out the Supreme Court has positively laid down that the only way to get protection from the operation of S. 12 (3) (a) is for the tenant to make an application within one month from the service of the notice terminating the tenancy by raising a dispute with regard to standard rent. We are, therefore, unable to hold that the decision in Vora Abbasbhai's case in any way supports the view which was taken by the learned Judge in Gulabchand's case (AIR 1980 Bom 307).

28. Now, what is argued is that the Supreme Court in Vora Abbasbhai's case (AIR 1964 SC 1341) has approved of the judgment of the Gujarat High Court in Ambalal's case (AIR 1964 Guj 9). The passage quoted by Jahagirdar J. in Gulabchand's case (AIR 1980 Bom 307) from the decision in Ambalal's case is as follows:—

"In order to attract the applicability of S. 12 (3) (a) of the Act there must be non-existence of the dispute at the date of the notice and such non-existence must continue right up to the expiration of one month from the date of service of the notice so that if the dispute is raised at any time prior to the expiration of the said period of one month, the operation of S. 12 (3) (a) would be excluded."

Now, there is no doubt that these observations have also been approved by the Supreme Court in Harbanslal's case (AIR 1976 SC 2005). But what was the question before the Gujarat High Court in Ambalal's case (AIR 1964 Guj 9) has been stated by the Supreme Court in Harbanslal's case as follows:—

"In Ambalal's case (supra) the conclusion is a single one and it is that in order to exclude the operation of S. 12 (3) (a) of the Act the dispute must be in existence latest within one month after service of the notice."

Ambalal's case, therefore, did not deal with the mode of raising a dispute but merely dealt with the outer limit of time with regard to the existence of the dispute and that, according to the decision in Ambalal's case, was within one month after the service of the notice.

29. The Full Bench decision of the Gujarat High Court no doubt holds that the tenant can also claim protection from the operation of section 12 (3) (a) by raising a dispute as to the standard rent either prior to the notice under Section 12 (2) of the Act or by reply to the notice, but in this case, the tenant must do so within one month from the receipt of the notice referred to in Section 12 (2). However, the Full Bench in that case, while considering the decision of the Supreme Court in Harbanslal's case, the reference to that case was made only in the context of the fact that the Supreme Court had to resolve the question as to whether on receipt of a notice from the landlord terminating the tenancy on the ground of arrears of rent, the dispute as to standard rent had to be raised before expiry of one month after the service of the notice. The Full Bench also further pointed out that the Supreme Court had made clear that Sec. 12 (1) of the Rent Act had to be read with the Explanation to that section and the ratio of the decision in Dhansukhlal's case (AIR 1968 SC 1109) was stated to be as follows:—

"The ratio of this decision is clearly that protection under Section 12 (1) of the Act can be availed of only if before the expiry of the period of one month after the notice referred to in sub-section (2) of Section 12 of the Act the tenant makes an application under Section 11 (3) of the Act and thereafter he pays or tenders the amount of rent or permitted increases specified by the Court." (see paragraph 7).

The Full Bench then pointed out in the same paragraph that "the clear and specific proposition of law laid down therein is to the effect that in order to avoid the provisions of Section 12 (3) by claiming protection under Section 12 (1), the tenant has to make an application under Section 11 (3) of the Act before the expiry of one month of the receipt of the notice under S. 12 (2) of the Rent Act or, to put in other words, the tenant can get protection under Section 12 (1) provided he has made an application under Section 11 (3) of the Act within one month of the receipt of the notice under Section 12 (2) of the Act." Referring to the use of the word 'only' by the Supreme Court in Dhansukhlal's case, the Full Bench has taken the view that "the word 'only' is used to emphasise as to when the factum of readiness and willingness of the tenant is said to be established by the statutory presumption under Section 12 (1) read with the Explanation and it is so established provided the provisions of Section 12 (1) read with the Explanation are complied with." The Full Bench then observed that "the word 'only' supplies an emphasis to the expression 'to be ready and willing to pay' and the readiness and willingness can also be proved by statutory presumption which arises on the provisions of the Explanation being satisfied." "The word 'only' ", according to the Full Bench of the Gujarat High Court, "has not the effect that the tenant can obtain protection by raising a dispute as to the standard rent only in one manner, namely, if the tenant makes an application within one month of the service of the notice terminating the tenancy by raising a dispute as to the standard rent." According to the Full Bench, "if the tenant wants to avail himself of the statutory presumption arising under Section 12 (1) and the Explanation, he has to make the application under Section 11 (3) of the Act within one month after the notice referred to in Section 12 (2) of the Act and to pay or tender the amount of rent and permitted increases specified in the order made by the Court."

30. As already pointed out, we are unable to read the judgment of the Supreme Court in Dhansukhlal's case (AIR 1968 SC 1109) in the manner it has been read by the learned Judges of the Full Bench of the Gujarat High Court, in view of the observations made by the Supreme Court in Harbanslal's case (AIR 1976 SC 2005) where while dealing with Dhansukhlal's case the Supreme Court categorically and in unequivocal terms had observed as follows:—

"The tenant can claim protection from the operation of Section 12 (3) (a) of the Act only if the tenant makes an application within one month of the service of the notice terminating the tenancy by raising a dispute as to standard rent." (Underlining ours).

It is no doubt true that in Ramniklal's case (AIR 1977 Guj 15) the Full Bench has observed that in Dhansukhlal's case (AIR 1968 SC 1109) and Harbanslal's case (AIR 1976 SC 2005) the Supreme Court has not considered all the methods or manners in which the dispute as to standard rent can be raised under Section 12 (2) of the Act to avoid a decree of eviction under Section 12 (3) of the Act. These observations presume that apart from the mode provided by the Act there are any other modes of raising a dispute about standard rent. Such an approach is, however, in our view, not at all open having regard to the decision of the Supreme Court that the only mode of raising a dispute is as provided in the Act if protection from operation of Section 12 (3) of the Act is to be claimed by the tenant. With respect, therefore, we dissent from the view taken in Ramniklal's case.

31. We may also point out that the decision of the Supreme Court in Harbanslal's case (AIR 1976 SC 2005) was earlier considered by a Division Bench of this Court in Champalal Pratapmal v. Municipal School Board (Primary School), Nandurbar, Special Civil Appln. No. 2810 of 1971 decided on 28th June, 1977.* In view of certain conflicting views as to when the provisions of Section 12 (3) (b) of the Rent Act would be attracted, one of us (Chandurkar J.) had made a reference to a Division Bench in respect of two questions as follows:—

"(1) Whether in a suit for eviction it is not obligatory for the tenant to apply for an order under Section 11 (4) of the Rent Act, if he wants to avail of protection under Section 12 (3) (b) of the Act, and

(2) Whether in view of the decision of the Supreme Court in Dhansukhlal's case (70 Bom LR 714) : (AIR 1968 SC 1109) the Rent Court has discretion not to pass a decree for eviction in a case governed by Section 12 (3) (a) of the Rent Act, if the tenant has deposited the entire arrears of rent before the decision of the suit?"

This reference was made before the decision in Harbanslal's case was rendered by the Supreme Court. When the matter was dealt with by the Division Bench, the Division Bench found that the answer to the above two points could be found in the latest judgment of the Supreme Court in Harbanslal's case. While dealing with the decision in Harbanslal's case, the Division Bench observed as follows:—

"When a tenancy is being terminated on the ground of arrears of rent for more than six months, what the tenant must do in order to obtain the protection of the Rent Act has now been clarified. In Harbanslal's case, the Supreme Court points out that in order to avoid the operation of Section 12 (3) (a) of the Act the dispute in regard to standard rent or permitted increases must be raised at the latest before the expiry of one month from the date of service of notice under Section 12 (2) of the Act and it is not enough to raise a dispute for the first time in written statement. They specifically point out that the view taken by this Court at one time in the past, viz., that disputing within one month of the service of the notice terminating the tenancy is one mode of raising a dispute and there is another mode of raising the dispute at the stage of the suit nullifies the provisions contained in Section 12 and Explanation thereto and confers a right on the tenant where the legislation does not contemplate such a right." (underlining ours)

Pointing out that the only mode of raising a dispute with regard to standard rent was by making an application under Section 11 (3) of the Rent Act, the Division Bench observed as follows:—

"It is therefore now clear that where rent is payable by month and there are arrears of more than six months and the tenancy is terminated by valid notice, either the entire arrears of rent must be paid within one month or if a dispute regarding standard rent has to be raised, the tenant must apply within one month of the date of the receipt of the notice under Section 11 (3) and obtain appropriate direction from the Court. If he complies with those directions, he must be deemed to be a person who is ready and willing to pay. No third mode is now available for getting the protection of the Rent Act on the basis that the tenant is one who is ready and willing to pay."

(Underlining ours.)

It does not appear that this decision of the Division Bench was cited before Jahagirdar, J.

32. On giving our anxious consideration to the legal position as now settled by the decisions of the Supreme Court, we are of the considered view that the only way to prevent a decree for eviction being passed under the provisions of Section 12 (3) (a) of the Rent Act is that the tenant must make an application raising a dispute regarding standard rent and must ask for fixation of standard rent under Section 11 (3) of the Rent Act as required by Explanation I to Section 12. There is no other mode permissible for raising a dispute as to standard rent for the purposes of Section 12 of the Rent Act. By raising a dispute with regard to standard rent by the tenant in a reply to the demand notice before the expiry of one month without making an application under Section 11 (3) read with Explanation I to Section 12, the Court will not be prevented from passing a decree for eviction under the provisions of Section 12 (3) (a). The fact that there was some dispute about standard rent prior to the notice under Section 12 (2) would also be immaterial and would not affect the power of the Court to pass a decree under Section 12 (3) (a) if the conditions referred to in Section 12 (3) (a) are satisfied if no application has already been made under Section 11 (3) of the Act. This will answer the first two questions raised in the order of reference.

33. So far as the third question is concerned, it has not been canvassed before us by either side that the view taken by Jahagirdar, J. in paragraph 12 of the judgment, where the learned Judge follows two earlier decisions of this Court in Karamsey v. Velji, (1954) 56 Bom LR 619 and Sayed Umar Sayed Ahmed v. Dadamiya, 1977 Mah LJ 261 : (AIR 1976 Bom 336) is in any way erroneous. The view taken by Jahagirdar J. following these two decisions was that where a dispute about standard rent has already been raised by filing an application under Section 11 (1) of the Rent Act even before the issue of a notice under Section 12 (2) by the landlord, it was not necessary for the tenant to file a further application under Section 11 (3) read with Explanation I to Section 12 of the Rent Act in order to attract the provisions of S. 12 (3) (b) of the Rent Act.

34. Before we deal with the two petitions before us on their own merits, since one of the arguments advanced in Special Civil Application No. 1866 of 1977 on behalf of the tenant was that the tenant was entitled to the benefit of Section 12 (3) (b) in any case because he had deposited the entire amount of arrears by the time the judgment came to be passed and reliance was placed on the decision of Jahagirdar J. in Gulabchand's case (AIR 1980 Bom 307) it is necessary to refer to the view which Jahagirdar J. has taken with regard to the construction of Section 12 (3) (b) of the Rent Act. The learned Judge has taken the view that if the Court allows explicitly or by necessary implication the payment of rent on dates other than the first date of hearing and the tenant makes payments which are treated as payments as per the Court's order, it would be compliance with the provisions contained in S. 12 (3) (b) because the orders relating to the deposit of rent in the Court are orders of procedural nature and the Court must have power to condone the delay, if any, in the said payments under Section 148 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The learned Judge has further taken the view that even under the provisions of Section 12 (3) (b) of the Rent Act there is enough latitude to the Court to reschedule the dates of payment after they are once fixed. In Gulabchand's case, the learned Judge reiterated the view taken by him earlier in Mohanlal v. Khimraj, 1978 Mah LJ 611, where the learned Judge had held that any defaults made by the tenant in payment of rent as directed by the Court could be condoned by the Court and reliance was placed on the decision of this Court in Kalidas Bhavan v. Bhagvandas, (1958) 60 Bom LR 1359, where the view taken was that when the Court accepts the deposits made by the tenant, in the eye of law the Court must be taken to have permitted the tenant to make these deposits and to make them on dates on which these deposits were accepted. It was pointed out in that case that the deposit could not be made in the Court without the permission of the Court and the Court if knowing that the tenant has not made the deposit on the first day permits him to make the deposit on the subsequent date would in doing so, in substance if not in form, be permitting the tenant to make the deposit on the date on which it accepted the deposit. In Gulabchand's case, the learned Judge took the view that his view in Mohanlal's case following Chagla, C. J.'s judgment in Kalidas's case was in no way affected by the judgment of the Supreme Court in Ganpat v. Sashikant, AIR 1978 SC 955.

34-A. Now, it is well-known that Section 12 (3) (b) is attracted to a case which does not fall within Section 12 (3) (a). Section 12 (3) (a) applies to a case where rent is payable by the month and there is no dispute regarding the amount of standard rent or permitted increases. In such a case, if the rent or permitted increases are in arrears for a period of six months or more and the tenant neglects to make payment thereof until the expiration of the period of one month after the notice under Section 12 (2), the Court is bound to pass a decree for eviction. In a case which does not fall under Section 12 (3) (a), the power of the Court to pass a decree is regulated by Section 12 (3) (b) which is worded in a negative language. Section 12 (3) (b) provides that the Court will not pass a decree for possession if on the first day of hearing of the suit or on or before such other date as the Court may fix, the tenant pays or tenders in Court the standard rent and permitted increases due from him and thereafter the tenant continues to pay or tender in Court regularly such rent and permitted increases till the suit is finally decided and also pays costs of the suit as directed by the Court. In Venkatrao Anant v. Narayanlal, (1969) 71 Bom LR 607, this Court has taken the view that the obligation of the tenant to continue to pay or tender in Court standard rent or permitted increases continues even during the pendency of the appeal. It was held in that case that where the trial Court has fixed the standard rent under the Rent Act, it is obligatory for the tenant to pay the amount so fixed during the pendency of his appeal to the higher Court and non-payment of such rent will disentitle him to the protection under the Rent Act.

35. Now, in the case of Kalidas Bhavan v. Bhagvandas, (1958) 60 Bom LR 1359 Chagla C. J. had taken the view that the emphasis in Section 12 (3) (b) was not on payment on the first day of hearing but the emphasis is that the arrears should be paid before judgment is delivered in the suit for eviction. A Division Bench of this Court in Shantabai v. Ganpat (AIR 1976 Bom 288 : 1976 Mah LJ 332), took the view that the principle laid down by Chagla C. J. in Kalidas Bhavan v. Bhagvandas, should also be extended to the second condition in Section 12 (3) (b), namely, the obligation of the tenant to continue to pay or tender in Court regularly standard rent till the suit is finally decided. In Shantabai v. Ganpat, the Division Bench had taken the view that if on the facts of each case there is found to be substantial compliance with the provisions of Section 12 (3) (b), the Court may exercise its discretion and refrain from passing a decree for eviction.

36. It is necessary to refer in some detail to the facts of the case in Shantabai v. Ganpat because the decision of the Supreme Court in Ganpat v. Sashikant (AIR 1978 SC 955 : 1978 Mah LJ 550) was given in appeal against the Division Bench decision of this Court in Shantabai v. Ganpat. A dispute as to standard rent between the landlord and the tenant came to an end by a decision dated 1st September, 1960 whereby the standard rent was fixed at Rs. 54.25. Ganpat, the landlord, issued a notice on 29th June, 1960 demanding arrears of rent from May 1956 to 1960 at the rate of standard rent. A summary suit for eviction as well as for recovery of arrears of rent was filed by the landlord on 6th November, 1960. The Summons for Judgement came up for hearing on 13th April, 1961. On that date, the tenant paid a sum of Rs. 3,200/- into the Court, being the amount of standard rent up to 31st March, 1961. Leave was granted to the tenant to defend the suit. The suit came up for hearing on 30th August, 1962 when issues were framed. On that day, a sum of Rs. 1,042.10, being rent for the period 1st April, 1961 to 31st August, 1962, was paid. The suit was then adjourned from time to time from 4th October, 1962 to 5th June, 1963 and on one of these dates, which was

28th November 1962, the tenant paid a further sum of Rs. 162.75 as rent for the period 1st September 1962 to 30th November, 1962. Additional issues were framed on 5th June, 1963 and on that day, the tenant paid Rs. 325.50 as rent for the period December, 1962 to May, 1963 together with the amount of permitted increases. On 6th June 1963 evidence was recorded and a decree for possession was given on 18th June, 1963. This decree was, however, set aside on a technical ground by the appellate Bench of the Small Cause Court which held that the notice to quit was not a valid notice, but that decision was set aside by this Court and the matter was sent back to the appeal Bench. The appeal Bench took the view that the landlord was entitled to a decree for eviction under Section 12 (3) (a) and that even if the case was governed by Section 12 (3) (b), the tenant had not complied with the conditions thereof, so that it could not be said that the discretion vested in the Court to refuse to pass a decree for eviction. This decision of the appeal Bench was challenged before a Division Bench of this Court. In view of the fact that a dispute as to standard rent was pending in a civil revision application even on the expiry of the period of one month from the date on which notice under Section 12 (2) was given, the Division Bench ruled out the application of Section 12 (3) (a). So far as Section 12 (3) (b) was concerned, when it was contended before the Division Bench of this Court that the decision in Kalidas Bhavan v. Bhagvandas, (1958) 60 Bom LR 1359 was no longer good law, in view of the decision of the Supreme Court in Dhansukhlal's case (AIR 1968 SC 1109) where it was observed by the Supreme Court (at pp. 1112-1113):

"To be within the protection of that provision (Section 12 (3) (b)) the tenant must thereafter continue to pay or tender in Court regularly the rent and permitted increases till the suit is finally decided."

The Division Bench took the view that:

"... .. this appears to us to be only a paraphrase of the relevant provision and we are unable to appreciate how it can be said that the Supreme Court has even dealt with, much less overruled the decision of this Court in Kalidas Bhavan v. Bhagvandas, (1958) 60 Bom LR 1359."

The Division Bench found as a fact that the tenant had not strictly complied with the provision as to payment of rent regularly but observed that all payments required to be made were made before the judgment was delivered and if this was so, then the Court's discretion not to pass a decree for eviction was clearly not taken away. The Division Bench further observed:

"... .. even if the conditions of Section 12 (3) (b) are not strictly complied with, the Court has discretion, on the facts and circumstances of each case, to decline to pass a decree for eviction."

On facts the Division Bench held that there was substantial and sufficient compliance by the tenant of the provisions of S. 12 (3) (b) and that the circumstances of the case were such that the discretion of the Court be exercised in favour of the tenant. The effect of the Division Bench decision was that even if rent was not paid regularly during the pendency of the suit but if it was found that on the day on which the judgment was to be delivered the entire amount of arrears due up to that date had been paid, the tenant was entitled to the protection of S. 12 (3) (b).

37. The correctness of this judgment was challenged by the landlord in the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court referred to the earlier decision in Dhansukhlal's case and observed:

"... .. we think that the problem of interpretation and application of S. 12 (3) (b) need not trouble us after the decision of this Court in Dhansukhlal Chagganlal's case (AIR 1968 SC 1109) (supra) followed by the more recent decision in Harbanslal Jagmohandas v. Prabhudas Shivilal (AIR 1976 SC 2005) which completely covers the case before us."

We have earlier referred to the decision in Dhansukhlal's case. Referring to the provisions of Section 12 (3) (b) of the Rent Act, the Supreme Court had in that case observed as follows in paragraph 13:—

"To be within the protection of that provision, the tenant must not only pay all the arrears due from him on the first day of hearing of the suit, but he must thereafter continue to pay or tender in Court regularly the rent and permitted increases till the suit is finally decided."

These were the observations which the Division Bench of this Court had described as mere paraphrase of the section but which, according to the Supreme Court in Ganpat's case (AIR 1978 SC 955) had really concluded the construction of Section 12 (3) (b). After pointing out that the Rent Act interfered with the landlord's right to property and freedom of contract only for the limited purpose of protecting tenants from misuse of the landlord's power to evict them, in these days of scarcity of accommodation, by asserting his superior rights in property or trying to exploit his position by extracting too high rents from helpless tenants, the Supreme Court pointed out in Ganpat's case that the object of the Rent Act was not to deprive the landlord altogether of his rights in property which have also to be respected. Another object of the Rent Act was stated to be to make possible eviction of tenants who failed to carry out their obligation to pay rent to the landlord despite opportunities given by law in that behalf. The following observations are important:—

"Thus, Section 12 (3) (a) of the Act makes it obligatory for the Court to pass a decree when its conditions are satisfied as was pointed out by one of us (Bhagwati, J.) in Ratilal Balabhai Nazar v. Ranchodbhai Shankerbhai Patel, AIR 1968 Guj 172. If there is statutory default or neglect on the part of the tenant, whatever may be its cause, the landlord acquires a right under Section 12 (3) (a) to get a decree for eviction. But where the conditions of Section 12 (3) (a) are not satisfied, there is a further opportunity given to the tenant to protect himself against eviction. He can comply with the conditions set out in Section 12 (3) (b) and defeat the landlord's claim for eviction. If, however, he does not fulfil those conditions, he cannot claim the protection of Section 12 (3) (b) and in that event, there being no other protection available to him, a decree for eviction would have to go against him. It is difficult to see how by any judicial valour discretion exercisable in favour of the tenant can be found in Section 12 (3) (b), even where the conditions laid down by it are satisfied, to be strictly confined within the limits prescribed for their operation. We think that Chagla, C. J., was doing nothing less than legislating in Kalidas Bhavan's case ((1958) 60 Bom LR 1359) (supra), in converting the provisions of Section 12 (3) (b) into a sort of discretionary jurisdiction of the Court to relieve tenants from hardship. The decisions of this Court referred to above, in any case, make the position quite clear that Section 12 (3) (b) does not create any discretionary jurisdiction in the Court. It provides protection to the tenant on certain conditions and these conditions have to be strictly observed by the tenant who seeks the benefit of the section. If the statutory provisions do not go far enough to relieve the hardship of the tenant the remedy lies with the legislature. It is not in the hands of Courts."

The Supreme Court in these observations has in unambiguous words "disapproved of the decision in Kalidas Bhavan v. Bhagvan- das, the effect of which decision, according to the Supreme Court, was that the provisions of Section 12 (3) (b) were converted into a sort of discretionary jurisdiction of the Court to relieve tenants from hardships. The effect of the observations of the Supreme Court quoted above clearly is that the conditions specified in Section 12 (3) (b) have to be strictly observed if the tenant seeks the benefit of that section.

38. Section 12 (3) (b) prescribes two conditions, as already pointed out, namely, that the arrears will be deposited or paid on the first day of hearing and thereafter rent must be paid or tendered in Court regularly till the suit is decided, and now in view of the decision of this Court in Venkatrao Anant v. Narayanlal, (1969) 71 Bom LR 607, cited above, till the appeal is also decided. In Ganpat v. Sashikant (AIR 1978 SC 955) the decision of the Division Bench of this Court was set aside by the Supreme Court. The effect of setting aside the decision of this Court can only be that the approach which was adopted by the Division Bench in holding that the tenant was entitled to the protection of Section 12 (3) (b) because the entire amount had been paid before the date of the judgment though it was not paid regularly, and that there was, therefore, a substantial compliance with Section 12 (3) (b) was not approved. The Division Bench in Shantabai v. Ganpat (AIR 1976 Bom 288) applied the principle enunciated by Chagla C. J. in Kalidas Bhavan v. Bhagvandas, (1958) 60 Bom LR 1359. In our view, the effect of the decision of the Supreme Court in Dhansukhlal's case (AIR 1968 SC 1109) and in Ganpat v. Sashikant can be nothing else except that the decision in Kalidas Bhavan v. Bhagvandas must be treated as no longer good law.

39. Now, when these decisions were cited before Jahagirdar J., the learned Judge seems to have read the decision in Ganpat's case as merely holding that if the conditions in Section 12 (3) (b) were not satisfied, the Court has no discretion to pass a decree for eviction and, according to the learned Judge, the other part of Chagla C. J.'s judgment in Kalidas's case laying down that there is compliance with the provisions contained in Section 12 (3) (b) even if the tenant has made payments after the dates originally fixed by the Court and if the said delay was condoned and payments were accepted by the Court, has not been touched at all by the Supreme Court in Ganpat's case. As we have already pointed out, the judgment of the Division Bench against which the Supreme Court was deciding the appeal in Ganpat's case expressly proceeded on the footing that where payments had been accepted by the Court, the tenant will be entitled to the benefit of Section 12 (3) (b) on the principle of substantial compliance. It is this view which has been set aside by the Supreme Court. The observations of the Supreme Court that the conditions contained in S. 12 (3) (b) have to be strictly observed by the tenant who seeks the benefit of the section emphasise the fact that there was no question of any substantial compliance and if the conditions laid down are not satisfied, there is no power in the Court to grant any relief to the tenant. The very concept of extending the time for deposit which is specifically provided by the provisions in Section 12 (3) (b) as a condition which is strictly to be satisfied by the tenant would imply that the Court has a discretion to accept payment which is made otherwise in accordance with the requirement of Section 12 (3) (b). It is this discretion which the Supreme Court has held the Court did not have and which was being exercised so far by Courts in view of the decision in Kalidas Bhavan v. Bhagvandas, (1958) 60 Bom LR 1359. We are, therefore, unable to concur with the view taken by Jahagirdar, J. that the decision of the Supreme Court in Ganpat v. Sashikant does not overrule the decision of Chagla C. J. in Kalidas Bhavan v. Bhagvandas.

40. We shall now deal with the two petitions on facts. Now, so far as Special Civil Application No. 1872 of 1977 is concerned, admittedly within one month from the date of the receipt of the notice under Sec. 12 (2) of the Rent Act, there was neither an application made for fixation of standard rent, nor were the arrears due paid. That was, therefore, a case where the provisions of Section 12 (3) (a) were clearly attracted. The view which the learned Assistant Judge had taken was based on the fact that a dispute with regard to standard rent could be raised also by a reply to the notice. If that was not the correct view and there was no other circumstance which took the case out of Section 12 (3) (a), in our view, the learned Assistant Judge was in error in holding that the plaintiff was not entitled to a decree for eviction. Consequently the petition will have to be allowed. The judgment of the learned Assistant Judge and the judgment of the Joint Civil Judge, Junior Division, declining the plaintiff a decree for possession will have to be set aside and the plaintiff will be entitled to a decree for possession in addition to the decree for Rs. 1,547.44 passed by the Civil Judge, Junior Division, Kolhapur. The plaintiff will also be entitled to mesne profits from the date of the decree. The plaintiff will be entitled to the cost of the suit and the appeal. There will, however, be no order as to costs of this petition.

So far as the other petition, being Special Civil Application No. 1866 of 1977, is concerned, it is also difficult to resist the conclusion that the claim of the plaintiff fell within the provisions of Section 12 (3) (a) of the Rent Act because the tenant had neither paid the amount of arrears of rent nor filed an application for fixation of standard rent under Section 11 (3) read with Explanation 1 to Section 12. Even otherwise, the view taken by the Appeal Court that the provisions of Section 12 (3) (b) were also not complied with appears to be correct because the finding is that the tenant had not paid rent regularly as required. There is thus no reason to interfere with the decree passed by the learned District Judge in favour of the landlord. Special Civil Application No. 1866 of 1977 must, therefore, stand dismissed. Rule will stand discharged. However, in the circumstances of the case, we make no order as to costs of this petition.

Order accordingly.

K. H. Bhabha with S. N. Variava, for Petitioners; T. R. Andhyarujina with S. N. Naik (for No. 1) and G. K. Nilkhant (for No. 2), for Respondents.

ORDER:— The effect of a power cut upon minimum demand charge payable by a consumer of electricity to the supplier thereof has to be determined in this writ petition.

2. The petitioners, Mukand Iron and Steel Works Ltd., are manufacturers of iron and steel products. They have a plant at Kalwe, Thane. They are large consumers of electricity supplied to them by the 1st respondent, the Maharashtra State Electricity Board. On 3rd August, 1965 the Board entered into an agreement with the company. Clause 3 of the agreement states that the Board shall supply to the company and the company shall take from the Board all the electrical energy required at its plant at Kalwe up to a maximum of 15,000 K. V. A. (kilo volt amperes), which quantum is referred to as the "contract demand". Under Clause 7 (a) the company is entitled to apply to the Board for supply in excess of the contract demand and the Board is obliged to make it available within the stated period provided it has the additional energy available and it is economical to do so. Under Clause 7 (c), if additional supply is made available, the contract demand specified in Clause 3 is increased to that extent. (It must here be stated that the contract demand was in fact raised at the company's request to 48, 500 K. V. A.). Under Clause 8 (a) the company is obliged to pay to the Board every month charges "for electrical energy supplied to the consumer during the preceding month at the rates specified in the suppliers' standard tariff schedule", which is attached to the agreement, and in force from time to time. If, during the "currency of this agreement the above referred standard tariff schedule is revised, increased or decreased, such revised, increased or decreased, tariff from the date specified shall apply to the consumer during and for the unexpired period of the present agreement". Under clause 9, the agreement is to operate for a minimum period of 7 years and from year to year thereafter terminable by six months' notice on either side. Under clause 10, if the supplier discontinues electrical supply in consequence of any breach or default on the part of the company entitling the Board to do so, the amount of charges for electrical energy already supplied and all other moneys then payable under the agreement become due and recoverable forthwith, and during the period of such discontinuance the company continues to remain liable "to pay the minimum charges and minimum guarantee payable hereunder". Under the terms of the tariff annexed to the agreement the "demand charge" is stated to be Rs. 16.00 per month per K. V. A. of the billing demand. The "energy charge" is separately stated. The tariff states that for consumers opting for payment of monthly minimum charges, demand charges based on the KVA of the billing demand would be the minimum bill. A minimum annual bill at Rs. 240.00 per K. V. A. demand would be charged on the actual highest demand established by the consumer during the 12 month period or 75% of the contract demand. "Maximum demand" is defined to mean the average KW/KVA supplied during the 30 minutes' period (or any such shorter period as may be prescribed by the Board) of maximum use. "Contract demand" is defined to mean the maximum KW/KVA for the supply of which the Board undertakes to provide facilities from time to time. "Billing demand" is defined to mean the demand used for billing purposes and is computed as the highest of the following: the maximum demand established during the month; 75% of the contract demand.

3. It will be seen that for the purposes of billing a two-tier system is adopted. For the units of energy supplied there is one form of charge based on the kilo watt hours (KWH) of supply and for the energy demand there is a rate of charge based upon the K. V. A. The contract sets out the contract demand; the Board is obliged to supply to the company the contract demand and the company is liable to pay to the Board a minimum of 75% of the contract demand.

4. A power cut was imposed by the Government of Maharashtra on 1st Oct., 1974 by reason whereof the Board could not supply and the consumer could not consume more units of energy and more than the K. V. A. therein specified. The permissible quotas imposed by the power cut varied from time to time.

5. The petitioner submits that it was incumbent upon the Board to take the permissible quota as the revised contract demand under the agreement and to take into consideration 75% thereof for the purposes of computing the minimum billing demand.

It was urged by Mr. Bhabha, learned counsel for the company, that, for the purposes of billing, the basis had to be the permissible quota available to the company; the same had to be treated as the contract demand and the billing demand, consequently, had to be either 75% of the permissible quota or the actual consumption, whichever was higher. In Mr. Bhabha's submission, this was a reasonable and commercial way to read the agreement, having regard to the supervening circumstance namely, the imposition of the power cut. He placed reliance in this regard upon clause 8 of the agreement.

6. Mr. Bhabha relied upon the judgment of the Supreme Court in M/s. Northern India Iron & Steel Co. v. State of Haryana, AIR 1976 SC 1100. One of the questions before the Court was whether the Haryana State Electricity Board was entitled to claim the demand charge from the appellant-company. There was a contract between the appellant and the H. S. E. B. It contained a force majeure clause. A substantial power cut was imposed and the appellant was not able to get the supply of energy according to the contract. A dispute arose as to whether the H. S. E. B. was, in the circumstances, entitled to get any demand charge. The two-tier system of the tariff was employed. The Supreme Court stated that it was meant for big consumers of electricity and it comprised (a) demand charges to cover investment, installation and the standing charges to some extent, and (b) energy charges for the actual amount of energy consumed. It was argued by the appellant that since the H. S. E. B. was not ready to serve it when it was ready to consume the maximum energy, the H. S. E. B. was not entitled to ask for the demand charge. On behalf of the H. S. E. B. it was asserted that it was entitled to assess and claim the full demand charge, irrespective of whether it was in a position to supply energy according to the demand of the consumer. The Supreme Court felt that the difficulty was not easy to solve. If it were to hold that for the H. S. E. B.'s inability to supply a fraction of the contract demand it could claim only the energy charge and not the demand charge, it would be very hard and injurious to it and the consumer would unjustifiably get energy at a very cheap rate. If, on the other hand, it were to hold that the consumer was liable to pay the entire demand charge even when, for no fault of it, it could get only a fraction of its demand resulting in its not being able to run its industry to its full capacity, it would be liable to pay a huge amount per month, which would not only be uneconomical but would seriously affect its economic structure. The Supreme Court was happy to find a just, equitable and legal solution of the difficulty by reason of the force majeure clause and it, therefore, felt that it was not necessary to resolve the extreme stands taken on either side. The Supreme Court held that the circumstances of the power cut which disabled the H. S. E. B. from giving the full supply to the appellant undoubtedly was a circumstance which disabled the appellant from consuming electricity as per the contract; this was a circumstance which was beyond its control and could not be considered otherwise by the Board. It entitled the appellant to a proportionate reduction of the demand charge under the force majeure clause.

7. Mr. Andhyarujina, learned counsel for the Board, drew my attention to the judgment of the Supreme Court in Amalgamated Electricity Co. Ltd. v. Jalgaon Borough Municipality, AIR 1975 SC 2235. He placed emphasis upon para 9 of that judgment which reads thus:

"Moreover it is obvious that if the plaintiff-company was to give bulk supply of electricity at a concessional rate of 0.5 anna per unit it had to lay down lines and to keep the power ready for being supplied as and when required. The consumers could put their switches on whenever they liked and therefore the plaintiff had to keep everything ready so that power is supplied the moment the switch was put on. In these circumstances it was absolutely essential that the plaintiff should have been ensured the payment of the minimum charges for the supply of electrical energy whether consumed or not so that it may be able to meet the bare maintenance expenses."

8. Mr. Andhyarujina also referred to a judgment of the Gujarat High Court in Gujarat Electricity Board v. Shri Rajratna Naranbhai Mills Co. Ltd., (1975) 16 Guj LR 90. After considering decisions of the Bombay, Calcutta, Madras and Punjab High Courts, Divan, C. J. observed that they correctly pointed out that the provision of a minimum charge in the agreement between a consumer and a supplier of electricity was but one of the modes of providing for a reasonable return to the supplier for the investment and capital outlay that it had made.

9. Mr. Andhyarujina drew my attention to the affidavit in reply to the petition filed by W. D. Paraskar, Superintending Engineer of the Board, in which it is stated that the requirement of billing a consumer for a minimum of 75% of the contract demand was because, according to the agreement between the consumer and the Board, the Board was obliged to make available the supply to the extent of the contract demand at all times during the currency of the agreement. A minimum charge was justified in view of the fact that the Board had to maintain in constant readiness such generating capacity irrespective of whether it was utilised by the consumer or not. It required an amount of capital cost to keep such generating capacity and facilities in constant readiness for a large consumer like the company. The Board also incurred the cost of maintaining the plant and provided for depreciation. The Board was entitled to be reimbursed for these. The Board had built a major grid receiving station at Kalwe where power was received from the Koyna Hydro Project, the Nasik Thermal Station and the Nuclear Station at Tarapur. It had a capacity of 500 MVA. It received power at 2,20,000 volts transmission, stepped-down to 1 lakh voltage through 4 step-down transformers of 125 MVA capacity. There were two more transformers of 25,000 KVA capacity which stepped-down voltage from 1,00,000 to 20,000 volts. The Board had laid a network of 100 K. V. transmission feeders emanating from Kalwe and reaching various load centres. The Board had also constructed 100 KV (1 lakh voltage) transmission feeders to serve major industrial loads like Standard Alkali, Nocil and the petitioner-company. To serve the company exclusively two circuits of 100 KV transmission feeders had been laid and two circuits were provided so that adequate capacity was available even in case of the breakdown of one circuit.

10. Mr. Andhyarujina submitted that the Board remained liable to supply to the company the contract demand the moment the power cut was lifted. To do so, the Board had to maintain in readiness the requisite generating capacity and facilities. The authorities showed that the minimum charge was levied for this purpose. The company, therefore, remained liable to pay the minimum charge even during the period of the power cut.

11. Mr. Bhabha contended that the Board was not required to maintain generating capacity and facilities for supply up to the contract demand during power cuts. He submitted that, in any event, what was stated in the affidavit made on behalf of the company in rejoinder showed that the Board was not in a position to supply the contract demand by reason of its own defaults and it could not take advantage of its own wrong. A statement in the Board's publicised figures showed that while the Board's generating capacity had in the period 1960-61 to 1977-78 gone up 3.55 times its connected load had increased 32.96 times. Mr. Bhabha also referred in this connection to the statements made in a letter written by the Board's instructing attorneys to the company's instructing attorneys.

12. As I see it, Mr. Andhyarujina's submission is justified. The authorities show and, in fact, Mr. Bhabha has not disputed that the minimum charge is intended to compensate the supplier for keeping in a state of readiness the generating capacity and facilities for supplying to a large consumer the quantum of the contract demand. The power cut operates for periods of time, not forever. The Board remains liable to supply to the consumer the quantum of the contract demand no sooner the power cut is lifted. Therefore, even during the period of the power cut the Board is obliged to maintain in a state of readiness the requisite generating capacity and facilities. Obviously, the Board cannot dismantle or even cease to maintain all its facilities and equipment during the period of the power cut. It must follow that even during the period of the power cut the company is obliged to make payment of the minimum charge. There is no provision in the agreement which contemplates a diminution of the minimum billing demand. I am not impressed by the argument on behalf of the company that the Board was not in a position to supply the quantum of the contract demand by reason of its own default. This case is made out in the company's affidavit in rejoinder. This case would, even if pleaded in the petition, require an investigation of facts outside the scope of a writ petition. And, if this were a fact, the company would have asked for a reduction of the contract demand, which it is entitled to do, not merely a reduction of the minimum charge during power cuts.

13. It must be pointed out that the Board has taken the existence of the power cut into account where the power cut has imposed a permissible quota which is lower than 75% of the contract demand; the Board has then treated the permissible quota as the minimum billing demand. As for example: The contract demand is 1000 KVA and the minimum billing demand is 750 KVA. If the permissible quota under the power cut is 650 KVA, the Board treats 650 KVA as the minimum billing demand. Mr. Bhabha's argument was, of course, that this was not enough and that in all cases the minimum billing demand should be deemed to be 75% of the permissible quota under the power cut. For the reasons that I have already stated, I am not inclined to accept this argument. It is also true that, as the Board has pointed out, where the permissible quota is greater than the minimum billing demand nothing prevents the consumer from consuming energy, roughly, up to the former. The power cut does impose, as Mr. Bhabha emphasised, a ceiling both on units of energy and on KVA but there is little material on record to uphold Mr. Bhabha's assertion that the company could not possibly reach the minimum billing demand having regard to the ceiling on the units of energy consumable by the company.

14. There is, in my judgment, nothing in the agreement which warrants the company's contention. In fact, to accept the contention would be tantamount to rewriting it. Nor can it be said that the Board is being unreasonable, which—as a public body—it cannot be permitted to be, in not adopting 75% of the permissible quota under the power cut as the minimum billing demand.

15. I pass on the two subsidiary contentions. On 25th February, 1975 the Board issued a circular giving a concession in minimum charges due to the power cut. The circular recorded that in view of the power cut the Board had decided "to give percentage pro rata concession in minimum monthly billing demand to H. T. consumers equal to relevant percentage of energy cuts applicable from time to time.". The circular made it clear that the concessions were not to be extended to consumers who defaulted even once in observing the power cut. On 6th April, 1976 the Board issued a circular modifying the circular of 28th February, 1975 and stated inter alia that "..... the relief in minimum charges due to power cut should be based on the percentage of either energy cut or demand cut (whichever is higher) as may be applicable from time to time to the relevant class of consumers, with effect from 1-4-1975."

16. On 11th June, 1976 the Board wrote to the company that the concession in minimum charges was not applicable for the period from October 1974 to December 1974 because the company had violated the power cut order and for the periods from January

1975 to April 1975, June 1975 to August 1975 and December 1975 to April 1976 it was under dispute and the matter was referred to the Head Office and field officers for necessary clarification. The concession was not made available to the company.

17. It is the case of the company that by reason of clause 5 (2) (a) of the Maharashtra Electricity Consumption of Electrical Energy (Restriction) Order, 1974, (the power cut order) as amended in April 1975, no consumer could be said to have committed a violation of the power cut unless the excess consumption exceeded one day's quota, and that it had not exceeded the consumption by one day's quota in any of the relevant months. Clause 5 (2) (a) as amended reads thus :

"Industrial consumer :— If a consumer consumes electrical energy in any week/two weeks/month, as the case may be in excess of his ceiling per week/per two weeks/per month, then his supply of electrical energy shall be disconnected forthwith and shall remain disconnected for such number of days as are equivalent to the excess consumption." I am at a loss to understand, nor has any explanation been given by Mr. Bhabha, how this clause enables the company to submit that no consumer could be said to have committed a violation of the power cut unless its excess consumption exceeded one day's consumption.

18. Pursuant to the circulars of 25th February 1975 and 6th April, 1976 refunds were given by the Board to the company between May 1975 and February 1977 in the aggregate sum of Rs. 7,75,330/-. Between March, 1977 and January, 1978 bills were issued on a different billing pattern and the company paid them under protest. On 23rd February, 1978 a circular was issued by the Board purporting to clarify the correct interpretation of the concessions contained in the two earlier circulars. The clarification was that the billing demand should be the higher of the actual maximum demand registered or 75% of the contract demand. On 18th March 1978 the Board wrote to the company that the earlier bills were under revision in view of revised instructions received and the total amount of Rs. 7,75,330/- would be recoverable from the company in six equal instalments effective from February, 1978. On 23rd April, 1978 this petition was filed and a stay was obtained.

19. It is contended in the affidavit in reply, but not seriously pressed by Mr. Andhyarujina, that the circular of 23rd Feb., 1978 sets out the correct interpretation of the two earlier circulars and, since the refund in the sum of Rs. 7,75,330/- was given upon an erroneous interpretation of the earlier circulars, the Board was entitled to recover that sum from the company. The circular of 23rd Feb., 1978 purports to place upon the earlier circulars an interpretation which they cannot possibly bear. In the guise of interpreting the earlier circulars, the Board cannot retrospectively revise the terms thereof. The Board has acted on the earlier circulars and has conferred the benefit thereof on consumers, including the company. The Board's claim for repayment of the sum of Rs. 7,75,330/- is, therefore, not tenable.

No prayer of the petition seems to be apposite in this regard.

20. In the circumstances, it is ordered that the 1st respondent is permanently restrained from recovering from the petitioners in any manner the sum of Rs. 7,75,330/- or any part thereof.

21. Having regard to the fact that the petitioners have succeeded only in respect of the Board's claim to recover the sum of Rs. 7,75,330/-, there shall be no order as to costs.

22. The 1st respondent shall not take any action to recover from the company the amounts stated in the letter dated 18th Mar., 1978 and consequential arrears for a period of 8 weeks from today.

Ordered accordingly.

TULPULE, J.

Abdul Samad Makhadum Baksh Sheikh and etc., Petitioners v. Sau. Sudha Anant Parakhe, Respondent.

Special Civil Applns. Nos. 2528 to 2531 of 1978, D/- 30-1-1982.

Bombay Rents, Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act (57 of 1947), S. 13 (1) (g) — Suit for eviction on ground of bona fide personal requirement — Evidence at variance with allegations in plaint — Held, decree of eviction on basis of case not made out in suit could not be sustained. (Civil P. C. (1908), O. 6, R. 2).

In civil cases no party should be taken by surprise and whatever case he has, has to be made out in the pleadings so that the defendant or the adversary has an adequate and reasonable opportunity to meet that case. In the absence of any such pleading the adversary would not be in a position to meet such a case. No case, which is not pleaded in civil cases, is or can be allowed to be made out by any amount of evidence. Such evidence has really to be ignored. (Para 14)

The plaintiff filed a suit for eviction under S. 13 (1) (g) on the ground that she required the premises for her bona fide personal occupation. She stated in the plaint that there were 30 to 32 persons in her family and that for want of accommodation they had to reside at different places, that the plaintiff herself was a tenant of another premises and the members of the family of the plaintiff went to reside in that premises and for that purpose she reasonably and bona fide required the premises in suit. The evidence that was led was however at variance with the allegations in the plaint. The evidence disclosed that the premises were nominally purchased in the name of the plaintiff by her husband and his 3 brothers jointly. The 3 brothers, apart from the family of the plaintiff consisting of her husband and three children, together contributed for the 30 to 32 members of the family. The four brothers were residing separately in different houses and they contributed in equal shares towards the dilapidated suit premises which they proposed to demolish for the purpose of constructing a new building comprising of four self-contained blocks for the use and residence of the 4 brothers. The brothers had jointly given money and deposited it for the purpose of construction and had made all preparations therefor. On the basis of the evidence adduced, the Court held that the plaintiff required the premises bona fide for her occupation and that she also required them reasonably and consequently granted a decree of eviction.

Held, the decree of eviction passed on the basis of a case which was never made out in the plaint allegation could not be sustained. The tenants were unaware that it was going to be the case of the plaintiff that she was a mere benamidar. The tenants did not know that the premises were purchased by the four brothers jointly by their joint income and that therefore, they held that property as tenants-in-common. The tenants did not also know that it was the requirement of these four families whose interest in the property was not disclosed at all and no claim on their behalf was made, that they were sought to be evicted. In spite of this absence of pleadings and absence of any such case, the Court allowed the plaintiff to lead evidence on matters which were not pleaded and granted a decree of eviction on basis of such evidence. Such a decree could not be upheld. AIR 1976 Bom 70 and 1979 Mah LJ 545, Rel. on.

A. C. Agarwal with Smt. Anita A. Agarwal, for Petitioner; C. G. Solshe, for Respondent.

ORDER:— These four petitions raise common question of law and fact. The respondent is the landlord and owner of Houses Nos. 136 and 137 situate in the Railway Line area at Solapur. The petitioners are tenants of the said premises along with others. The two houses which adjoin have in all amongst them seven tenants and seven tenements each occupied by a tenant.

2. The respondent purchased House No. 136 in a Court sale on 23rd April, 1969. Later House No. 137 was purchased under a deed in Feb., 1971. After thus purchasing the two houses, the respondent served upon the petitioners a notice to quit. That was on 3rd Sept., 1971. That notice claimed possession on several grounds. It appears that in the meantime on 6th Sept., 1976 the Municipal Corporation at Solapur has served a notice under Section 264 of the Corporations Act requiring the landlord-respondent to demolish the southern wall as it had become dangerous and was liable to fall. The respondent claimed possession on the ground that she required these premises for her bona fide personal occupation. She stated in the plaint that there are 30 to 32 persons in her family and that for want of accommodation they have to reside at different places at present, that the plaintiff herself is a tenant of another premises and the members of the family of the plaintiff went to reside in that premises and for that purpose she reasonably and bona fide required the premises in suit. She has stated that notices were issued to five tenants of these premises out of seven. In addition another ground which was made out was that the plaintiff wanted to construct a new building and that she has made arrangements therefor. Unless the tenements are vacated she would not be able to construct a new building thereon.

3. The tenants resisted the suit. They denied that the plaintiff required the premises bona fide for her occupation. They also contended that there was no necessity for recovering possession for the purposes of demolition and compliance with the notice issued by the Municipal Corporation.

4. The trial Court held that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree. It appears that during the pendency of these suits one of the tenants entered into a settlement with the plaintiff and surrendered possession. The plaintiff, therefore, is in possession at any rate of two rooms in the premises in question. - The other four suits came to be decreed.

5. Appeals were carried by the unsuccessful tenants to the District Court, Solapur, being Civil Appeals Nos. 251 to 254 of 1975. The appellate Court by its order dated 10th Jan., 1977 remitted the matter for recording evidence on the question of the dangerous condition of the suit premises and their immediate demolition "under the order of the Solapur Municipal Corporation", and directed it to return the finding along with the record.

6. After the finding was so returned by the trial Judge, the learned II Extra Assistant Judge, Solapur who heard these appeals, held that the plaintiff-landlady required the premises reasonably and bona fide for her occupation and that they were also required for the purposes of being demolished as required by the local authority. In that view of the matter, he dismissed the appeals and confirmed the decree passed by the trial Court. Aggrieved by those decisions and decrees the present petitions are filed.

7. In holding that the landlady required the premises bona fide for her occupation and that she also required them reasonably, the learned Extra Assistant Judge observed that the premises in question "seem to have been nominally purchased in the name of the respondent-landlady by her husband and husband's three brothers jointly". He also further pointed out that the husband of the plaintiff who was examined had stated that the four brothers had contributed in equal shares and that they have been residing separately in different houses. The learned Judge observed that they are probably doing so for want of sufficient accommodation. He also further found on the basis of the evidence which was adduced that the four brothers "propose to construct a new building after demolishing the present dilapidated houses for their residence"; that in this building they propose to construct four self-contained blocks for the use and residence of four brothers, that the brothers have jointly given money and deposited it for the purpose of construction and have made all preparations therefor. The learned Judge also found that the appellant-tenants seem to have "no personal knowledge as to why and with what purpose the respondent's husband and his brother purchased the suit houses in the name of the respondent". He observed that there was no evidence adduced by these tenants in that behalf.

8. The record discloses that during the trial and pendency of these proceedings the northern wall of the suit house had fallen. It appears that the premises are not in a satisfactory state of repairs. Affidavits were also filed when these petitions came for hearing that the southern wall in respect of which a notice for demolition has been issued by the Solapur Municipal Corporation and on the basis of which notice was issued and proceedings commenced was also demolished. It seems, therefore, to be clear that both the southern and northern walls of these premises have fallen leaving the intervening portion intact which is in the occupation of these four petitioners-tenants.

9. Shri Agarwal, who appeared for the petitioners, contended firstly that the cause of action on the basis of which the plaintiff-landlady had to claim possession on the ground that the premises are required for the immediate purpose of demolition as required by the local authority no more survives. The wall having fallen and the demolition achieved without requiring any of the petitioners to vacate, that ground on which possession was granted to the landlady-respondent no more survives and is not available to the landlady.

10. Shri Agarwal's second contention was that the Courts below have come to an erroneous conclusion that the plaintiff-landlady required the premises reasonably and bona fide for her personal occupation on the basis of a case which was never made out in the suit. He referred to the plaintiff's allegations and pointed out that it was nowhere stated in the plaint that she was a mere benamidar for the four brothers who had purchased the property in equal shares by their joint contribution. He further pointed out that the evidence was at variance with the allegations in the plaint. The plaint suggests as if it is the plaintiff's family which has about 30 to 32 persons, while that is not the fact. The four brothers including the plaintiff's husband and the four families have been staying separately in separate houses at separate places. They have grown up children and the tenor of the evidence suggests that they must have been living separately since a long time. If they are so staying separately, then it cannot be said that they were members of the plaintiff's family. The tenants were unaware that the property was purchased Benami in the name of the plaintiff by the four brothers jointly. The tenants were also unaware, as that was not disclosed, that it is for the combined families of the four brothers that the premises in question were claimed. In the absence of any pleading there could be no case made out by the defendants-tenant. Shri Agarwal made a serious grievance that the plaintiff could not succeed on a case which was never made out and never disclosed. He submitted that the statement in para. 7 of the plaint that the plaintiff wants to construct a new structure in the premises is neither in compliance with sub-section (1) (hhh) of S. 13 of the Rent Act nor can be utilized to assist the case of the plaintiff of her personal bona fide and reasonable requirement of the premises in question. He pointed out that no case under S. 13 (1) (hh) was made out at all. There is no allegation as was necessary, no certificate has been produced, and there was no compliance with the provisions of sub-section (3A) of S. 13 and no undertaking by the plaintiff. The case of the plaintiff, therefore, which has remained and which remains for consideration was only one of reasonable and bona fide requirement of the premises for herself. Shri Agarwal also pointed out that the learned appellate Judge did not consider or deal with the plaintiff's case as one falling under S. 13 (1) (hh) and only under S. 13 (1) (g) and one under Section 13 (1) (hhh). In the circumstances, he prayed that petitions be allowed, the decree passed by the Court below be set aside and the suits of the plaintiff be dismissed.

11. The plaintiff's allegations which are relevant are to be found and contained in paragraphs 4 to 7. We are not concerned with the allegations relating to alternative accommodation having been secured by the tenants as that does not seem to have figured at the time of the trial. The only two cases which survive and were agitated in the Courts below were whether the premises were required for the purposes of immediate demolition thereof as ordered by a local authority and the plaintiff bona fide and reasonably required the premises in question. Those are paras. 4 and 6.

12. It is in paragraph 6 that the plaintiff stated what I have extracted earlier above. In para. 7 the plaintiff has referred to the construction which she wants to make in the suit premises. But it is significant to note that the plaintiff did not say in that para. that she wants to demolish the premises and construct new premises therein for the purposes of her own occupation and that is how she requires the premises in question reasonably and bona fide. I have referred to some argument that was tried to be raised on behalf of the respondent on the basis of para. 7. It is conceded, and there was no alternative in view of the plaint allegations, that the plaintiff has not stated that she was a mere benamidar and the property was purchased by the four brothers including her husband. It was urged, however, that the plaintiff had alleged in the plaint that there were 30 to 32 persons in her family, and that it was a matter of evidence as to how these 30 to 32 members in the family were. The three brothers, apart from the family of the plaintiff consisting of her husband and three children, together contributed for these 30 to 32 members of the family. It was conceded, however, that the plaint does not say that the families of the three brothers in addition to the plaintiff's family also require accommodation. It was not stated in what way their need would entitle the plaintiff to file the suit. Ordinarily, in view of the statements made and the evidence such a possibility could not be urged and could not arise for consideration.

13. Section 13, sub-section (1) uses the expressions "himself or by any person for whose benefit the premises are held" and "a landlord shall be entitled to recover possession of any premises". The expression "himself" has been defined to mean not only the landlord alone but also his wife and children. It would cover the case of a family and all persons staying together including the dependants and other relations and also in certain circumstances a servant. A dependant may not be a member of the family. Nevertheless if he is staying with the landlord and is depending upon him he would be considered as a member of the family and one whose requirements will have to be considered in the expression 'himself'. Such a position does not exist in the present case. The evidence given by the plaintiff's husband clearly indicates that the four brothers have been staying separately and the same must have been the position since a long time though the exact dates have not been given. What he says is that they started living separately when they got married and when there were children the accommodation became insufficient. At the time of the evidence the total number of the members of the family from 32, as alleged in the plaint, came down to only 23 including children and family members of the other three brothers.

14. It is quite clear, therefore, that the case on which the plaintiff succeeded in the Court below was never made out on the plaint allegation. In Janba Daulatrao v. Rajeshkumar Ramjiwan, 1975 Mah LJ 746: (AIR 1976 Bom 70) following the decision in Ganpat v. Rameshwar, 1974 Mah LJ 774: (AIR 1975 Bom 225), it was observed that a plaintiff must "place before the Court all necessary details which are required for granting relief. A mere ipse dixit of the landlord that he requires the accommodation for his personal occupation is not enough. Unless the landlord gives such details, the tenant cannot be expected to meet the case of the landlord. I had occasion in similar circumstances to observe as to what must be stated by the plaintiff in cases where he claims that he required the premises bona fide for his personal occupation. In Sukha-deo v. Laxmibai, 1979 Mah LJ 545 I had observed, "It is not enough that this can be established (bona fide requirement) by a landlord by adducing evidence. The tenant has to meet such a case, and can only do so provided he is posted in advance as to what he has to meet". There it was a case of an application under the Rent Control Order before the Rent Controller. But that does not make any difference as the principle is the same. There the application filed by the landlord was devoid of particulars and was bare. It was, therefore, held that the tenant was necessarily prejudiced. In the absence of such comparative data and material being available indicating as to how the landlord requires the premises bona fide for his personal occupation, the tenant in meeting the case of the landlord would be gravely prejudiced and "it would permit a landlord to make out a case at the time of trial in any manner he liked, and the tenant would have no opportunity and occasion to meet such a case which is sprung in his face for the first time. This is exactly what has happened in the present case. The tenants were unaware that it was going to be the case of the plaintiff that she was a mere benamidar. The tenants did not know that the premises were purchased by the four brothers jointly by their joint income. They, therefore, held that property as tenants-in-common. The tenants did not also know that it is the requirement of these four families whose interest in the property was not disclosed at all and no claim on their behalf was made, that they are sought to be evicted. The same applies to the other allegations. In spite of this absence of pleadings and absence of any such case, the Court below allowed the plaintiff to lead evidence on matters which were not pleaded. It is elementary in civil cases that no party should be taken by surprise and whatever case he has, has to be made out in the pleadings so that the defendant or the adversary has an adequate and reasonable opportunity to meet that case. In the absence of any such pleading the adversary would not be in a position to meet such a case. No case, which is not pleaded in civil cases, is or can be allowed to be made out by any amount of evidence. Such evidence has really to be ignored.

15. In view of this position it is really not possible to uphold the decrees passed in this case. Shri Solshe for the respondent contended that even if the plaintiff had not made out a case that the property was purchased by all the four brothers, at least so far as her family was concerned, viz., her husband and her two children, who are college going, were in need and their requirement ought to be considered. It is true that such a limited need of the plaintiff would have been required to be considered if the plaintiff would have come out honestly with a case of this kind. The essence of S. 13, sub-section (1) (g) is that the requirement must be bona fide. A bona fide requirement or need is an honest requirement. It can hardly be said that the plaintiff was honest in making these allegations and trying to support them by evidence about which there was not a whisper in the plaint. If the plaintiff had not been honest in making a disclosure of all the circumstances, details and particulars which were relevant and vital, then the plaintiff can hardly claim and request that the case should be considered as bona fide for her own personal occupation. Shri Solshe clearly conceded that the plaintiff's allegations cannot be stretched to bring the suit under S. 13 (1) (hh). He, however, submitted that the plaintiff's case for possession on the ground that the premises were required for immediate demolition as ordered by the local authority will survive.

16. I am unable to think that there is any substance in this contention also. When the affidavits at the commencement of the hearing of these petitions were filed, Shri Solshe did not ask for any time and was prepared to go on with the petitions. The affidavits clearly show that the wall has been demolished. In the absence of any controversy of those statements, in the affidavit, the southern wall must be held to have been demolished. It is true that the affidavits do not say as to who demolished the wall. The requirement of the Municipal Corporation to demolish the southern wall has been fulfilled and, therefore, immediate cause of requirement of the terms for the purpose of demolition of southern wall no more exist. In the circumstances the ground under Section 13 (1) (hh) is also no more relevant.

17. Lastly Shri Solshe referred to a decision reported in Mrs. M. Davidson v. Asma Khatun, (1966) 70 Cal WN 967, which is entirely inapplicable. The facts in that case and the instant case differ. There the entire family including mother and brothers (children of the mother) were staying together. Such a large family since was living together, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to ask for possession on the ground that she required the premises reasonably and bona fide. I do not understand how that case is applicable to the facts of the present case.

18. The result is that the petitions have to be allowed. The decrees passed by the Courts below set aside and the suits filed by the plaintiff-respondent dismissed. There will be no order as to costs of the suit. Rule absolute. No order as to costs.

Petitions allowed.

T. N. Subramaniam, for Plaintiff; N. V. Adhia, for Defendant No. 2.

ORDER :— This is a chamber summons mainly to bring on record the respondents as defendants Nos. 1 (a) and 1 (b), as the executrices of the last Will and testament of the 1st defendant, in the place and stead of the 1st defendant who, it appears, was dead even at the time of the institution of the suit.

2. A few facts are necessary for the appreciation of the controversy raised before me. The defendant No. 1 was the owner of a unit in an industrial estate, called A-Z Industrial Estate at Ferguson Road, Lower Parel in Bombay. Defendant No. 2, a firm, carried on business in the said unit on the basis of a leave and licence agreement. In Sept., 1976, by a written agreement, defendant No. 2 agreed to sell to the plaintiff its running business and the benefit of the tenancy rights which, according to defendant No. 2, it had in the said unit and further agreed that if it acquired the ownership of the said unit from defendant No. 1, the same would also be transferred to the plaintiff. Thereafter, in Suit No. 1744 of 1974, filed in this Court by defendant No. 1 herein against defendant No. 2 herein, certain consent terms were arrived at whereby defendant No. 1 agreed to sell the said unit to defendant No. 2 on the payment of a certain amount. It is the case of the plaintiff that sometime shortly prior to March, 1979, defendant No. 1, through defendant No. 2, agreed to sell to the plaintiff the said unit along with 5 shares in the co-operative society and put the plaintiff in possession of the said unit pursuant to that agreement. It is further contended that on 28th March, 1979, a draft agreement regarding the said purchase was finalised but the same could not be signed for reasons which are not relevant here. The present suit, namely Suit No. 699 of 1981, was filed in March or April, 1981 by the plaintiff for specific performance of the said agreement and it is prayed therein that the defendants be ordered and decreed to specifically perform the said sale agreement which has been set out in para 5 of the plaint. The plaint was lodged on 30th March, 1981. It appears that, at that time, the defendant No. 1 was already dead, she having died on 14th July, 1979. It was on 16th Nov., 1979 that the plaintiff came to know that defendant No. 1 had died prior to the institution of the suit and left a registered Will wherein the respondents were appointed as the executrices. It was only in Jan., 1982 that the plaintiff was able to find out the address of the respondents, on the same being furnished to the plaintiff by the learned advocate of defendant No. 2. The present summons has been taken out by the plaintiff on 25th Feb., 1982.

3. Practically the only contention raised by Mr. Adhia, the learned counsel for defendant No. 2, to show cause against the chamber summons, is that, as the defendant No. 1 was dead at the time of the institution of the suit, the suit against her is a nullity and no application can be made to bring her heirs on record or to bring her legal representatives on record in her place and stead.

4. The only question is, whether the respondents could be brought on record under the provisions of O. 1, R. 10 of Civil P. C., 1908. The relevant clause of the said Rule is clause 2, which runs as follows :—

“(2). The Court may at any stage of the proceedings, either upon or without the application of either party, and on such terms as may appear to the Court to be just, order that the name of any party improperly joined, whether as plaintiff or defendant, be struck out, and that the name of any person who ought to have been joined, whether as plaintiff or defendant, or whose presence before the Court may be necessary in order to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit, be added.” It appears to me that it is well settled proposition in law that where the suit is a complete nullity the provisions of this clause will not come into play and no application can be entertained to join any party as a plaintiff or defendant. The main question will be whether the suit can be considered to be a nullity in the present case.

5. In considering this question, I might refer to some of the cases cited by the learned counsel. In Rangrao Vyankatesh v. Kashinath Dhondur, AIR 1947 Nag 73, which decision was relied upon by Mr.

Subramaniam, it has been held that O. 1, R. 10 (1) presupposes that the institution of the suit, that is, the presentation of the plaint, is proper. When the presentation of the plaint is proper the suit cannot be treated as void. In that case, the suit was for rectification of an instrument executed in favour of one Kashinath and one Sadashiv and it was instituted in the name of Kashinath and Sadashiv as plaintiffs, but it was subsequently discovered that Sadashiv had died only 3 days prior to the institution of the suit. The sons and widow of Sadashiv thereafter applied for being substituted as his legal representatives. This was allowed by the trial Court. It was held, in a civil revision application, by Niyogi, J., that the suit was properly presented so far as Kashinath was concerned and he could prosecute the suit on his own account as if he was the sole plaintiff in the case. The suit vis-a-vis Sadashiv was certainly void and his legal representatives could not be brought on record under O. 22, R. 3, Civil P. C., 1908. But O. 1, R. 10 (2) was applicable to the case and hence the order of substitution was not illegal. The fact that Kashinath wrongly included the name of a dead person in his plaint did not make any difference. In Bai Pani v. Madhabhai, AIR 1953 Bom 356, Chagla, C. J. held that an effective order under O. 1, R. 10 can only be made provided there is an appeal before the Court, but if the appeal is a nullity, such as when it is presented by the pleader of a person who is already dead, then any order made in that appeal is equally a nullity. The appeal thus being a nullity, an order for substitution of a legal representative in place of the deceased appellant cannot be made. It is true that, in that case, it was held that no substitution could be made, but the discussion in that judgment makes it clear that, the said view was taken only because the sole appellant was dead at the time when the appeal was filed. In fact, in distinguishing the case of Alabhai Vajsurbhay v. Bhura Bhaya, AIR 1937 Bom 401, Chagla, C. J. has observed (in para 6 of the said report) as follows:—

“Now, the Bombay case is clearly distinguishable because that was not a case of an appeal being preferred against a sole respondent who was dead at the date when the appeal was preferred. That was a case where the appeal was preferred against several respondents and the appeal was properly instituted against some of the respondents who were alive at the date when the appeal was instituted. Therefore, it could not be said that the appeal was a nullity. There was a proper and effective appeal before the Court and really the question of bringing the legal representatives of the respondents who had died before the appeal was preferred was not so much a question of substitution as a question of adding is the respondents who were already before the Court, and there can be no doubt that if a suit or an appeal is effectively before the Court, the question of addition of parties is regulated by O. 1, R. 10.”

Similar observations are also found in the decision of a Division Bench of the Mysore High Court in C. Muttu v. Bharath Match Works, AIR 1964 Mys 293 at page 295. It has been observed there as follows:

“A careful review of the decisions of the several High Courts relating to substitution of a defendant in a suit in place of the original defendant makes it clear (1) that no such substitution can be permitted in a case where there was a sole defendant, (2) where there are more defendants than one and one of them was dead when the suit was filed, the Courts have held that the legal representatives of the deceased defendant can be brought on record subject to any question of limitation that may be raised by the legal representatives of the deceased person who were brought on record as the suit had been validly presented in so far as the living defendants are concerned.”

With respect, I am in full agreement with these observations.

6. As against these decisions, reliance was sought to be placed by Mr. Adhia on the decision of Narula, C. J. of the Punjab and Haryana High Court, sitting as a single Judge, in Joginder Singh v. Krishan Lal, AIR 1977 Punj & Har 180, where it was held that the question of substituting the legal representatives of only such a person under O. 22, R. 4 of Civil P. C. can arise who was alive at the time when the suit was instituted and has died during the pendency of the suit. The case of a person who had died before the institution of the suit or the appeal, and who was erroneously impleaded as a party, does not fall within the purview of O. 22, R. 4 of the Code. In my view this decision is of no assistance to Mr. Adhia at all. In fact, a perusal of the judgment makes it quite clear that the decision, setting aside the order of the lower Court directing the legal representative of some of the defendants, who were dead prior to the institution of the suit, to be brought on record, was set aside on the footing that the only real defendant in the suit was dead at the time when the suit was instituted and the learned Chief Justice has nowhere said that, this rule would be applicable to a case where there were several defendants and it could not be said that only one of them was the real defendant and that defendant was dead at the time of the institution of the suit.

7. In the present case it is the admitted position that some of the defendants are alive and it is not as if defendant No. 1 was the only real defendant in the suit and in such a case, in my view, it is the settled position as shown by the decisions referred to earlier, that the mere fact that one of the defendants was dead at the time of the institution of the suit does not render the suit a total nullity so that the heirs of the deceased defendant cannot be brought on record at all. It is nobody's case that the application for bringing the heirs of the deceased defendant No. 1 on record is not made bona fide. It is true that there has been some delay in making the application but, as the facts set out earlier clearly show, it was only in January 1982 that the addresses of the respondents were furnished to the plaintiff by the learned advocate for defendant No. 2 and the chamber summons has been taken out as early as 24th Feb., 1982, hence, there is no such delay as would defeat the application of the plaintiff.

8. In the result the chamber summons is made absolute in terms of prayers (a) and (b), it being ordered that the respondents be brought on record in the suit as defendants Nos. 1 (a) and 1 (b) respectively as the executrices of the last will and testament of the deceased 1st defendant and in her place and stead. Cost of the chamber summons to be costs in the cause.

Ordered accordingly.

Calcutta High Court

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 1

B. C. RAY, J.

Ram Narayan Keshori and others, Petitioners v. University of Calcutta and others, Respondents.

C. R. No. 7103 (W) of 1979. D/- 9-9-1981.

Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Education — Unfair means — Natural justice — Students charged with adopting unfair means — Charge levelled, held proved in view of report of examiner and evidence tendered by him before Committee — Students not allowed to adduce rebuttal evidence or to cross-examine witness — There is denial of natural justice.

It is well settled that a public authority while exercising disciplinary powers having civil consequences is under an obligation to observe the principles of natural justice. What do the principles of natural justice mean or in other words what does the term audi alteram partem mean. Is that mere formality to be observed by giving a copy of the charge sheet to the party proceeded against and asking him to explain and that will be a sufficient compliance of the principles of natural justice. When a report is relied upon or some witness is examined at the back of the party charged against and decision is made in the disciplinary proceeding solely on the basis of that evidence or on the basis of the report it is not necessary to conform to the principles of natural justice to give the party a reasonable opportunity by asking him to be present at the time when the witness is examined and also allowing him to cross examine the witnesses and/or to adduce any evidence to controvert the statements or evidence of the particular witness and to confront him with report relied upon. If that position is accepted then the whole foundation and the basic principles of natural justice will be a formality and will be illusory and futile. (Para 6)

Where the examiner on whose report disciplinary proceedings were initiated against certain students was not examined by the sub-committee appointed by the Board of Discipline of the University to investigate into the charge in presence of the students concerned nor the students were ever intimated to be present in the meeting of the sub-committee when that particular witness would be examined nor any opportunity was given to the students to adduce evidence to controvert the evidence adduced by this witness and/or to cross examine this witness, the order of the University Council cancelling the examination of the students on basis of the resolution of the Board of Discipline that the students were guilty of breach of discipline, was liable to be set aside on ground of denial of natural justice. The said examination was held at Pischall Hall, Darbhanga Building College Street Campus, on and from Aug. 29; 1978 to Sept. 19, 1978 and Classification practice (paper II) examination was held on Sept. 15, 1978. On or about May 24, 1978, the result of the said examination was published but as regards the result of the petitioners they were not published and were withheld with the remark "result withheld" against the name of each of the petitioners. Thereafter on Mar. 28, 1978 copies of charge-sheets were issued by the Secretary, Board of Discipline, to the petitioners intimating them of the charges brought against them and directing them to appear at the meeting of the sub-committee of the Board of Discipline which was entrusted to investigate into the cases of Breach of discipline at the said Lib. Sc. Examination held in 1978 to be held on 6-4-1979 at 3 p. m. It has also been stated in the said notice if the petitioners defaulted in appearing before the sub-committee on the date of the meeting as mentioned hereinbefore the matter would be decided ex parte without any further reference to them. One of the copies of the charge-sheets as well as one of the copies of the notices have been annexed as annexure A to the writ petition. It has been stated that the said notices are vague and the same did not contain relevant particulars in regard to the said charge-sheet. It has also been submitted that no copy of the report alleged to have been submitted by the examiner Shri P. C. Banerjee was served on any of the petitioners though investigation was sought to be made by the sub-committee on the basis of the above report. The petitioners it is stated, appeared before the sub-committee as directed by the said notice and denied the allegations levelled against them in the aforesaid charge sheet. It has also been stated that while they appeared before the sub-committee the answer scripts which were alleged to be vitiated by copying were not produced nor were the same shown to them in order to give them a reasonable opportunity of knowing in particular the nature of the charges and in controverting them properly. It has been further stated that no evidence either oral or documentary was recorded by the sub-committee in their presence nor they were allowed to cross examine the witnesses examined and/or to controvert the evidence so recorded by adducing evidence in support of their case. The sub-committee adopted certain resolutions at its meeting which were considered by the Board of Discipline at its meeting on May 10, 1979 and the particular matter in question appeared as item no. 9 of the proceeding. A resolution was adopted by the Board of Discipline to the effect that the petitioners' examination be cancelled and the said resolution was recommended to be submitted before the Calcutta University Council for their approval. Accordingly on May 18, 1979 the Calcutta University Council at its meeting under agenda No. 31 considered and resolved that the resolution of the Board of Discipline dated 10-5-1979 with regard to the candidates bearing roll Nos. mentioned therein be approved. This resolution of the Calcutta University Council was intimated by the Secretary, Board of Discipline, to the Head of the Department of Library Science, Calcutta University under communication No. BD/255/RA/B-Lib. Sc./78 dated 2-7-1979 which has been annexed as annexure D to the petition.

3. It has been submitted on behalf of the petitioners that the impugned resolution adopted by the Calcutta University Council is vitiated by non-observance of the principles of natural justice inasmuch as the sub-committee appointed by the Board of Discipline in accordance with the provisions of Ordinance 62 framed under the Calcutta University Act, 1966 did not allow the petitioners any opportunity to be present at the time when it examined Shri P. C. Banerjee on whose report the dis-disciplinary proceeding was initiated and on whose statements as recorded by the sub-committee the charges were held to have been brought home. It has also been contended that the sub-committee which under proviso to Cl. (5) of Ordinance 62 of the Calcutta University First Ordinances, 1966 requires to be consisted of three members and the quorum in the meeting shall be two did not adopt the impugned resolution at the meeting wherein Shri P. C. Banerjee was examined inasmuch as in that meeting quorum was not there as according to the petitioners only one member of the committee, i. e., respondent No. 6 was present. The other member, respondent No. 7, Dr. A. K. Ohdedar, Chief Librarian, was absent and the third member Shri P. C. Banerjee of the said sub-committee was not permitted to participate in the proceeding of the meeting as a member by an order of the Vice-Chancellor on the ground that it was at his instance this prosecution and/or disciplinary proceeding was started and respondent no. 5 was asked to be present as an observer in his place. It has therefore been submitted that the meeting of this sub-committee wherein Shri P. C. Banerjee was examined is also bad and the proceeding adopted in the said meeting is illegal and of no effect as it is in contravention of the mandatory provisions of Ordinance 62 Cl. (5) of the Calcutta University First Ordinances, 1966. The instant Rule was issued but the prayer for interim order was not allowed.

4. Mr. Chakraborty, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioners, has submitted in the first place that the impugned resolution adopted by the sub-committee wherein Shri P. C. Banerjee was examined is bad on the ground of non-observance of the principles of natural justice as the said witness was examined without intimating the petitioners to be present or in other words, not in the presence of the petitioners and without giving the petitioner any opportunity of cross examining the witnesses and also of adducing evidence to controvert the statements and/or evidence given by Shri P. C. Banerjee. It has been next submitted by Mr. Chakraborty that at the meeting when Shri P. C. Banerjee was examined by the sub-committee there was no quorum and only one member i. e., respondent no. 6 Dr. Barua alone was present and respondent no. 5 as an observer was present and Vice-Chancellor was present. Therefore this meeting is bad as there was no quorum and resolution adopted at the meeting is also illegal and unenforceable being contrary to the mandatory provisions of Ordinance 62 Cl. (5) of the above Ordinances. It has therefore been submitted by Mr. Chakraborty that the impugned resolution adopted by the Calcutta University Council approving of the resolution of the Board of Discipline taken at its meeting dated 10-5-1979 should be cancelled, quashed and set aside.

5. Mr. Roy, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the Calcutta University, has on the other hand produced before this Court the answer scripts of most of the petitioners and referring to them submitted that the answer scripts will show the allegations that have been made in the report of Shri P. C. Banerjee which has been annexed as annexure A to the affidavit-in-opposition sworn by Shri Pratip Kumar Mukherjee Registrar of the University of Calcutta. It has been further submitted by Mr. Roy that in the meeting of the sub-committee appointed by the Board of Discipline in accordance with the provisions of Ordinance 62 of the said Ordinance two members were present. This has been stated in para. 19 of the affidavit-in-opposition where it has been stated that the respondent no. 7, an expert on the subject was present as a member of the sub-committee and he along with respondents nos. 5 and 6 investigated into the charges and thus denied the statements made in paras 23 and 24 of the petition that only one member of the sub-committee was present in the said meeting and not Dr. Ohdedar (respondent no. 7) who is an expert on the subject was present. It has also been stated in para 15 of the affidavit-in-opposition that the petitioners were confronted with the report as also the answer scripts but no satisfactory explanations about the similarity of answers as well similar mistakes committed were furnished by any of the petitioners who appeared before the committee. This statement in p. 15 of the affidavit-in-opposition has been affirmed as true to information from the respondents nos. 5 and 6 and records of the University. However the proceedings of the sub-committee have not been produced before this Court to show if this report was produced and/or placed before the petitioners when they appeared before the sub-committee. Mr. Roy also submitted that principles of natural justice require that definite charges are to be levelled and the copies of the charge-sheets are to be given to the persons charged against and they will be asked to show cause. It is not necessary that the persons charged against have to be given an opportunity of cross examining witnesses or that the witnesses are to be examined in his presence. In support of this submission of Mr. Roy some decisions have been cited at the Bar. Mr. Roy therefore has submitted that since the charge-sheet has been served on the petitioners and they were allowed to appear before the sub-committee appointed by the Board of Discipline to show cause against the charges it cannot be said that there has been violation of the principles of natural justice. The resolution adopted at the meeting of the sub-committee and thereafter on its basis the resolution adopted at the meeting of the Board of Discipline on 10-5-1979 and approved by the Calcutta University Council cannot be questioned as bad being violative of the principles of natural justice.

6. Undoubtedly it is well settled that a public authority while exercising disciplinary powers having civil consequences is under an obligation to observe the principles of natural justice. What do the principles of natural justice mean or in other words what does the term audi alteram partem mean. Is that mere formality to be observed by giving a copy of the charge-sheet and asking him to explain and that will be a sufficient compliance of the principles of natural justice. Even a report is relied upon or some witness is examined at the back of the petitioner charged against and decision is made in the said disciplinary proceeding solely on the basis of that evidence or on the basis of the report it is not necessary to conform to the principles of natural justice to give the petitioner a reasonable opportunity by asking him to be present at the time when the witness is examined and also allowing him to cross-examine the witnesses and/or to adduce any evidence to controvert the statements or evidence of the particular witness and to confront him with report relied upon. If that be the position then the whole foundation and the basic principles of natural justice will be an empty formality and will be illusory and futile which in this late hour of the day this Court is not prepared to accept. The scope of the principles of natural justice has been very succinctly and elaborately elucidated in the judgment rendered in Maneka Gandhi's case (AIR 1978 SC 597) wherein the law prescribing the forfeiting of a passport of a citizen did not provide for giving an opportunity of hearing. Still then the Supreme Court pronounced that the right guaranteed under Art. 21 of the Constitution of India demands that principles of natural justice have to be observed in the democratic form of our Government and the citizen whose passport is being cancelled has to be provided with reasonable opportunity of being heard. The same view was also reiterated in R. D. Shetty v. International Air Port Authority of India, reported in AIR 1979 SC 1628 where it has been said in no uncertain terms that in the matter of distribution of privileges, contracts, largess by public authorities it is incumbent on them to observe the principles of natural justice. Therefore there is no iota of doubt that the sub-committee which is examining Shri P. C. Banerjee on whose report disciplinary proceeding was initiated and on whose evidence the sub-committee came to a decision and the Board of Discipline after considering the resolution of the sub-committee adopted a resolution to the effect that the petitioners are guilty of breach of discipline in the examination of B. Lib. Sc. held in 1978 it is imperative and it is an impelling necessity in order to observe the principles of natural justice that the witness on whose evidence the resolution is going to be made is to be examined in the presence of the petitioners and the petitioners have to be given opportunity of cross-examining the witness and also if necessary to allow him opportunity to adduce evidence in support of the petitioners' case and to controvert the evidence adduced by this particular witness. This is the immediate and essential requirement of the principles of natural justice. In this case undoubtedly as has been candidly admitted by Mr. Roy, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the Calcutta University, that

Shri P. C. Banerjee was not examined in presence of the petitioners nor the petitioners were ever intimated to be present in the meeting of the sub-committee when this particular witness would be examined nor any opportunity was given to the petitioners to adduce evidence to controvert the evidence adduced by this witness and/or to cross examine this witness. Therefore in these circumstances in my view the principles of natural justice have been violated and have not been observed. For this infirmity alone the impugned order as embodied in annexure C i. e. the resolution of the Calcutta University Council dated 15-5-1979 is liable to be quashed and set aside. It is not necessary for me to go into and/or deal with the other points raised in the petition. Therefore, for the reasons aforesaid the arguments advanced on behalf of the petitioners succeed and the Rule succeeds.

7. The Rule is made absolute. The impugned order of the Calcutta University Council annexed as annexure C to the petition and also the communication made thereon by the Secretary of the Board of Discipline annexed as annexure D to the petition are illegal and bad.

8. Let a writ of mandamus be issued commanding the respondents to forbear from giving effect to the said resolution of the Calcutta University contained in annexure C and also the communication of the same contained in annexure D to the petition.

9. Let a writ of Certiorari be issued quashing and setting aside the said resolution and also the communication.

10. The University of Calcutta may proceed in this matter in accordance with law.

11. This order is made only with regard to the petitioners who are before this Court.

12. L/Advocates for the parties may take plain copies of the ordering portion of this order, as prayed for.

Rule made absolute.

C. R. No. 1747 of 1980, D/- 30-7-1981.

West Bengal Land Reforms Act (10 of 1956), Sec. 53A — Title suit against party belonging to Scheduled Caste — Failure to make Revenue Officer as party — Permission for withdrawal from suit, for serving notice under S. 80, C. P. C. on Revenue Officer — Can be granted. (Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), Sec. 80; O. 23, R. 1).

Where in the suit for declaration of title and injunction filed by the plaintiff, one of the opposite party was belonging to the Scheduled Caste and the plaintiff failed to make the Revenue Officer as a party to the suit as required by Sec. 53A, the plaintiff could be permitted to withdraw from suit, for serving the notice under Sec. 80, C. P. C. on the Revenue Officer, to implead him as a party.

(Para 8)

Himadri Sankar Mazumder, for Petitioner.

ORDER :— This application for revision is directed against the order dated 5th of March, 1980 passed by the learned Munsif, Garbeta, District Midnapore, in Title Suit No. 135 of 1979 refusing to permit the plaintiff-petitioner to withdraw from the suit.

2. The Title Suit No. 135 of 1979 was instituted by the petitioner as plaintiff against the opposite parties for declaration of title and injunction.

3. At the time of settlement operation prepared under the W. B. Land Reforms Act the name of the petitioner was duly recorded and at that time the lands were in her own cultivation. The defendants at the instigation of others claimed the right of bargadar and in fact, while opposing the application under O. 39, R. 1, C. P. C. they claimed to be the bargadars. It was also pointed out that Opposite Party No. 1 belonged to a Scheduled Tribe.

4. Section 53A of the W. B. Land Reforms Act provides that the Revenue Officer will be a necessary party in a suit in which one of the parties is a member of any Scheduled Tribe. In this view of the matter, on the date of hearing of the application for injunction the petitioner filed an application for withdrawing the suit with liberty to sue afresh, on the ground that no notice under Section 80 of the Civil P. C. had been served upon the Junior Land Reforms Officer in compliance with the provision of Sec. 53A of the W. B. Land Reforms Act, before instituting the suit.

5. The learned Munsif on interpretation of provision of Section 80, C. P. Code read with Sec. 53A of the W. B. Land Reforms Act rejected the said application for withdrawing from the suit.

6. Mr. H. S. Mazumder, the learned Advocate for the petitioner contends that the learned Munsif acted illegally and without jurisdiction in not allowing the application for withdrawal of the suit.

7. There is no doubt that in the suit against a member of the Scheduled Tribe it was incumbent on the plaintiff to make the Revenue Officer as a party under Section 53A of the W. B. Land Reforms Act.

8. Section 53A of the W. B. Land Reforms Act is of course, conspicuously silent as to necessity or otherwise of any notice under Section 80, C. P. Code on the Revenue Officer concerned. This section does not lay down merely that such a proceeding is only to be decided in the presence of the Revenue Officer. On the contrary it lays down that the Revenue Officer shall be a necessary party to all suits of a civil nature in which one of the parties is any member of any Scheduled Tribe. Section 80, C. P. C. relates firstly to suits against Government and secondly to suits against Public Officers. The words "acts purporting to be done" qualify the public Officers. A notice under Section 80, C. P. Code is mandatory against Public Officers, when the suit is in respect of an act purporting to be done by him in official capacity. A Revenue Officer if impleaded in such a proceeding must be done so in his official capacity. If that be the position a notice under Section 80, C. P. Code seems to be mandatory. The petitioner as plaintiff had every reason to think that non-service of notice under Section 80, C. P. C. would be rather fatal. In this view of the matter, the petitioner wanted to withdraw from the suit on the ground of formal defect. On construing Sec. 53A of the W. B. Land Reforms Act it is observed by the learned Munsif that the provision in Sec. 53A, C. P. Code (or W. B. Land Reforms Act?) has been made to safeguard the interest of the Scheduled Tribe, so that due to their ignorance their interest may not be affected and that is why the Revenue Officer has been made a necessary party. Then he opined that as the Revenue Officer is a necessary party he cannot be taken to be a party requiring a notice under Section 80, C. P. Code. I cannot be in agreement with the learned Munsif on this point. It has already been pointed out that the Revenue Officer is to be impleaded as a party not in his private capacity but as a Public Officer. If that be so, it will be incumbent upon the petitioner to serve a notice under Sec. 80, C. P. Code before impleading such a Public Officer in a suit of this nature. Non-joinder of the Revenue Officer as a party to the suit can be taken to be a formal defect. In this view of the matter, the learned Munsif should have allowed the application for withdrawal of the suit.

9. In the result, this application succeeds. The Rule is made absolute. The impugned order is set aside. There will be no order as to costs. The learned Munsif is directed to permit the plaintiff petitioner to withdraw from the suit with liberty to sue afresh on the same cause of action if not otherwise barred, subject to payment of such costs as he thinks proper and just.

10. Let the records be sent down at once.

Application allowed.

Abhijit Banerjee, for Petitioner; P. N. Palit, for Opposite Parties.

ORDER :— The petitioner herein is the applicant for pre-emption under Section 8 of the Land Reforms Act in respect of the land purchased by the opposite parties on the ground of vicinage. As the application could not be filed within four months of the date of transfer as required by the Section, he filed an application under Section 5 of the Limitation Act for condonation of delay.

2. The learned Munsif, 2nd Court at Arambagh by an order dated 22-3-1980 held that Section 5 of the Limitation Act had no application in a case under Section 8 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act, particularly when the application is made on the ground of vicinage. So the application under Section 5 of the Limitation Act was rejected.

3. Mr. Abhijit Kumar Banerjee, the learned Advocate for the petitioner argues that in view of Section 29 (2) of the Limitation Act, Section 5 of the Limitation Act is applicable in the instant case. He further contends that there is nothing in the West Bengal Land Reforms Act excluding the provision of Limitation Act. Reference is made to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of (1) Mangu Ram (2) M/s. Ram Parshad Gondamal v. Municipal Corporation of Delhi, reported in AIR 1976 SC 105. At page 108 of the report Their Lordships observe as follows :—

"There is an important departure made by the Limitation Act, 1963 in so far as the provision contained in Section 29, sub-section (2) is concerned. Whereas under the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, Section 29, sub-section (2), Cl. (b) provided that for the purpose of determining any period of limitation prescribed for any suit, appeal or application by any special or local law the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act, 1908, other than those contained in Sections 4, 9 to 18, and 22 shall not apply and therefore, the applicability of Section 5 was in clear and specific terms excluded. Section 29, sub-section (2) of the Limitation Act 1963 enacts in so many terms that for the purpose of determining the period of limitation prescribed for any suit appeal or application by any special or local law the provisions contained in Sections 4 to 24, which would include Section 5, shall apply in so far as and to the extent to which they are not expressly excluded by such special or local law. Section 29 sub-section (2) Cl. (b) of the Indian Limitation Act 1908 specifically excluded the applicability of Section 5, while Section 29 sub-section (2) of the Limitation Act 1963 in clear and unambiguous terms provides for the applicability of Section 5....."

4. Sub-section (2) does not stand in the way of the legislature in making of a provision in the Special Act as to applicability of the Limitation Act, where such a provision is made in the local or special Act, Section 29 (2) would have no application. Thus where a special or local law provides for any suit, appeal or application a period different from the period therefor by the provisions, and there is also a provision in such Act prohibiting the applicability of the general law of limitation, the provisions of the Limitation Act will not apply.

5. Mr. Pramatha Nath Palit, the learned Advocate for the opposite parties on the other hand contends that Section 8 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act clearly specifies that the commencement for the period of limitation for making an application by an adjoining owner would be the date of transfer and the other termini of the said period would be the date of expiry of four months from the date of such transfer. He relies on the Bench decision of this Court in the case of Sm. Ashalata Bairagya v. Gopal Chandra Chakraborty, reported in (1975) 1 Cal LJ 494. In this case the point for decision before Their Lordships was whether there was any scope for application of Art. 137 of the Limitation Act, 1963 to the period of limitation of four months prescribed in Section 8, commencing from the date of transfer. Their Lordships had no occasion to make any observation as to the maintainability of an application under S. 5 after the introduction of S. 29 (2) in the Limitation Act of 1963.

6. In the above premises it must therefore be held where an application under Section 8 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act is filed after the coming into force of the Limitation Act 1963. S. 5 will be applicable to the applicant and if he can show that he had sufficient cause for not filing the application within four months, the delay may be condoned.

7. In this view of the matter, this application succeeds. The Rule is made absolute. The learned Munsif would dispose of the application under Section 5 of the Limitation Act on merits.

8. Each party to pay and bear its own costs.

Order accordingly.

S. P. Roy Chowdhury, Anil Kumar Rakshit and Phani Bhusan Das, for Petitioner; Asis Chandra Bagchi, (for No. 1) and M. N. Nag (for No. 2), for Opposite Parties.

ORDER:— The order dated 10-6-1980 passed by Sri D. K. Bhattacharjee, the learned Munsif, 4th Court, Sealdah allowing the application under Order 1, R. 10 C. P. C. filed by the opposite party No. 2 Smt. Kalpana Roy Choudhury to be added as a defendant to the suit for ejectment, being Title Suit No. 412 of 1979 has been challenged by the landlord-petitioner under the present revision.

2. According to the petitioner, Opposite party No. 1 was a tenant under him in respect of the premises in suit at a monthly rental of Rs. 150/- per month and he served a notice dated 25-5-1979 on the opposite party No. 1 to quit the premises in suit on and from 1-7-1979. But he failed to vacate, hence the suit. He, however, did not appear to contest the suit, and as such the suit was fixed for ex parte hearing.

3. On 20-3-1980, the opposite party No. 2 filed the application under O. 1, Rule 10 C. P. Code for being added as a defendant, contending inter alia, that she is the wife of the eldest son of Opposite party No. 1, and the real tenant of the premises in suit was her husband, Tushar Kanti Roy Choudhury, and the Opposite party No. 1 was simply a benamdar and her husband all along paid rent.

4. A matrimonial suit being Matrimonial Suit No. 800 of 1980 is pending between the husband and the wife Opposite Party No. 2 in the Court of the District Judge, 24-Parganas. So the husband was not taking any step in the suit to safeguard the interest of the wife as well as that of two minor daughters. Overruling the objection raised by the petitioner, the learned Munsif by the impugned order allowed the application.

5. It is contended by Mr. S. P. Roy Chowdhury, the learned Advocate for the petitioner that the Opposite Party No. 2 was an absolute stranger to the suit and she had no locus standi to be added as a party to an ejectment suit, in which the landlord and the tenant are only necessary parties.

6. Mr. Asis Chandra Bagchi, the learned Advocate for the Opposite Party No. 1 supporting the petitioner also questions the propriety of the impugned order.

7. Mr. M. N. Nag, the learned Advocate for the Opposite Party No. 2 contends that the Opposite Party No. 1 is the benamdar of his son Tushar Kanti Choudhury, husband of O. P. No. 2 who pays the rent of the house on drawing House Rent Allowance from his office (Shipping Corporation of India). He refers to the copy of extract from paragraph 5 of the petition dated 3-11-1979 filed by Tushar Kanti Choudhury before the Judicial Magistrate, Barrackpore, in Case No. 155 of 1978 under Section 125 Cr. P. C. and to the copy of extract from paragraph 8 of the petition dated 17-3-1981 under Section 24 of the Hindu Marriage Act filed by Tushar Kanti; wherein the father, Opposite Party No. 1 was described as a dependent of the petitioner, thereby implying that the father had no income of his own. It is also contended that the allegation of the Opposite party No. 2 that the Opposite Party No. 1 was the benamdar of his son has been substantiated. It is further contended that the Opposite party No. 2 being in actual occupation of the premises in suit is most interested in the litigation, as neither O. P. No. 1 nor his son is in actual occupation. According to him even a stranger to the suit, who has direct interest, legal or equitable in subject matter of dispute can be impleaded as a party. Reference is made to the decision in the case of G. M. V. Krishnamachari v. M. D. Dhanalakshmi Ammal, reported in AIR 1968 Mad 142.

8. Reference is also made to the decision of the Supreme Court in Razia Begum v. Anwar Begum, reported in AIR 1958 SC 886, in which the scope of Order 1, Rule 10 C. P. C. came up for consideration. At page 891 of the report the Supreme Court observes as follows :

"There cannot be the least doubt that it is firmly established as a result of judicial decisions that in order that a person may be added as a party to a suit he should have a direct interest in the subject-matter of the litigation whether it raises questions relating to movable or immoveable property."

9. Again, Opposite party No. 1 has been characterised as the benamdar of the real tenant, husband of the Opposite party No. 2. In the absence of the real owner, the wife can represent his interest till the marriage is dissolved by a decree of divorce. "The decision in any proceeding brought by or against the benamdar will bind the real owner though he is not joined as a party unless it is shown that the benamdar could not or did not in fact represent the interest of the real owner in that proceeding." Ragho Prasad Gupta v. Krishna Poddar, reported in AIR 1969 SC 316. It is also held by the Supreme Court in the case of Niranjan Kumar v. Dhyan Singh reported in AIR 1976 SC 2400 that oral evidence in view of proviso (4) to Section 92 of the Evidence Act is admissible to prove that the real tenant was other than the ostensible tenant.

10. There is also a Bench decision in the case of A. C. Bhattacharya v. Arun Kumar Roy reported in (1961-62) 65 Cal WN 1175, wherein it is held that a tenancy may be benami, though it may not have been to the knowledge of the landlord, who accordingly not be bound to recognise the contender as the real tenant. But once benami is found it would dispel the landlord's allegation of transfer of the tenancy which might otherwise have disentitled the tenant to any protection under the Rent Control Legislation.

11. All these decisions are referred to only for the purpose of showing that in the case of alleged benami — the real tenant or one whose interest is affected may be a necessary party to the suit.

12. While disposing the application under Order 1, R. 10 C. P. C. the Court should be guided by certain principles. The narrow view is that "the questions involved in the suit" can only be questions as between the parties to the litigation, and not questions between any of the parties to the suit and a third party even though touching the subject matter of the suit. Much emphasis is laid on this view by Mr. Roy Chowdhury. It is to be seen whether the presence of O. P. No. 2 before the Court would enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit. Mr. Nag has emphasised that the rules relating to the joinder of parties are based on the principles of avoiding multiplicity of suits and also preventing possible conflict of decisions. To these principles it may be added that there must be finality to litigation and all the controversy must be set at rest. Having taken into consideration all these principles the learned Munsif passed the order in favour of O. P. No. 2. In my opinion in a proper case for ends of justice the wider interpretation of the scope of Order 1, Rule 10 should be adopted.

13. Thus, in this case there is no scope for interference. The rule is, accordingly, discharged. There will be no order as to costs.

Order accordingly.

Arbitration Act (10 of 1940), Section 8 (1) (b) — Power of court to appoint arbitrator — Arbitrator appointed by persona designata declining to act as arbitrator — Agreement not showing intention of parties for not filling up vacancy — Court alone can appoint new arbitrator.

Where the arbitrator appointed by the persona designata under the agreement, had declined and/or refused and/or expressed his unwillingness to act as an arbitrator and there was no evidence to show that the parties intended that the power of the appointing authority to appoint a new arbitrator would revise, it would be only the court who could appoint an arbitrator when the arbitration agreement did not show the intention of the parties that the vacancy should not be filled up. Therefore it would be necessary that the vacancy should be filled up by the court by appointing an arbitrator under Section 8 (1) (b). Case law discussed.

ORDER:— By a writing and/or work order dated 9-4-1976/15-4-1976 being Tender No. 34/S/M of 1976-77, the petitioner and the respondent entered into a contract for construction of a road bridge over the 'Madaria Khal' at chain 1237.00 at an estimated cost and/or value of Rs. 2,69,115/-. By another writing and/or work order dated August 9, 1976 being reference No. 1182 and Tender No. 9 (M) of 76-77 the parties entered into another contract for the work of putting, maintaining, removing the cross bundh, construction of diversion channel and refilling the same after construction and construction of the approach road at the site of minor road bridge at chain 1237.00 on 'Madaria Khal' an estimated cost and/or value of Rs. 23,300/-. It is stated that the said two contracts consist of the following documents:—

(i) West Bengal Form No. 2911 (ii) — In the case of First Contract — and 2911 (i). in the case of Second Contract.

(ii) Schedule of rates attached to the respective contracts;

(iii) Specification attached to the respective contracts;

(iv) Additional terms and conditions; and

(v) Drawings.

The said contracts, inter alia, contain an arbitration clause as follows:—

"Except as otherwise provided in the contract all questions and disputes, relating to the meaning of the specification, design, drawing and instruction hereinbefore mentioned and as to the quality of workmanship or materials used on the work or as to any other question, claim, right, matter or thing whatsoever in any way arisen out of or relating to the contract, design, drawing, specification, estimates, instruction, orders or those conditions or otherwise consigning the works of the execution, or failure to execute the same, whether arising during the progress of the work or after the completion or abandonment thereof shall be referred to the sole arbitration of the Chief Engineer of the Department. Should the Chief Engineer be for any reason unwilling unable to act as such arbitrator, such question and dispute shall be referred to an arbitrator to be appointed by the Chief Engineer. The Award of the arbitrator shall be final, conclusive and binding on all parties to this contract."

2. According to the petitioner some payments were made in respect of the works done under the said two contracts. But she has still a claim for a sum of Rs. 5,39,845/- on account of the first contract and a sum of Rupees 1,37,500/- on account of the second contract then her total claim is Rupees 6,77,345/-.

3. The petitioner's case is that in spite of demands the respondent No. 1 failed and neglected to pay the said sum of Rs. 6,77,345/- or any portion thereof to the petitioner. Therefore according to the petitioner disputes and differences and/or questions of claims and/or right had arisen out of or relating to or within the ambit of the said arbitration clause by and between the parties herein.

4. As the petitioner's aforesaid claim was not paid by a letter No. B/J/491/78 dated December 12, 1978 the petitioner duly applied in terms of the aforesaid arbitration clause to the Chief Engineer of the respondent No. 1 for appointment of an arbitrator to decide and settle the disputes that had arisen between the parties in terms of the said arbitration clause. In spite of such requests the respondent No. 2 failed and/or neglected to act as an arbitrator or to appoint a sole arbitrator in terms of the said arbitration clause. Ultimately by a letter and/or an order dated Dec. 21, 1979 Mr. S. P. Sen, Chief Engineer-1, West Bengal Irrigation and Waterways Directorate of the respondent No. 2 (hereinafter referred to as "the Chief Engineer") appointed, by virtue of the said arbitration clause one Mr. P. K. De, retired Chief Engineer of the Irrigation and Waterways Directorate, Government of West Bengal as the sole arbitrator to settle the aforesaid disputes. By a letter dated January 15, 1980 the appointed arbitrator Shri P. K. De agreed to act as a sole arbitrator in the aforesaid disputes, inter alia, on the terms and conditions that the fees of the arbitrator should be Rs. 200/- for each day of hearing and the same would be shared equally by the two parties. Thereafter, the petitioner received a letter dated June 6, 1980 from the said sole arbitrator wherein he had declined and/or refused and/or evinced his incapability to act as such arbitrator due to his pre-occupation. The petitioner has stated that at all material times she was and still is interested in and/or desirous of settling the aforesaid disputes through the machinery of arbitration the chosen forum of the party and indeed has made all efforts to have the said disputes settled through the machinery of arbitration and to recover her legitimate dues. According to the petitioner all such efforts have been frustrated. In the above circumstances by a letter dated June 21, 1980 the petitioner appointed one Mr. Arabindo Ghosh, Barrister-at-Law to act as the sole arbitrator to decide the aforesaid disputes and duly called upon the respondent to concur in the said appointment within a period of 15 days from the date of the receipt of the said letter. In spite of the receipt of said letter, the respondents neither had concurred in the said appointment nor had objected to the same, nor filled up the vacancy. The petitioner's case is that the Chief Engineer having appointed the said Mr. P. K. Dey in terms of the aforesaid arbitration clauses and as the said P. K. Dey having declined and/or refused and/or became incapable of acting in terms thereof the power conferred on the said Chief Engineer in terms of the said arbitration clause had exhausted and indeed he had or has no further power and/or authority and/or jurisdiction to make any further appointment. Therefore on or about 14th August, 1980 the petitioner has made the instant application praying that Mr. Arabindo Ghose, Barrister-at-Law would be appointed as the sole arbitrator to fill up the vacancy caused by the resignation of P. K. Dey or alternatively the Court should appoint any person as an arbitrator as it would deem fit and proper.

5. An affidavit affirmed by one Bhaskar Sen, Assistant Engineer of Hooghly Irrigation Division, Irrigation and Waterways Department, Government of West Bengal on the 12th September 1980 has been filed on behalf of the respondent in opposition to the instant application. In paragraph 12 of the said affidavit it is stated that inasmuch as the appointed arbitrator Shri P. K. Dey had declined to act as such arbitrator before entering upon the reference the power of the respondents to appoint another arbitrator has not been exhausted and therefore the respondents should be given opportunity to appoint another arbitrator in the place and stead of the said P. K. Dey.

6. In the instant case the arbitration clause confers two powers and/or authorities upon the Chief Engineer, that is, (i) to act as the sole arbitrator or (ii) to act as a person designated under the agreement to appoint an arbitrator for the parties if he himself is unwilling or unable to act as arbitrator. The Chief Engineer when approached by the parties did not act as the sole arbitrator but as persona designata appointed an arbitrator to whom the disputes and differences were referred. The appointed arbitrator accepted the said appointment. But thereafter by his letter dated 6th June, 1980 declined and/or refused and/or expressed his inability to act as such arbitrator as stated hereinbefore. Therefore, the power or authority conferred upon the Chief Engineer to appoint an arbitrator having been once exercised cannot be exercised again. The arbitration agreement however does not provide for a situation when the arbitrator appointed by the persona designata under the agreement has declined and/or refused and/or expressed his unwillingness to act as an arbitrator. The arbitration clause in my view does not show any such intention of the parties. There is no evidence to show that the parties intended that, in such a case, the power of the appointing authority to appoint a new arbitrator would revive. That being the position it is only the Court who can appoint an arbitrator in the instant case if otherwise all the conditions as laid down in Section 8 (1) (b) of the Arbitration Act are satisfied. In the instant case the arbitration agreement does not show the intention of the parties that the vacancy should not be filled up. Therefore, in this case it is necessary that the vacancy should be filled up by the Court by appointing an arbitrator under the said section. In this connection reference may be made to the cases of Union of India v. Raghunath Singh and Co., AIR 1980 SC 103; Prabhat General Agencies v. Union of India, AIR 1971 SC 2298; East India Construction Private Limited v. Union of India AIR 1970 Cal 243; V. G. Ghawda Pvt. Ltd v. Union of India, AIR 1978 Cal 271; Excalcer v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1980 Cal 86 and Niranjan Swain v. State of Orissa, AIR 1980 Orissa 142.

7. On the question of the personnel of the arbitrator it has been submitted on behalf of the respondents that as, in the instant case, the disputes involve consideration of technical matters a Departmental Engineer of the respondent No. 1 should be appointed as arbitrator. On the contrary, it has been submitted on behalf of the petitioner that in view of the facts and circumstances of this case a person not connected with the parties should be appointed as arbitrator. Further, in respect of technical matters evidence can be given before the arbitrator.

8. Considering the facts and circumstances of this case, in my view, in the instant case a person not connected with the parties should be appointed as arbitrator. I, therefore, appoint Mr. A. M. Pal, Barrister-at-Law as the sole arbitrator and all disputes and difference between the parties under the two contracts mentioned in the petition are referred to him. The arbitrator will be entitled to a remuneration of 30 G. Ms. for each effective sitting of not less than two hours and such remuneration will be paid by the parties in equal shares. The arbitrator will make his award within six months from the date of his entering upon the reference. The respondents will pay the cost of this application to the petitioner.

9. All parties and the arbitrator are to act on a signed copy of the minutes of this order upon usual undertaking.

Order accordingly.

N. C. Roy Chowdhury with Prabir Roy Chowdhury, for Plaintiffs; P. K. Roy with P. P. Mitter, for Defendant.

ORDER :— The above suit was instituted by the plaintiff for eviction of the defendant from the suit property as a trespasser and a decree for Rupees 1,09,600/- by way of mesne profit etc. The plaintiff alleged that pursuant to an agreement for lease by and between the parties, the plaintiff agreed to let out the suit property to the defendant for 86 years on terms and conditions contained in the draft approved lease and the defendant deposited Rupees 1,00,000/- with the plaintiff by way of salami to be forfeited on failure of the defendant to execute the lease. The possession of the suit property was delivered to the defendant pursuant to the said agreement. The defendant failed and neglected to execute the lease. Therefore the said deposit was forfeited by the plaintiff in terms of the agreement and the suit was instituted for recovery of possession. In the written statement the defendant alleged that he was in possession of the suit property as a thika tenant prior to the agreement for lease. It was denied that there was any failure or negligence on the part of the defendant to execute the lease. A cross suit was filed by the defendant against the plaintiff, being Suit No. 2740 of 1968 for specific performance of the said lease. This suit was also ready for hearing. The evidence in the above suit was closed and the matter was adjourned for argument. After several adjournments, the above matter was taken up on 2-2-1981 when I enquired of the counsel for both the parties whether any settlement was possible. Thereafter discussions were held between Mr. R. C. Deb of M/s. G. C. Chunder and Co., the Advocate on record of the plaintiff and Mr. P. K. Roy, senior counsel for the defendant, in open Court. The junior counsel of the plaintiff Mr. Prabir Roy Chowdhury also was present. Certain terms were agreed between the parties and on that basis I dictated the said agreed terms and a consent decree was passed by consolidating the two suits.

2. The present petition has been taken out on behalf of the plaintiff in the above suit for setting aside or amending the said consent decree and this petition is supported by the supporting affidavit of Mr. R. C. Deb affirmed on 6-3-1981. The case made out in the petition was that Mr. R. C. Deb was under a mistaken apprehension that the dictated terms would be the basis of further negotiation between his client and the defendant. Mr. Deb never consented to a decree being passed. Another point taken by the petitioner in his affidavit-in-reply was that the consent decree was not in writing nor the same was signed by the parties. Therefore it was not binding. In the affidavit-in-opposition, the defendant categorically denied the petitioner's allegations and alleged that a consent decree was passed by agreement between the parties of which Mr. R. C. Deb had full knowledge and in proof thereof, several documents were annexed to the affidavit-in-opposition.

3. According to Mr. P. K. Roy, the counsel for the defendant, a suit is the proper proceeding for setting aside a consent decree and a review under Order 47, Civil P. C. or an application under Section 151 of Civil P. C. would not lie. In support of his contention he relied on (1909) 13 Cal WN 1197 (Mussammat Gulab Koer v. Badshah Bahadur) and AIR 1929 Cal 470. (J. C. Galstaun v. Pramatha Nath Roy). Mr. N. C. Roy Chowdhury, counsel for the petitioner submitted, that law had since been changed due to the amendment of the Civil P. C. in 1976. Under O. 23 R. 3A, of C. P. C. no suit will lie to set aside a consent decree if the same is unlawful. To appreciate his argument it is necessary to look into the amended provisions of O. 23, Rr. 3 and 3A:—

"Rule 3. Where it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that a suit has been adjusted wholly or in part by any lawful agreement or compromise (in writing and signed by parties), or where the defendant satisfies the plaintiff in respect of the whole or any part of the subject-matter of the suit, the Court shall order such agreement, compromise or satisfaction to be recorded, and shall pass a decree in accordance therewith (so far as it relates to the parties to the suit whether or not the subject-matter of the agreement, compromise or satisfaction is the same as the subject-matter of the suit);

Provided that where it is alleged by one party and denied by the other that an adjustment or satisfaction has been arrived at, the Court shall decide the question; but no adjournment shall be granted for the purpose of deciding the question, unless the Court, for reasons to be recorded, thinks fit to grant such adjournment.

Explanation: An agreement or compromise which is void or voidable under the Indian Contract Act, 1872 (9 of 1872), shall not be deemed to be lawful within the meaning of this rule.

Rule 3A. No suit shall lie to set aside a decree on the ground that the compromise on which the decree is based was not lawful."

4. According to the petitioner's counsel, the present consent decree was not in writing or signed by the parties as required under Order 23 Rule 3 of the C. P. C. Hence it was against the express provisions of law and was unlawful. The consent decree was passed due to the mistake or misapprehension of the Advocate-on-record of the petitioner. This allegation will bring the case within the scope of the explanation to Rule 3 and would be deemed to be unlawful. If so, a suit for setting aside a consent decree would be barred under the provision of Rule 3-A. I accept this submission on behalf of the petitioner that on the basis of the facts alleged in the petition no suit could be filed for the relief claimed in the petition. An application under Section 151 of the Civil P. C. or a review is the proper procedure.

5. The next point urged by the counsel for the defendant is that this application was not by the deity and should be dismissed on that ground alone. The present application was taken out by the managing shebait, who has the power to manage the state of the deity. He is also a party to the suit. Hence this irregularity if any, is not material and I hold that the application is maintainable.

6. The third point taken on behalf of the defendant is that the application is barred by the law of limitation. According to the counsel for the petitioner, the application is governed by the residuary article of the Limitation Act as there was no express provision for the same. I accept this submission on behalf of the petitioner.

7. The provisions of Order 23, Rule 3 of the Civil P. C. should be considered carefully. It appears that the Court's jurisdiction to pass the consent decree under Order 23 Rule 3 of the Civil P. C. would depend on the satisfactory proof of the agreement between the parties to the suit and such agreement must be in writing and signed by the parties. This express provision has been incorporated by amendment in 1976 with the object to exclude the oral agreements. What had happened on 2-2-1981 was that an oral agreement was entered into between the counsel for both the parties, in Court, and on the basis of that oral agreement the Court dictated the consent decree. On careful consideration of the provisions of Order 23, Rule 3 it appears, that Court has no jurisdiction to pass a consent decree on the basis of an oral agreement between the parties. In this view of the matter, the consent decree dated 2-2-1981 was bad being unlawful and should be set aside. In the premises aforesaid the question of going into the merit of the case does not arise. The consent decree dated 2-2-1981 is therefore, set aside. There will be no order as to cost.

Order accordingly.

Smt. Nilima Ghosh and another, Petitioners v. Prakriti Bhusan Mitter, Respondent.

C. O. No. 1305 of 1981, D/- 19-6-1981.

Trusts Act (1882), Section 34 — Trust property — Trustee entering into an agreement to sell — No express provision in trust deed authorising trustee to sell such property — Dispute as to whether trustee could sell property referred to court under Section 90, Civil P. C. — Court would be justified in refusing to answer as matter should have been referred to court specified in Section 34 of Trusts Act, (Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), Section 90).

Where the settlor of the trust property who was the sole trustee entered into an agreement for sale of such property and as the trust contained no express provision authorising her settlor, to sell the property on any contingency, she, along with the vendee initiated proceedings under Section 90 of Civil P. C. to refer the dispute to the Court

as to whether she could lawfully sell the property, the Court could be said to be justified in refusing to answer the question so raised when it was not the court specified in Sec. 34 of the Trusts Act. The question referred to the Judge for his opinion being a question relating to the management and administration of the trust property to be answered on interpretation of the trust deed, could be answered only by the principal civil court of the original jurisdiction of the district in view of the provisions of the Trusts Act and as such the court in question was not the proper forum for obtaining the necessary opinion. AIR 1930 Bom 232, Rei. on. (Para 5)

Under the provisions of Section 34 of the Trusts Act a question relating to the management and administration of trust property should be referred to the principal civil court of original jurisdiction for its opinion. Section 34 of the Act may have conferred wider powers on the court specified therein to authorise sale of a trust property by the trustee even if the trustee is not expressly authorised to do so by the deed where such a sale becomes a necessity for preservation or development of the estate, but that makes it all the more incumbent for the parties to approach that court because that Court is not only competent to give the opinion now sought for but also is only competent court to help the parties in solving their real problem viz. to effect sale of the Trust property.

B. P. Banerjee and S. Bidesaria, for Petitioners; L. K. Gupta and Sukhendu Banerjee, for Respondent.

ANIL K. SEN, J.:— This is a revisional application arising out of a proceeding under Section 90 of the Code of Civil Procedure which was registered as Title Suit No. 146 of 1980 of the Second Court of the learned Subordinate Judge, Alipore and is directed against the order dated February 17, 1981 passed by the learned Subordinate Judge disposing of the said proceeding.

2. Smt. Nilima Ghosh and her daughter-in-law Smt. Ira Ghosh are the petitioners before us in this revisional application. By a deed of trust dated Aug. 31, 1967 Smt. Nilima Ghosh settled premises No. 6, Panditiya Terrace, Calcutta in trust making herself the sole trustee. Under the said trust the settlor retained unto herself a life interest in the said property with a further provision that on her death the property would vest absolutely in her daughter-in-law, Ira Ghosh or her heirs and legal representatives as the case may be. The trust contained no express provision authorising the trustee to sell the property on any contingency.

3. According to the settlor Smt. Nilima Ghosh, it being inconvenient for her to reside any further in the said premises and it being uneconomic to hold the property any further by letting it out to tenants, she entered into an agreement for sale of the property with the opposite party, Sri Prakriti Bhusan Mitter on December 14, 1979. In order to effect the sale both the beneficiaries, namely the settlor herself and her daughter-in-law by an instrument dated August 19, 1980 agreed to the proposed sale of the property. Since, however, the opposite party raised a dispute as to whether in the absence of any express authority the trustee can effect sale of the property, the two petitioners and the opposite party by an agreement dated Aug. 21, 1980 agreed to refer the dispute to the court for its opinion on the point as to whether in the facts and circumstances the trustee can lawfully sell the property to the opposite party. Thus, the parties initiated the aforesaid proceeding under Section 90 of the Code as a special case which was heard and disposed of as a suit in terms of the rules of Order 36 of the Code. By the order impugned the learned Judge however refused to give his opinion on the disputed question so raised or answer the same though referred to him as a special case under Section 90. According to the learned Judge, the question referred to him for his opinion being a question relating to the management and administration of the trust property to be answered on interpretation of the trust deed, could be answered only by the principal civil court of the original jurisdiction of the district in view of the provisions of the Indian Trusts Act and as such his court is not the proper forum for obtaining the necessary opinion. In challenging the said order of the learned Subordinate Judge in this revisional application the petitioners have challenged the correctness of the view so taken by the learned Subordinate Judge.

4. Mr. Banerjee appearing in support of the revisional application has contended that the parties to the proceeding having entered into a bona fide agreement has referred certain questions to the court for its opinion in terms of Section 90 of the Code of Civil Procedure and a special case having been initiated on such an agreement it was incumbent for the court to give its opinion and that the learned Subordinate Judge went wrong in thinking that his court is not the proper forum. According to Mr. Banerjee, once the terms of Section 90 of the Code of Civil Procedure are complied with, the parties making out a special case are entitled to have the opinion of the court on the questions referred to court according to such terms. The learned Subordinate Judge being the court of competent jurisdiction for the purpose of entertaining the special case under Order 36, could not have held that this court is not the proper forum. The opposite party has entered appearance and the learned Advocate appearing for him also supports the contention of Mr. Banerjee. It has been contended on his behalf that the scope of a proceeding under Section 90 and that under Section 34 of the Indian Trusts Act not being the same it could not have been held that Section 34 constitutes a bar to the adjudication prayed for in the special case.

5. Though none of the parties is supporting the order impugned before us, on a careful consideration of the legal position we are, however, of the opinion that the learned Subordinate Judge is well justified in refusing to answer the question referred to him as a special case under Section 90 of the Code. In our view, the point of relevance is not as to whether such a question could have been competently referred to the learned Subordinate Judge for his opinion or not but whether the learned Subordinate Judge should give his opinion even if the question was competently referred to him. We agree with the learned Subordinate Judge that he should not give his opinion in a case like the present one. It is only in that context that he rightly held that his court is not the proper forum for obtaining the opinion sought for in this special case. Under O. 36, R. 5 of the Code even if there had been a lawful agreement between the parties having bona fide interest in the question agreed to be referred to the court, the court is not bound to give its opinion unless it is further satisfied that "the same is fit to be decided". In adjudging whether it would be fit for the court to decide the case or not different considerations may come up before the court which are required to be taken note of in adjudging that point. One of such considerations is as to whether in deciding the case the court would be intruding upon a field reserved for some other forum and once it is found that it would be so, then it is certainly open to the court to refuse to decide the case or give its opinion irrespective of the question whether it had the jurisdiction to do so or not. On the facts of the present case we agree with the learned Subordinate Judge that the question referred to him for opinion is one relating to the management and administration of the trust property. Under the provisions of Section 34 of the Indian Trusts Act such a question relating to the management and administration of trust property should be referred to the principal civil court of original jurisdiction for its opinion. Section 34 may have conferred wider powers on the court to authorise sale of a trust property by the trustee even if the trustee is not expressly authorised to do so by the deed where such a sale becomes a necessity for preservation or development of the Estate, but that makes it all the more incumbent for the parties to approach that court because that court is not only competent to give the opinion now sought for but also is only competent court to help the parties in solving their real problem viz., to effect sale of the trust property. Therefore, Section 34 not only covers the field but, in our opinion, provides the better forum for the relief the parties are really intending to have. That court is admittedly a court superior to the court of the learned Subordinate Judge. In view of the fact that the Indian Trusts Act has provided for a special forum for obtaining the opinion on such a question, the learned Judge was right in refusing to give his opinion on such a question and thus intrude upon a field reserved for the other forum. This view is well supported by a Bench decision in the case of Trustees of the Port of Bombay v. Municipal Corporation of Bombay, AIR 1930 Bom 232.

6. Such being the position, we must uphold the order and dismiss the present revisional application and we direct accordingly.

7. There will be no order as to costs.

B. C. CHAKRABARTI, J.:— I agree.

(A) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 23, R. 1 (2) — Plaintiff permitted to withdraw suit — No order regarding liberty to file fresh suit — Effect.

Where the plaintiff files an application to withdraw from the suit with liberty to sue afresh and the Court passes an order giving permission to withdraw the suit but nothing is said in the order regarding plaintiff's liberty to institute a fresh suit on the same cause of action, the order has to be read along with the plaintiff's application on which the order is passed. As the plaintiff's prayer is not refused the order has the effect of granting permission to the plaintiff with liberty to sue afresh on the same cause of action. The effect of withdrawal from the suit is that the parties are left to the position which they occupied before the suit was filed. AIR 1974 SC 1126, Disting. ORDER:— The tenant-defendant filed an application under Section 17 (2) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. The objection was filed by the plaintiff-landlords. The defendants' plea was that there was no relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties regarding the premises in question. In the earlier Title Suit No. 534 of 1974 instituted in the Court of the third Munsif at Alipore, it was already decided that defendant No. 1 was a tenant regarding that property under plaintiff No. 2. That order remains unchallenged and operates as res judicata. He is not a defaulter. The plaintiff's objection was that the previous title suit was withdrawn with liberty to sue afresh and so there was no question of res judicata.

2. The learned Munsif accepted the plaintiff's contention and stated that the previous decision did not operate as res judicata. He, however, found that the defendant was a defaulter from October, 1973. Hence necessary order was passed in this respect. A direction was given to defendant No. 1 to liquidate the arrears in lump by 30th April, 1981, and also to pay the current rent within the 15th day of each month. Hence this revisional application by the defendant-petitioner No. 1.

3. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioner has referred to a decision of Renu Pada Mukherjee, J. in the case of Bishnu Charan v. Basudeb Banerjee in (1957) 99 Cal LJ 72 to show that where in a suit for ejectment brought under the provisions of West Bengal Rent Control Act, 1950, the tenant pleads that he is not the plaintiff's tenant, the decision of the court on such a question for the purpose of deciding an application under Section 14 (4) of the Act, must be taken to be final and conclusive at all subsequent stages of the suit. Subsequently, the plaintiff prayed for withdrawal of the aforesaid suit with liberty to sue afresh on the same cause of action. That permission was refused and only the plaintiff was permitted to withdraw the suit. Hence the previous finding operates as res judicata.

4. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the opposite party has stated that the previous suit was filed for ejectment by five brothers. There was an additional observation regarding the contractual relationship between the plaintiff No. 4 and defendant. That observation was unnecessary. The case of Ganga Bai v. Vijay Kumar in AIR 1974 SC 1126 at page 1131 has been cited to show that when the matter relating to the alleged partition was met (sic-Not?) directly and substantially in issue in the suit, the finding that the partition was a sham one, cannot operate as res judicata. It has been contended that though the plaintiff of that suit made an application for withdrawal with liberty to sue afresh, only permission was given to withdraw the suit. Nevertheless, that permission for withdrawal granted by the court has the effect of giving the plaintiff of that suit permission to sue afresh on the subject-matter of the suit. Moreover, when that suit was withdrawn, the effect in law is that there was no such suit. Consequently the question of res judicata is out of the way. Further elaborate submissions have been made on other points, which are unnecessary for the purpose of disposal of this simple revisional application.

5. It appears that Title Suit No. 284 of 1977 was permitted to be withdrawn by the learned Munsif. The plaintiff made a prayer for liberty to bring a fresh suit. No order was given thereon, but that prayer was not refused. In the Bench case of Gulam Mahomed v. Shibendra reported in (1908) ILR 35 Cal 990 at p. 995, it has been stated that when the plaintiff files an application to withdraw from the suit with liberty to sue afresh, on which an order was passed on the same date giving permission to withdraw the suit and although nothing was said in that order as to the plaintiff's liberty to institute a fresh suit on the same cause of action, that order ought to be read along with the application, on which it was passed. It has already been indicated that that prayer was not refused. Hence it is held that that order has the effect of granting permission to the plaintiff with liberty to sue afresh on the same cause of action.

6. The effect of the withdrawal from the suit is that the parties are left to the position which they occupied before the suit was filed. This view was taken in the case of Behari Lal v. Baran in (1894) ILR 17 All 53. In the Bench case of Sashi Bhusan v. Moti in AIR 1945 Cal 317 at p. 318 Sri Bijan Kumar Mookerjee presiding over the Bench has followed the aforesaid case of Behari Lal v. Baran (supra) and stated that when the Court grants leave to file a fresh suit or proceedings on the same cause of action, the withdrawn suit has no existence in the eye of law. It is available for no purpose and the parties are relegated to the position which they occupied before the suit was brought.

7. The case of Ganga Bai v. Vijay Kumar, (AIR 1976 SC 1126) (supra) cited for the O. P. is on a different point. In the case reported in (1938) 42 Cal WN 492 it has been stated that a party has a right to file an appeal against an adverse finding, which is sought to be appealed against, on the ground that such finding is one to which the rule of res judicata applies. The question whether that view of the Calcutta High Court is correct was left undecided by the Supreme Court.

8. Nevertheless, the bar enjoined by sub-rule (4) of Rule 1 of Order 23 of the Civil P. C. not to bring another suit on the same cause of action, has no application because the claim and the subject matter are different. Moreover, that question is not at all germane in his revisional application.

9. Since the plaintiff of that suit was permitted to withdraw from it with liberty to sue afresh, in the eye of law there was no existence of any such suit. Consequently, the findings arrived at in the earlier suit have no effect on the present suit. It is, therefore, held that there is no question of res judicata.

10. The question of default has not been challenged. Hence the contention put forward on behalf of the petitioner cannot be sustained.

11. The application is, therefore, dismissed.

12. There will be no order as to costs.
Application dismissed.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 19

B. C. RAY, J.

Barun K. Sinha and another, Petitioners v. District Magistrate, Murshidabad and others, Respondents.

Decided on 31-8-81.

(A) Constitution of India, Arts. 14, 226 and 298 — Public contracts — Writ petition challenging acceptance of tender of contractor at rate higher than offered by petitioner — Petition is maintainable.

The tenderer who has a genuine grievance against the order of the tender committee accepting the tender of another contractor at rate higher than that offered by him in his tender is an aggrieved person competent to maintain the writ petition. (Para 13)

The meaning of the word "locus standi" for the purpose of maintaining a writ application has been widened very much. In exceptional cases a person who has been prejudicially affected by an act or an omission by an authority can file a writ petition even though he has no proprietary or fiduciary interest in the subject-matter thereof.

(Para 11)

Moreover in view of Art. 298 of the Constn. the State can carry on the executive function of making of contracts subject to Part III of the Constn. and as such Art. 14 of the Constn. is applicable to the exercise of such powers. So in the matter of public contracts equal opportunities are to be given to the citizens who apply and they cannot be discriminated against in the matter of giving their offer for such contracts and of having the same considered.

(Para 13)

Held that the petitioner, who had submitted tender in compliance with the tender notice within the time specified for supply of dietary articles to the State owned hospitals, was entitled to have his tender considered as it was a case of distribution of public contracts. Though the petitioner had got no legal right to claim that the tender submitted by him must be accepted by the Tender Committee still he had a right to have his tender fairly and properly considered by the public authority before the same was rejected. The arbitrary rejection of his tender without considering the same at all and the acceptance of the tender of another Contractor who quoted rates much higher than the rates quoted by the petitioner undoubtedly affected the petitioner and the petitioner was an aggrieved person. Therefore the writ application at the instance of the petitioner was maintainable. AIR 1966 SC 828; AIR 1976 SC 578 and (1978) 2 Cal LJ 166 Foll; AIR 1972 SC 1816 and AIR 1952 Orissa 344, Disting. (Para 12)

(B) Constitution of India, Arts 14 and 298 — Public contracts — Authority cannot pick and choose tender — Selection of higher tender without assigning reason is violative of Art. 14.

The Public Authority cannot exercise its discretion arbitrarily in the matter of giving contracts to a party at its own sweet will and pleasure. It has to exercise its discretion in the matter of selecting right person for the giving of largess or contract or for selecting persons for giving contract fairly and on a just consideration of all the tenders submitted on a reasonable basis, and, in the case of selecting a tender of a person offering higher rate in preference to another offering a lower rate it has to record valid, relevant and cogent reasons therefor. A selection of higher tender in preference to a lower tender without assigning any reason will be violative of the provisions of Art. 14 of the Constn. (Para 16)

It is a well settled rule of administrative law that executive authority must be rigorously held to the standards by which it professes its actions to be judged and it must scrupulously observe those standards on pain of invalidation of an act in violation of them. AIR 1979 SC 1628 Foll. (Para 16)

R. C. Deb, K. K. Maitra and A. K. Mukherjee, for Petitioners; A. K. Dutta and S. Banerjee, (for No. 6) S. Gupta Addl. Advocate General and S. Mustafi, for the State.

ORDER:— The subject-matter of challenge in this writ application is the acceptance of the tender submitted by respondent no. 6, Narayan Roy for supply of dietary articles in the hospitals of the Murshidabad District arbitrarily and in violation of the principles of natural justice. The facts of this case as well as the case of Tapan Kumar Ghosh are almost identical and as such the statement of the facts of Barun Kumar Sinha's case will suffice for the purpose of decisions of these two rules.

2. The petitioner Barun Kumar Sinha who has been supplying dietary articles in the State-owned hospitals in Murshidabad since 1974 submitted a tender in pursuance of tender notice issued by the Chief Medical Officer of Health, Murshidabad, respondent No. 2, for the year 1981-82 inviting tenders from bona fide contractors for supply of dietary articles. It has been stated in the said notice that the intending tenderers shall quote overall percentage of rate for each category of contract in each zone falling in Part-I either 'Above' or 'At par' or 'Below' the schedule of rates prepared for the purpose. It has been further stated in the said notice that in respect of the State-owned hospitals and health centres falling under zone in Part-II the intending tenderers may quote overall percentage of one rate for three categories of contracts either 'Above' or 'Below' the schedule of rates as one contract for each zone for three categories as shown in Part-II. A copy of the schedule of rates and the tender form, it has been stated in the tender notice, is obtainable from the office of the respondent No. 2 on payment of Rs. 5/- in Treasury Challan to be deposited on week days and the last date for submission of tenders was fixed on 30-4-1981 up to 12 noon. It is also stated therein that the tenders would be opened on 30-4-1981 at 3 p.m. The selection of tenders and acceptance of rates would be communicated to the parties concerned by the respondent No. 2 for and on behalf of the Government of West Bengal. It has also been provided in the tender notice that the Governor of West Bengal reserves the right to reject any tender without assigning any reason thereof and acceptance of lowest rates will not be obligatory to the contracting officer. This tender notice has been annexed as annexure 'B' to the petition. A schedule of rates of dietary articles for the year 1981-82 categorywise has been annexed as annexure 'A' to the petition. The tender submitted by the petitioner has been annexed as annexure 'C' to the petition and the rates quoted therein for all three categories of articles are much lower than the rates submitted by the respondent No. 6 and the rates offered by the petitioner are the lowest rates. On Apr. 30, 1981, at 3 p.m. all the tenders were opened in the office of the respondent No. 2. On 9th of May, 1981, the petitioner came to know from the office of the respondent No. 2 that respondent No. 6 was selected for supply of dietary articles for the year 1981-82 in the hospitals within the district of Murshidabad. It has been stated that the respondent No. 6 was not a bona fide contractor as he has no experience as a diet contractor and the respondent No. 6 is a close associate of the respondent No. 2, the Chief Medical Officer of Health, Murshidabad and as such this unusual award of contract in favour of respondent No. 6 has been made. It has also been submitted that no reason has been assigned in not accepting the tender wherein the lowest rate was quoted for supply of these dietary articles by the petitioner, nor any opportunity of hearing was given to the petitioner before rejecting his tender. It has been submitted that the order of appointment made by the Dietary Committee consisting of respondents Nos. 1 to 5 is arbitrary and discriminatory and no reasons have been assigned for appointing respondent No. 6 as successful contractor. It has also been submitted that this appointment is in contravention of the fundamental right of the petitioner guaranteed under Art. 14 of the Constn. of India. This writ application along with other applications was also moved before this court and the instant rules were obtained. There was also interim order of maintaining status quo as on that day regarding supply of dietary articles to the hospitals for three weeks with liberty to pray for extension of the period on the same application upon notice to the respondents.

3. On 17th June, 1981, after hearing the learned advocates for all the parties the interim order was extended till the disposal of the rules. The petitioners Barun Kumar Sinha and Tapan Kumar Ghosh it was stated therein, would continue to supply dietary articles on and from 18-6-1981. Thereafter on 6th of July, 1981, the matter was mentioned by the learned advocate for the petitioner who made an application for clarification of the above order and after hearing the parties the order passed on 17-6-1981 was modified to the extent that Tapan Kumar Ghosh who did not supply dietary articles from the date of issuance of this Rule cannot be permitted to continue to supply dietary articles on and from 18-6-1981 on the basis of the interim order of maintaining status quo.

4. An affidavit-in-opposition sworn by Dr. M. K. Chattaraj, Assistant Chief Medical Officer and the Secretary, Diet Committee, Murshidabad was filed. In para. 3 of the said affidavit-in-opposition it has been stated that the tenders were opened by the District Diet Committee consisting of the respondents Nos. 1 to 5. It has also been stated therein that these members took a resolution for selection of tender for the year 1981-82 on 30-4-1981 to the following effect :—

(a) That the articles of tender would be up to the standard quality at such low rates would not be maintained.

(b) The rates quoted by the tenderers at the rate of 25% below the scheduled rates would be accepted.

5. A copy of the resolution has been annexed as annexure 'A' to the affidavit-in-opposition.

6. It has been stated that on the basis of this norm laid down by the meeting of the District Diet Committee, the respondent No. 6 whose rate is 25% below the schedule rates has been decided to be appointed by the District Diet Committee. It has also been stated in the said affidavit-in-opposition that by a resolution of the District Diet Committee the petitioner who has been supplying the Diet articles and whose term of contract which was due to expire on 30th of March, 1981 was allowed to continue supplying dietary articles up to 15th of May, 1981. This was communicated to the other contractors including the petitioner who had been given contract the previous year to continue supply of dietary articles under such contracts up to 15th of May, 1981. It has been stated that his rate was accepted by the Committee and on that ground he was asked to supply the articles with effect from 1st May, 1981 as wrongly stated in the petition. It has also been stated that with a view to obtain a Rule and interim order wrongfully the petitioners deliberately made false statements by suppressing receipt of the order, set out in annexure 'D' to the affidavit-in-opposition and as such for this suppression and misrepresentation of facts and misleading this Hon'ble Court the writ application should be rejected in limine and the interim order should be vacated. It has been stated that respondent No. 6 is not a close associate of the respondent No. 2 nor any unusual favour was shown to respondent No. 6 as the respondent No. 6's tender is the lowest in accordance with the resolution of the Diet Committee and so it was accepted.

7. An affidavit-in-reply has been filed on behalf of the petitioner reiterating the statements and allegations made in the petition. It has also been stated in the affidavit-in-reply in para 4 that the petitioner did not know when and how such resolution was adopted for considering the case of successful Dietary Contractor for 1981-82. It has also been stated that in the tender notice no such restriction or condition was imposed in respect of rates of the articles and as such the resolution adopted on 30-4-1981 is a clear departure from the terms of the open tender notice for 1981-82. It has also been stated that the petitioner was not aware of the arrangement of the extension of the period of contract up to 15-5-1981 and he was not aware also of any such resolution as alleged to have been made.

8. Mr. Kashikanta Moitra, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioner made a four-fold submission before this Court. His first submission is that in the tender notice no guideline was set up as to the eligibility for acceptance of tender to be submitted by intending candidates by the District Diet Committee and as such it was not open to the members of the District Diet Committee to lay down a norm or a guideline at its meeting for the selection of tenders submitted by different contractors. It has also been submitted that public authorities are bound by the terms and conditions as set out in the tender notice and they cannot lay down a different guideline for selection of tenders after tenders are submitted on the basis of such tender notice. It has also been secondly submitted that as a rule lowest tender is to be accepted unless exceptional circumstances justifying the decision of the authorities concerned in accepting tenders offering higher rates exist. The existence of such exceptional circumstances are necessary and or imperative to justify the decision of the tender committee to accept a tender quoting higher rate rejecting the tender quoting lowest rates. Mr. Moitra has referred in this connection to West Bengal Health Manual Vol. I (Administration) published in 1970 at page 56-57 in support of his above submission. It has been further submitted by Mr. Moitra that the tender notice expressly provides that the intending tenderers may quote rates 'Below' 'At par' or 'Above' the schedule rates. Therefore, this tender notice does not indicate that rates offered below certain percentage of the Schedule rate will not be entertained. The resolution by the District Diet Committee adopted on the date of opening the tender, that is, 30-4-1981 is arbitrary and contrary to the terms and conditions of the tender notice. As such selection of tenders solely on its basis is illegal, unwarranted and arbitrary. It has been further submitted that after sealed tenders are opened by the District Diet Committee, formation of such a norm by resolution of the committee for selection of tenders at higher rates in preference to tender quoting lowest rates will be per se discriminatory and ultra vires of Art. 14 of the Constn.

It has also been lastly submitted that non-acceptance of the tender without recording any specific reasons or assigning reasons therefor is a case of non-application of mind and it is arbitrary and mala fide.

9. Mr. Gupta, learned Additional Advocate General appearing on behalf of the respondent No. 7, State of West Bengal has urged in the first place that the tender-in-question is not an ordinary kind of tender but it is a special kind of tender invited for supply of dietary articles for patients in the hospitals and health centres in the District of Murshidabad and as such it is essential that the dietary articles supplied must conform to the standard, otherwise it will tell upon the health of the patients of the hospitals and with this end in view the District Diet Committee which consisted of high and responsible officers like the District Magistrate, The Chief Medical Officer of Health etc. considered this aspect of the matter and in order to ensure the supply of food articles of the standard quality they came to the opinion that standard quality articles could not be supplied at low rates. As such after deliberation they adopted a resolution that rates quoted by the tenderers at the rate of 25% below the schedule rates would be accepted. It has been submitted by the learned Additional Advocate General that if tenders at such rates are accepted it will ensure supply of articles of standard quality. This norm as laid down in the resolution taken in the meeting of the Diet Committee cannot be termed as arbitrary or mala fide and acceptance of the tender submitted by the respondent No. 6 whose rate conforms to the rate as specified in the above resolution cannot be termed as arbitrary or discriminatory. This decision cannot also be assailed on the ground of mala fide. It has been further submitted that it is not possible to ensure absolute equality where conflicting interests are involved, still then considering the overall aspects of the thing the norm that has been laid down in the resolution is expected to maintain supply of food articles of standard quality. It has been next submitted by the Additional Advocate General that the authority has the discretion to accept a tender and reject another. Non-acceptance of the tender of the petitioner does not involve any arbitrary trariness and particularly when the selection was made on the basis of the norm provided by the decision taken in the meeting of the Diet Committee. It has been lastly submitted by Mr. Gupta that the conduct of the petitioner disentitles him to get the contract. It has been submitted that in para 7 of the petition it has been stated that the tender of the petitioner being lowest and accepted by the committee he was asked to continue supply in respect of articles in categories 1 and 2 and 3. It has been stated that the authority being satisfied with the performance of the petitioner in respect of the purity of articles considered the petitioner's case by allowing him to continue the supply and was further told that formal letter of appointment will be sent soon. Thereafter on the basis of the said assurance the petitioner was directed by the D. M. O. to supply dietary articles in categories I, II and III with effect from 1-5-1981 and up-till now the petitioner has been supplying such articles. It has been stated in para 9 of the affidavit-in-opposition that in order to obtain a rule and interim order wrongfully the petitioner deliberately made these false statements by suppressing receipt of the order as mentioned in the annexure 'D' to the affidavit-in-opposition, that is, the petitioner was asked to continue the supply of dietary articles from 1-5-1981 to 15-5-1981. It has been submitted that by making this false statement and suppressing receipt of the copy of the order from the respondent No. 2 the petitioner obtained the instant Rule and the interim order and as such for the suppression of the material facts this rule should be discharged in limine and no relief should be given to the petitioner.

10. Mr. Dutt, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent No. 6 has submitted that the rule prima facie has become infructuous as the impugned order whereby the respondent No. 6 was appointed as contractor or, in other words, whereby the tender of respondent No. 6 was accepted has not been annexed and as such relief in terms of prayer 'A' of the petition as to why the impugned order should not be quashed or withdrawn or should not be given effect to cannot be granted. It has also been submitted that the selection cannot be challenged as selection is in the hands of the Expert Committee and the decision is final and it is not open to judicial review. Mr. Dutt has referred to the provisions of the Health Manual regarding tenders in support of his submission. It has been next submitted that the petitioner has got no legal right to get a contract or to have his tender accepted and as such non-acceptance of tender does not entitle the petitioner to come before this court to challenge the same in a writ petition. Some decisions have been cited at the bar in this respect. It has been next submitted that the writ petition will also fail inasmuch as the petitioner did not challenge the tender notice in the writ petition.

11. The preliminary objection that has been raised in this case by Mr. Dutt, Advocate for respondent No. 6 that this writ application is not maintainable as no legal right of the petitioner has been infringed requires to be decided first. It has also been submitted that the District Diet Committee consisting of the respondents Nos. 1 to 5 has the absolute discretion to accept one tender and reject another tender and its decision is final and even if its decision is wrong such a decision cannot be challenged in a writ petition as no legal right of the petitioner has been impaired or infringed by such decision of the public authority. This preliminary rejection, in my opinion, is liable to be rejected in limine. The meaning of the word "locus standi" for the purpose of maintaining a writ application has now been widened very much by the pronouncements of the Supreme Court as well as of our court. Ordinarily the petitioner who seeks to file an application under Art. 226 of the Constn. should be one who has a personal or individual right in the subject matter of his petition. This personal right need not be in respect of proprietary interest, it can also relate to an interest of a trustee. That apart, in exceptional cases as the expression 'ordinarily' indicates a person who has been prejudicially affected by an act or an omission by an authority can file a writ petition even though he has no proprietary or fiduciary interest in subject-matter thereof. The above observation has been made in the case of Venkateswar Rao v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1966 SC 828. This view has been further elaborated in a latter case in AIR 1976 SC 578 at p. 581 para 12, Jashbai Motibhai v. Basir Ahmed. It has been observed by Sarkaria, J. who spoke for the Supreme Court that the expression "aggrieved person" denotes an elastic, and to an extent an elusive concept. It cannot be confined within the bounds of a rigid, exact and comprehensive definition. Its scope and meaning depends on diverse, variable factors such as the content and intent of the statute of which contravention is alleged, the specific circumstances of the case, the nature and extent of petitioner's interest, and the nature and extent of the prejudice or injury suffered by him. It is flexible enough to take in those cases where the applicant has been prejudicially affected by an act or omission of an authority even though he has no proprietary or even a fiduciary interest in the subject-matter. In the case of In Re : Monoranjan Maity v. District School Board, Midnapore decided on 31-3-1981* I have held that in order to maintain an application for a writ in the nature of mandamus or in the nature of certiorari or for any other appropriate order or directions under Art. 226 of the Constn. it is not the sole test to be specified that the person making the application must show that any of his individual or personal rights either conferred by Part III of the Constn. or by any statute has been infringed illegally by the purported action or inaction on the part of the statutory authority. If a person has been shown to have a genuine grievance by an action or inaction on the part of the authority to discharge his public duties enjoined upon him by the Act, in that case such person will be an aggrieved person having locus standi to maintain an application for a writ in the nature of Mandamus and/or Certiorari against the purported action or inaction on the part of such public authority.

12. In the instant case the petitioner who submitted tender in compliance with the tender notice inviting tenders within the time specified is entitled to have his tender considered as it is a case of distribution of public contracts. True that the petitioner has got no legal right to claim that the tender submitted by him must be accepted by the Tender Committee, that is, District

Diet Committee still he has a right to have his tender fairly and properly considered by the public authority before the same is rejected. The arbitrary rejection of his tender without considering the same at all and the acceptance of the tender of respondent No. 6 who quoted rates much higher than the rates quoted by the petitioner undoubtedly affects the petitioner and the petitioner is an aggrieved person. Therefore the instant writ application at the instance of the petitioner is maintainable. The decision in AIR 1972 SC 1816 does not apply as the facts are totally different from the facts of this case. In that case the highest bid offered by the respondent No. 1 for country liquor shop was rejected as in the opinion of the Government it did not fetch adequate price as a result of collusion between the bidders. Thereafter tenders were invited and tenders were duly received. The Government accepted the tender in respect of one shop and rejected the other tenders as price offered was inadequate. Ultimately the 7 shops were settled by negotiations with some of the tenderers and the price fetched was much higher than that offered either at the auction or by the tenderers. It was held that the Government reserves the powers to accept or to reject the highest bid. The highest bid was rejected as it did not fetch appropriate price and as such the writ application was rejected. There was no arbitrariness or unfairness in settling 7 shops by private negotiations with some of the tenderers at a much higher price. Similarly the decision in the case of Manjula Manjari Dei v. M. C. Pradhan, D. P. I., AIR 1952 Orissa 344 also has got no application to this case as the facts of that case are different from the facts of the instant case. In that case the petitioner, a publisher of text books for schools challenged the action of the Director of Public Instruction in accepting the decision omitting some books of the petitioner from the list of text books made by a committee set up by the Director of Public Instruction. It was held that the petitioner has no legal right which could be enforced against a public officer and the choice of text books is entirely within the discretion of the Director of Public Instruction. He exercises his discretion according to the direction of the Government and as such held that he acted bona fide and in good faith.

13. The respondent No. 2 issued a tender notice in the year 1981-82 inviting sealed tenders from bona fide contractors for supply of dietary articles to the State owned hospitals, Health Centres, etc. in the district of Murshidabad. It has been specifically mentioned in the said tender notice that the intending tenderers are to quote rates either 'below' or 'at par' or 'above' the schedule of rates of dietary articles for the year 1981-82 in respect of three categories mentioned therein. A copy of the said schedule of rates have been annexed as annexure 'A' to the petition. It has also been provided in the said tender notice that the Governor reserved the right to reject any tender without assigning any reason thereof and acceptance of lowest rates will not be obligatory to the contracting officer. It was also provided in the said tender notice that all the tenders are to be submitted by 30-4-1981 up to 12 noon and the tenders will be opened by the Chairman of the District Diet Committee on that day at 3 p. m. The petitioner undoubtedly submitted tenders within the specific time provided in the tender notice and rates quoted by him are undoubtedly the lowest rates in respect of articles mentioned in all the three categories — the rates being much below the schedule rates. The respondent No. 6 also submitted tender but the rate quoted by him was much higher than the rate quoted by the petitioner. On April 30, 1981, the District Diet Committee at its meeting adopted a resolution to the effect that rates quoted by the tenderers 25% below the schedule rates would be accepted. This resolution has been annexed as annexure 'A' to the affidavit-in-opposition sworn by the respondent No. 5 on 8th of June, 1981. It has been stated that the respondent No. 6 whose rates in the tender submitted by him having coincided with the rate as specified in the resolution of the District Diet Committee was accepted and the respondent No. 6 has been selected for appointment as a contractor for supply of dietary articles to the hospitals in the district. This order of the respondent No. 2, Chief Medical Officer of Health, Murshidabad who is the Chairman of the District Diet Committee has been assailed and or questioned in the writ petition as arbitrary and unfair and also discriminatory. It has also been alleged that no reason has been recorded or assigned by the respondent No. 2 while rejecting the lowest tender of the petitioner and accepting the tender of the respondent No. 6 at a much higher rate. It has, therefore, been contended that this order of respondent No. 2 is violative of Art. 14 of the Constn. In a Division Bench decision of this court to which myself was a party reported in (1978) 2 Cal LJ 166 Kanchanoor Bhaskar Shetty v. State of West Bengal a similar question was raised. It has been observed that Art. 293 of the Constn. provides that the executive powers of the Union and the State shall extend to carrying on of any trade and to the acquisition, holding and disposal of property and the making of contracts for any purpose. Thus the State can carry on this executive function either by making a law or without making a law. The exercise of this executive power is subject to Part III of the Constn. and as such Art. 14 of the Constn. is applicable to the exercise of such powers. So in the matter of public contract equal opportunities are to be given to the citizens who apply and they cannot be discriminated against in the matter of giving their offer for such contracts and of having the same considered. In other words, there cannot be any discrimination at the threshold or at the time of entry in the field of consideration of persons with whom contracts will be made by the Government. The decision in AIR 1975 SC 266, Erusian Equipment and Chemicals Ltd. v. State of West Bengal and AIR 1977 SC 1496, Radhakrishna Agarwal v. State of Bihar were referred to. Therefore, I hold that the petitioner having genuine grievance against the impugned order dated 30-4-1981 accepting the tender of respondent No. 6 at rate much higher than that offered by him in his tender is an aggrieved person competent to maintain the instant writ petition and this preliminary objection raised on behalf of respondent No. 1 having no merits is rejected.

14. As regards the second submission of Mr. Moitra, learned Advocate for the petitioner contends that the discretionary power of the public authority in accepting or rejecting a tender has to be exercised according to rule of law and reasonably and fairly on a proper consideration of the individual tenders submitted and not arbitrarily, capriciously or according to its own whims. It has also been submitted that in the tender notice no guideline nor any norm has been laid down specifying the eligibility for acceptance of tenders to be submitted. Public authorities cannot deviate from it and set out a different norm subsequent to the submission of tenders laying down a different guideline for acceptance of tenders. If this is done then such action of the public authority will be arbitrary, capricious rendering the same as invalid and void. It has been submitted that the tender of the petitioner has been rejected arbitrarily without considering it at all even though the rates offered were lowest and no reasons were assigned for such arbitrary rejection of the tender of the petitioner and acceptance of tender of respondent No. 6 at a higher rate though he had no experience in this regard. This has been done simply following the resolution of District Diet Committee passed on 30-4-81.

15. It appears from the tender notice annexed as annexure 'B' to the petition that it has been specifically mentioned therein that intending tenderers may submit tenders quoting rates either 'Above' or 'At Par' or 'Below' the schedule rates prepared for the purpose which has been annexed as annexure 'A' to the petition. There is no restriction nor inhibition nor any guideline as to the rates to be quoted in the tenders. The petitioner submitted tender for supply of dietary articles included in all the three categories at the lowest rates whereas the tender submitted by respondent no. 6 quoted rates much higher than that of the petitioner. The tender of the petitioner has been annexed as annexure 'C' to the petition. It appears from para 3 of the affidavit-in-opposition sworn on 8th June, 1981 by the respondent no. 5 that the tenders were opened on the 30th of April 1981 by the District Diet Committee consisting of respondents Nos. 1 to 5 and a resolution was adopted by the members of the Diet Committee on that very day that "rates quoted by the tenderers at the rate 25% below the Scheduled rates would be accepted." It has been further stated that on the basis of this resolution that respondent no. 6 was selected. The respondent no. 2 appointed respondent No. 6 to supply dietary articles to the hospitals. It is, therefore, evident from the above averments that the tender of the petitioner offering lowest rates was not at all considered on merits and the tender of respondent No. 6 was accepted solely on the basis of the guideline embodied in the resolution of the District Diet Committee even though there was no such guideline or restriction as to the rates to be quoted by intending tenderers in their tenders in the notice inviting tenders.

16. Therefore, the decision of the District Diet Committee which was adopted at its meeting on 30th April 1981 laying down the manner of selection of tenders is wholly arbitrary and contrary to the terms and conditions laid down in the notice inviting tenders. It has been tried to be submitted by the learned Additional Advocate General appearing on behalf of the State that this decision was taken in order to formulate and/or to lay down a norm or standard for acceptance of tenders for the purpose of ensuring supply of dietary articles of standard quality and as such the norm set out in the resolution is not arbitrary nor it can be said to be mala fide. The selection of respondent no. 6 on the basis of above norm laid down by the District Diet Committee cannot be questioned as arbitrary or discriminatory. This argument cannot be entertained on the ground that the petitioner has been supplying dietary articles to the hospitals and health centres in the district being the lowest tender and there was no allegation that articles supplied by him were much below the standard. Similarly Tapan Kumar Ghosh also supplied dietary articles in the year 1977-78 successfully and there was no adverse report against him as to the quality of foodstuff supplied by him. It is impossible to hold that a contractor who has quoted rates 25% below the Schedule rates will surely supply dietary articles of the standard quality whereas the lowest tenderer quoting rates much below that rate will invariably supply articles of lower standard and quality. Moreover, this decision of the District Diet Committee taken on the day when the sealed tenders are opened by the respondent no. 2, the Chairman of the District Diet Committee, is not only arbitrary but also contrary to the standards laid down in the said tender notice. The Supreme Court in no uncertain terms observed in the case of

R. D. Shetty v. International Airport Authority, AIR 1979 SC 1628 at p. 1635 that it is well settled rule of administrative law that an executive authority must be rigorously held to the standards by which it professes its action to be judged and it must scrupulously observe those standards and on pain of invalidation of an act violation of them. It is a rule of administrative law which has been judicially evolved as a check against exercise of arbitrary power by the executive authority. It is indeed unthinkable that in a democracy governed by rule of law the executive government or any of its officers should possess arbitrary powers over the interests of individual. Every action of the executive government must be informed with reason and should be free from arbitrariness. That is the very essence of rule of law and its bare minimal requirement. And to the application of this principle it makes no difference whether the exercise of power involves affection of some right or denial of some privilege. It has been tried to be contended on behalf of the respondent No. 6 that in view of the term embodied in the tender notice that the "Governor of West Bengal reserves the right to reject any tender without assigning any reason thereof and acceptance of lowest rates will not be obligatory to the contracting officer, "the Chairman of the District Diet Committee or for that the District Diet Committee has got the absolute power to pick and choose any of the tenderers who according to them is fit and proper to supply dietary articles and decision of the selection committee is final. Such a decision selecting a particular tenderer even though his rate is higher and not selecting the tenderer who offered the lowest rate cannot be questioned as discriminatory and violative of Art. 14 of the Constn. of India. In support of this submission some decisions have been cited. The Supreme Court in the case of P. R. Quenim v. M. K. Tandel (1974) 3 SCR 64 at p. 68; (AIR 1974 SC 651 at p. 653) held that cl. 7 of the tender which provided that the highest tender shall ordinarily be accepted but the Government reserved the right to select any tender or reject a tender without assigning any reason thereof is not violative of Art. 14 of the Constn. It was further held that in matters relating to contracts with the Government the latter is not bound to accept the tender of the person who offers the highest amount. This decision was rendered by the Supreme Court relying on its earlier decision in the case of C. K. Achuthan v. State of Kerala (1959) Suppl. 1 SCR 787; (AIR 1959 SC 490). In this case the petitioner and the third respondent, the Co-operative Milk Supplies Society, Cannanore, submitted tenders for supply of milk to the Government hospitals at Cannanore for 1948-49. The Superintendent accepted the tender of the petitioner who offered the lowest rate and communicated his decision to the department of Public Health. Subsequently, the contract of the petitioner was cancelled and the tender of respondent No. 3 was accepted after giving requisite notice in terms of cl. 20 of the tender. The petitioner was intimated that it was the policy of the Government that in the matter of supply to Government Medical Institutions in Cannanore the Co-operative Milk Supplies Union was to be given contracts on the basis of price fixed by the Revenue Department. It was held that there was no discrimination because it was perfectly open to the Government even as it was to a private party, to choose a person to their liking, to fulfil contracts which they wished to be performed. When one person is chosen, rather than another, the aggrieved party cannot claim the protection of Art. 14 because the choice of the person to fulfil a contract must be left to the Government. Similarly a contract held from the Government stands on no different footing from a contract held from a private party. This view of the Supreme Court no longer holds the field as it is evident from the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Barium Chemicals Ltd. v. Company Law Board (AIR 1967 SC 295) where it has been held that before the discretion conferred by S. 237 (b) of the Companies Act, 1956 to order an investigation can be exercised, there must exist circumstances which in the opinion of the authority suggest what has been set out in sub-cl. (i) (ii) or (iii). If it is shown that the circumstances do not exist or that they are such that it is impossible for any one to form an opinion therefrom suggestive of the aforesaid things, the opinion is challengeable on the ground of non-application of mind or perversity or on the ground that it was formed on collateral grounds and was beyond the scope of the statute. The formation of opinion may be subjective but the court can interfere if question whether circumstances for formation of opinion as provided in S. 237 (b) of the said Act exist or not. Therefore, even in this case of administrative decision made on subjective satisfaction by the executive officer the party aggrieved can question the administrative decision and or the formation of the opinion for exercise of the administrative power and it is incumbent on the concerned authorities to show that the opinion was formed on considering all relevant circumstances which exist. Similarly in AIR 1975 SC 266 at p. 268, Erusian Equipment and Chemicals Ltd. v. State of West Bengal A. N. Ray, C. J. who spoke for the Supreme Court observed, "The State can carry on executive function by making a law or without making a law. The exercise of such powers and functions in trade by the State is subject to Part III of the Constn. Art. 14 speaks of equality before the law and equal protection of the laws. Equality of opportunity should apply to matters of public contracts. The State has the right to trade. The State has therefore the duty to observe equality. An ordinary individual can choose not to deal with any person. The Government cannot choose to exclude persons by discrimination." This decision was referred to in AIR 1978 SC 1496, Radhakrishna Agarwal v. State of Bihar and it was held that Art. 14 of the Constn. imports a limitation or imposes an obligation upon the State's executive power under Art. 298 of the Constn. All constitutional powers carry corresponding obligations with them. Therefore these decisions clearly laid down that in the exercise of executive powers by administrative authorities or public authorities they cannot act arbitrarily and cannot select a tenderer having offered a higher rate in preference to another offering lowest rate according to their whims without assigning cogent reasons therefor. Art. 14 of the Constn. of India applies to such cases of arbitrary selection of a tenderer as the authority concerned is under an obligation to consider all the tenders on their respective merits and he cannot pick and choose. It will be pertinent to refer in this connection the observation of the Supreme Court in AIR 1971 SC 40, Union of India

v. J. N. Sinha where it was held that administrative authorities in making orders affecting rights of the person must act fairly and not capriciously or arbitrarily. In other words, rules of natural justice are called in aid to prevent miscarriage of justice and to ensure a just decision. Similar view was also expressed in the case of D. F. O., South Kheri v. Ram Sanehi Singh, AIR 1973 SC 205. It has been already stated hereinbefore that in a Division Bench judgment of this Court in (1978) 2 Cal LJ 166 it has been observed that principles of natural justice can be invoked in cases of decision of public officers affecting civil rights of a person. In AIR 1979 SC 1628, R. D. Shetty v. International Airport Authority of India it has been held that the doctrine of equality envisaged in Art. 14 of the Constn. posits that a corporation which is an instrumentality or agency of Government in exercise of its discretion cannot act arbitrarily while dealing with public whether by way of giving jobs, or largesse or entering into contracts or otherwise. Its action must be in conformity with some principle which meets the tests of reason and relevance. The Government is not and should not be as free as an individual in selecting the recipients for its largesse. Whatever its activity, the Government is still the Government and will be subject to restraints inherent in its position in a democratic society. A democratic government cannot lay down arbitrary and capricious standards with whom it will deal. Therefore from these decisions cited hereinbefore it is well settled that the Public Authorities cannot exercise its discretion arbitrarily in the matter of giving contracts to a party at its own sweet will and pleasure. It has to exercise its discretion in the matter of selecting right person for the giving of largesse or contract or for selecting persons for giving contract fairly and on a just consideration of all the tenders submitted on a reasonable basis and in the case of selecting a tender of a person offering higher rate in preference to another offering a lower rate it has to record valid, relevant and cogent reasons therefor. A selection of higher tender in preference to a lower tender without assigning any reason will be violative of the provisions of Art. 14 of the Constn. In the instant case the tenders were invited and the petitioner and other persons including respondent No. 6 submitted tenders offering rates below the schedule rates as stated hereinbefore. In the tender notice there was no such term that tenders offering rates more than 25% below the schedule rates will not be considered for selection. The District Dietary Committee on 30-4-81 that is, the date fixed for opening the sealed tenders, adopted a resolution to the effect that only tenders offering to supply dietary articles in categories 1 to 3 at rate 25% below the schedule rate would be accepted. The tender of respondent No. 6 was accepted solely on the basis of this decision without considering at all that the tender submitted by the petitioner offering rates much below the rates that was offered by the respondent No. 6 and as such if the tender of the petitioner was accepted there will be a great deal of saving of public money. The acceptance of the tender of respondent No. 6 on the basis of the above decision of the Dietary Committee is, in my opinion, wholly arbitrary inasmuch as it is contrary to the terms and conditions laid down in the tender notice. Secondly, this decision of the Dietary Committee imposed a restriction in consideration of the tender of the petitioner and thereby it discriminates between the petitioner and the respondent No. 6. Such a decision is clearly in violation of the provisions of Art. 14 of the Constn. as it does not provide equal opportunity in the matter of consideration of the tenders submitted by all the tenderers including the petitioner himself for the purpose of selection of the tenderer to be entrusted with the supply of dietary articles. Furthermore this decision of District Diet Committee is a clear deviation from the terms and conditions embodied in the tender notice inviting tenders and therefore the selection of respondent no. 6 is wholly illegal and the same cannot be given effect to. Reference may be made in this connection to the observation of the Supreme Court in AIR 1979 SC 1628 where it has been held that public authorities must conform to the standards or terms and conditions laid down in the tender notice and they cannot be permitted to deviate from it. Therefore the acceptance of tender of the respondent no. 6 without at all considering the lowest rate submitted by the petitioner in his tender is wholly arbitrary, unwarranted and bad. It is a well settled rule of administrative law that executive authority must be rigorously held to the standards by which it professes its actions to be judged and it must scrupulously observe those standards on pain of invalidation of an act in violation of them.

17. Mr. Dutt, learned Advocate for respondent no. 6 submitted that governmental action is presumed to be reasonable and in public interest and it is for the party challenging its validity to show that it is wanting in reasonableness or is not informed with public interest. Mr. Dutt referred in this connection the decision in (1980) 4 SCC 1 at p. 13: (AIR 1980 SC 1992 at p. 2000) para 14, Kasturi Lal Lakshmi Reddy v. State of J. and K. I have already held that the petitioner proved that impugned action in appointing respondent no. 6 as successful tenderer and in giving him the contract is arbitrary, unreasonable and not in public interest. It will be pertinent to refer to the Memorandum No. Medi. 980/H/R. 3D-10-48 dated 16th Mar. 1949 issued by Asst. Secretary to the Government of West Bengal contained in Health Manual Vol. I (Administration) page 57 excerpt from the said memorandum is quoted hereinbelow:—

"1. (b) Tenders should be invited from the open market and the lowest tender should, as a rule, be accepted. Higher rates may, however, be accepted in exceptional cases to ensure supply of better quality of articles, and the reasons for such acceptance should invariably be recorded." In the instant case the lowest tender submitted by the petitioner was neither considered nor accepted but the tender of respondent no. 6 quoting rates higher than those of the petitioner has been accepted by the District Diet Committee without recording any reasons for such acceptance as required by this memo. Therefore, the impugned order made by the District Diet Committee accepting tender of respondent No. 6 is also illegal and bad.

18. The last submission advanced on behalf of the respondents that the writ application is liable to be dismissed on the ground of suppression of material facts, in my opinion, has got no merits. True that a statement has been made in the petition to the effect that on 30-4-81 at 3 p. m. the respondents 1 to 5 opined that the petitioner's tender being the lowest could be accepted and he would be declared successful. It has also been stated that thereafter he came to know on enquiry that his tender was not accepted and the tender of respondent no. 6 was accepted. This statement made in the writ petition cannot be considered to be a suppression of material facts inasmuch as this statement did not at all influence the mind of the court in the matter of issuance of the rule and the interim order. Of course, an observation was made by this Court that such loose statements ought not to have been made by the petitioner in the writ petition. I am, therefore, of the opinion that there was no suppression of material facts. The main challenge against the impugned order was that the tender of the petitioner quoting the lowest rate was not accepted and the tender of respondent no. 6 quoting the rate higher than that of the petitioner was accepted. Therefore this contention is devoid of any merit and hence it is overruled.

19. For the reasons aforesaid the contentions raised on behalf of the petitioners having succeeded the rule succeeds and the same is made absolute.

20. Let a writ of Mandamus be issued directing the respondent Nos. 1 to 5 to forbear from giving effect to the order dated 30-4-81 accepting the tender of respondent no. 6 for supply of items in category nos. 1, 2 and 3 in the hospitals and health centres within the district of Murshidabad.

21. Let a writ of Certiorari be also issued directing the respondents to quash and set aside the impugned order dated 30-4-81 passed by the District Diet Committee or for that the Chairman of the said Committee appointing the respondent no. 6 as contractor for supply of the said dietary articles.

22. There will be no order as to costs.

23. This order will govern all the three matters, in re: (1) Barun Kumar Sinha, in re: (2) Tapan Kumar Ghosh and in re: (3) Dharendra Nath Ghosh.

24. Let operation of the order be stayed up to 17-9-1981 as prayed for.

Rule made absolute.

Lall, for Petitioner; N. C. Roy Chowdhury, for Respondent.

ORDER :— This is an application under S. 71 of the Patents Act 1970 for rectification of the entry relating to Patent No. 139978 in the register of the respondent. This application is contested by the respondent.

2. It is alleged in the petition that Chlorothio-N-Phthalimide is a novel compound and is a new intermediate product suitable for producing various products such as herbicidal compounds or auxiliary agents for rubber. This compound can also be used in the preparation of other compounds which in turn can be used in the treatment of disease in human beings and animals. But this compound by itself is not intended nor is capable of being used as a drug or medicine as defined in S. 2 (1) (i) of the Act. The respondent, however, wrongly classified this product as a 'drug' and fixed the period of the patent for 7 years from the date of the sealing. According to the petitioner the period of this novel compound should have been 14 years by virtue of the provision of S. 53 of the Act. Hence this application for rectification of the register by deleting 7 years and inserting in its place 14 years.

3. The respondent filed an affidavit-in-opposition affirmed on 12-1-1981 by one Shanti Kumar, Joint Controller of Patents and Designs. According to the respondent this compound is a medicine or drug within the meaning of S. 2 (1) (i) of the Patents Act 1970 and as such the period of patent should be limited to 5 to 7 years from the date of sealing or the date of the patent whichever term is shorter, under the provision of S. 53 (1) (a) of the said Act. Classification of this compound and its 7 years term have been correctly done in accordance with this Act. The respondent further stated that the petitioner as a patentee did not raise any objection when the patent document was issued to him on 28-6-1977 providing for 7 years time from 5-5-1974. This belated application is barred by limitation.

4. According to the respondent's counsel, the application under S. 71 of the Act would be governed by the residuary Art. 137 of the Limitation Act of 1963 and as such the application should have been taken out within 3 years from the date of receipt of the patent documents on 28-6-1977 when his right to apply accrued. This application was made on 11-12-1980 and was out of time. The counsel for the petitioner submitted that the Act was a complete and a self-contained Code and in respect of any application under this Act, the Limitation Act of 1963 would not apply. In support of his contention he relied on AIR 1969 SC 872 (K. Venkateswara Rao v. Bekkam Narasimha Reddy). This is a case on Representation of the People Act of 1951 as amended in 1966. The Supreme Court after construing different sections of this Act held that the Act was a complete and a self-contained Code which did not admit of the introduction of the principles or the provisions of law contained in the Limitation Act. The petitioners' counsel also construed various sections of the Patents Act of 1970 and invited my attention to the provisions of different sections to show that whenever this Act wanted to put a time limit, the relevant sections have made express provisions for the same. Therefore Limitation Act of 1963 would have no application. According to him there was no time limit for an application under S. 71 of the Act. The next case relied on by him was AIR 1974 SC 480 (Hukumdev Narain Yadav v. Lalit Narain Misra). This was also a case on Representation of the People Act 1951 and it was held that the Act being self-contained and complete, the provision of S. 5 of the Limitation Act would not apply. He also cited AIR 1942 All 429 (FB) (Raja Pande v. Sheopujan Pande) where a Division Bench of that High Court had held that the Provincial Insolvency Act was a self-contained Act and Limitation Act of 1908 would not apply.

5. The respondent's counsel Mr. N. C. Roy Chowdhury invited my attention to S. 71 of the Patents Act 1970 which provided that an aggrieved party may apply to the High Court for rectification of the register of Patents. He submitted that if any special or local law did not prescribe any time limit for an application to be made to a court under that Act, the application would be governed by Art. 137 of the Limitation Act of 1963 and in support he relied on AIR 1977 SC 282 (The Kerala State Electricity Board, Trivandrum v. T. P. Kunhaliumma). In that case the question arose whether a petition under S. 16 (3) of Telegraph Act would fall within the scope of Art. 137 of the Limitation Act 1963 or not. It was held in that case (at p. 286) :

"The changed definition of the words 'applicant' and 'application' contained in Ss. 2 (a) and 2 (b) of the 1963 Limitation Act indicates the object of the Limitation Act to include petitions, original or otherwise under special laws. The interpretation which was given to Art. 131 of the 1908 Limitation Act on the principle of ejusdem generis is not applicable with regard to Art. 137 of the 1963 Limitation Act. Art. 137 stands in isolation from all other Arts. in Part I of the third division. Art. 137 includes petitions within the word 'applications'. These petitions and applications can be under any special Act."

6. In my opinion, the decision reported in AIR 1977 SC 282 puts an end to the controversy regarding applicability of 1963 Limitation Act to special laws or local laws. There is no doubt that in this case Art. 137 will apply as no time limit was put by the Act itself and this application has to be made to the High Court. This application should have been made within 3 years from the date when the petitioner's right to apply accrued. It was not disputed by the petitioner that the relevant patent was sealed on 23-4-1977, recorded in the register on 4-6-1977 and the Patent documents were issued to the petitioner on 28-6-1977. This application made on 1-12-1980, was clearly beyond three years from the date of accrual of right to apply and is barred by limitation on the face of the application.

7. So far as the merit of this application is concerned, I find that the petitioner had submitted a complete specification along with its application to the respondent where the petitioner had alleged :—

"Chlorothio-N-Phthalimide is a new intermediate product which by virtue of its reactive group is suitable for producing various end products such as herbicidal compound or auxiliary agents for rubbers."

8. The provisions of S. 2 (1) (i) of Patents Act 1970 are as follows :—

(i) "Medicine or drug" includes—

(i) to (iii).....

(iv) insecticides, germicides, fungicides, weedicides and all other substances, intended to be used for the protection or preservation of plants,

(v) all chemical substances which are originally used as intermediates in the preparation or manufacture of any of the medicines or substances above referred to." (emphasis supplied).

9. During hearing, a printed copy of the complete specification was shown to me and the same was kept in the records of this case.

10. The petitioner's counsel, tried to distinguish between the words 'herbicide' used in the complete specification and 'weedicide' mentioned in S. 2 (1) (i) (iv) of this Act. Accordingly to him 'herbicide' is a much broader term than 'weedicide'. Herbicide destroys all herbs whereas weedicide destroys only weeds.

11. In Webster's New World Dictionary, the meaning of the word 'herbicide' is given as follows :—

"any chemical substance used to destroy plants esp. weeds".

12. It is therefore, clear that a 'herbicide' is also a 'weedicide'. In my opinion the respondent had correctly classified the product and had fixed the term of the patent in accordance with the provisions of S. 53 (1) (a) of the Act.

13. For all the reasons mentioned above, the application fails. The petitioner is to pay the cost of this application to the respondent.

Constitution of India, Art. 226 —
Writ against Universities — Student of Law College — Less attendance at classes — Student detained from appearing at final Law examination — Petition by student — Attendance register produced found to be in perfunctory state — University directed to allow student to appear at examination but to keep his result in abeyance till he secures minimum attendance in current session — State of affairs of Law College depreca.ed. (Calcutta University Act (2 of 1966), S. 53 (c)). (Para 1)

R. N. Mitra and N. C. Saha, for Petitioners, S. Mukherjee, D. K. Bakshi and S. K. Chakraborty, for Principals University College of Law, Calcutta (Respondent No. 4).

ORDER :— After having heard Mr. Mitra, learned Advocate for the petitioner and Mr. Mukherjee on behalf of the Principal, University College of Law though I was very much reluctant to interfere in this matter still after having seen the sorrowful state of affairs going on in the University Law College particularly in its Hazra Branch I am quite clear in my mind that the authorities of the college including Shri Upadhaya the Principal, University College of Law, are not aware nor do they try to be over conscious of their duties and serious responsibilities of running this sacred Institution and to see that the students reading there are properly trained and instructed. The attendance registers have been produced before this Court and I am constrained to say that all these attendance registers clearly show in what perfunctory manner they have been kept. It appears that in several months six or seven lectures have been recorded to have been delivered by the teachers concerned; no dates have been mentioned when these lectures were delivered and it is surprising that for the rest of the month there was no record why any lecture was not delivered, if this be the state of affairs can it be expected that the students who are reading in this branch of the Law College are properly instructed? It is, therefore, useless to blame the students when the teachers are not conscious of their duties and responsibilities in the matter of imparting instruction to the students. I fail to see why the authorities of the Law College are not conscious of this state of affairs. It is not only the duty of the Law College to see that the students having not attended the required number of classes or the minimum number of classes their names should be struck off from the rolls but at the same time it is the duty of the Principal also to see that the teachers are also maintaining certain norms or discipline in the matter of holding classes in the Law Colleges and if the principal does not do so I am constrained to say that he has signally failed in his duties as Principal or Vice Principal of the Law College. It is expected that the teachers who are also highly educated persons and who occupy some responsible position in the society should be aware of their duties and responsibilities to their pupils and also to their country and they should devote their time for imparting instructions to the pupils during the period the college remains open. For the present I leave it at that. Of course I will at the same time say in this connection that it is not expected that the students will often come to this Court for having orders for enabling them to sit in the final examination of law of the Calcutta University or to get themselves declared passed. The students should be conscious of their duties and they should know that they must study hard and sincerely in order to acquire knowledge and to become successful in the Law Examination. The students should not forget that by anyhow obtaining a birth mark i. e. a certificate or passing the examination will not enable them to be successful in their career. They should follow the norm that it is the foremost duty of a student to devote his entire energy for the pursuit of study specially in regard to Law which is a very hard and growing subject. However, I leave this matter at that. Though I am not satisfied with the state of affairs regarding the attendance of classes by the petitioner still seeing the entire state of affairs I am constrained to dispose of this application by directing the University to allow the petitioner to appear in the ensuing LL. B. Final Examination which is scheduled to commence on the 24th of June, 1981 as notified. The respondent no. 4 is directed to offer all facilities to the petitioner to allow him to sit for the ensuing final LL. B. Examination with effect from 24th June, 1981. The examination answer papers submitted by the petitioner will be duly examined by the authorities concerned or other examiners in accordance with law. The publication of the result will be kept in abeyance in respect of the petitioner till the petitioner attends classes of the final year in the current session and he secures the minimum percentage of attendance. After the petitioner secures such minimum percentage of attendance in the current year in the final Law classes the Principal of the University College of Law at Calcutta (respondent no. 4) will certify the same and send the same to the Controller of Examinations of the University of Calcutta who will accordingly publish the result of the petitioner on receipt of the same.

(2) The application is thus disposed of.

(3) Office is directed to send a copy of this order to the Calcutta University Council for consideration.

(4) Learned Advocates for the parties may take a plain copy of this order, as prayed for.

Order accordingly.

Delhi Cloth & General Mills Co. Ltd., Applicant (Decree-holder) v. Ramjidas Shriram and others, Respondents (Judgment-debtor).

Execution Case No. 6 of 1975, D/- 7-8-1981.

(A) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), Ss. 47, 2 (2) — Decree — Executability of — Decree passed by Court having jurisdiction to entertain it — All defendants submitting to jurisdiction of court — Decree, not a nullity. AIR 1954 SC 340 Dist. (Evidence Act (1872), S. 115).

(Paras 9, 8)

(B) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 37 R. 2 — Suit for recovery of sale proceeds of goods of plaintiff (holder of hundies) — Suit based on hundies accepted by defendant — Held, maintainable — Fact that hundies not endorsed in favour of plaintiff — Not material.

(Para 9)

(C) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), S. 20 — Suit based on hundies filed in Delhi High Court — Hundies drawn at Delhi and accepted at Calcutta — Part of cause of action arising in Delhi — Held, Delhi High Court did have jurisdiction to entertain such suit.

(Para 11)

(D) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), S. 47 — Question as to validity of decree — Execution — Challenge to validity of decree — Mere plea that it is contrary to law — Not open.

It is true that a decree which is passed without jurisdiction to pass it is a nullity and the question as to the absence of jurisdiction may be raised even in execution proceeding or in collateral proceedings. But where such an objection is raised in an execution proceeding the decree must be apparently without jurisdiction i. e. on the face of it the decree must show that it was passed by a court which was incompetent to pass it. Where in execution proceeding the question raised is whether the court which passed it had or had not jurisdiction to pass it, and as such it is necessary to make investigation, then the executing court has no competence to permit that investigation to be made. The question must be regarded as finally decided by the decree of the court which tried the suit. In execution no plea that merely challenges the validity or propriety of the decree on the ground that it is contrary to the provision of law, can be raised. (Paras 12, 13)

(E) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), Ss. 47, 11 — Question as to nullity of decree — Incorrectness of decision of court passing decree — Pleas as to — Barred by principle of res judicata. (Para 13)

(F) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), S. 47 — Question of liability of certain property to attachment and sale — Properties must be within jurisdiction of Executing Court.

An executing court has no jurisdiction to attach immoveable property unless such immoveable property is within the jurisdiction of such court or the person against whom the execution is sought is or resides within the jurisdiction of such court. When the moveable properties of the judgment-debtors are within the jurisdiction of Calcutta High Court and those judgment-debtors reside within the jurisdiction of the court, the properties can be sold in execution. Thus in the instance case it can be decided which are the properties of the judgment debtors that are liable to be sold in execution of the decree. AIR 1932 Cal 213 and AIR 1938 Cal 113 Foll.

ORDER :— This is an application in execution of part of a decree transmitted for Rs. 30 lacs for execution against the judgment-debtors Nos. 1 to 6. Execution is sought against the judgment debtor Nos. 1 to 6 that is to say M/s. Ramjidas Shriram, a partnership firm. Mr. Shrawan Kumar Agarwal in his individual capacity and as Karta of H. U. F. business of Shrawan Kumar Agarwal and Brothers, Mr. Onkarnath Agarwal in his individual capacity and as Karta of H. U. F. business of Onkarnath Agarwal and Brothers, Mr. Asok Kumar Agarwal, son of Mr. Premnath, Smt. Sushila Wati, wife of Ramnath, Mr. Kedarnath Agarwal, son of late Balaprasad all of 46, Upper Chitpur Road, Calcutta.

2. The execution is sought by attachment and sale of movable and immovable properties of the judgment-debtors Nos. 1 to 6. The mode in which the execution is sought is stated in Column 10 of the tabular statement filed herein.

3. The said mode is the attachment and sale of the right, title and interest of judgment-debtors Nos. 1 to 6 in 42, 43 and 46, Upper Chitpur Road now known as No. 216, 218 and 222, Rabindra Sarani, the right title and interest of the defendants, Nos. 3 and 6 in properties No. 36, 37, 38, 40 Upper Chitpur Road now re-numbered as premises No. 212, Rabindra Sarani, Calcutta as also also 13A, Bagbazar Street, Calcutta within the jurisdiction of this Court. The judgment-creditor also wants to have Plots Nos. 1189, 1190, Bakultalla, Baltikuri, Howrah and superstructure built over there also to be sold. But the said property cannot be attached and sold in execution of the decree by this Court. The shares of the judgment-debtors in different Joint Stock Companies and partnership firms details of which are given in Schedule 2 are also sought to be attached and sold in execution. The said shares in Joint Stock Companies and partnership firms have been set out in Annexure 2 to the tabular statement. Besides the same, various bank accounts of the judgment-debtors have been mentioned and other movable properties and household goods belonging to the judgment-debtors have been set out in Annexure 3 to the tabular statement for being attached and sold in execution of the decree. The decree sought to be executed is dated 17th April, 1974 passed by the High Court at Delhi in Suit No. 472 of 1972.

4. The following defence has been raised to the execution of the decree by Kedarnath Agarwal, the respondent No. 6.

(1) The said Suit in Delhi could not be validly instituted under Order 37 of the Code of Civil Procedure as the same was not based on any negotiable instrument or hundi.

(2) None of the said alleged hundies was duly stamped.

(3) Although, the said Suit was purported to have been filed under Order 37, the same was really based on original consideration and thus no decree could have been passed.

(4) None of the said hundies was payable to or assigned in favour of the plaintiff.

(5) The learned Judge of the Delhi High Court had no jurisdiction to pass the said decree without any evidence.

(6) No part of the cause of action as alleged in the plaint arose within the jurisdiction of the Delhi High Court.

(7) The defendants did not reside or carry on business within the jurisdiction of the Delhi High Court.

(8) The plaintiff has started execution proceedings of the said decree in the Delhi High Court being the Execution Case No. 39 of 1974. The said execution case is still pending at Delhi Court.

(9) The plaintiff decree-holder is purported to split up its decretal claim into two parts — one for Rs. 15 lacs and another for Rs. 30 lacs and simultaneously executing the said decree partly in the High Court at Delhi and partly in this Hon'ble Court.

(10) The two plots of land Nos. 1189 and 1190 at Bakultalla, Baltikuri, Howrah are situated outside the jurisdiction of this Court. The said two properties are situated within the jurisdiction of the District Court at Howrah.

(11) In 1943, Kedarnath had been taken into adoption by his maternal uncle, grandfather of late Balaprosad of Delhi and ceased to have any interest in the properties of his natural father. He has no interest in premises Nos. 42, 43 and 46, Upper Chitpur Road, now Nos. 216, 218 and 222, Rabindra Sarani, Calcutta, save and except as a tenant in respect of a portion of premises No. 46, Upper Chitpur Road.

(12) Kedarnath's share in the 212, Rabindra Sarani, Calcutta is 1/12th and 1/18th which he acquired by purchase in 1960 and 1965 respectively. His total undivided share thus in the said 212, Rabindra Sarani is 5/36, Kedarnath has no interest in premises No. 13A, Bagbazar Street, Calcutta or the Bakultalla properties at Howrah.

(13) Kedarnath denies the particulars of moveable properties as alleged to be lying at No. 46, Upper Chitpur Road, Calcutta.

5. The plaintiff's suit is based on an agency agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant No. 1 in which the defendant No. 1 was selling agent of the plaintiff in the eastern territory of India and was to receive a commission of $\frac{1}{2}\%$ in respect of the yarn and at the rate of 1.56% for all the items of clothes except tapestry for which the commission was at the rate of 4.69%. The expenses for everyday cartage and godown rent etc. incurred by the defendant No. 1 were to be paid by the plaintiff to the defendant No. 1. Upon account of the said agency agreement being taken, nothing will be found due to the plaintiff. But the plaintiff managed to obtain the decree in the Delhi High Court by suppression of all material facts. The main burden of the defence was that the decree obtained at the Delhi High Court is null and void and cannot be executed. The respondent No. 2, Shrawan Kumar Agarwal in his affidavit-in-opposition to the tabular statement states as follows :

No writ of summons in the suit was served on the respondent No. 2 M/s. Shrawan Kumar Agarwal and Brothers. The said decree thus is void and unenforceable against the respondent No. 2, Shrawan Kumar Agarwal and Brothers, the H. U. F. was not a partner of the judgment-debtor No. 1 Ramjidas Shriram, Shrawan Kumar Agarwal himself was a partner of Ramjidas Shriram.

The said decree was passed without jurisdiction and is a nullity for the following reasons :

(1) The said suit was not and could not be validly instituted under O. 37 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The said suit is not based on any negotiable instrument or hundi.

(2) None of the alleged hundies have been duly stamped.

(3) The suit No. 472 of 1972 was a suit based on original consideration and was not maintainable under Order 37 of C. P. C.

(4) The plaintiff is not payee of any of the alleged hundies and thus no decree could have been passed in favour of the plaintiff.

(5) None of the said alleged hundies were assigned or endorsed in favour of the plaintiff.

(6) The suit not having been validly instituted under Order 37 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the Delhi High Court had no jurisdiction to treat the same as a suit under Order 37 of C. P. C. and pass the decree therein.

(7) No decree could be passed without any evidence in the said suit in violation of the principles of natural justice.

(8) No part of the cause of action in the said suit arose within the jurisdiction of the Delhi High Court.

(9) The defendants in the said suit resided outside the jurisdiction of the Delhi High Court.

(10) Drawing of hundies, as has been alleged, within the jurisdiction of the said court, is not a part of the cause of action.

(11) The plaintiff has already proceeded with execution proceeding of part of the said decree in the Delhi High Court; as such, this execution proceeding is void.

(12) His personal share will be 1/54th in the said three 206, 218 and 222, Rabindra Sarani and 13A, Bagbazar Street, Calcutta.

6. In fact, the main plea of Shri Shrawan Kumar Agarwal is that he in his personal capacity is a partner of the judgment debtor defendant No. 1 and the decree of the Delhi suit is a nullity. In the affidavit of respondent No. 3, it has been pleaded that the decree in the Delhi suit is a nullity and not executable.

7. The suit at Delhi was filed by the decree-holder Delhi Cloth Mills Ltd. against the defendant No. 1 Ramjidas Shriram for recovery of Rs. 36,07,167.21 p. under Order 37 of the Code of Civil Procedure on the basis of 118 hundies drawn on the defendant No. 1 and accepted by it at Calcutta. No writ of summons was served upon the respondent No. 3 in his individual capacity or as the Karta of H. U. F. of Onkarnath Agarwal and Brothers at 46, Chitpur Road, Calcutta. Thus the Court had no jurisdiction to pass any decree against him in his individual capacity or as a Karta of another H. U. F. He denies that he has 1/6th share in premises Nos. 36, 37 and 38 to 40, Upper Chitpur Road or that any share in No. 13A, Bagbazar Street, Calcutta. It appears from the facts of the case that the suit in which the decree was passed was instituted on 27th Oct. 1972 in the High Court at Delhi under Order 37 of the Code of Civil Procedure for a decree for Rs. 36,07,164.21 p. with interest and cost. On the 25th May, 1973, the judgment-debtor No. 1 made an application under Order 37, Rule 3 of the Civil Procedure Code in the High Court at Delhi for leave to defend the suit filed by the decree-holder. The said application was dismissed by the Delhi High Court. On the 14th Oct. 1973, the judgment-debtor filed a suit in the High Court at Delhi being the suit No. 454 of 1973 for a declaration that the hundies sued upon be attached, declared void, delivered up and cancelled. On the 7th Sept. 1977 an order was made by the Supreme Court of India on the application of the judgment-debtors herein for special leave against the order passed by the High Court at Delhi whereby the judgment debtors were granted leave to defend the suit filed by the decree-holder herein on condition that the judgment-debtors would furnish a bank guarantee to the extent of Rs. 10 lacs within 3 months from the date of the said order and also give security for a further sum of Rs. 10 lacs within a further period of 3 months from the date of furnishing the bank guarantee. On the 4th Mar. 1974, the judgment-debtors applied to the Supreme Court of India for modification of order dated 7th Dec. 1973. But the application was dismissed by the Supreme Court. On the 6th Mar. 1974 time to furnish bank guarantee under the order of the Supreme Court expired and no bank guarantee was furnished by the judgment-debtors. On the 13th Mar. 1974, the judgment-debtors made an application under S. 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure in the suit in the Delhi High Court. The said application was dismissed. On the 17th Apr. 1974 the decree under execution was passed by the High Court at Delhi for Rs. 36,07,164.21 p. with interest at the rate of 12% per annum on the principal sum of Rs. 30,28,873.50 p. up to the date of the decree and thereafter at the rate of 8% per annum until realisation. By an order made on 16th Sept. 1975, the High Court at Delhi ordered simultaneously execution of the decree at Delhi and at Calcutta. But the execution at Calcutta was limited to a sum of Rs. 30 lacs. Even after the said order dated 16th Sept. 1975, the judgment-debtors went up in appeal against the said order and obtained an interim stay of execution which was finally discharged by an order dated 5th May, 1976. The interest of Onkarnath and Kedarnath in 212, Rabin-dra Sarani is 7/36 jointly. The judgment-debtors have throughout challenged the decree even up to the Supreme Court of India.

8. Mr. S. K. Kapoor appearing with Mr. Jayanta Mitter submitted that the decree is executable against the shares of the coparceners of H. U. F. business of M/s. Onkar Nath Agarwal and Bros. M/s. Shrawan Kumar Agarwal and Bros. as the Kartas of the joint Hindu families which carried on the said businesses were partners of the defendant No. 1. Mr. Kapoor relied on the case of Firm Bhagatram Mohanlal v. Commr. of Excess Profits Tax, Nagpur reported in AIR 1956 SC 374 wherein the Supreme Court has held that a decree against a firm in which the Karta of H. U. F. is a partner with stranger is executable against all the coparceners. Mr. Kapoor then relied on the case of Premilata v. Laxman Prasad reported in AIR 1970 SC 1525 wherein it was held that simultaneous execution at different States of the same decree can be allowed in exceptional cases. Mr. Kapoor further relied on the case of Vasudev Dhanjibhai Modi v. Rajabhai Abdul Rehman reported in AIR 1970 SC 1475 for the proposition that the executing court cannot go behind the decree even if the decree is erroneous in law or on facts except when the decree is made by a court which has no inherent jurisdiction to make it. Objection as to the validity cannot be raised in execution. In the instant case, according to the learned counsel, on the face of the decree, the decree is quite valid and proper. So no objection can be raised as to the validity of the decree. The learned counsel then relied on the case of Gurudas Adhya v. Jnanendra Narayan Bagchi reported in AIR 1935 Cal 268 wherein in construing S. 39 of the Civil Procedure Code, a Division Bench of the Calcutta High Court held that simultaneous execution is permitted. A court has jurisdiction to execute its decree and at the same time send it to another court to execute it simultaneously. The counsel then relied on the case of Hiralal Patni v. Kal'nath reported in AIR 1962 SC 199 wherein it has been laid down that the validity of a decree can be challenged in execution proceeding only on the ground that the court which passed the decree was lacking inherent jurisdiction in the sense that it could not have seisin of the case because the said matter was wholly foreign to its jurisdiction or that the defendant was dead at the time the suit had been instituted or the decree passed or such further ground which can have the effect of rendering the court entirely lacking any jurisdiction in respect of the subject matter of the suit or over the parties to it. The counsel submitted that this case was not such a case. Delhi High Court had certainly jurisdiction to entertain and try the suit and thus the decree passed by the Delhi High Court is not a nullity and cannot be challenged in execution.

9. The respondents relied on the case of Kiran Singh v. Chaman Paswan reported in AIR 1954 SC 340 wherein it was laid down that it is the fundamental principle that a decree passed by court without jurisdiction is a nullity and that its validity can be challenged whenever and wherever it is sought to be enforced or relied on even at the stage of execution and even in collateral proceeding. A defect of jurisdiction whether it is pecuniary or territorial or whether it is in respect of the subject matter of the case strikes at the very authority of the court to pass any decree and such a decree cannot be cured even by consent of parties. It appears to me that is not the case here in the instant matter. In the instant case the Delhi High Court certainly had jurisdiction to try and entertain the suit and all the defendants submitted to the jurisdiction of the Delhi Court. The decree in the instant case cannot be said to be a nullity. The other points raised in defence to the execution are barred by res judicata or principles analogous thereto. I shall now shortly deal with the cases cited by the either side. The case relied on is the case of Jagjivan Mavji Vithlani v. M/s. Ranchhoddas Meghji, AIR 1954 SC 554 which laid down that in order to be liable on a promissory note the drawee must accept it. The next case cited was the case of Virappa Andandaneppa Manvi v. Mahadevappa Basappa Katti reported in AIR 1934 Bom 356 where a Division Bench of the Bombay High Court held that the holder of a promissory note cannot recover on it unless it is endorsed in his favour. The next case cited is the case of Bachaprasad v. Janki Rai reported in AIR 1957 Pat 380 (FB) wherein a Full Bench of Patna High Court decided that no person could sue unless he was a named payee or was entitled as endorsee of a negotiable instrument. The next case cited was the case of Milkhiram (India) Private Ltd. v. Chamanlal Bros. reported in AIR 1965 SC 1698 wherein it was held that where promissory notes executed by defendant in favour of plaintiff for advances made from time to time, suit on promissory notes was independent of the agreement and fell under O. 37, R. 2. Thus in the instant case, hundies accepted by the defendant No. 1 for the sale proceeds of the goods of the decree-holder could be sued upon under O. 37, of C.P.C. The next case relied on was Mandalsa Devi v. M. Ramnarain Private Ltd. reported in AIR 1965 SC 1718, which deals with Ss. 86, 87B, O. 30, R. 1, O. 21, R. 50 of the Civil Procedure Code, does not seem to be of any assistance in the instant case. The next case of Ramkaran Das Radhaballav v. Bhagawan Das Dwarkadas reported in AIR 1965 SC 1144 was also cited on the scope inter alia of R. 2 of O. 37 of the C. P. C. and is not necessary to deal with in detail. In the case of Official Trustee, West Bengal v. Sachindra Nath Chatterji reported in AIR 1969 SC 823 it was held that where a clause in a Trust Deed empowers the settlor to alter one term of interest given to its beneficiaries by Will alone, order of the court permitting settlor to revoke that clause and to permit such alteration being done by Deed inter vivos was void as the court was not competent to pass such order. This is a case, in my opinion, of inherent lack of jurisdiction of the court and is not of any help to any of the parties in the proceeding.

10. The next case cited is the case of Bhavan Vija v. Solanki Hanuji Khodaji Mansang reported in AIR 1972 SC 1371 in which Supreme Court laid down the duty of an executing Court, in the following words (at p. 1374) :

"It is true that an executing court cannot go behind the decree under execution. But that does not mean that it has no duty to find out the true effect of that decree. For construing a decree it can and in appropriate cases it ought to take into consideration the pleadings as well as the proceedings leading up to the decree. In order to find out the meaning of the words employed in a decree the court often has to ascertain the circumstances under which these words came to be used. That is the plain duty of the executing court and if that court fails to discharge that duty it would be deemed to have failed to exercise the jurisdiction vested in it."

The next case was the case of K. K. Deb, v. N. L. Choudhury, AIR 1927 Rang 258 (2) wherein it was laid down that there was nothing in the Civil Procedure Code of 1908 which prohibited the sending of a decree for execution to two courts at the same time. The said dictum was laid down on the basis of Saroda v. Luchmeput, (1870-72) 14 Moo Ind App 529. The next case cited was the case of Dwarka Chuckerbutty v. Imperial Bank of India reported in (1929) 33 Cal WN 620 : (AIR 1929 Cal 529) wherein a Division Bench of this Court inter alia observed that decree can be sent for execution to the court within the jurisdiction of which the judgment debtor lives, for execution before all the properties attached by the court which passed the decree, are sold in satisfaction of the decree. The next case cited is the case of Tailors Priya, a Firm v. Gulabchand Danraj, a Firm, AIR 1963 Cal 36 wherein a Special Bench of this court laid down that absence of prescribed form of plaint under O. 37 enables the plaintiff to maintain a suit under O. 37 by presenting plaint showing his cause of action on the instrument and his intention to proceed under O. 37. This was cited in support of the plea made by the applicants that although there was no prescribed form of the plaint made by the Delhi High Court, the suit was filed not on the original consideration but on the negotiable instrument and this was validly decreed under O. 37 of the Code of Civil Procedure by the Delhi High Court.

11. In the case of Canara Industrial and Banking Syndicate Company Limited v. Narayan Venkatesh Shenoy, AIR 1942 Bom 15 the Bombay High Court held that where Bill of Exchange was drawn in Bombay but accepted by drawee at Calicut, the Bombay High Court has jurisdiction to entertain the suit for recovery of the amount if leave is obtained under Cl. 12 of the Letters Patent. In the instant case, the hundies were drawn at Delhi and accepted at Calcutta. Thus part of the cause of action arose in Delhi and Delhi High Court had jurisdiction to entertain a suit in respect of the same. In Harkishore Barua v. Gura Mia Chowdhury, AIR 1931 Cal 387 a Division Bench of this Court held that only a holder of promissory note or hundi can sue on the same. In the instant case the holders of the hundies were the plaintiffs decree-holders. In the case of Santosh Kumar v. Bhai Moolsingh, AIR 1958 SC 321, the Supreme Court held that when defence to a negotiable instrument raises triable issue conditions cannot be imposed for giving leave to defend the suit. In the instant case as we have seen the Supreme Court itself imposed conditions for granting leave to defend the suit. Thus the defence in this case cannot be said to be bona fide. In the case of Jijabai Vithalrao Gajre v. Pathan Khan, AIR 1971 SC 315 it was held that father was the natural guardian of minor children and mother comes only after the death of the father. It was contended on behalf of the respondents that the decree is a nullity, because Delhi High Court has no jurisdiction to entertain or try the suit. The respondents relied on the case of Mathura Prasad Sarju Jaiswal v. Dossibai N. B. Jeejeebhoy, AIR 1971 SC 2355 and submitted that the question relating to jurisdiction of a court cannot be deemed to have finally determined by an erroneous decision of that court if by an erroneous interpretation of the Statute, the court holds that it has no jurisdiction, the question would not operate as res judicata. Similarly by an erroneous decision if the court assumes jurisdiction which it does not possess under the Statute, the question cannot operate as res judicata between the same parties. The next case cited was the case of K. K. Chari v. R. M. Seshadri, reported in AIR 1973 SC 1311 in which it was laid down that the court must satisfy that a ground for eviction exists under the Tamil Nadu Buildings (Lease and Rent Control) Act, otherwise a decree passed even on compromise between the landlord and the tenant would be a nullity.

12. The next case cited was Nagindas Ramdas v. Dalpat Ram Iccharam reported in AIR 1974 SC 471 wherein it was decided that under the Bombay Rents Hotel and Lodging House Rates Control Act existence of one of the statutory grounds mentioned in Ss. 12 and 13 is a sine qua non for passing a decree for eviction. A decree passed by consent of parties without a court's satisfaction about the existence of a statutory ground for eviction is a nullity. In the case of Kali Charan Singha v. Bibhuti Bhusan Singha, AIR 1933 Cal 85 a single Judge of this Court held that the executing court cannot go behind the decree and question its validity except when lack of jurisdiction is obvious. Thus it was held that the decree against person under disability without proper representation cannot be challenged on that ground in execution. The decree will be binding. In the case of P. Krishnan Nair v. Ramchandra Vithal Sanghavi, AIR 1956 Bom 268 it was held that a decree which is passed without jurisdiction to pass it is a nullity and the question as to the absence of jurisdiction may be raised even in execution proceeding or in collateral proceedings. But where such an objection is raised in an execution proceeding, the decree must be apparently without jurisdiction i.e. on the face of it the decree must show that it was passed by a court which was incompetent to pass it. Where the court which passed it had or had no jurisdiction to pass it, it is necessary to make investigation then the executing court has no competence to permit that investigation to be made. The question as to whether the court had or had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, must be regarded as finally decided by the decree of the court which tried the suit.

13. In execution no plea that merely challenges the validity or propriety of the decree on the ground that it is contrary to the provision of law can be raised. Thus in the instant case all the pleas that have been raised by the respondent is about the validity or propriety of the decree as being contrary to law cannot be raised in execution. (See AIR 1956 Bom 513) Rana Harkrishnadas Lallubhai v. Rana Gulabdas Kalyandas. In the case of Mohanlal v. Benoy Krishna, AIR 1953 SC 65 it was observed by the Supreme Court that even an erroneous decision on a question of law operates as res judicata between the parties to it, the correctness or otherwise of a judicial decision has no bearing upon the question whether or not it operates as res judicata. The pleas taken by the respondents-judgment-debtors are about the incorrectness of the decision of the Delhi High Court and thus are barred by the principles of res judicata. It has even been held by the Supreme Court that decree passed in suit barred by time will not be a nullity provided the court passing the decree had jurisdiction over the party and subject matter. (See Ittyavira Mathai v. Varkey Varkey, AIR 1964 SC 907). In Haridas Basu v. National Insurance Company Limited, (1931) 35 Cal WN 1096 : (AIR 1932 Cal 213) a Division Bench of this court held that an executing court has no jurisdiction to attach immoveable property unless such immoveable property is within the jurisdiction of such court or the person against whom the execution is sought is or resides within the jurisdiction of such court. In the instant case following the principle of that case the moveable properties of the judgment debtors which are within the jurisdiction of this court and of those judgment debtors who reside within the jurisdiction of this court, can be sold in execution. In Nirode Kali Roy Choudhury v. Rai Harendra Nath Choudhury, (1938) 42 Cal WN 87 : (AIR 1938 Cal 113) it has been held that the question whether a property is the property of the judgment debtor and is liable to be sold in execution and a decree passed against him is a question relating to the satisfaction of the decree and comes within the purview of S. 47. Thus in the instant case it can be decided which are the properties of the judgment debtors that are liable to be sold in execution of the decree. The case of Ambalal Purushattam Das & Co. v. Jawarlal Purushattam Dave, (1953) Cal 57 WN 744 : (AIR 1953 Cal 758) was cited in support of the contention that where a payee by a negotiable instrument is not certain, it is not a negotiable instrument. In the instant case the payee was certain and in any event if the decree has been made this question cannot be taken up in execution proceeding, in my opinion. It appears therefore that all the points raised in defence to the application must fail. There shall be an order in terms of the column 10 of the Tabular Statement except that the immoveable property at Baltikuri cannot be sold in execution of the decree by this court. Costs shall be added to the claims of the Decree-holder. Certified for two Counsel.

Order accordingly.

J. N. Roy, for Applicant; S. K. Kapur, for Plaintiffs-Respondents.

ORDER:— The short point requiring determination in this application is whether the applicants, Finlay Mills Ltd. and the Gold Mohar Mills Ltd., are entitled to an order of stay of a subsequent suit filed in this Court by the plaintiff Co. u/s. 10 of the Civil P. C. ? To appreciate the contentions that have been raised before the Court, it will be necessary to give a very brief resume' of the material facts not in dispute. The plaintiffs are the tenants of the entire ground floor of premises No. 12-B/1.

Park Street, Calcutta and the defendant Mills are in occupation of the premises under an agreement dt. Dec. 26, 1975. contended by the plaintiff company to be a leave and licence agreement, whilst the defendants asserting that a greater interest is created in its favour thereunder.

2. On or about Nov. 8, 1979 the applicants filed Title Suit No. 2013 of 1979 in the City Civil Court at Calcutta, inter alia, praying for a declaration that the notice dt. Aug. 29, 1979 issued by the respondent Co. is invalid, inoperative and void ab initio and that the agreement dt. Dec. 26, 1975 is still subsisting and that the defendant No. 1 is not entitled to unilaterally terminate the same or to revoke the grant made thereunder. A permanent injunction restraining the defendants from disturbing and/or interfering with possession of the plaintiffs in the suit premises and from disturbing or interfering with the plaintiff's enjoyment of all rights, agreements and facilities in connection therewith and from giving any further effect to the impugned notice in breach of the agreement was also sought.

3. On Dec. 14, 1979 the present suit was filed in this Court by the respondent Co. claiming inter alia, a declaration that the plaintiff's tenancy of 12-B/1, Park Street, Calcutta is not subject to or incumbered by any sub-tenancy in favour of the defendants and its possession of the suit premises, mesne profits and/or compensation for use and occupation of the suit premises by the defendants from Dec. 1, 1979 until possession is delivered. It is contended by learned Counsel for the applicants that taking any further steps in this suit would incur unnecessary costs and result in multiplicity of judicial proceedings as the principal issue likely to arise in both the suits are identical and substantially the same matters are in issue. Alternatively, if the application is not maintainable u/s. 10, an order of stay should be passed under O. 39 of the Code and/or u/s. 151 invoking the Court's inherent jurisdiction so to, do.

4. Mr. J. N. Roy, Ld. Counsel for the applicants, in support of his submissions draws my attention to the two complaints filed, and submits that it is apparent therefrom that the parties are the same persons although admittedly in the earlier suit filed by the applicants the two Directors of the defendant Co. were made party-defendants along with the defendant Co. He contends that the Terms of Agreement whereunder the applicant was put in occupation of the suit premises is an issue, which is required to be considered in both the suits. The question thus is whether determination of the first suit will make the material questions in the second suit res judicata? Relying on the averments in the plaint filed in the City Civil Court suit, he contends that the validity of the notice dt. Aug. 29, 1979 as also the scope of the agreement between the parties is required to be construed in the City Civil Court proceedings and in that context relief is sought claiming that the notice dt. Aug. 29, 1979 is void and inoperative, that the respondents are not entitled to unilaterally terminate the agreement entered upon and that the applicants are legitimately entitled to a declaration that the agreement dt. Dec. 26, 1975 is still subsisting, as also an injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with or disturbing their possession. He points out that in the said earlier proceedings an interim order was obtained on Nov. 9, 1979, and this factor is an additional point to be considered when determining this application for stay.

S. 10 of the C. P. C. reads as follows:—

"No Court shall proceed with the trial of any suit in which the matter in issue is also directly and substantially in issue in a previously instituted suit between the same parties, or between parties under whom they or any of them claim litigating under the same title where such suit is pending in the same or in any other Court in India having jurisdiction to grant the relief claimed, or in any Court beyond the limits of India established or continued by the Central Government and having like jurisdiction, or before the Supreme Court.

Explanation:— The pendency of a suit in a foreign Court does not preclude Courts in India from trying a suit founded on the same cause of action."

5. Construing this section Mr. Roy contends that the provisions thereof apply with full force to the facts of the instant case and the section contemplates that the previously instituted suit must be a proper suit in a Court which would be competent to grant the relief claimed and the question to be considered as such, is whether the City Civil Court has jurisdiction to deal with the prayers made in the City Civil Court suit.

6. Placing reliance on Shorab Modi v. Mansata Film Distributors and Arun General Industries Ltd v. Rishabh Manufacturers Pvt. Ltd., reported in AIR 1957 Cal 727 and AIR 1972 Cal 128 he next contends that the matters directly and substantially in issue in both suits need not be of complete identity of disputes and/or parties and the ratio of that case is that the matter in issue in the two suits may be substantially the same though different reliefs may have been claimed by two different plaintiffs on the basis of their respective cases and/or causes of action. The fact that one is a suit under the agreement entered into by the parties and the other is the suit dehors the agreement is of no consequence. In that case the Court also construed the words "same parties" used in S. 10 and held the same meant parties as between whom the matter substantially in issue has arisen and has to be decided. The fact that there was an additional party in the suit filed subsequently did not, by itself, make S. 10 inapplicable as the Court viewed that no separate issue had been joined between the additional party and the plaintiffs so as to make Sec. 10 inapplicable. Mr. Roy stresses on the fact that the only aspect required to be considered when considering a case u/s. 10 of the C. P. C. is whether there is a possibility of conflicting decisions if the subsequent suit filed is not stayed.

7. Relying on Manohar Lal Chopra v. Seth Hiralal reported in AIR 1962 SC 527, he contends that the provisions of S. 10 are clear, definite and mandatory and the Court is prohibited from proceeding with trial of the second suit in certain specified conditions. He next cites, AIR 1971 Cal 345 as an authority for the proposition that the test in an application u/s. 10 is whether the matter in the later suit will be res judicata if the earlier suit is taken to have been decreed as prayed for in the plaint. In that case the Court considering that the validity of an agreement was in issue in both suits inter alia found that the subsequent suit would be hit by the principles of constructive res judicata and held S. 10 to be applicable, and thus observed :— (at p. 347).

"In my opinion, the test to be applied in deciding an application u/s. 10 of the C. P. C. is whether the matter in the later suit will be res judicata if the prior suit is taken to have been decreed in the manner as prayed in the plaint"

In that case furthermore relying upon the decision reported in AIR 1957 Cal 727 it was inter alia held that the joinder of an additional party raised no separate and substantial issue as between the additional party and the plaintiff so as to make S. 10 inapplicable.

8. Mr. Kapur, learned Counsel for the plaintiff, on the other hand contends that the provision of S. 10 of the C. P. C. is not attracted and that the cause of action in the City Civil Court is a different cause of action and/or limited in scope to the extent that the notice of 29th Aug. 1979 alone is challenged as being void, inoperative and as of no effect. He contends there can be no case of res judicata in so far as the proceedings in the instant case are concerned as the field of controversy between the parties is more comprehensive in the subsequent suit and the issue which will be required to be decided is a much broader one, namely, as to whether the defendant company is liable to be rejected on any of the grounds set out in the plaint and the material point for determination herein is whether there has been revocation of the grant in favour of the defendants so as to disentitle them from continuing in possession of the suit premises. He points out that the proceedings in the City Civil Court will not effectively and/or completely decide and/or adjudicate upon the wider issue as to whether the defendant mills are liable to be ejected and the earlier suit filed proceeds merely on the basis of the notice being bad. Recovery of possession could thus not be obtained in a suit which is merely a declaratory suit seeking consequential reliefs. He contends that to invoke the provision of S. 10 what is required to be seen is whether the very same question will be in issue between the parties in two courts of concurrent jurisdiction and even if the defence of the company in the earlier suit fails and notice held to be bad the landlord cannot be debarred from relying upon another cause of action in a subsequent suit for ejectment. Drawing my attention to paras. 12 and 13 of the plaint it is contended that the cause of action of the plaintiff's claim for ejectment is the total repudiation of the agreement dt. 26th Dec. 1975 by the defendant mills, which resulted in the determination of the relationship of grantor and grantee between the parties. It is further contended by the plaintiff that having accepted the said repudiation and/or determination for greater safety the notice of 29th Aug. 1979 was caused to be served on the defendant mills requesting them to deliver up vacant possession of the suit premises on the expiry of Nov. 1979. It is contended that to invoke S. 10 one of the principles applicable is the test of res judicata, namely, that the matter in issue must be directly and substantially the same in both the suits, and the question of mesne profits and/or compensation and/or claim for possession not being an issue in the City Civil Court proceedings the same is a material aspect of the matter.

9. Relying upon Brijlal & Co. v. Madhya Pradesh Electricity Board, reported in AIR 1975 Cal 69 Mr. Kapur contends that whether the suit is required to be stayed would be on the basis of the decision in the other suit on the principles of actual or constructive res judicata, and only if the entire field of controversy between the parties is finally decided and/or determined by the earlier suit, a stay would have been permissible and not otherwise. In that case A filed suit against B claiming refund of price in respect of defective supply of goods under a contract. Subsequently B filed a suit claiming certain amounts under the contracts and also for damages for breach of the contract by A. The claim in the later suit far exceeded the claim in the former and on an application u/s. 10 praying for stay of the suit filed by B, the Court held that the entire controversy between the parties could not be finally determined in the suit instituted first since the field of controversy and claim in the later suit was far more comprehensive although there was some common issue in both the suits.

10. Reliance was also placed on a Division Bench Judgment of this Court reported in AIR 1975 Cal 411. (Shaw Wallace & Co. v. Bholanath Nandanlal Sherawala) the ratio decidendi of which case is that mere identity of some issues is not sufficient to attract the provisions of S. 10 of the C. P. C. and unless the decision of the suit operates as res judicata in the other suit it cannot be said that the matter in issue is directly and substantially the same in both the suits. In other words, the decision in one suit must non-suit the plaintiff in the other suit before it can be said that the matter in issue in both the suits is directly and substantially the same. The Court further viewed that it was well-settled that unless an issue was framed and decided by the Court it could not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the same parties or their privies. The Court speaking through Deb, J. was also of the opinion that the expression "principal matter in issue" used by the learned Chief Justice Chakravarti in AIR 1957 Cal 727 and followed by Mitra and S. K. Mukherjee, JJ. in AIR 1972 Cal 128 should be read, understood and construed in consonance with and subject to the following statement of Sri Ashutosh Mookerjee in Bepin Behary v. Jogendra Chandra, reported in 24 Cal LJ 514 at p. 515: (AIR 1917 Cal 248 at p. 249), the relevant passage whereof reads:—

"What then is the meaning of the expression 'the matter in issue.' The defendants invite us to hold that the expression is equivalent to 'any of the questions in issue.' The obvious answer is that if that had been the intention of the framers of the section, appropriate words might have been used to bring out such sense. We are of opinion that the expression 'the matter in issue' has reference to the entire subject in controversy between the parties. The object of the section is to prevent Courts of concurrent jurisdiction from simultaneously trying two parallel suits in respect of the same matter in issue."

11. Reliance was next placed on Shiva Prasad Agarwal v. Semiconductors Ltd., reported in AIR 1976 Cal 358 for the scope and effect of the meaning of matters in issue directly and substantially in both the suits. In that case the question involved in the previously instituted suit was whether there was proper performance of a contract by the defendant-respondent and if not, to what damages if any, the plaintiff-applicant was entitled, whereas the question involved in a subsequent suit was whether there was wrongful repudiation of the contract by the defendant-applicant and if so whether the plaintiff-respondent was entitled to damages. In that background the Court held that the two questions being separate questions the disposal of one issue would not resolve the need for adjudication of the other issues and thus held that the matters in issue directly and substantially in both the suits were not the same.

12. Mr. Kapoor submits that the decision cited in AIR 1971 Cal 345 relied upon by the applicant is of no assistance inasmuch as that decision merely reiterates the proposition that one of the tests for the applicability of Section 10 is the test of res judicata. In any event, it is to be noticed at page 346 in para 9 of the judgment of the said report, the Court took cognisance of the fact that the first Court had pecuniary jurisdiction to try the second suit. The test laid down in para 12 of the judgment is to ascertain whether the matter in the latter suit will be res judicata if the prior suit is taken to have been decreed in the manner as prayed for, was not intended by the Court to be a singular test to be infallibly applied to every circumstance and/or set of facts. He contends that the said decision is no authority for the proposition that the prayers in the earlier suit must be so deemed and/or that the presumption is to be conclusive for all purposes. He illustrates and submits that startling prayers cannot be taken cognisance of by a Court of Law in presuming that such a decree will be deemed to have been passed. In any event the decision is an authority for the proposition that the question for the Court is whether the earlier suit disposes of issues in the second suit, Para 13 of the judgment moreover reported at page 347 clearly underlines the principle and object of S. 10 which was to achieve finality in litigation and to prevent multiplicity of proceedings as also a conflict of decisions in respect of the same subject-matter involved in the two different suits filed by and between the same parties, and the decision in Durga Prasad v. Kanti Chandra Mukherjee reported in AIR 1935 Cal 1 was quoted with approval. In that case the Division

Bench of this Court at page 7 observed:—

".....The real criterion to apply is this. Supposing the first suit was determined; would the position then be that when the second suit was instituted the matters raised in the second suit were res judicata by reason of the decision of the prior suit. In that way, the provisions of S. 10, logically and naturally precede S. 11."

13. Thus, if these tests approved by Dutta, J. in AIR 1971 Cal 345, are followed in the instant case no question of stay will arise as matters in issue are not substantially and directly the same in both suits. Drawing the Court's attention to paras. 12 and 13 of the plaint he contends that the wrongful acts on the part of the defendant amounted to a repudiation of the agreement of Dec. 26, 1975 for the reasons given therein and the notice of 29th Aug. 1979 was a notice issued for greater safety and this fact ought to be considered when considering this application. It is also urged in para 14 of the plaint that no counter-claim could have been made in the City Civil Court suit by reason of the fact that the City Civil Court suit would have no pecuniary jurisdiction to entertain a claim for the money decree sought. Para 8 of the Written Statement in fact does not deny that this is the factual position.

14. So far as valuation for the purpose of Court Fees and jurisdiction is concerned Mr. Kapoor relies upon S. 7 (vi) (b) of the West Bengal Court Fees Act which reads as follows:—

"(vi) for recovery of possession of immovable property : In a suit for recovery of possession of immovable property from—

(a) a trespasser,

(b) a licensee upon revocation or termination of his license,—

(i) Where a license fee is payable by the licensee in respect of the immovable property to which the suit refers according to the amount of license fee of the immovable property payable for the year next before the date of presenting the plaint, or

(ii) Where no such license fee is payable by the licensee."

15. The other obstacle in the way of the applicant in succeeding in this application is that construing S. 10 of the C. P. C. it must be held that the earlier Court must have jurisdiction to grant relief claimed in the subsequent suit. He contends that the three essential conditions for the application of S. 10 of the C. P. C. are:—

(i) that the matter in issue in the second suit is directly and substantially in issue in the previously instituted suit; (ii) that the parties in the two suits are the same and claim under the same title, (iii) the Court in which the first suit is instituted is the Court of competent jurisdiction to grant the relief claimed in the subsequently instituted suit. In support of the aforesaid submissions he cites Kalipada Banerjee v. Charubala Dassi reported in AIR 1933 Cal 887, Nanu Singh v. Muni Nath Singh reported in AIR 1954 Pat 314 and Bepin Behari v. Jogendra Chandra reported in 24 Cal LJ 514: AIR 1917 Cal 248.

16. In reply learned Counsel for the applicant contended that the cases cited on behalf of the respondents do not give a correct interpretation of S. 10 of the C. P. C. and it must be held that the term 'relief claimed' provided u/s. 10, contemplates the relevant claims in the first suit, and the question before the Court is whether that Court was competent to grant the reliefs sought. There is thus no scope for urging that the first Court must be competent to grant the reliefs claimed in the subsequent suit and as such there is no basis for urging that both the Courts must necessarily be courts of concurrent jurisdiction. To emphasise this point he relies on S. 11 of the C. P. C. which enacts that no Court shall try any suit or issue in which the matter is directly and substantially in issue in a former suit between the same parties and/or persons claiming under same title. This section embodies the principles of res judicata and it is this test which has been made applicable in AIR 1971 Cal 345 at p. 347. Thus, if the prayers made in the City Civil Court plaint are deemed to be decreed the same would be res judicata and the plaintiff in this suit must be bound thereby. The judgment reported in AIR 1933 Cal 887 is obiter and cannot be of any assistance to the plaintiff, whereas the decision in AIR 1938 Mad 602 merely supports the observations of Mulla and advances no cogent reason for interpreting the relevant section in the manner done. In fact the third ground of reasoning relied upon by the Court in approving Mulla's commentary namely if the suit is stayed a very important suit in a superior Court would have to be stayed pending the decision of suit in the Small Cause Court should be unacceptable on the face of it.

17. The Divisional Bench decision in AIR 1954 Pat 314, is also criticised on the same ground that no reasons were given and/or authorities relied upon to support the view expressed. My attention was also drawn to the decision in Chennabasappa Kamal Lal & Sons v. Kissen Chand & Co., reported in AIR 1972 Mys 112 which case was relied upon to support the applicant's proposition that the competency of the jurisdiction of the first court to grant reliefs claimed in the second suit is of no consequence. In that case cited, the Court held, inter alia, that "even if the first court has no territorial jurisdiction to entertain the second suit, even then S. 10 of the C. P. C. would be applicable."

18. Learned Counsel for the applicant alternatively argues that if this Court holds that the provisions of Section 10 are not attracted in the facts and circumstances of the case, to save multiplicity of proceedings and to avoid a conflict of decisions, reliefs sought should be granted under O 39 and/or S. 151 of C. P. C. invoking the inherent jurisdiction of the Court to pass necessary orders in the interest of justice.

19. On the point of valuation, it is contended, that S. 7 (vi) (b) of the W. B. C. F. Act. 1970, is not applicable for valuation for the purpose of jurisdiction, and S. 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, was the relevant section requiring consideration.

20. Lastly, it is contended that the matters in issue in both the suits are substantially the same and the question to be determined is what is the jural relationship between the parties under the agreement relied upon, and the scope of the earlier suit cannot be narrowed down by contending that the second suit with different facts is a more comprehensive suit.

21. Having carefully considered the respective submissions made on behalf of the parties, I am satisfied that the contentions of Mr. Kapur, Learned Counsel for the plaintiff Co., is of more substance and must be upheld on the following grounds :—

1. The materials on record evidence that the matters in issue and/or the subject-matter of the two suits cannot be said to be identical so as to attract the provisions of S. 10. The subsequent and more comprehensive suit, is sought to be stayed, being one primarily for ejectment, whereunder, inter alia, the relief of possession and mesne profits and/or compensation i.e., a claim for money is made, whereas the earlier suit filed in the City Civil Court is patently a title suit limited in its scope, merely seeking a declaration that the notice of Aug. 29, 1979 terminating the agreement dated Dec. 26, 1975, is invalid, inoperative and void ab initio, and that the defendant company is not entitled to unilaterally terminate and/or revoke the grant made, thereby in favour of the plaintiff mills. The entire field of controversy between the parties, therefore, cannot be held to be substantially the same, as sought to be contended by the Learned Counsel for the defendants.

2. Secondly and the greater hurdle, to my mind, which faces the applicant in obtaining the order for stay u/s. 10 of the C. P. C. is that it cannot be lost sight of that the section which merely enacts a rule of procedure, is to prevent the courts of concurrent jurisdiction from simultaneously trying two parallel suits in respect of the same matter in issue, as held in Bepin Behary v. Jogen-dra Chandra, reported in 24 Cal LJ 514: AIR 1917 Cal 248, where Chief Justice Mookerjee, speaking for the Court, interpreted the expression "matter in issue" occurring in S. 10 of the C. P. C. One of the prerequisites of S. 10 being the court in which the subsequent suit instituted or any other court, whether superior, inferior or co-ordinate, such a court is a court competent to grant relief claimed in the subsequent (previous?) suit and the weight of authority supports this interpretation as is the ratio decidendi of several decisions cited, viz., vide, AIR 1933 Cal 887, AIR 1938 Mad 602 and AIR 1954 Pat 314.

To my mind, S. 10 dealing with Court's jurisdiction to proceed to determine a suit is required to be strictly construed and I see no reason for construing the provisions thereof in the manner as suggested by the Counsel for the applicants. I am fortified in my views not only by the decisions cited as also by the observation of the learned author Mulla. No decision has been cited or referred to which is contrary to the views expressed. I am, therefore, of the view that S. 10 of the Code has received authoritative interpretation by judicial decisions and/or long way of practice and see no reason to depart therefrom and as such must hold that the meaning "having jurisdiction to grant the relief claimed" occurring in S. 10 of the C. P. C. contemplates the competency of the first court to grant the reliefs claimed in the second suit.

In the instant case, the City Civil Court is undoubtedly incompetent to grant either the decree for possession (such a prayer not being made) and/or a decree for mesne profits as sought herein, as admittedly the subsequent suit valued at Rs. 78,000/- is patently beyond the pecuniary jurisdiction of that Court.

3. Thirdly, the 'matter in issue' contemplated by S. 10 means disputed material questions in the subsequent suit, which are directly and substantially in issue in the previous suit, and matters not in issue cannot be regarded as heard or finally decided so as to operate as res judicata in the subsequent suit. This being so, any decision in the earlier suit cannot non-suit the plaintiff in the subsequent proceedings and the ratio decidendi of the case reported in AIR 1975 Cal 411, is plainly attracted. As observed by the Divisional Bench, it is well-settled that unless an issue is framed and decided by a Court, it cannot operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the same parties or their privies.

The other Divisional Bench decision of this Court relied upon Shiva Prosad Agarwalla v. Semi Conductors Limited reported in AIR 1976 Cal 358 is also an authority which lends force to Mr. Kapur's contention that disposal and/or adjudication of one issue alone (in the instant case at best notice of Aug. 29, 1979 is invalid and inoperative) would not resolve the other pertinent issues, which would necessarily arise in the subsequent and more comprehensive suit, viz., whether the defendant mills are liable to be ejected on any of the grounds alleged and whether any mesne profits and/or damages are payable by them as claimed by the plaintiff company.

Brijlal v. Madhya Pradesh Electricity Board, reported in AIR 1975 Cal 69, is also an authority for the proposition that the entire controversy between the parties in both the suits is required to be finally determined in the earlier suit before the subsequent suit is liable to be stayed on the basis of the earlier decision, on the principle of actual or constructive res judicata.

4. Lastly, so far as the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court is concerned, S. 8 of the S. V. Act provides that the value as determinable for the computation of court-fees and the value for the purpose of jurisdiction shall be the same. In my view, in computing Court-fees, substance and form of the plaint must be kept in mind and the question of court-fees payable must necessarily be considered in the light of the allegations made in the plaint and cannot be influenced either by the pleas in the written statement and by the final decision of the suit on the merits. This being so, from a plain reading of the plaint, the status of the defendants appears to be that of a licensee and the question required to be determined in the suit is whether permissive occupation allowed to the defendant has been terminated and/or put to an end, entitling the plaintiff to a decree for ejectment? If this be the basis of the plaint, whether substantiated or not, the present suit has been correctly valued on the basis of the reliefs sought attracting S. 7 (vi) (b) (i) of the W. B. C. F. Act of 1970 and no other basis of valuation has been suggested by the Ld. Counsel for the defendants. The plaintiff, has accordingly valued this claim for the purpose of court-fees and jurisdiction at Rs. 78,000/-, which valuation, to my mind, has not been shown to be an arbitrary assessment capriciously made and thus it is this amount which is required to be taken cognisance of when considering whether the Court's pecuniary jurisdiction is attracted.

22. This Court, furthermore, sees no reason in view of the facts aforesaid, as to why its inherent jurisdiction should be invoked, and indeed there is no cause for so doing. In the premises the court's discretion is not called for to be exercised and neither O. 39, and/or the Courts inherent powers u/s. 151 is required to be invoked. The decision reported in Monoharlal Chopra v. Seth Hiralal, reported in AIR 1962 SC 527, is an authority for the proposition that temporary injunction under O. 39 can be issued only when the circumstances as prescribed under the said order are made applicable and ordinarily the Court is not to use its inherent powers in the interest of justice but is merely to see whether the circumstances of the case bring it within the prescribed rule, the Civil Courts generally having no inherent jurisdiction in cases not covered by Rr. 1 & 2 of O. 39 to restrain the parties from proceeding before them. The said decision is also an authority for the proposition that the inherent powers of the Court u/s. 151 are to be exercised by the Court only in very exceptional circumstances such as when it is found that the subsequent suit is a vexatious one. It has not been established nor shown that the present proceedings filed are vexatious and/or an abuse of process of the Court and as such no grounds have been made out invoking the Court's inherent jurisdiction.

23. For the aforesaid reason, I hold that the applicants have not satisfied the exigencies of law and the facts of the case do not attract the provisions of S. 10 of the C. P. C. Nor are the applicants entitled to an injunction in terms of prayer (b) under O. 39 and/or S. 151 of the C. P. C.

24. The application is accordingly dismissed with costs.

Application dismissed.

fact he himself alleged bias and unsuitability of the arbitrator appointed under the arbitration agreement and, therefore, asked for variation of the arbitration agreement in his application under S. 20 by changing the name of the arbitrator, the court would not exercise its discretion in favour of the applicant as the conduct of the party constituted sufficient cause for not making an order under S. 20. AIR 1962 Cal 360 4

Sunrhit Deb, for Petitioner; Bimal Chatterjee, for Respondent.

ORDER :— This is the second application under Section 20 of the Arbitration Act for filing the arbitration agreement dated 24th August, 1977.

2. Shortly the facts are that pursuant to an invitation of tender made by the respondent/defendant for construction of a paper plant building at Bagaha, District West Champaran in the State of Bihar the petitioning creditor submitted its tender and work order was placed by the respondent/defendant dated 16th August, 1977 and formal contract was entered into, being dated 24th August 1977, a copy of which is annexed to the petition. The said contract contained an arbitration clause in the following terms :

"In the case of any dispute/differences arise during the course of execution of this contract and/or thereafter relating to this contract, the matter/dispute/difference shall be referred to arbitration of the Architect, namely, Messrs. Kothary & Co., Calcutta, whose decision shall be final and binding on both the parties."

It appears that certain disputes arose between the parties in respect of the said contract and the petitioner-plaintiff alleged breach on the part of the Architect M/s. Kothari & Co., the named arbitrator in the said arbitration clause and the petitioner-plaintiff claimed certain amount and thereafter on or about 11th January, 1979 the petitioner-plaintiff instituted a suit being Title Suit No. 79 of 1979 (Messrs. Kalipada Das v. Messrs. North Bihar Sugar Mills Ltd.) in the City Civil Court inter alia praying for a decree for declaration that the said contract dated 24th August 1977 was still subsisting and also for injunction and other reliefs. In the said suit the plaintiff made an interlocutory application for temporary injunction against the respondent/defendant from obstructing the petitioner plaintiff from carrying out the work under the said contract which was rejected and from the said order the petitioner plaintiff preferred an appeal on 23rd January 1977 which was also dismissed on 25th February, 1980. On 23rd August, 1980 the petitioner plaintiff made the first application under Section 20 of the Arbitration Act before this court which was dismissed by S. C. Deb, J. on the 12th September, 1980 inter alia on the ground that there is a likelihood of conflicting decisions between the two forums, one being the said suit pending before the City Civil Court and another by the arbitrator if appointed under Section 20 of the Arbitration Act. It appears to me that in the said short judgment of Deb, J. dated 12th September 1980 his lordship held that there was sufficient cause not to make an order under Section 20 of the Arbitration Act. Subsequently the petitioner plaintiff made an application under Section 23 (1) (3) of the Code of Civil Procedure before the City Civil Court for withdrawing the said title suit unconditionally and for an order granting the petitioner leave and/or permission to institute fresh suit in respect of the subject-matter of the title suit No. 79 of 1979 in the appropriate court. The City Civil Court, 12th Bench by an order dt. 26th Sept. 80 made an order under Sec. 23, Rule 1, sub-rule (3) after contest and the petitioner plaintiff was permitted to sue afresh on the said subject-matter or cause of action if not otherwise barred and payment of Rs. 200/- was made a condition precedent to be made by the petitioner plaintiff to the respondent/defendant. Thereafter the present application under Section 20 was presented on the 1st October, 1980 and after directions were given for filing affidavits the matter came up for hearing.

3. Mr. Sunrhit Deb, appearing for the plaintiff-petitioner submitted that all the conditions under S. (20?) subsection (1) are satisfied and the respondent/defendant has failed to show sufficient cause why the arbitration agreement should not be filed and order of reference should be made as prayed for in the present petition. He also submitted that the previous Section 20 application was dismissed by Deb, J. only on the ground of possibility of conflicting decisions between City Civil Court and the arbitrator to be appointed under the Arbitration Act and such a situation should not be allowed to happen and, therefore, the application was dismissed. Mr. Deb submitted that thereafter the suit having been withdrawn under Order 23, R. 3, sub-rule (3) of the Civil Procedure Code the said suit is no longer pending and liberty was given to file a fresh suit on the same subject-matter and, therefore, the petitioner has instituted the present application under Section 20 which is to be treated as a suit under Section 20, sub-section (2) of the Arbitration Act. Therefore, all the conditions being satisfied an order should be made as prayed for.

4. Mr. Bimal Chatterjee, appearing for the respondent/defendant, submitted that the petitioner-plaintiff having instituted a suit before the City Civil Court has indicated its intention to abandon the arbitration agreement and take recourse to ordinary course of law by filing the said suit. Therefore, that constituted a sufficient cause why the arbitration agreement should not be filed. He drew my attention to the order of the City Civil Court, a certified copy of which was produced in court being Order No. 39 dated 26th September, 1980 in the said Title Suit No. 79 of 1979 (M/s. Kalipada Das v. North Bihar Sugar Mills Ltd.) and submitted that leave was granted only for the purpose of filing a fresh suit on the same subject-matter and not for reference to arbitration by making an application under Section 20 of the Arbitration Act. Therefore, the petitioner-plaintiff is estopped from making this application under Section 20 and that constitutes sufficient cause for not granting the order as prayed for. He referred to the well known principle that the court is to exercise its discretion in making an order under Section 20 and the principle under Sections 20 and 34 of the Arbitration Act as to the exercise of court's discretion is same. Reference may be made to the decision of Gannon Dunkerley & Co., AIR 1962 Cal 360. Mr. Chatterjee also referred to the principle on which the discretion of the court is to be exercised and what is meant by sufficient cause under Section 20, sub-section (4) of the Arbitration Act as laid down in the Supreme Court decision in Abdul Kader's case reported in AIR 1962 SC 406. Therefore, Mr. Chatterjee submitted that the present application should be dismissed as sufficient cause has been shown by the respondent/defendant as to why the order should not be made for filing the arbitration agreement. Mr. Chatterjee also pointed out that in the arbitration agreement the reference is made to named arbitrator being Kothari & Co., which is a firm of architect and well known engineers and not a tribunal of arbitration or a person who can be appointed as arbitrator. The said contention is not absolutely without substance as it may be contended that a firm of architect cannot be appointed as an arbitrator as it is not a tribunal of arbitration which generally takes institutional arbitrations. For the purpose of the present application it is not necessary for me to make any comment on the said submission and express any final opinion on this aspect of the matter.

5. Considering the matter very carefully it appears to me that the petitioner-plaintiff after filing the said Title Suit No. 79 of 1979 in the City Civil Court, in which he made successive interlocutory application for injunction and preferred an appeal therefrom and also failed in the appeal then came up before this court in a previous Section 20 application filed the very same arbitration agreement and order of reference which was dismissed by S. C. Deb, J. on the ground of the pendency of the suit before the City Civil Court and possibility of conflicting decisions between the court and the arbitrator. In the present petition it appears that the petitioner-plaintiff has made specific allegations against the said appointed arbitrator M/s. Kothari & Co. being biased and unsuitable for being appointed as arbitrator. The said averments are in paragraphs 25 and 26 of the petition. That perhaps, in my view, constitute sufficient cause why the arbitration agreement should not be filed as the petitioner-plaintiff is really asking to amend the arbitration agreement by replacing the arbitrator by another, other than the appointed arbitrator. Prayer (c) of the petition itself shows that the petitioner is asking for appointment of another arbitrator in place of Kothari & Co., the appointed arbitrator in the said agreement. In my view the said contention of the petitioner-plaintiff and the prayer in the petition make it quite clear that the petitioner-plaintiff is asking for varying the arbitration agreement between the parties by a sole arbitrator to be appointed by the court. In my view that will amount to substitution of the original arbitration agreement by the court. Section 20 is a machinery section by which the arbitration agreement is filed and reference is made to the appointed arbitrator in terms of the arbitration agreement. It is an admitted position that there is a named arbitrator, whether a firm of engineers and architect can be appointed as arbitrator is a different question but assuming such an appointment can be made then the petitioner-plaintiff is asking for appointment of another arbitrator than the appointed arbitrator which amounts to varying the original arbitration agreement which is sought to be filed by the petitioner-plaintiff in this application. Therefore, on the well-settled principle that under Section 20 of the Arbitration Act the court has no power to substitute one agreement by another agreement at the request of one of the parties. It appears to me that this also constitutes a sufficient cause why the arbitration agreement should not be filed under Section 20 of the Arbitration Act. The petitioner himself has made specific allegations of bias and unsuitability against the arbitrator and, therefore, the question of filing the arbitration agreement as such cannot arise unless it is amended by replacing the appointed arbitrator by the parties under the arbitration agreement by another arbitrator. Mr. Deb appearing for the petitioner-plaintiff submitted that on instruction from his client he is withdrawing the allegations against the arbitrator made in the petition so that the order can be made for filing the arbitration agreement as such and order of reference may be made to the arbitrator appointed under the arbitration agreement. In my view, it is too late and cannot be encouraged by court as from the conduct of the petitioner-plaintiff all through first instituting a suit before the City Civil Court in respect of the said contract, making interlocutory applications and after the same failed, preferring an appeal which also became unsuccessful then made an application under Section 20 which was also dismissed due to the pendency of the City Civil Court suit at that time, as hereinbefore stated; thereafter withdrawing the City Civil Court suit with liberty to file a fresh suit on the same subject-matter and is now coming forward with another application under Section 20 is something which the court should not encourage and it amounts to estoppel by the procedure and, in my view, Mr. Chatterjee is right in his submission that by the conduct of the petitioner-plaintiff it has demonstrated its intention to abandon the arbitration agreement and take recourse to suit and that constitute a sufficient cause.

6. After carefully considering the facts of this case and the petitioners' own averments in paragraphs 23, 24, 25 and 26 I am satisfied that there is sufficient cause why the arbitration agreement should not be filed and prayer asked for substituting the appointed arbitrator by another arbitrator at the instance of the petitioner-plaintiff in this application is not permissible under Section 20 of the Arbitration Act and court has no such power. Therefore, in my view, in the peculiar facts of this case which constitute sufficient cause being shown by the respondent/defendant why an order under Section 20 should not be made. I have already referred to the Supreme Court decision in Abdul Kader's case reported in AIR 1962 SC 406 where the Supreme Court has observed that the power of the court to make an order under Section 20 is a matter of discretion (at p. 410) :

"The words of this sub-section leave a wide discretion in the court to consider whether an order for filing the agreement should be made and a reference made accordingly. It is neither necessary nor desirable to lay down in general terms what would be sufficient cause which would entitle the court to refuse to make an order of reference. The court will have to decide on the facts of each case whether sufficient cause has been made out for not ordering the agreement to be filed and not making the order of reference."

Therefore, it is quite clear that the court has to exercise its discretion in making an order under Section 20 taking into consideration all the facts and circumstances of a particular case in its proper perspective and come to a conclusion whether an order under Section 20 should be made in the facts of a particular case. As I have analysed the facts of this case, from the conduct of the petitioners it has been demonstrated clearly that it has no intention to go to arbitration but filed a suit before the ordinary court of law, as he has done in this case, and withdraw the suit with liberty to file a fresh suit on the same subject-matter. Apart from the said fact the petitioner himself has alleged bias and unsuitability of the arbitrator appointed under the arbitration agreement and, therefore, asking for variation of the arbitration agreement under Section 20 of the Arbitration Act and his prayer (c) in the petition makes the said intention of the petitioner to vary the arbitration agreement by changing the arbitrator unilaterally by this court which the court has no power. Therefore, in my view, this is a fit case where the court should not exercise its discretion in favour of making an order for filing the arbitration agreement as the arbitration agreement, as it stands now, is not asked for by the petitioner to be filed but he is asking for a different arbitration agreement by changing the name of the arbitrator to be filed which the court has no power to do. As a result there is some force in the contention of Mr. Chatterjee that a firm of architect and engineers being Kothari & Co. cannot be appointed as an arbitrator as it is not a person or an institutional arbitrator what is known as tribunal of arbitration and as such there is some force in that contention and constitute a sufficient cause for not making an order under Section 20 of the Arbitration Act.

7. In the result, there will not be an order under Section 20 of the Arbitration Act and the application is dismissed with costs.

8. This order will not prejudice the rights of the petitioner-plaintiff to proceed according to law, if so advised.

Application dismissed.

BANERJEE AND B. N. MAITRA, JJ.

Lalit Mohan Mondal (Defendant).
Appellant v. Profulla Kumar Mondal (Plaintiff) (Deceased through his L. Rs.), Respondent.

A. F. O. D. No. 382 of 1976. D/- 11-12-1981.

LY/LY/F909/81/SMA/SNV

Succession Act (39 of 1925), S. 84 — Construction of Will — Testator stating in his Will that his wife would get the property absolutely with full right of alienation by way of gift, sale etc. — Testator must be deemed to have intended to confer absolute estate on her and not a mere life estate — Subsequent clauses would be of no effect — Some of the sons named as beneficiaries in the will — Will not probated by wife — Effect — Suit instituted by sons for Letters of Administration — Maintainability. (Hindu Succession Act (1956), S. 14 (1)) (Para 10)

Law is that in order to gather the testator's intention the will has to be read as a whole.

Where the testator stated that his wife would get the property absolutely with full right of alienation by way of gift, sale etc. at her pleasure, the use of those words conferring unfettered power of transfer showed that the testator's intention was to confer an absolute estate on her and consequently, the subsequent clauses that in case she dies leaving any portion of those properties, the testator's third son, fourth son and youngest son or in the absence of any of them, his or their heirs will receive the same would be of no effect. From a construction of the contents of the entire will it could be said that the testator intended to confer an absolute estate with full power of alienation to his wife and he did not intend to confer a mere life estate on her. Hence, when his wife, who was the executrix under the will, applied for a probate after his death and then withdrew the suit according to the provisions of S. 14 (1) of Hindu Succession Act, she would get an absolute estate. Therefore, after her death, all the children of the testator and his wife and not some of them who were the beneficiaries under the will would get the testator's property. Further, the suit instituted by the sons who were beneficiaries under the will for grant of Letters of Administration would not be maintainable as they would have no locus standi to file the suit. Case law discussed. (Paras 11 and 12)

Ranjit Kumar Banerjee and Naresh Nath Banerjee, for Appellant; S. N. Ganguly, Kumud Ranjan Purkait and Parimal Das, for Respondent.

B. N. MAITRA, J.:— The plaintiffs instituted the suit for the grant of Letters of Administration. They alleged that on the 21st Nov. 1955, their father, Nagendra Nath Mondal, executed a will. On the 18th Dec. 1967, he expired. The executrix under the will was his wife, Aiswarjyamoyee Dasi. She instituted Original Suit No. 13 of 1968 for grant of a probate in her favour. But she was prevailed upon by the interested parties to withdraw that suit. The plaintiffs, who are three of his sons, are the beneficiaries under the will.

2. Defendants Nos. 1 and 2, who are Nagen's sons, filed a written statement. It has been alleged, inter alia, that the suit is not maintainable and the plaintiffs have no locus standi to bring it. Nagendra Nath Mondal did not execute any such will. It is not at all a genuine document. He had been suffering from illness from before the execution of the alleged will. There was no reason to deprive his two sons (contesting defendants) of his property. Moreover, Nagendra Nath Mondal filed Title Suit No. 714 of 1965 in the 3rd Munsif's Court, Sealdah. After his death, all his legal heirs and representatives including the defendants were duly substituted in his place.

3. The learned Additional District Judge accepted the plaintiff's version, decreed the suit and issued Letters of Administration with a copy of the will annexed. Hence this appeal.

4. It has been argued on behalf of the appellants that the suit is not maintainable. Reference has been made to Jarman on Wills, 7th Edition, Vol. III, page 2080, to show that it has become an established rule, that where the bequest is simply to 'A', and in case of his death, or if he dies, to 'B', 'A' surviving the testator takes it absolutely. Reference has also been made to Williams on Executors and Administrators, 14th Edition, Vol. II, paragraph 1022, at page 665, to show that if there is an immediate absolute grant, to which is annexed a condition, no matter how it is worded, to the effect that if the legatee dies, then the property shall go over to another, this condition will be held to refer to the death of the legatee in the testator's lifetime, unless there appears in the will an intention to the contrary. The case of Jehangir Dadabhoi v. Kaikhusuru Kavasha in L. R., (1915) 42 Ind App 71 at page 78 : (AIR 1914 PC 18 at p. 20) has been cited to show, how after the testator's death, his estate has to be made over.

5. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondents has stated that the suit was rightly decreed. Reference has been made to Ss. 87 and 88 of the Indian Succession Act. S. 87 shows that the testator's intention shall not be set aside because it cannot take effect to the full extent. S. 88 provides for a contingency where two clauses of a will are incongruous so that they cannot possibly stand together and in that event, the last one shall prevail. It has been stated that the will in question clearly shows that no absolute interest was given by Nagendra Nath Mondal to his wife, Aiswarjyamoyee Dasi. On the contrary, the entire reading of the will shows that a life interest was given to her because it has been stated that in case she dies leaving any portion of those properties, the testator's third son, Amulya Kumar Mondal, fourth son, Sankar Hari Mondal, and youngest son, Rabindra Nath Mondal, or in the absence of any of them, his or their heirs will receive the same. These clauses are inconsistent. So, the last one will prevail and the Court will find that the testator's intention was to confer a mere life estate on her.

6. Reference has also been made for the respondents to Theobald on the Law of Wills, 10th Edition, page 303, to show that the fact that the will contains other devises with words of limitation will not prevent a devise without such words from passing the fee. A devise without words of limitation, followed by a devise of the same property to another person with words of limitation, will give the first devisee a life interest only. In this case, there are such limitations and the court will hold that a mere life interest was given by Nagendra Nath Mondal to his wife.

7. The case of Ramachandra v. H. Brite in AIR 1964 SC 1323 has been referred to for them to show that it is one of the cardinal principles of construction of wills that if it is legally possible, effect should be given to every disposition contained in the will unless the law prevents effect being given to it. Lastly, the case of Navneet Lal v. Gokul in AIR 1976 SC 794 at p. 797 has been referred to show that in construing the language of the will, the court is entitled to put itself in the testator's armchair and is bound to bear in mind also other matters than merely the words used. The court must find out the intention of the testator by reference to the words which have been actually employed. The true intention has to be gathered not by attaching importance to isolated expressions, but by reading the will as a whole with all its provisions and ignoring none of them as redundant or contradictory.

8. In the case of Jehangir v. Kai-khusru (AIR 1914 PC 18) (supra) the will laid down that the testator's estate would be divided equally between his two sons, Pallonji and Jehangirji, and the latter would manage the estate. If Pallonji gets a son, half of the estate will go to him on his attaining full age. If he has no son, Jehangirji will give away his son as Pallonji's adopted son. The testator died in 1866 and Pallonji in 1897 intestate and without any son. It was alleged that in 1866, Jehangirji gave his son to Pallonji. Jehangirji's son claimed to succeed under the will to Pallonji's half estate. It was held that such claim could not be allowed and the will vested a moiety of the estate in Pallonji absolutely upon the testator's death.

Now, the broad fact is that Nagendra's wife did not die during his lifetime. He instituted Title Suit No. 714 of 1965 in the 3rd Munsif's Court at Sealdah. During the pendency of that suit, he breathed his last and all his heirs and legal representatives were duly substituted. Then his widow filed Original Suit No. 13 of 1968 for grant of a probate in her favour and withdrew the same. Let us now consider the provisions of the entire will with a view to gathering the testator's intention and for arriving at a finding whether an absolute estate or a mere life estate was conferred on Aiswarjyamoyee Dasi. That will, Ext. 1, shows, "I give away thereafter to my lawfully married wife, Srimati Aiswarjyamoyee Dasi, all those that will remain after meeting the expenses of my funeral rites absolutely with the rights of gift, sale etc. user at her pleasure. But if she dies leaving anything of those properties, my third son, Sriman Amulya Kumar Mondal, and the fourth and the youngest son, Sriman Sankar Hari Mondal and Sriman Rabindra Nath Mondal, or in the absence of any of them, his or their legal heirs will receive the property."

9. A proper reading of the entire will, Ext. 1, clearly shows that there are no such limitations, as envisaged by Theobald on his treatise on the Law of Wills at page 303. The cases of Ramachandra v. H. Brite (AIR 1964 SC 1323) (supra) and of Navneet Lal v. Gokul (AIR 1976 SC 794) (supra) do not lay down any contrary proposition. Moreover, the case of Navneet Lal v. Gokul was considered by a Bench of three Judges presided over by Chandrachud, C. J., in the latest Supreme Court case of Gopala Menan v. Sivaraman Nair in (1981) 3 SCC 586 : (AIR 1979 SC 1345). There also the testator used the expression that his property "shall vest in my wife.....with power of alienation," as in the present case. It has been stated in that case that an unrestricted power of disposal is necessary to make it an absolute estate for the wife and not a limited interest. In case of conflict between the provisions of a will, the conflicting clauses will have to be reconciled. The words "property shall vest in my wife.....with power of alienation" suggest that the testator intended to confer on her an absolute estate and not a limited interest in the property.

10. Law is that in order to gather the testator's intention the will has to be read as a whole.

11. It has already been stated that the testator stated that Aiswarjyamoyee would get the property absolutely with full right of alienation by way of gift, sale etc. at her pleasure. The use of those words conferring unfettered power of transfer show that the testator's intention was to confer an absolute estate on her and consequently, the subsequent clauses are of no effect whatsoever. From a construction of the contents of the entire will, we hold that Nagendra Nath Mondal intended to confer an absolute estate with full power of alienation to his wife, Aiswarjyamoyee Dasi, and he did not intend to confer a mere life estate on her.

12. She applied for a probate and then withdrew the suit. She did not execute any will. According to the provisions of S. 14 (1) of the Hindu Succession Act, she got an absolute estate. After her death, all the children of Nagendra Nath and Aiswarjyamoyee Dasi will get that property, and we hold accordingly. The submissions advanced on behalf of the respondents cannot be accepted. We, therefore, find that the suit instituted by their three sons for grant of Letters of Administration is not maintainable in law and they have no locus standi to file the suit.

13. The appeal is allowed. The judgment and decree appealed against be set aside and the suit dismissed without any order as to costs.

BANERJEE, J:— I agree.

Appeal allowed.

SUDHINDRA MOHAN GUHA, J.

Asit Kumar Dey, Petitioner v. Bishudhananda Chaudhury and another, Opposite parties.

C. O. No. 3240 of 1981, D/- 8-12-1981.

West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), S. 17 (1), (2), (3), and (4) — Suit for ejectment on ground of default in payment of rent — Application for permission to deposit arrear of rent earlier deposited with Rent Controller — Application cannot be refused by Court on technical ground of non-mention of section therein.

Where in a suit for ejectment on the ground of default in payment of rent for certain months, an application with a prayer for permission to deposit the arrear of rent which had been earlier deposited with the Rent Controller was filed by the tenant without mentioning any section of the Act under which it was filed, the Court could not refuse such application on the technical ground of non-mention of the section and it would not be proper for the Court to dispose of the application under Section 17 (3) and S. 17 (4) without disposing of the said application which was pending before it. ILR (1953) 2 Cal 385 Rel. on. (Para 10)

In the administration of justice, the Court will not refuse any application which on the merits the Court can grant, simply because the application asked the Court to exercise its admitted powers under a wrong section. The Kalyanbrata Roy, for Petitioner; Saktinath Mukherjee, for Opposite parties.

ORDER :— The petitioner tenant has challenged the order dated 11-8-1981 whereby Sri T. K. Paladhi, Munsif, 3rd Court, Burdwan rejected the application under S. 17 (4) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act.

2. The petitioner, a practising physician was a tenant since the time of the predecessor of the opposite parties in respect of suit premises, used as chamber and Medicine shop at Memary, Dist. Burdwan at a rental of Rs. 40/- per month according to Bengali calendar. A suit for ejectment being Title Suit No. 206 of 1976 in the 3rd Court of Munsif was filed against him on ground of default in payment of rent for the month of Chaitra 1382 B. S. and Baisakh 1333 B. S.

3. On receipt of notice to quit on 4th June, 1976 the petitioner remitted the rent for those two months on 5th June, 1976 which was however refused. On June 18, 1976 the petitioner deposited the sum of Rs. 120.50 P. as rent for Chaitra 1382 B. S. and Baisakh and Jaistha, 1383 B. S. with the Rent Controller. The summons of the suit was served on 10-11-1976. On 22-12-1976 the petitioner filed an application with a prayer for permission to deposit the arrear of rent which had been earlier deposited with the Rent Controller. No order, however, was passed by the Court disposing that application.

4. On an application under S. 17 (3) of the Act the defence against ejectment was struck out on a finding that as the first challan with Rent Controller included payment of rent for three months, namely, Chaitra 1382 B. S. to Jaistha 1383 B. S. the same was not valid, having not been deposited month by month.

5. Then the petitioner filed an application for review of the order, which was rejected on 6-10-1980 on the ground of limitation.

6. Last of all the petitioner came with the application under S. 17 (4) of the Act. By the impugned order this application was rejected. It has been observed that the petition dated 22-12-1976 in support whereof there was no affidavit could not be treated as one under S. 17 (2) of the Act, and the petitioner having failed to apply under Sections 17 (1) and 17 (2) of the Act cannot get protection under S. 17 (4) of the Act.

7. Mr. Kalyanbrata Roy, the learned Advocate for the petitioner argues that the learned Munsif failed to appreciate the scope of the application dated 22-12-1976, which could be treated as one under Ss. 17 (1) and 17 (2) of the Act. It is also contended that the learned Munsif committed an error in allowing the application under S. 17 (3) and rejecting the petitioner's application under S. 17 (4) of the Act without disposing of the application dated 22-12-1976 which is still pending.

8. Mr. Saktinath Mukherjee, the learned Advocate for the opposite parties contends that the learned Munsif was perfectly justified in not taking notice of the application dated 22-12-76 as it had been filed beyond the prescribed period of 30 days.

9. With reference to the decision in the case of Mahendra Krishna Nundy v. Smt. Bela Debi, reported in 1975 Cal HN 342 Mr. Mukherjee argues that sub-sec. (1) of S. 17 does not contemplate filing of any application. S. 5 of the Limitation Act is not applicable in the matter of deposit to be made in terms of sub-sec. (1) of S. 17. But the application date 22-12-1976 does not mention any section under which it was filed. Next it is contended by Mr. Mukherjee that this application cannot also be considered as one under S. 17 (2) as no deposit of rent in arrear was made along with the application. Reliance is made on the decision of a Division Bench of this court in the case of Gunwantrao T. Kamdar v. Satyanarayan Jhunjhunwalla, reported in (1971) 75 Cal WN 372. This was also followed by another Division Bench in the case of Hindusthan Industrial Co. v. Chandi Prasad More, reported in (1977) 2 Cal

LJ 508. Lastly, it is argued by Mr. Mukherjee that to treat this application as one under S. 17 (2) of the Act is misconceived. The decision of a Division Bench of this Court in the case of Jitendra Chandra Dey v. Tarak Nath Mullick, (1975) 79 Cal WN 112 is referred to. But this is not a case of conversion of an application under Section 17 (1) of the Act into one under S. 17 (2) of the Act. Moreover an order is expected to say whether the application is maintainable or not.

10. It has already been pointed out that the application dated 22-12-1976 would not show under which Sections of the Act it was filed. Certain facts of the case require mention in this connection. The suit was filed on the ground of default in payment of rent for two months. At the time of the hearing of the application under S. 17 (3) of the Act rent for the period in question was in deposit with the Rent Controller but such deposit was not valid. The application dated 22-12-1976 was drafted and filed in a mofussil Court. It did not state under what sections of the Act the application was filed. It is the established principle of law that the Court should not be too much concerned as to the form, but look into the substance thereof. In the case of Trailakhya Nath Maity v. Bimala Sundari Dasi, reported in ILR. (1953) 2 Cal 385 it is held that in the administration of justice, the court will not refuse any application which on the merits the court can grant, simply because the applicant asked the court to exercise its admitted powers under a wrong section. The judicial procedure has been framed for the furtherance of justice and not to defeat it and the court cannot refuse to act in aid of justice merely on technical grounds. In the instant case there was no error but omission in mentioning the sections under which the relief was sought for. To my mind the same principle will apply. It cannot be conceived that the Court will not take notice of an application on such technical ground. The application dated 22-12-1976 remains undisposed of or is still pending. It was not proper for the learned Munsif to dispose of application under Ss. 17 (3) and 17 (4) of the Act without disposing of the said application. That application is first to be disposed of in accordance with law.

11. The application is thus, allowed without costs. The orders under Sections 17 (3) and 17 (4) of the Act are set aside.

Application allowed.

Suit No. 295 of 1977, D/- 21-8-1981.

Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 23, R. 3 — Locus standi — Shareholders of company have no locus standi to intervene in suit of parties representing company.

The shareholders of company have no locus standi to present application and intervene in the suit or the application for putting in the terms of settlement under O. 23, R. 3 made in the suit by the plaintiff Bank and other parties representing the company who signed the terms of settlement. Case law discussed. (Paras 9, 10)

The question of right to intervene by a shareholder is a pure question of law as that would depend on the status, position and power of a shareholder in a public limited company. (Para 10)

22. Natal Land v. Pavline Colliery 7

ORDER :— This is an application by one Purna Investment Limited, a company incorporated under the Companies Act, 1956, and having its Registered Office at No. 33A, Chowringhee Road, Calcutta, alleged to be holding 956 Equity Shares of Rs. 10/- each fully paid up in the Capital of Andhra Steel Corporation Ltd.

2. The petition is signed and verified by Promod Kumar Mittal, a son of Mohan Lal Mittal, the Defendant No. 3 in the suit. The suit was filed by the Bank in 1977 inter alia for a decree for Rs. 4,43,41,209.59 P. and also for a declaration of charge under an agreement on hypothecation in respect of the goods mentioned in the Deed of Hypothecation, the sale of the said hypothecated goods, appointment of Receiver etc. In the said suit an interlocutory application was made and Receiver was appointed over the Undertaking the Defendant No. 1 Company, Andhra Steel Corporation Ltd. of its Dunkuni Unit. The plaintiff bank also filed a winding up application in 1978 in this Court for realisation of its dues which was not the subject matter of the present suit. Both the suit and the winding up petition by the plaintiff bank are pending. In 1977 the Defendant No. 3, Mohan Lal Mittal instituted a proceeding under Ss. 397-98 of the Companies Act, 1956, relating to the management of affairs of the said Defendant No. 1 Company, Andhra Steel Corporation Limited, and various interim orders were made from time to time in the said proceeding. It is alleged by the applicant, Purna Investment Limited, through the said Promod Kumar Mittal, the son of Mohan Lal Mittal, that the Defendant No. 1 company, Andhra Steel Corporation Limited, did not file its Balance Sheets after the year ending 31st March, 1975. As such, the petitioners are unaware of the real state of affairs of the company. By a consent order passed in the Sections 397-98 application on the 25th May, 1977, an Extraordinary General Meeting of the Defendant No. 1 Co., Andhra Steel Corporation Limited, was directed to be convened and held for the purpose of election of Directors. The said Extraordinary General Meeting was eventually held on the 12th July, 1977. In the said meeting the petitioners, Purna Investment Limited and various other members of the said Andhra Steel Corporation Limited, participated in the voting. At the said meeting those persons who were representatives of various Financial Institutions including the plaintiff bank were unanimously elected as Directors of the Defendant No. 1 Co. Besides the said six persons, four other persons after hot contest were alleged to be elected on the basis of the report of the Chairman of the meeting appointed by this Court by the said consent order dated 25th May, 1977. The said report of the Chairman has been challenged by Mohan Lal Mittal group in the pending Sections 397-98 application pursuant to a liberty given by the Appeal Court order dated 23rd Apr. 1979. It is alleged that the said four persons belong to the other camp of Mohan Lal Mittal and were elected by a slender majority of votes controlled by the alleged delinquent management of the said Andhra Steel Corporation Limited. It is alleged that on the 22nd May, 1980, Purna Investment Ltd. came to know from M/s. M. G. Poddar, Advocate-on-Record of Mohan Lal Mittal, that the plaintiff bank was trying to put certain terms of settlement in the suit as also in the Extraordinary Suit No.....of 1980 (Dena Bank v. Andhra Steel Corporation Limited) and in the pending winding up proceedings, and the petitioners are alleged to have succeeded in obtaining a copy of the proposed terms of settlement forwarded by the plaintiff bank's Advocate-on-Record inter alia to the said M/s. M. G. Poddar by its covering letter dated 21st May, 1980, and the alleged two copies of the said terms of settlement are annexed to the petition. It is alleged that on the 23rd May, 1980, when the parties to the suit tried to put in certain terms of settlement (sic) intervened through its Counsel and made submissions successfully opposing such terms being put in wherein it is alleged that the Court was pleased to direct the plaintiff bank to make a formal application for the purpose of recording the terms of settlement in view of the serious controversies involved in this matter and the dispute raised to such terms being put in inter alia by the said petitioner, Purna Investment Limited, and also by the Defendant No. 3, Mohan Lal Mittal. Pursuant to such leave the present application was made by the petitioner who state that they are members of the Defendant No. 1 company and as such, vitally interested in the management of its affairs which have been carried on in a manner most detrimental to the interest of the defendant No. 1 company and its minority shareholders including the petitioner. It is stated in the petition that if the terms of settlement are permitted to be put in it would most prejudicially affect the interest of the defendant No. 1 company and the interest of the minority shareholders including the said petitioner, Purna Investment Limited. In para 9 of the petition some of the alleged infirmities of the formal application were put in the terms of settlement and to pass a decree on the compromise inter alia (1) the proposed terms of settlement are alleged to have been approved by the Managing Committee of the said Defendant No. 1 Company, Andhra Steel Corporation Limited, constituted by an order of the Appeal Court dated 26th July 1977. The said order of the Appellate Court is annexure 'B' to the petition and are at pages 44, 45 and 48. By the said order of the Appeal Court the Board of Directors was restrained from acting as a Board but they were deemed to be constituting a Committee of Management. It was submitted that the said Committee of Management has no power to approve the proposed terms of settlement by which it is alleged that substantial part of the Undertaking of the Defendant No. 1 Company being the said Dunkuni Unit was proposed to be sold virtually as a gift to one Grand Steel Alloy Limited which is alleged to be a Concern of one Shiv Kumar Agarwalla, the brother-in-law of Ratan Kumar Mittal, one of the brothers of Mohan Lal Mittal, who is alleged to be in the camp of I. S. Mittal, the defendant No. 4 in this suit who is alleged to be responsible for the mismanagement of the Defendant No. 1 company. The said Grand Steel Alloy Limited has been recently incorporated on or about 11th Sept. 1979 having its Registered Office at No. 7 Kiran Sankar Roy Road, Calcutta-1, with a nominal capital of Rs. 7,000/-, (2) it is alleged that the proposed term of settlement is the sale of the Dunkuni Unit of the Defendant No. 1 company although lying closed since last few years, it is a very valuable asset and forms part of the substantial Undertaking of the Defendant No. 1 company and, therefore, it is hit by Sec. 293 (1) (a) of the Companies Act, 1956, which requires consent of the General Body of members of the Defendant No. 1 company and no such General Meeting was held or even proposed to be convened and, therefore, the terms of compromise are illegal, (3) the Defendant No. 1 Company through its said Committee of Management has purported to enter into an agreement with the plaintiff bank for sale of the said Dunkuni Unit to the said Grand Steel Alloy Ltd. on the basis of Cash Purchase, Money to be advanced by the plaintiff bank and it is alleged that such agreement is proposed to be recorded by putting in the terms of settlement. It is submitted that such agreement is invalid, illegal, inoperative and ineffectual by reason of singular absence of all powers of the Committee of Management to enter into such agreement. (4) that in the plaint leave under O. 2 R. 2 has been obtained in the suit regarding the plaintiff bank's alleged right under equitable mortgage of immovable properties of the Defendant No. 1 company situated at Dunkuni and Bangalore outside the jurisdiction of this Court. Such immovable properties are not the subject matter of the above mentioned suit. The Defendant No. 1 company under the proposed terms of settlement is proposing to dispose of the Dunkuni Unit and is further proposing to affect the immovable properties of the Defendant No. 1 company at Bangalore by proposing to create a charge over such immovable properties at Bangalore as security for payment of the part of the decretal dues of the plaintiff bank under the proposed terms. Therefore, this Court has no jurisdiction to record such terms of settlement as it purports to affect immovable properties outside the jurisdiction of this Court. (5) the proposal to dispose of the Dunkuni Unit of the Defendant No. 1 company by private treaty without public auction is unfair, improper and in any event would not enure for the benefit of all. (6) it is alleged that the Defendant No. 3 Mohan Lal Mittal, the father of Promod Kumar Mittal, who has verified the petition on behalf of the said Purna Investment Pvt. Ltd. has not agreed to sign the said terms of settlement which was attempted to be put in on the 23rd May, 1980. Therefore, O. 23 R. 3 of the C. P. C. has no application as consent of all the Defendants is required for the proposed terms of settlement. On these grounds it was submitted that leave should be granted to the petitioner Purna Investment Pvt. Ltd. to intervene and various orders of injunction to be issued as prayed for in the prayers.

3. Mr. R. C. Nag, appearing with Mr. Ahin Chowdhury, for the petitioner, Purna Investment Pvt. Limited, submitted that the shareholder has a right to intervene in this matter as being a party interested in the company's welfare and benefit. Mr. Nag cited a passage from Okeck on Modern Corporate Law, an American Book Article 1596, page 668 where rights of a share-holder vis-a-vis the company's interests are summarised. The decision of the Supreme Court referred to is Mrs. Bacha F. Guzdar v. Commr. of Income-tax. Bombay, AIR 1955 SC 74 where Gulam Hassan, J, observed in para 7 at p. 77 as follows:—

"That a shareholder acquires a right to participate in the profit of the company may be readily conceded but it is not possible to accept the contention that the share holder acquires any interest in the assets of the company.....
.....A Shareholder has got no interest in the property of the company though he has undoubtedly participated in the profit if and when the company declares to divide them....."

The company is a juristic person and is distinct from shareholders. It is the company which owns the property and not the shareholders. The dividend is a share of the profits declared by the company as liable to be distributed among the shareholders. There is nothing in the Indian Law to warrant the assumption that a shareholder who buys shares buys any interest in the property of the company which is a juristic person entirely distinct from the shareholders.

The true position of a shareholder is that on buying share, an Investor becomes entitled to participate in the profits of the company in which he holds the shares if and when the company declares, subject to the Articles of Association, that the profits or any portion thereof should be distributed by way of dividends among the shareholders. He has undoubtedly a further interest to participate in the assets of the company which would be left over after winding up but not in the assets as a whole as Lord Anderson puts it."

4. In that decision the leading English decision in Commissioner of Inland Revenue v. Forrest 1924 (8) Tax Cases 704 at page 710 the observation of Lord Anderson was referred to and also the decision of the earlier Supreme Court in Sholapur Mills' case, i. e., Charanjit Lal v. Union of India AIR 1951 SC 41 at pages 54 and 55 was referred to and relied on.

5. Reference was also made to the Division Bench decision of this Court in Shyam Lal Purohit v. Jaggan Nath Roy AIR 1969 Cal 424 where the question whether a shareholder in a compulsory winding up has any locus standi to apply for setting aside the sale of property belonging to the company arose under O. 21 R. 90 of the C. P. C. and dealing with this question D. N. Sinha, C. J., observed in para. 15 summarising the position of a share-holder as follows at pp. 429-430.

"The result of these decisions may be summarised as follows:—

(1) In the case of Public Limited company registered under the said Act, the company is a separate entity from its shareholders. It is the company which is the owner of its assets, including immovable properties and not the shareholders.

(2) The shareholder in such a company has a right to share in the profits, by way of receipt of dividends. He has a right in an appropriate case to apply for the winding up of the company and to take part in the distribution of the surplus assets after payment of the debts and liabilities which must of course be done in accordance with the Articles of Association and the provisions of the said Act.

(3) As long as the company continues to exist, that is to say before its dissolution no shareholder can be said to have any interest in the properties and assets of the company, either legal or equitable. Shareholders in a company are certainly interested in the properties and assets of the company in the sense that a wastage or frittering away of the assets might affect their rights to enjoy the profits and eventually the distribution of surplus assets in a winding up. This, however, is too remote an interest and cannot be included within the definition of 'interest' within the meaning of O. 21 R. 90 of the Civil P. C.

(4) The words 'or whose interests are affected by the sale' in O. 21 R. 90 are no longer confined to an interest in immovable property or to proprietary or possessory rights. The word 'interest' must be given a wide meaning and may include a contingent interest, but the right may be exercised by one who is directly and immediately affected by the sale of an immovable property. Rights which are likely to be affected or interest which may hypothetically or remotely be affected cannot be considered as coming within the four corners of O. 21 R. 90."

6. Mr. Chowdhury also cited another Division Bench decision of the Madras High Court in Registrar of Joint Stock Company, Madras v. Dalmia Cement AIR 1955 Mad 28 where also the same question was discussed. Therefore, Mr. Chowdhury submitted that the shareholder has a right to be heard in an application under O. 23 R. 3 of the Civil P. C. and as such, he analysed the terms of settlement and submitted that it could not be for the benefit of the company and, therefore, the petitioner being a shareholder should be given right in this application for putting the terms of settlement and passing a compromise decree under O. 23 R. 3 of the Civil P. C. made by the plaintiff bank and opposed the application on various grounds set out in the affidavit which I have already mentioned before. Mr. Chowdhury also referred to the question of registration of the terms of settlement and submitted that it is not fair and reasonable and, therefore, it should not be accepted and the application should be allowed.

Mr. Nag also submitted referring to the dictionary meaning of the word 'intervention' which includes the right of the shareholder to appear in a proceeding where the interest of the company is being adversely affected. He referred to the decision in Jhajharia Brothers Ltd. v. Sholapur Spinning & Weaving Company Limited (1940) 72 Cal LJ 458: (AIR 1941 Cal 174) where a suit was filed by a shareholder and it was held that there can be a suit by the shareholder against the company for individual wrong done to them. Apart from individual wrong there may be suits to restrain acts ultra vires the company and the Court will interfere in cases of ultra vires acts because they are not within the constitution.

7. For the same purpose of the leading English decision in Natal Land Etc. Company v. Poulin Colliery 1904 A. C. 120 which was referred to in the Division Bench decision of this Court in Venkatarama Krishnamurthy v. C. V. Rama Aiyer (1974) 78 Cal WN 1 where question of illegal agreement in a Section 34 application of the Arbitration Act, 1940, came up and the said English decision in Natal Land's case was referred to and it was held that party who is not a party to the arbitration agreement and if he objects to the jurisdiction of the Arbitrator and in spite of that the Arbitrator makes the award the Court can go into that question and it was further held that the company cannot adopt a preincorporation agreement which is illegal.

8. Mr. R. C. Nag, appearing with Mr. Ahin Chowdhury, for the petitioner, Purna Investment Pvt. Limited was supported by Mr. Some Nath Chatterjee, Mr. Aninda Mitra and Mr. Pratap Chatterjee, for Mohanlal Mittal, the father of Promod Kumar Mittal, who is a Director of the petitioner being Purna Investment Private Limited. The present application is really a second front opened by Mohan Lal Mittal to oppose the application of the plaintiff Bank and other parties representing the company who have signed the terms of settlement to prevent the decree of compromise on the terms of settlement put in, being passed under O. 23 R. 3 of the Civil P. C. In my view, the allegations and the submissions made on behalf of the petitioner, Purna Investment Private Limited, of which if the veil is lifted Mr. Mohan Lal Mittal's face appears as he is making this representation through his son on the principle that by repeating the same points through different sets of leading Counsel and parties, if possible re-enforces and establishes a proposition, although that may not be sound both in law or in fact.

9. The application was opposed by Mr. R. C. Deb, appearing with S. B. Mukherjee and Mrs. U. B. Mukherjee, for the Respondent Company, Andhra Steel Corporation Limited, and for B. C. Mittal, I. S. Mittal, Chagan Lal Mittal and Damodar Lal Mittal and submitted and in my view quite rightly, that the applicant has no locus standi to present this application and intervene in the suit or the application for putting in the terms of settlement under O. 23 R. 3 of the Civil P. C. made in the suit by the plaintiff bank and other respondents consenting to the same.

10. The question of right to intervene by a shareholder is a pure question of law as that would depend on the status, position and power of a shareholder in public Limited Company. Unless the applicant has locus standi, there is no question of going into the other matter raised in the petition and also argued from the Bar to re-enforce the arguments of Mohan Lal Mittal in different forms once in the said application under O. 23 R. 3 of the C. P. C. and again in Sections 397-98 application for removal of the Managing Committee. The present application appears to me to be an abuse of the process of the Court and utterly mala fide and it is not necessary for me to go into the other questions raised as those are already being raised in the application under O. 23 R. 3 of the C. P. C. The position of the shareholder is defined under the Companies Act, 1956, and particularly the principles laid down in the Supreme Court decision in Mrs. Bacha F. Guzdar v. Commr. of Income-tax AIR 1955 SC 74. Para 7 at pages 76 and 77 which I have already quoted before has clearly laid down the position of the shareholder of a company although Mr. Nag has in his usual thoroughness and erudite scholarship quoted the passage from Oleck on Modern Company Law, an American Publication, in which generally the proposition as to the position of a shareholder has been summarised but that passage, in my view, does not help in any way the position of a shareholder in India which is governed by the Indian Companies Act, 1956, and also the said decision of the Supreme Court which is the law of the land under Art. 141 of the Constitution of India. Therefore, on this preliminary issue of the petitioner having any locus standi to intervene and/or be added as a party in the application under O. 23 R. 3 of the C. P. C. in my opinion, should be answered in the negative and must be held that the said Purna Investment Private Limited has no locus standi to intervene to be added as a party either to the petition under O. 23 R. 3 of the C. P. C. or in the suit or to (sic). The present application is a mere abuse of the process of the Court and is a machination of Mohan Lal Mittal through his son, Promod Kumar Mittal, to set up one of his companies, Purna Investment Private Limited holding some shares as hereinbefore stated in the capital of the Respondent Company, Andhra Steel Corporation Limited.

4. Therefore, I need not go into the other question which has been raised by Mohan Lal Mittal in the main application under O. 23 R. 3 of the Civil P. C. and, therefore, the said question cannot be raised again by this circuitous process by adding or intervention of a party who has no locus standi in the suit where the Respondent Company, Andhra Steel Corporation Limited, is represented and Mohan Lal Mittal himself is representing through leading Counsel and opposing the application by raising some objections as sought to be raised in the present application.

12. In that view of the matter. I have no hesitation in dismissing this application with costs.

Application dismissed.

Mrs. PRATIBHA BONNERJEA J.

Krishna Kishore Kar, Plaintiff v. United Commercial Bank and another, Defendants.

Suit No. 1520 of 1966, D/- 8-7-1981.

(A) Contract Act (9 of 1872) Sec. 171 — Banker's lien — Lien cannot be exercised where there is express contract to contrary (Banker's lien).

An express contract between the parties creating a lien or security would exclude operation of the statutory general lien under Sec. 171. Therefore, where the plaintiff and the Bank had an express contract by way of counter guarantee providing the method of reimbursement, this contract would exclude application of Sec. 171. (Para 20)

(B) Contract Act (9 of 1872), Sec. 171 — Separate Accounts in Bank — Adjustment — Banker's lien — Plaintiff having cash credit account and other account — All proceeds of fixed deposits duly credited in cash credit account — Balance can be adjusted by appropriating amount lying in separate account in exercise of its general lien under S. 171. JUDGMENT:— This is a suit for recovery of Rs. 2,26,858.26 instituted by the plaintiff against the defendants on account of the following facts:

It is alleged in the plaint that the plaintiff, in his business of Isis Coal Company, had opened a cash credit account with the defendant bank. In his said business, the plaintiff had dealings and transactions with Durgapur Project Limited, the defendant No. 2 herein. On 2-8-62, the defendant No. 1 at the request of the plaintiff, executed a bond for Rs. 2,00,000/- in favour of the defendant No. 2 guaranteeing payment for coal supplied and to be supplied to the plaintiff by the defendant No. 2. As against this bond, the plaintiff, on 2-8-1962, executed a counter guarantee in favour of the defendant No. 1 on certain terms and conditions contained therein. The period of guarantee was from 2-8-1962 to 1-8-1963 (Ext. A pages 6 and 7). In respect of the Bank guarantee the defendant No. 2 had demanded margin money from the plaintiff to cover the said guarantee and pursuant to the same the plaintiff from time to time paid an aggregate sum of Rs. 1,83,500/- which was admitted by the defendant bank by letter dated 4-5-1963 (Ext. A page 27).

2. The plaintiff alleged that the guarantee period in favour of the defendant No. 2 had expired and he had paid in full the entire dues of the defendant No. 2 and had demanded refund of the margin money of Rs. 1,83,500/- from the defendant Bank but it failed and neglected to refund the same. The bank is holding the said sum by way of Trust or money had and received and is bound to refund the same with interest. Hence this suit.

3. The defendant bank filed its written statement disputing that plaintiff had paid the defendant No. 2 in full on account of the fact that the bond was not returned by the defendant No. 2 duly discharged. According to the defendant Bank a sum of Rs. 19,787.32 p. was due to the Bank by the plaintiff in the cash credit account and the bank is entitled to recover the same. It was further alleged that on 27-11-1962, the Bank at the request of the plaintiff, had executed another guarantee bond for Rs. 1,00,000/- in favour of the President of India guaranteeing payment for plaintiff's transactions with the Eastern Railway. As against this guarantee, the plaintiff also executed a counter guarantee in favour of the bank. In terms of these two bonds, the bank was unconditionally authorised to pay to the President of India and/or the Eastern Railway on demand without any reference to the plaintiff. It was also agreed that the plaintiff would reimburse the Bank on demand and in default Bank was to recover the same from the accounts or securities held or to be held by the Bank (Ext. A pages 14 and 17). The defendant bank alleged that it had paid Rs. 56,740/- to the Eastern Railway on their demand and as such became entitled to recover the same from the plaintiff. The sum of Rs. 19,787.32 and Rs. 56,740/- aggregating to Rs. 76,527.32 were adjusted by the bank against the sum of rupees 1,83,500/- in exercise of its lien and/or general lien. Alternatively, the defendant bank was entitled to appropriate and set off its said claims against Rs. 1,83,500/- and had already appropriated the said sum of Rs. 76,527.32 against the said sum of Rs. 1,83,500/-. The plaintiff was not entitled to refund as the defendant No. 2 did not return the guarantee bond duly discharged. The allegations of trust or money had and received as alleged in the plaint were all denied specifically.

4. The defendant No. 2 filed its written statement admitting that nothing was due to it from the plaintiff for the period covered by the guarantee dated 2-8-1962.

4A. The following issues were raised at the trial:—

1(a). Did the plaintiff duly pay to the defendant No. 2 all amounts in respect of the transactions for the period covered by the Guarantee dated 2-8-1962, as alleged in para 9 of the plaint?

(b) Did the defendant No. 2 fail and neglect to return or discharge the said Guarantee, as alleged in para 10 of the plaint?

2. Is the defendant No. 1 liable to pay to the defendant No. 2 the sum of Rs. 2,06,272.90 p. in terms of its letter dated 29-4-1963 out of Rs. 1,83,500/- held by the defendant No. 1 under the Guarantee dated 2-8-62?

3. Is the defendant No. 1 entitled to recover Rs. 56,740/- out of the aforesaid sum of Rs. 1,83,500/- in terms of the letter dated 27-11-62 written by the plaintiff, as alleged in paras 13 and 15 of the written statement of the defendant No. 1?

4. Is the defendant No. 1 entitled to exercise a lien in respect of its alleged claims of Rs. 76,527.32 against the said sum of Rs. 1,83,500/-, as alleged in para 16 of the written statement of the defendant No. 1?

5. Is the defendant No. 1 entitled to appropriate and/or set off a sum of Rs. 76,527.32 p. as pleaded in para 16 of their written statement?

6. Is the claim of the defendant No. 1 for set off and/or counter-claim and/or adjustment barred by limitation, as stated in the Additional Written Statement of the plaintiff?

7. To what relief, if any, is the plaintiff entitled?

5. During hearing, it was admitted by the defendant No. 2 that the guarantee bond dated 2-8-1962 was not returned. In view of the admission of the defendant No. 2 in its written statement that there was no claim against the plaintiff for the guarantee period, I directed the defendant No. 2 to produce the bond in Court. This order was complied with and the bond is kept in the records of this proceeding. The defendant No. 2 did not contest the suit but watched the proceeding. The plaintiff examined himself and the defendant No. 1 examined four witnesses.

6. The execution of the aforesaid two guarantee bonds in connection with the plaintiff's transactions with the Eastern Railway are admitted facts. The deposit of Rs. 1,83,500/- by the plaintiff by way of margin money against the bank's guarantee in favour of the defendant No. 2 is also admitted by the parties to the suit. It appears from the evidence that on 29-4-1963, the defendant No. 2 made a demand on the defendant bank for Rs. 2,06,272.90 p. under the guarantee dated 2-8-1962, but the plaintiff had disputed this alleged claim. As a result the plaintiff had instituted a suit against the present defendants on 16-5-1963 being suit No. 875 of 1963 for restraining the bank from paying the said sum out of the margin money under the guarantee dated 2-8-1962. The plaintiff, thereafter took out an application in the said suit for injunction and on that application on 1-7-1963 an order was passed after hearing the parties to the said suit and in their presence, that "the United Commercial Bank shall not pay to any of the parties to the suit any amount lying with the Bank without leaving a sum of Rs. 90,000/- with the Bank" (Ext. C). The order therefore, limited the amount of margin money to the extent of Rs. 90,000/- only and the balance of Rs. 93,500/- out of Rs. 1,83,500/- became free for payment to the parties. None of the parties to the said suit took any step against the order dated 1-7-63 and the order became final and binding. Mr. Deb, the counsel for the plaintiff, however, submitted that this balance Rs. 93,500/- in the hands of the Bank retained its character as the margin money in spite of order dated 1-7-63. In support he cited (1930) 2 Ch. 293 where on the facts of that case it was held:—

"That the deposit being money handed over to the insuring company for a specific purpose, the balance remaining after satisfying the specific purpose continued to be excluded from the course of account between the parties and could not be subject of set off."

7. But the facts of the present case are entirely different. In this case, not only the Court made the balance sum of Rs. 93,500/- free for payment to the parties, but the parties themselves construed the order of 1-7-63 to be so. The plaintiff himself demanded this balance amount from the Bank by his letter dated 7-9-63 and sent another reminder on 3-10-63 on the basis that Rs. 93,500/- became free for refund. The plaintiff maintained this stand during hearing of the suit while suggesting his case in cross examination of the Bank's manager Mr. N. K. Bhattacharjee:—

Q. 143 "I suggest to you that the Court order of 1st July 1963 modified the arrangement between the Bank and the plaintiff in regard to the guarantee to Durgapur Project."

Q. 145 "I suggest to you that in terms of the order dated 1st July 1963 the Bank was given liberty to return Rs. 93,500/- being the balance of rupees 1,83,500/- to the plaintiff."

7A. In the premises aforesaid, the plaintiff should not be allowed to say that Rs. 93,500/- had retained its character as margin money even after passing of the order dated 1-7-1963. The submission of Mr. Deb that Rs. 93,500/- was part of the margin money being contrary to the stand taken by the plaintiff himself, cannot be accepted. The Bank, however, did not return the money and alleged that it had claim against the plaintiff to the extent of Rs. 34,523.63 in the cash credit account maintained with the New Market Branch.

8. The plaintiff also had transactions with the Eastern Railway on "weight only" system under an agreement dated 19-11-61. According to the terms of the agreement of "weight only" system, the plaintiff was to pay to the Railway its provisional bills for freight in full regardless whether the plaintiff had received the full quantity of coal or not and irrespective of the fact whether the bills contained any error or overcharge. If there was any shortfall in delivery or if there was any error or overcharge in the bills, the plaintiff was to notify the Eastern Railway about the same which would be subject to correction at the time of adjustment of the accounts between the parties in due course. The period of transaction was from 23-11-1961 to 22-11-1962. The plaintiff was to deposit Rs. 1,00,000/- by way of security. The Railway exempted the plaintiff from furnishing this security and in lieu thereof, on 21-11-1962, the plaintiff executed a bond (hereinafter referred to as the principal bond) in favour of the President of India for continuing to have transactions on "weight only" system on terms and conditions contained therein and the period was extended from 23-11-1962 to 22-11-1963 (Ext. A pages 14-15). The plaintiff was described therein as the privilege holder. This bond was accepted by the President of India. The Bank guarantee dated 27-11-1962 given by the Bank in favour of the President of India was to remain in force for the period of this principal bond. On 3-1-1964, the Eastern Railway made a demand on the defendant Bank for Rs. 57,314.70 in enforcement of the Bank guarantee dated 27-11-1962. Prior to that the Railway had demanded the said sum from the plaintiff himself by its letter dated 5-11-1963 and had threatened the plaintiff that if the said sum of Rs. 57,314/- would remain unpaid, the Railway would enforce the Bank guarantee.

9. The claims of the Railway were on the basis of the four freight bills set out below:—

Bill Nos.	Date	Amount
1. 1/20	10-4-1963	Rs. 22,566.25
2. 1/70	20-4-1963	Rs. 6,843.35
3. 1/23	30-3-1963	Rs. 25,028.90
4. 1/21	10-5-1963	Rs. 2,876.20
		Rs. 57,314.70
(Ext. A page 88)

10. On 10-1-1964, the defendant Bank informed the plaintiff about the said demand and further intimated that the Bank was going to pay the said sum (Ext. A page 47). By letter dated 31-1-1964, the plaintiff asked the Bank not to pay on the allegation that nothing was due to the Eastern Railway. On the same day viz, 31-1-1964, the defendant Bank, by a letter informed the plaintiff that the Eastern Railway had already been paid and the Bank had appropriated and adjusted the said sum against Rs. 93,500/- by virtue of order dated 1-7-1963 passed in suit No. 875 of 1963 (Ext. A page 51). This letter was actually posted on 5-2-1964 and received by the plaintiff on 6-2-1964. The plaintiff alleged that the Bank had ante dated this letter to circumvent the plaintiff's instruction contained in his letter dated 31-1-1964 prohibiting the Bank from making payment. The plaintiff also made this allegation in its letter 20-2-1964 but the Bank did not reply. Is there any substance in this allegation? No motive has been imputed in the plaint. In his testimony, the plaintiff alleged that the defendant Bank did so in collusion with the Railway. This new story set up at the stage of evidence is liable to be rejected as there was no proper pleading of collusion in the plaint nor any issue had been raised thereon. Moreover, the question of Bank's ante dating the letter for circumventing plaintiff's instruction will only arise, if Bank was under any obligation to comply with plaintiff's instruction contained in his letter of 31-1-1964. Could the Bank on the basis of plaintiffs' letter refuse to pay in violation of the express terms of the Bank guarantee dated 27-11-1962 and that of the plaintiff's counter guarantee? To ascertain this, the principal bond, Bank guarantee and the counter guarantee have to be scrutinised carefully. For the sake of convenience, the relevant portions of these three documents are set out below:—

Clause 2 of the principal bond :

"Periodical bills (10 days period) will be issued for transactions and these bills are strictly payable in full on presentation whether the wagon contents are taken delivery of or not by us or by our accredited representatives and regardless of errors or overcharge which on being detected or brought to notice will be open to adjustment in due course". (Ex. A pages 14-15).

The Bank guarantee in favour of the President of India dated 27-11-1962 :—

"We the United Commercial Bank Ltd, do hereby undertake to indemnify and keep indemnified the government any loss or damage caused to or suffered by the government by reason of any breach by the said privilege holder of any of the terms or conditions contained in the said principal bond. The United Commercial Bank Ltd, further agree that the guarantee herein contained shall remain in full force and effect during the period of the said principal bond is in force". (Ext. A page 17).

The plaintiff's counter guarantee to the Bank dated 27-11-1962 :—

"We also hereby unconditionally authorise you to pay on demand any claim arising hereunder without making any reference to us and we undertake to pay to you on demand the amount of such claim paid by you together with the expenses incurred in connection therewith which sum if not paid by us on demand may also be recovered by you from the account or accounts maintained by us with you or from securities held or to be held by us with you...." (Ext. A page 16).

11. On proper construction of these three documents, it appears that the plaintiff was liable to pay the freight bills on presentation by the Railway regardless whether he had obtained delivery of coal or not and irrespective of the fact that the bills contained error or overcharge. His remedy was to have the adjustment of the accounts between him and the Railway subsequently for any over payment or error in the bill or non-delivery or short delivery of goods by the Railway. The plaintiff was under absolute obligation to pay the freight bills at the first instance on presentation. If the plaintiff would commit breach of the terms of payment contained in the principal bond, the Railway or the President of India would be entitled to enforce the Bank guarantee dated 27-11-1962 and in terms of the counter guarantee, the Bank would be unconditionally liable to pay to the Railway its claims on demand without reference to the plaintiff and would in its turn be entitled to be reimbursed by the plaintiff. The plaintiff committed breach of the terms of the principal bond by non-payment of four freight bills set out above. I, therefore, hold on the facts and circumstances of this case, that the Railway had rightly enforced the Bank guarantee and the Bank was not entitled to refuse payment on the basis of the plaintiff's instruction dated 31-1-1964. I further hold that this instruction of the plaintiff to the Bank was in breach of the terms of the counter guarantee dated 27-11-1962 and Bank had rightly ignored the said instruction. The Bank had no right to verify the genuineness or otherwise of Railway's claim before payment nor it could refer the matter to the plaintiff for ascertaining its correctness. In view of the Bank's absolute obligation to pay under the counter guarantee, the question of Bank's ante dating the letter as alleged by the plaintiff did not arise. The Bank had nothing to circumvent and was bound to act in accordance with the express terms of the agreements between the parties. There is some discrepancy regarding the date or payment alleged by the defendant Bank and the actual date of payment to the Railway. But date of payment is immaterial.

12. The plaintiff had disputed the claim of the Railway on the allegation that he had a huge claim against the Railway at that time and therefore the payment made by the Bank to the Railway was wrongful. Let us examine how far the plaintiff has been able to prove that Railway had no claim. In support of his contention that Railway had no claim, the plaintiff relied on certain refunds made by the Railway. It would be noted that the Bank paid the Railway on 6-2-1964 and Railway started giving refund on and from May 1964. As I have stated earlier, Railway's demand for four freight bills mentioned above was on the basis of the express terms of the principal bond whereby the plaintiff's obligation to pay the freight bills on presentation was absolute. It may be that upon receipt of this amount and upon adjustment of accounts, in terms of the principal bond some amount was found due and refundable to the plaintiff and the same was refunded by the Railway. These refunds do not prove that Railway had no claim against the plaintiff when the claim was made. The plaintiff's obligation to pay did not depend on the actual dues of the Railway but on the basis of the provisional bills as prepared by the Railway. The plaintiff had no right to withhold payment of freight bills on the basis of actual accounting position between the parties. The plaintiff, thereafter, filed a suit against the Railway for Rs. 8000/- being M. Suit No. 81 of 1965 and was satisfied by obtaining a consent decree for Rs. 5263/- passed by the City Civil Court in the said suit. In that suit, the plaintiff did not ask for refund of Rs. 56,740/- alleged to have been recovered by the Railway wrongfully from the Bank. As a matter of fact, the plaintiff never took any action for finalisation of the accounts between the parties or for recovery of Rs. 56,740/- against the Railway. Mr. Deb. plaintiff's counsel submitted that the plaintiff had no cause of action against the Railway. Why the plaintiff should file a suit against them? The Railway did not get any portion of the plaintiff's money. The sum of Rs. 56,740 was paid out of Bank's money by banks' cheque. It is because the Bank had appropriated and adjusted this amount against the plaintiff's margin money, the plaintiff got the cause of action against the Bank to institute this suit. This argument although very interesting has no basis whatsoever. The facts of the case proved that the Railway had demanded the money on the allegation that the plaintiff had committed breach of the terms of the principal bond for which the President of India had enforced the Bank guarantee dated 27-11-1963. It is also on record that after receipt of Rs. 56,740/- from the Bank, the Railway had acknowledged the said payment and had returned both the principal bond and the Bank guarantee duly discharged (Ext. A pages 78-80 & Ext. 6A). The return of these two documents are not disputed by the plaintiff. Therefore, the basis of Railway's demand was the plaintiff's breach of the terms of the principal bond. If according to the plaintiff, this allegation was false then certainly the plaintiff had cause of action against the Railway and should have taken some step against it. But by not challenging this allegation, the plaintiff had accepted the position that he was guilty of committing breach of the terms of the principal bond. Under the circumstances the plaintiff should not be allowed to say that the payment made to the Railway by the Bank was wrongful. The plaintiff tried to challenge the genuineness of the Railway's claim in his evidence in the present suit in absence of the Railway. Therefore, these allegations cannot be entertained. The plaintiff failed to prove that the Bank's payment to the Railway was wrongful. The payment of Rs. 56,740/- to the Railway was proved by the Bank's witnesses Mr. D. Ghosh and Mr. Bijoy Krishna Chowdhury as well as by Railway's letters being Ext. A pages 78-80 & Ext. 6A. I have no doubt in my mind that the plaintiff filed the present suit for obtaining two benefits. He already got one benefit by obtaining payment of four freight bills by the Bank to the Railway and the second benefit he is trying to obtain by not reimbursing the Bank in terms of his counter guarantee by alleging that Bank's payment was wrongful. The conduct of the plaintiff is absolutely inequitable. The Bank is certainly entitled to be reimbursed. The only question now is whether Bank was entitled to appropriate or adjust its claims against Rs. 93,500/- or not. One thing is to be noted that the Railway had originally demanded Rs. 57,314/- but it was satisfied in receiving Rs. 56,740/-. Why it was so, has not been explained by any of the parties to the suit.

13. The next question naturally would be, could the Bank adjust or appropriate Rs. 56,740/- against Rs. 93,500? Mr. Rajat Ghose, counsel for the plaintiff, strenuously argued that the entire sum of Rs. 1,83,500/- was deposited with the Bank by way of margin money and/or for a specific purpose. Therefore, the Bank was holding the said sum in trust. Being a trust fund, for a specific purpose, Bank could not adjust its claims against this sum. He made an elaborate argument supported by a number of cases. In his argument however, he did not take into account the effect of the order dated 1-7-1963 on the margin money. It appears from the judgment delivered on 1-7-1963 in suit No. 875 of 1963 (Krishna Kishore Kar v. Durgapur Project), that Durgapur had submitted that Rs. 90,000/- should be set apart from Rs. 1,83,500/- to meet its claims whereas the plaintiff had submitted that entire amount should be refunded to him. This argument on behalf of the plaintiff could only be made on the basis that the entire Rs. 1,83,500/- became free from being margin money and was refundable to him. On hearing the parties to the said suit the learned Judge directed that the Bank would not be entitled to pay to the parties to the suit the balance money without setting apart Rs. 90,000/- from Rs. 1,83,500/-. I have already pointed out that pursuant to the order dated 1-7-1963, the plaintiff had demanded refund of the balance sum of Rs. 93,500/- from the Bank (Ext. A pages 74 and 36) This demand for refund could only be made by the plaintiff on the basis that this balance sum had lost its character as margin money. On the facts and circumstances of this case, I am unable to accept the submission of Mr. Ghose that Rs. 93,500/- was a trust fund and as such I also refrain from dealing with the cases cited on this point. But in view of the express terms of the counter guarantee that the Bank would first make a demand for reimbursement, could the Bank appropriate its claim for Rs. 56,740 against the balance of Rs. 93,500/- without making a demand? It is admitted by the Bank that no demand was made prior to alleged appropriation or adjustment. On behalf of the plaintiff, it was submitted that without a demand, the Bank would not have any cause of action for adjustment or appropriation and in support thereof reliance was placed on (1918) 2 KB 833 (Bradford Old Bank Ltd, v. Sutcliffe) where it was held :—

"That the plaintiff's claim was not barred by the Statute of Limitations, as no cause of action arose against the surety until demand had been made by the plaintiff and no demand was made till 1912."

14. The counsel for the plaintiff also relied on (1954) 1 All ER 734 (Lloyds Bank Ltd, v. Margolis). In this case the Bank took a legal charge from the defendant Goerge John Lyster by way of security for his overdraft on current account. The charge provided as follows:—

"Hereby covenants with the Bank to pay to them on demand all money and liabilities which now are or at any time hereafter may be due....."

15. It was held that on true construction of the legal charge, the making of the demand was a condition precedent to recovery of the money secured thereby and therefore, time ran from the date of the demand and the claim was not barred. On the basis of the aforesaid two decisions, it was submitted that the alleged appropriation or adjustment was wrongful as no prior demand was made by the defendant Bank and I accept this submission.

16. According to the counsel for the Bank, the Bank did not appropriate or adjust on the basis of the counter guarantee but did so in exercise of its general lien under S. 171 of the Contract Act. The Bank could retain any goods bailed by the customer and/or money in the accounts of the customer with the Bank to make up any loss suffered by the Bank on account of the customer. The Bank, in exercise of this general lien, appropriated or adjusted its claims against Rs. 93,500/-. In support AIR 1956 Punj 118 (Punjab National Bank Ltd. v. Satyapal Virmani) was cited to establish that the word "goods" in S. 171 of the Contract Act includes money. My attention was invited to para 8 of the judgment where it was held :—

"According to the law merchant, the Banker can look to his general lien as a protection against loss on account or loss on loan or overdraft. And money has been held to be a species of goods over which lien may be exercised."

17. The counsel for the Bank also cited AIR 1960 Punj 632 (Punjab National Bank Ltd. v. Arura Mal Durga Das) where it was held (at p. 635) :

"The Statutory law in India does not expressly refer to the Banker's lien in respect of cash deposits.....that Indian Contract Act is not exhaustive of the entire law relating to contract.....Where the statutory provisions do not cover a particular matter, the principles of English Law, in so far as they embody the rules of justice, equity and good conscience may be applied."

18. The next case relied on by the defendant Bank is AIR 1946 Nag 114 (Devendra Kumar Lalchandji v. Gulab-singh Nekhe Singh) where it was held at page 116 :—

"In the absence of specific provisions on the subject, when moneys are held by the Bank in one account and the payer in respect of these moneys owes the Bank on another account, the Banker's lien gives the Bank a charge on all the moneys of the payer in its hands so that they may be transferred to whatever account the Bank chooses to set off or liquidate the debt."

Section 171 of the Contract Act is set out below :—

"Bankers, factors, wharfingers, attorneys of a High Court and policy-brokers may, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, retain, as a security for a general balance of account, any goods bailed to them; but no other persons have a right to retain as a security for such balance, goods bailed to them, unless there is an express contract to that effect."

19. Mr. Deb, the counsel for the plaintiff, submitted that an express contract between the parties creating a lien or security would exclude operation of the statutory general lien under S. 171 of the Contract Act. In the present case, the plaintiff and the Bank had an express contract by way of counter guarantee providing the method of reimbursement. This contract will exclude application of S. 171 of Contract Act. In support he relied on L. R. (1) P. C. 296 (George Henry Chambers v. Patrick Davidson). It was held in that case that general lien given by law is excluded if lien is created an express written contract.

"Therefore, if a consignee takes an express security, such security, being the stipulation and agreement of the parties, it excludes his general lien".

20. For this principle, we need not look into the English cases as S. 171 of the Contract Act itself clearly lays down that the provisions of this section will apply only in absence of the express contract to the contrary. Therefore, in the present case the defendant Bank cannot exercise any general lien under S. 171 of the Contract Act in view of the existence of the Counter guarantee dated 27-11-1962. I accept this submission on behalf of the plaintiff and hold that the Bank was not entitled to appropriate or adjust its claims under Section 171 of the Contract Act.

21. The Bank further alleged that there was a balance amount of

Rs. 34,523.63 p. outstanding in the plaintiff's cash credit account with the defendant Bank. The plaintiff had pledged fix deposit receipts by way of security against overdraft and had agreed that on maturity, the proceeds of the fixed deposits would be credited in the overdraft account to liquidate plaintiff's liability. In the written statement the defendant Bank alleged that after crediting the proceeds of the fixed deposits, a sum of Rs. 19,787.32 remained due and payable by the plaintiff in the overdraft account which amount was also adjusted against Rs. 93,500/- and the account was closed on 1-2-1964. A statement of account was annexed to the written statement which is Ext. I in the suit. The plaintiff disputed the correctness of this account in his testimony. Bank's witness Suresh Chandra Roy Chowdhury proved the security ledger entries relating to the fixed deposits of the plaintiff as well as the cash credit ledger entries relating to the account of Isis Coal Company. He also proved the correctness of the contents of Ext. I. This witness stated that these books were kept under his supervision and he had personal knowledge regarding the entries. This witness was not at all cross-examined on his evidence of correctness of the entries in the cash credit ledger or Ext. I. It was suggested to him in cross-examination that entries at page 80 of the security ledger were not correct but plaintiff failed to prove incorrectness of any entry at page 80 of the security ledger either in cross-examination of Roy Chowdhury or through his own witness. It is the case of the plaintiff that he never received statement of account from the defendant Bank. But the two branch managers of the new Market Branch, Mr. N. K. Bhattacharjee and Mr. D. Ghosh as well as two of its employees Bijoy Krishna Chowdhury and Suresh Roy Chowdhury all in their respective testimony said that plaintiff's office was very nearer to this branch office and the plaintiff often used to come to check his account and under the instruction of these two branch managers, these two employees used to personally hand over the statements of accounts to him. The usual Banking practice was that against delivery of statements of account personally to the customer no receipt was taken. It appears from the statement of account Ext. I that on or about 5-6-1963, the plaintiff paid Rs. 11,885.34 by cheque No. 688756 to the Bank for liquidation of his liability in the said overdraft account. This is corroborated by the counter foil of the cheque produced by the plaintiff being Ext. L in the suit. Normally such payment would not be made unless the party paying was aware of the accounting position. Moreover it also appears that the Bank credited the proceeds of the fixed deposits in the cash credit account and duly informed the plaintiff about the same by its letter dated 21-2-1964. By this letter the plaintiff was also informed that after giving credit of the fixed deposits the Bank had adjusted the outstanding dues of Rs. 19,787.32 by appropriating the equivalent amount from Rs. 93,500/- in terms of order dated 1-7-1963 (Ext. A page 51). The plaintiff did not reply to this letter. It appears from the evidence on record that after adjustment of the aforesaid sums the cash credit account was closed by the Bank on 21-2-1964. The present suit was instituted by the plaintiff on 11-8-1966. At the time of filing of the suit the plaintiff was fully aware as to how the Bank had adjusted this Cash Credit account and what was the alleged liability of the plaintiff in this account. But in the present suit, the plaintiff did not challenge these allegations of the defendant Bank nor the adjustment made by it in respect to the same. The plaintiff's alleged liability in the cash credit account, Bank's adjustment by crediting the fixed deposit proceeds as well as setting of the balance outstanding against Rs. 93,500/- all remained unchallenged by the plaintiff in spite of his full knowledge of these facts as far back as on 21-2-1964. If there was any doubt in plaintiff's mind regarding the correctness of this account, the plaintiff would have challenged this account in this present suit because the plaintiff was fully aware of what would be the banks' defence in the present suit. On the facts and circumstances of this case, I have no hesitation to accept the testimony of the Bank's witness Roy Chowdhury that the entries in the cash credit ledger, security ledger and Ext. I are all correct. Now, the question would be, could the Bank adjust the balance of Rs. 19,787.32 in the cash credit account by appropriating the same amount from Rs. 93,500/- which was lying in a separate account?

with the Bank? There was no express contract between the plaintiff and the defendant Bank regarding the manner of adjustment of this outstanding balance in the cash credit account. All the proceeds of the fixed deposits had been duly credited in this account. Therefore the Bank could exercise its general lien under S. 171 of the Contract Act for making up the loss caused by the plaintiff and the Bank had rightly adjusted this claim against Rs. 93,500/- set free by order dated 1-7-1963.

22. The last issue to be decided is whether the Bank's claim for adjustment, set off or appropriation of Rs. 56,740/- was barred by limitation. This issue can be disposed of easily. The Bank did not make any demand in terms of the counter guarantee which was a condition precedent and Bank had no cause of action for appropriation, adjustment or set off. Until today, the Bank's cause of action under counter guarantee has not arisen. The question of limitation therefore, cannot arise. Several cases were cited on the point of limitation which were not relevant on the facts of this case. Regarding the set off and adjustment of Rs. 19,787-32 due on the cash credit account, there could be no question of limitation as the adjustment was made in this mutual open and current account on 21-2-1964 on which date the last entry of crediting the proceeds of the cost fixed deposit was made in terms of the agreement between the parties.

23. The defendant No. 2 had failed and neglected to return the guarantee dated 2-8-1962 duly discharged, in spite of the fact that nothing was due and payable to the defendant No. 2 by the plaintiff for the period of guarantee. Due to this wrongful conduct of the defendant No. 2 it was not possible for the Bank to refund Rs. 90,000/- set apart by order dated 1-7-1963. Without receiving back the bond duly discharged, the refund could not be made to the plaintiff. This bond was returned by the defendant No. 2 after hearing of this suit started. In the premises the amount of Rs. 90,000/- became refundable to the plaintiff by the Bank only after the bond was discharged and returned. Hence the Bank is not liable to pay any interest on this sum. Regarding the balance Rs. 93,500/- the Bank has already appropriated Rs. 19,787.32 out of this sum leaving a balance of Rs. 73,622/-, but the appropriation of Rs. 56,740/- was done contrary to the terms of the counter guarantee dated 27-11-1962. The Bank was not entitled to appropriate this sum in the manner it was done. The Bank is, however, entitled to be reimbursed by the plaintiff on making a demand on the basis of the counter guarantee.

The issues are, therefore decided as follows :—

Issue No 1 (a) — Yes.

Issue No. 1 (b) — Yes.

Issue No. 2 — No.

Issue No. 3 — Yes, after making a demand and on default of the plaintiff to pay.

Issue No. 4 — Yes, but in respect of Rs. 19,787.32 only being the balance amount due in the cash credit account.

Issue No. 5 — Yes, to the extent of Rs. 19,787.32 or has been done and in respect of Rs. 56,740/- only after making a demand on the plaintiff in terms of the counter guarantee and on plaintiff's failure to make the payment.

Issue No. 6 — No.

24. In the premises aforesaid, there will be a decree for Rs. 1,63,622/-, in favour of the plaintiff against the defendant Bank, but this decree will not be drawn up, completed or executable before expiry of four months from date. If in the mean time, the Bank makes a demand in writing on the plaintiff within a month from date, for payment of Rs. 56,740/- in terms of the counter guarantee dated 27-11-1962, and the plaintiff pays the said sum within one month from the date of receipt of the said demand notice, then in that case the defendant Bank will refund the entire sum of Rs. 1,63,622/- to the plaintiff within two months from the receipt of payment of Rs. 56,740/-. In case the plaintiff defaults in making payments as aforesaid within the period mentioned above, then the defendant Bank will be entitled to set off, adjust or retain Rs. 56,740/- out of the said sum of Rs. 1,63,622/- and refund to the plaintiff the balance amount of Rs. 1,06,882/- before expiry of four months from date and the plaintiff will accept the same in full and final satisfaction of the decretal dues. If, however, the Bank fails to make the demand as aforesaid, in that case also the Bank will refund the entire sum of Rs. 1,63,622/- to the plaintiff within four months from date. If the plaintiff has to execute the decree against the Bank then the Bank will be liable to pay interim interest on the sum recoverable by execution at the rate of 3% per annum and interest on judgment at the rate of 6% per annum. In any event, the defendant Bank will pay the costs of the suit to the plaintiff. The suit against the defendant No. 2 is dismissed without any order as to costs.

Order accordingly

SALIL K. ROY CHOWDHURY, J.

In re: M. L. Bose & Co. Pvt. Ltd., Petitioner.

Company Petn. No. 415 of 1980. D/-
24-2-1981.

Companies Act (1 of 1956), Ss. 433 (e), 434 — Winding up petition — Inability to pay debts — Company disputing its liability on ground of fraud — Not filing separate suit as earlier directed by Court — Principle of estoppel and res judicata attracted — Winding up petition maintainable. (Evidence Act (1872), S. 115; Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11).

In a winding up petition filed by the petitioning Creditors against the Company due to the failure of the Company to pay interest accrued to them on their fixed deposits with the Company, a consent order was passed in which it was directed that unless the Company files a suit within a certain period to establish its contention, about the fixed deposit as being fraudulent and not binding on the Company, the question of disputing the fixed deposits on any ground whatsoever would be lost, and the Company will be deemed to have accepted the said fixed deposit receipts as valid and the Company in fact failed to file any such suit within the period allowed, pursuant to the leave given by the consent order.

Held that, the Company was deemed to have been estopped by procedure to raise any question regarding the validity of the said fixed deposits and the Company was bound by res judicata as the consent order was by Court. Further the Company actually paid the interest for some period, which fact showed that the Company had admitted the fixed deposits as being valid. Further held that, a winding up petition was maintainable and Company should be wound up. (Paras 2, 3, 7, 8)

Bhaskar Gupta with P. Chowdhury, for Petitioning Creditor; P. K. Roy with P. K. Mallick and Jayanta Banerji, for the Company.

ORDER :— This is a winding up petition which was presented on 25th September, 1981. On the returnable date notice was directed to be served on the company along with copy of the petition. The company appeared and took direction for filing affidavit to show cause why the winding up petition should not be admitted. The petitioning creditor also filed a reply to the said affidavit. The petitioning creditor is a Deity Sri Sri Biswamata Debi which presented this petition through her Sebait and next friend Salil Kr. Mitra, trustee of the said deity.

2. The claim arises out of a fixed deposit of Rs. 45,000/- made on or about 1st Oct. 1953 evidenced by 45 fixed deposit receipts of Rs. 1,000/- each issued by the company bearing serial numbers 21 to 50. The terms and conditions of the fixed deposit are printed at the back of the said fixed deposit receipts. The fixed deposit was for a period of 21 years from 1st Oct. 1953 and would carry interest at the rate of 5% per annum under the terms and conditions of the said fixed deposit. It appears that the company failed to pay the interest at the agreed rate for certain period which resulted in a notice under S. 434 of the Companies Act issued on behalf of the petitioner dated 17th July, 1969 and finally a winding up petition being C. P. No. 258 of 1969 was filed in this court on the 16th Jan. 1970. The said company petition was disposed of after the company filed an affidavit and the terms of settlement were put in by which the company petition was admitted and the respondent company was directed to pay the arrears of interest accrued on the said fixed deposit before the filing of the terms and other conditions as laid down in the said order passed by R. M. Datta, J. One of the terms of the said order is as follows:

"Without prejudice to the rights and contentions of the parties the respondent shall be at liberty to file a suit if deemed necessary to establish its contentions within 15 days from the date of the order to be made herein.

In the event of the filing of the said suit within the period as aforesaid, the respondent undertakes to Court to pay unconditionally to the petitioner the annual interest on the said fixed deposit within a month from the accrual thereof and to continue such payment until the suit is finally disposed of.

In the event of the non-filing of the suit within the period as aforesaid, the respondent will be deemed to have admitted the contention of the petitioner in this application and the respondent will be entitled to raise the same dispute specifically."

The said order makes it quite clear that unless the said suit is filed within the time stipulated by the said order dated 16th Jan, 1970 the question of disputing the said fixed deposits on any ground whatsoever will be lost and the company will be deemed to have accepted the said fixed deposit receipts as valid and binding on the company.

It is now an admitted fact that the company has not filed any such suit pursuant to the order of the court and, therefore, it necessarily follows as consequence that the company has admitted the fixed deposits as valid and binding and that order was made as far back as on 16th Jan, 1970.

3. The company must be deemed to have been estopped by procedure to raise any question regarding the validity of the said fixed deposits and the company is bound by the principle of res judicata as the same is by an order of the court. It also appears that the company having failed to pay the interest as per the said order made in C. P. No. 258 of 1969 a contempt petition was filed and a rule was issued by R. M. Datta, J.

4. Subsequently the matter was disposed of on the terms as mentioned in paragraph 16 of the petition by an order dated 3rd Dec, 1976 by R. M. Datta, J. In terms of the said order, the company has paid the arrears of interest after deducting the income-tax at source and the company went on paying interest for the year 1384 B. S. by a letter dated 3rd July, 1978. Another contempt application was filed and Rule Nisi was issued on the 18th Dec, 1979 but the said application was dismissed by R. M. Datta, J. on the ground that the same was barred by limitation under the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971.

5. In due course the fixed deposit receipt matured on the 30th Sept, 78 and the claim of the petitioning creditor together with accrued interest amounted to Rs. 45,000/- for principal of the fixed deposit which matured on the 30th Sept, 1978 together with accrued interest upto 30th April, 1978 totalling to Rs. 48,281.25 p. (sic). The petitioning creditor caused a statutory notice under S. 434 to be issued through its advocate's letter dated 14th May, 1980. The company, through its advocate's letter dated 23rd May, 1980, tried to raise the same question for which they were given leave to file a suit by the said order of R. M. Datta, J. passed in the previous Company Petition No. 258 of 1969 on the 16th Jan, 1970 alleging that the said fixed deposit receipt has been given mala fide and fraudulently by the uncle and cousin of the present managing director of the company and no amount in fact reached the till of the company against the fixed deposit receipt. Thereafter the present petition was filed and the same question which was raised in the previous application was raised again. The whole question is whether the company can in law or in fact raise the question for which liberty was given to the company by the said order of R. M. Datta, J. referred to above the relevant portion of which has been quoted previously.

6. Mr. Bhaskar Gupta appearing with Mr. P. Chowdhury for the petitioning creditor submitted that after the fixed deposit matured on the terms of the said fixed deposit it became payable to the fixed deposit holder which appears in the face of the said fixed deposit. The photostat copy is annexed to the winding up petition and there is no defence to the claim of the petitioning creditor and the company is not and cannot raise any dispute in respect of the same. Mr. Gupta also submitted that reference to another matter in which similar defence was taken and the petitioning creditor was relegated to a suit and in the suit the city civil court has set aside the fixed deposit receipt cannot be of any assistance to the company or constitute any defence either in fact or in law. The said case which is relied on by the company arising out of a winding up petition in which the petitioning creditor was relegated to a suit, cannot be binding on the petitioning creditor or affect in any way the admitted position as to the facts of this case and the law applicable hereto. Here the company was given liberty to file a suit within 15 days of the order as hereinbefore stated and in default of filing, the company must be deemed to be admitting the claim of the petitioning creditor under the said fixed deposit and they have lost the said opportunity and any claim to be made by the company must be deemed to be barred and the question of the company raising any defence is far from being bona fide or in good faith and it must be held that the company was trying to raise the said defence mala fide and with a view to weave a cobweb and throw cloud on the undisputed claim of the petitioning creditor which the company must be deemed to have admitted pursuant to the previous order of this Court.

7. Mr. P. K. Roy appearing with Mr. P. K. Mallick and Mr. Jayanta Banerji submitted that the said fixed deposits are fraudulent and not binding on the company and the same group of persons and their uncles and cousins have brought it into existence and no money came into the till of the company. These questions were the questions which were raised in the previous winding up petition being C. P. No. 258 of 1969 which resulted in the order dated 16th Jan. 1970. Reliance was placed on the other winding up petition which was directed to be taken off the file by me by an order dated 13th May 1975 in C. P. No. 242 of 1974 (Balananda Brahmachari Seva Sadan v. M. L. Bose & Co.) where the petitioning creditor was relegated to a suit and the company petition was directed to be taken off the file. It is being submitted that a suit was filed in the City Civil Court and the same has been dismissed. In my view, that has got nothing to do with the facts of this case where the petitioning creditor's claim is deemed to be admitted pursuant to the consent order dated 16th Jan. 1970 by the company. The relevant portion of the order I have already quoted and the company is estopped by procedure and admission that there is no defence to the claim of the petitioning creditor in respect of the said fixed deposit which must be deemed to be admitted by the company. In fact, the company has not filed any suit pursuant to the leave given by the said order dated 16th Jan. 1970 and, as such, the company by its conduct and deed is estopped from raising any dispute about the said fixed deposit receipt which must be deemed to have been admitted by the company pursuant to the consent order.

8. Moreover, it appears on the face of it, that no suit by the company is maintainable as the same is barred by limitation at this stage. The question is the same and the cause of action, if any, arose long time back as recorded in the said order dated 16th Jan. 1970 and it is also an admitted position that the company has not filed any suit pursuant to the leave given to the company and, consequently, the petitioning creditor's claim under the said fixed deposit must be deemed to have been admitted. The company's contention, if any, in respect of the challenge thrown to the said fixed deposit now is also barred by the principle of res judicata by the said order dated 16th Jan. 1970. Further it appears that the company has paid interest on the said amount up to the year 1384 B. S., and, therefore, the company has admitted the fixed deposit being valid and, as such, payment of interest makes it clear that the question of the validity of the said fixed deposit is abandoned and cannot be raised by the company once again in this proceeding. Nobody can take advantage of his own default and further one cannot raise a question indirectly which cannot be raised directly.

9. Mr. P. K. Roy, in his usual forensic ability, tried to contend that the company is not raising the question by way of sword but as a shield. But having regard to the said clear order by consent dated 16th Jan. 1970 the said defence is no longer open to the company as the company, under the Evidence Act, is deemed to have admitted the fixed deposit amount in terms of the said fixed deposit receipt which has matured on the 30th Sept. 1978. There is no question of sword or shield but it is a pure question of admitted facts and evidence which is binding on the company and the company is estopped from raising that question once again by creating confusion and suspicion in the mind of the Court. It is a clear case for which the company is liable and it has got no relevancy in the facts of the other case which stands on a different footing and that cannot throw any light on the present winding up petition in any way whatsoever.

10. After careful consideration of the facts of this case I cannot but hold that the winding up petition is not an abuse of the process of the Court. On the other hand, the company is trying to play fast and loose and blow hot and cold with this Court after committing several contempts of the previous order and being bound by the said order dated 16th Jan. 1970 passed in C. P. No. 258 of 1969 is estopped from raising any question challenging the validity of the said fixed deposit receipt which is the subject matter of the present winding up petition. It must be held that the company is unable to pay its debt and the company has not raised any bona fide defence either in law or in fact and the dispute sought to be raised has no substance or merit whatsoever and the company seems to be highly dishonest and trying to violate the Court's order flagrantly and trying to raise a question which is not only barred by limitation but also barred by the principle of res judicata and also estoppel and waiver. It is a clear case where the company is unable to pay its debt and is a public danger and should be wound up as early as possible. In that view of the matter, I am making the following order:—

11. The winding up petition is admitted. The same to be advertised once in the Statesman, once in the Basumati and once in the Calcutta Gazette and the matter to appear in the list on 27th April 1981.

Stay asked for is refused.

Petition admitted.

Bihar State Electricity Board and others, Appellants v. Patna Electric Supply Co. Ltd. and another, Respondents.

A. F. O. O. No. 16 of 1980, D/- 20-7-1981.

HY/LY/D746/81/MBR

Electricity Act (9 of 1910), Ss. 6, 7-A (as they stood before and after amendment by Bihar Ordinance No. 50 of 1974) — Right of licensee to get price of undertaking — When accrues — Option to purchase undertaking exercised under S. 6 before its amendment — Provisions of amended S. 7-A will not apply — Licensee would be entitled to market value of undertaking under unamended S. 7-A. (Constitution of India, Arts. 19 (1) (f), 31 (2); Electricity (Bihar Amendment) Act (7 of 1976), Ss. 2 (ii), 3).

A notice was issued, in the present case, by the Bihar State Electricity Board under Section 6 of the Electricity Act, 1910 exercising its option to purchase the undertaking of the licensee company. Before the licensee had delivered the undertaking, the Bihar Ordinance No. 50 of 1974 was promulgated by which Ss. 6 and 7-A of the Act were substituted. S. 7-A as substituted provided for the compensation of book value of the undertaking instead of market value for the purchase of the undertaking. After the promulgation of the Ordinance, possession of the undertaking was taken by the Board. Thereafter the provisions of Ss. 6 and 7-A as substituted were validated and made applicable with retrospective effect by virtue of Ss. 2 (ii) and 3 of the Electricity (Bihar Amendment) Act (7 of 1976). The question for consideration was as to when the right to get price of the undertaking accrued to the licensee company.

Held that, (i) as the option to purchase the undertaking was exercised under the unamended S. 6, the provisions of the substituted S. 7-A providing for payment of book value would not apply; (ii) Ss. 2 (ii) and 3 of the Bihar Act 7 of 1976 were ultra vires Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution and; (iii) the doctrine of eclipse was not applicable to the present case. Therefore, the right of the licensee company to receive the market value of the undertaking under S. 7-A before it was substituted remained unaffected. However, so far as the prospective application of the substituted provisions was concerned, they were valid and effective.

At the time the option was exercised by the Board under S. 7-A, the licensee company was entitled to the market value of the undertaking. There was, therefore, an implied contract between the licensee and the Board that it would pay to the licensee the market price in the event it purchased the undertaking. The said Ordinance and the Bihar Act 15 of 1975 having substituted Section 6, the reference of that section in the substituted S. 7-A must obviously be to the substituted section. The option having been exercised under the unamended S. 6, the provision of the substituted S. 7-A was inapplicable. That was the reason why Bihar Act, 7 of 1976 had to be enacted. AIR 1963 SC 464, Rel. on. (Paras 15, 18)

The right to receive the market value of the undertaking is a debt or a chose in action and is property within the meaning of Article 19 (1) (f) and Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution. Such property can be acquired by the State but it must conform to the provisions of Art. 31 (2). In the present case, the licensee company, acquired the right to receive the market value of the undertaking under S. 7-A before it was amended. By Ss. 2 (ii) and 3 of the Bihar Act, 7 of 1976, the said right was taken away with retrospective effect and the licensee company was only entitled to receive the book value of the undertaking. Therefore, a portion of the property of the licensee was sought to be acquired by the Bihar Act 7 of 1976 by providing for payment of book value which was less than the market value. The provision for the payment of book value cannot be regarded as the provision for payment of compensation for the purported acquisition of the property of the licensee company. The purported acquisition of part of the debt or chose in action by Ss. 2 (ii) and 3 with retrospective effect was without any public purpose, and also without providing for payment of compensation. In the circumstances, Ss. 2 (ii) and 3 are ultra vires Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution. AIR 1978 SC 803, Disting. and Rel. on.

With regard to the applicability of the doctrine of eclipse, we may proceed on the assumption that the doctrine is also applicable to post-Constitutional law. The constitutional limitations under Art. 31 (2) were operative when the Bihar Act 7 of 1976 was enacted. It is quite immaterial that Art. 31 was deleted by the Constitution (44th Amendment) Act, 1978. The deletion of Art. 31 not being retrospective, any law passed before such deletion must stand the test of the provision of Art. 31 (2). The doctrine of eclipse, therefore, has no manner of application in the instant case on the ground of deletion of Art. 31 from the Constitution, such deletion being prospective and not retrospective. S. K. Acharya, Advocate-General, Bhaskar Gupta, for Appellants; R. M. Bajoria, S. K. Bagaria, A. N. Mukherjee, Soumitra Pal, B. S. Bagchi, S. C. Niyogi, Soumen Bose, Shyamal Sen, for Respondents.

M. M. DUTT, J.:— The appellant, the Bihar State Electricity Board has, in this appeal, challenged the propriety of the judgment of Sabyasachi Mukharji, J. whereby the learned Judge made the Rule Nisi issued on the application under Art. 226 of the Constitution of the respondents Nos. 1 and 2, the Patna Electric Supply Company and one of its directors, absolute.

2. On Feb. 6, 1924, a licence was granted by the Government of Bihar to Octavius Steel & Co. Ltd. for the supply of electrical energy. The said licence was transferred in favour of the respondent No. 1, the Patna Electric Supply Co. Ltd. On Jan. 5, 1973, the Bihar State Electricity Board served a notice upon the company under sub-sec. (1) of S. 6 of the Electricity Act, 1910 (hereinafter referred to as the Act), requiring the company to sell the undertaking to the Bihar State Electricity Board on the expiry of the period of 50 years from the commencement of the licence, that is, at 12 O'clock in the night between the 5th and 6th Feb., 1974 and further to deliver possession of the undertaking on the expiration of the above period of 50 years pending the determination and payment of the purchase price.

3. At this stage, it is necessary to refer to some of the provisions of the Act and the amendments made thereto in order to appreciate the respective cases of the parties.

4. Section 6 (1) of the Act provides as follows :

"6 (1). Where a licence has been granted to any person, not being a local authority, the State Electricity Board shall,—

(a) in the case of a licence granted before the commencement of the Indian Electricity (Amendment) Act, 1959, on the expiration of each such period as is specified in the licence; and

(b) in the case of a licence granted on or after the commencement of the said Act, on the expiration of such period not exceeding twenty years and of every such subsequent period, not exceeding ten years, as shall be specified in this behalf in the licence; have the option of purchasing the undertaking and such option shall be exercised by the State Electricity Board serving upon the licensee a notice in writing of not less than one year requiring the licensee to sell the undertaking to it at the expiry of the relevant period referred to in this sub-section."

Sub-sections (2), (3), (4) and (5) of Sec. 6 inter alia provide that the State Electricity Board will be entitled to exercise the option of purchasing the undertaking if the State Government or any local authority constituted for an area within which the whole of the area of supply is included refused or elected not to purchase the undertaking. Sub-sections (6) and (7) provide as follows:

"(6). Where a notice exercising the option of purchasing the undertaking has been served upon the licensee under this section, the licensee shall deliver the undertaking to the State Electricity Board, the State Government or the local authority, as the case may be, on the expiration of the relevant period referred to in sub-section (1) pending the determination and payment of the purchase price.

(7). Where an undertaking is purchased under this section, the purchaser shall pay to the licensee the purchase price determined in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (4) of S. 7-A."

Section 7 of the Act inter alia provides for the vesting of the undertaking in the purchaser upon the completion of the sale or on the date on which the undertaking is delivered to the intending purchaser whichever is earlier. Sub-section (1) of S. 7-A is as follows:

"7-A. Where an undertaking of a licensee, not being a local authority, is sold under sub-section (1) of S. 5, the purchase price of the undertaking shall be the market value of the undertaking at the time of purchase or where the undertaking has been delivered before the purchase under sub-section (3) of that section, at the time of the delivery of the undertaking and if there is any difference or dispute regarding such purchase price, the same shall be determined by arbitration."

Sub-section (2) of S. 7-A provides for the computation of the market value of an undertaking. Under sub-section (4), where an undertaking of a licensee is purchased under S. 6, the purchase price shall be the value thereof as determined in accordance with the provisions of sub-sections (1) and (2).

5. Under the notice dated Jan. 5, 1973 issued by the Bihar State Electricity Board exercising its option to purchase the undertaking of the company, the company was required to deliver possession of the undertaking to the Bihar State Electricity Board at 12 O'clock in the night between the 5th and 6th Feb., 1974 pending determination and payment of the purchase price. Before the company had delivered the undertaking as required under the said notice, on Feb. 2, 1974, the Governor of Bihar promulgated an Ordinance being Bihar Ordinance No. 50 of 1974 amending certain provisions of the Act in its application to the State of Bihar. By Section 3 of the Ordinance, S. 6 of the Act was substituted. The material change that was effected by the substituted Section 6 of the Act was that contained in sub-sec.(1) thereof, namely, instead of the service of one year's notice, service of a notice in writing of not less than six months upon the licensee requiring him to sell the undertaking to it on the expiry of the relevant period referred to in sub-section (1), was provided for.

6. By S. 5 of the Ordinance, S. 7-A of the Act was substituted. Sub-section (1) of Section 7-A as substituted is as follows:

"7-A (1). Where an undertaking of a licensee is sold under sub-section (1) of Section 5 or purchased under S. 6, the amount payable for the undertaking shall be the book value of the undertaking at the time of purchase or where the undertaking has been delivered before the purchase under sub-section (3) of S. 5, at the time of delivery of the undertaking."

Sub-section (2) of the substituted S. 7-A provides for the computation of the book value of the undertaking. Sub-section (3) of the substituted S. 7-A provides for the payment of a solatium of 10 per cent of the book value as determined under sub-sections (1) and (2) for the purchase of the undertaking.

7. Thus it appears that by virtue of the amendment made by the Bihar Ordinance 50 of 1974 in the provisions of Ss. 6 and 7-A of the Act, the licensee will not be entitled to receive the market value of the undertaking in the event of the undertaking being purchased by the State Government, the local authority or the Bihar State Electricity Board, as the case may be, but the licensee will only be entitled to get the book value of the undertaking to be computed in the manner provided in sub-section (2) of the substituted S. 7-A. After the promulgation of the Bihar Ordinance 50 of 1974 on Feb. 2, 1974, possession of the undertaking was taken by the Bihar State Electricity Board from the company on Feb. 5/6, 1974 and, in view of the provision of S. 7 of the Act, the undertaking vested in the Bihar State Electricity Board.

8. As the Bihar Assembly was not in session two further Ordinances being Bihar Ordinance No. 83 of 1974 and Bihar Ordinance No. 123 of 1974 were promulgated on similar terms as the Bihar Ordinance No. 50 of 1974. Thereafter, on Jan. 15, 1975, Electricity (Bihar Amendment) Act, 1974 (Bihar Act 15 of 1975) was passed replacing Bihar Ordinance No. 123 of 1974.

9. The company and its director, the respondents Nos. 1 and 2 in this appeal, filed a writ petition before this Court inter alia praying for a writ in the nature of mandamus commanding the appellants to pay the purchase price of the undertaking in accordance with the provision of S. 7-A of the Act as it stood before it was amended by the Ordinances and/or by the said Amendment Act of 1974. Further, the said respondents prayed for a declaration that the Ordinances and the said Amendment Act of 1974 did not apply to the respondents, and that the Ordinances and the said Amendment Act were unconstitutional, void and of no effect.

10. During the pendency of the writ petition, the Bihar Legislature passed another Act, namely, Indian Electricity (Bihar Amendment) Act, 1975 (Bihar Act 7 of 1976). By this Act, the provisions of Ss. 6 and 7-A as substituted by the said Ordinances and replaced by the Bihar Act 15 of 1975 have been validated and made applicable with retrospective effect. Sections 2 (ii) and 3 of Bihar Act 7 of 1976 are set out below:

"2. In Section 6 of the Indian Electricity Act, 1910 (Act IX of 1910) as substituted by the Indian Electricity (Bihar Amendment) Act, 1974 (Bihar Act XV of 1975) —

(ii) after sub-section (5), the following sub-section shall be added, namely:—

"(6). Where a notice exercising option of purchasing the undertaking has been served upon the licensee before the commencement of the Indian Electricity (Bihar Amendment) Act, 1974 (Bihar Act XV of 1975) and the undertaking has been purchased thereafter the amount payable to the licensee on account of the purchase of the undertaking shall be determined in accordance with the provisions of S. 7-A of the Indian Electricity Act, 1910 as substituted by the Indian Electricity (Bihar Amendment) Act, 1974 (Bihar Act XV of 1975) as if the last mentioned Act was then in force, and it will be deemed to have been always in force."

3. Validation — Notwithstanding anything contained in any judgment, decree or order of any Court, every delivery of an undertaking effected by a licensee to the Bihar State Electricity Board, the Government of Bihar or local authority as the case may be, after the 2nd day of Feb., 1974 and before the commencement of this Act, shall be deemed to have been exercised or effected, as the case may be, under S. 6 of the Indian Electricity Act, 1910 (Act XV of 1910) as amended by Bihar Act XV of 1975 and this Act, as if the said S. 6 so amended was in force at material times when the delivery was effected and accordingly every delivery of the undertaking so effected and all things done or actions taken in consequence of such delivery of the undertaking shall be, and shall be deemed always to have been valid and shall not be called in question in any Court or Tribunal or before any other authority merely on the ground that Sec. 6 of the Bihar Act XV of 1975 did not provide for payment of any interest on the amount payable for the period from the date of delivery of the undertaking to the date or dates of its payment."

11. The only question that came up for consideration before the learned Judge at the hearing of the Rule was, whether the respondents Nos. 1 and 2 were entitled to compensation on the basis of S. 6 read with S. 7-A of the Act or on the basis as provided by the Bihar Ordinance 123 of 1974 read with the provisions of the Bihar Act 15 of 1975. In that connection, the learned Judge had also to consider whether the provision of S. 7-A as substituted by the said Bihar Ordinances and the provisions of the Bihar Act 15 of 1975 were constitutionally valid or not.

12. The learned Judge, after considering the facts and circumstances of the case and the submissions made on behalf of either party held that the Bihar Ordinance 50 of 1974 in so far as it altered the basis of compensation to be paid under S. 7-A of the Act was void and unenforceable. The appellant was directed to pay to the respondent No. 1 the purchase price of the said undertaking in accordance with the provision of S. 7-A of the Act as it stood at the relevant time, ignoring the provision of the Bihar Ordinance 50 of 1974 and the subsequent Ordinances as well as the provisions of the Bihar Act 15 of 1975. Hence this appeal.

13. Mr. S. K. Acharya, the learned Advocate-General assisted by Mr. Bhaskar Gupta has appeared before us on behalf of the appellant, the Bihar State Electricity Board. It is submitted on behalf of the appellant that the transaction between the appellant and the respondent company was that of sale and purchase. The right of the licensee to get the purchase money did not accrue before the purchase had taken place. The purchase of the undertaking having been effected after the amendment of the Act by the Bihar Ordinance 50 of 1974, the licensee was entitled only to the purchase price to be determined in accordance with the provision of S. 7-A as substituted by S. 5 of the said Ordinance or the subsequent Ordinances including the Bihar Ordinance No. 123 of 1974 which was replaced by the Indian Electricity (Bihar Amendment) Act, 1974 (Bihar Act 15 of 1975). Our attention has been drawn to sub-sec. (1) of S. 7-A of the Act which inter alia provides that the purchase price of the undertaking shall be the market value of the undertaking at the time of purchase or where the undertaking has been delivered before the purchase at the time of the delivery of the undertaking. It is contended that as both the delivery and purchase of the undertaking had taken place after the Bihar Ordinance 50 of 1974 was promulgated, the respondent company will be entitled to the purchase price to be computed in the manner laid down in Section 7-A as substituted by the said Ordinance. Further, it is submitted on behalf of the appellant that the right of the respondent company to get the price could not arise anterior to the appellant's right to get the property, nor did, the right to get the purchase price to be computed in certain manner accrue during the notice period. It is, accordingly, contended that the provision of S. 7-A as substituted by the Bihar Ordinance 50 of 1974 and ultimately enacted in the said Bihar Act 15 of 1975 would apply.

14. On the other hand, it is contended by Mr. Bajoria, learned Counsel appearing on behalf of the respondents that the moment the option is exercised, the contract comes into being under which the market value as on the date the undertaking is taken possession of is to be paid. It is submitted by him that the Bihar Ordinance 50 of 1974 which was promulgated on Feb. 2, 1974 did not apply to the respondent company, for the said Ordinance was applicable only to cases where option was exercised under S. 6 as substituted by the said Ordinance.

15. The question that arises for our consideration is when the right to get the price accrues. The contract of sale and purchase is contained in the licence itself. Under the terms of the licence, an option has been given to the authority concerned to purchase the undertaking of a licensee on the expiration of the term of the licence. In Fazilka Electric Supply Co. Ltd. v. Commr. of Income-tax, AIR 1963 SC 464, it has been observed by the Supreme Court (at p. 468):

"There was an undertaking on the part of the applicant for the license to sell the undertaking to the local authority or Government upon certain terms set out in the licence, and the time at which the option was to be exercised and the price which was to be paid for the property were specified. There was consideration for the contract as the license was granted on those terms. Therefore, all the elements necessary for a contract were present, and the sale in pursuance thereof was not a compulsory purchase or acquisition
... .."

It follows from the said observation of the Supreme Court that under the terms of the contract as embodied in the licence the price which is to be paid in the event of the undertaking being purchased by the local authority or Government is fixed. At the time the option was exercised by the appellant under S. 7-A of the Act, the respondent company was entitled to the market value of the undertaking to be determined in accordance with the provisions of sub-sec. (2) of S. 7-A. There was, therefore, an implied contract between the respondent company and the appellant that the appellant would pay to the respondent company the market price of the undertaking in the event it purchased the undertaking. The option of purchase was exercised by the appellant before the amendment of S. 6 and S. 7-A of the Act by the Bihar Ordinance 50 of 1974. The appellant is, therefore, liable to pay to the respondent company the market value of the undertaking in terms of the unamended provision of S. 7-A. On behalf of the appellant, however, a later decision of the Supreme Court in Gujarat Electricity Board v. Shantilal R. Desai, AIR 1969 SC 239 was relied upon. In that case, one of the questions that came up for consideration before the Supreme Court was whether on election to purchase the undertaking followed up by a notice to the licensee in pursuance of that election within the period mentioned in S. 7 (4) of the Act before it was amended in 1951, the authority must again exercise its option to purchase on the expiration of the period of licence. In that connection, Hegde, J. observed as follows (at p. 243):

"We are not able to find any good reason for reading into S. 7 a requirement that after a notice under S. 7 (4) is issued the authority must again exercise its option to purchase on the expiration of the period of licence. It is no doubt true that the right to purchase the undertaking accrues only at the expiration of the period of licence but for exercising that right, the authority must make its election within the period prescribed in S. 7 (4) and issue a notice as required by that sub-section"

16. Much reliance has been placed on behalf of the appellant on the observation of the Supreme Court that the right to purchase the undertaking accrues only at the expiration of the period of licence. It is contended that as the right accrues after the expiration of the period of licence which is also the expiration of the period of notice under S. 6 of the Act in the instant case, the licensee has no right to claim the market value of the undertaking on the ground that it is impliedly fixed under the terms of the contract embodied in the licence that is to say, on the basis of the provision of S. 7-A before it was substituted by the Bihar Ordinance 50 of 1974. It has already been noticed in what context the said observation has been made by the Supreme Court. Be that as it may, prior to the said observation, there are other observations by the Supreme Court which do not support the contention of the appellant. It is observed that the exercise of option to purchase as well as electing to purchase is one integral process and not two independent steps, and that once the concerned authority exercises its option and communicates the same to the licensee, the same is binding on the authority as well as the licensee. In other words, when the option is exercised the licensee is bound to sell and the concerned authority is bound to purchase the undertaking. It is difficult to accept the contention that this binding effect on either party will be without the fixation of the purchase price or the consideration for the transaction. As soon as this stage is reached after the exercise of option to purchase by the service of a notice as mentioned in S. 6 of the Act, the concerned authority has to purchase the undertaking on payment of the market value of the undertaking to be determined in accordance with the provision of S. 7-A of the Act. The above observation of the Supreme Court on which much reliance has been placed by the learned Counsel of the appellant is of no help.

17. In this connection, we may notice the other contention of Mr. Bajoria, learned Counsel for the respondents. His contention is that S. 7-A as substituted by the Bihar Ordinance 50 of 1974 will apply only to cases where option to purchase has been exercised under S. 6 of the Act as substituted by the said Ordinances. It is submitted by him that S. 7-A (1) as substituted by the Bihar Ordinance 50 of 1974 and the two other subsequent Ordinances and the replacement of the same by the Indian Electricity (Bihar Amendment) Act, 1974 (Bihar Act 15 of 1975) inter alia refers to the purchase of the undertaking under S. 6. It is contended that the reference to S. 6 is undoubtedly to S. 6 as substituted by the Ordinance. In other words, it is submitted by him that S. 7-A as substituted by the said Bihar Ordinances and the Bihar Act 15 of 1974 providing for the payment of book value of the undertaking instead of the market value will apply only where a notice under the substituted S. 6, such notice being of not less than six months, is served upon the licensee. In the instant case, however, one year's notice was served upon the respondent company under S. 6 before it was substituted by the said Bihar Ordinances and the Bihar Act 15 of 1974 and, as such, the substituted S. 7-A will have no application.

18. It has been already stated that during the pendency of the Rule Nisi, Indian Electricity (Bihar Amendment) Act 1975 (Bihar Act 7 of 1976) was enacted. Sections 2 (ii) and 3 of Bihar Act 7 of 1976 purported to validate and apply the provisions of S. 6 and S. 7-A as amended by the Bihar Act 15 of 1975 with retrospective effect. The contention made on behalf of the respondents as to non-applicability of the provision of S. 7-A as substituted by the said Bihar Ordinances and the Bihar Act 15 of 1975 without taking into consideration the later Act, namely, the Bihar Act 7 of 1976, seems to have some force. The said Ordinances and the Bihar Act 15 of 1975 having substituted S. 6, the reference of that section in the substituted S. 7-A must obviously be to the substituted section. The option having been exercised under the unamended S. 6 of the Act, the provision of the substituted S. 7-A was inapplicable. That was the reason why Bihar Act 7 of 1976 had to be enacted. It is, however, conceded by Mr. Bajoria that by virtue of Bihar Act 7 of 1976, the provisions of the substituted Ss. 6 and 7-A would apply. The learned Counsel however, submits that Ss. 2 (ii) and 3 of the Bihar Act 7 of 1976 are ultra vires Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution. The contention as elaborated by him is that after the exercise of option by the Bihar State Electricity Board, the respondent company had acquired a right to get the market value of the undertaking in terms of S. 7-A of the Act. Sections 2 (ii) and 3 of the Bihar Act 7 of 1976 purport to acquire part of the said right of the respondent company, which is property, without making any provision for compensation for such acquisition and, accordingly, they are ultra vires the provision of Art. 31 (2) read with Art. 13 (2) of the Constitution.

19. On the other hand, it is contended on behalf of the appellant that even assuming that there has been acquisition of the right of the respondent company to get the market value of the undertaking, the Ordinances and the Bihar Act 15 of 1975 having provided for the payment of compensation for such acquisition, namely, the book value of the undertaking, they are quite legal and valid. In any event, it is submitted by the learned Counsel, after the deletion of Art. 31 of the Constitution by the Constitution 44th Amendment Act, the question of payment of compensation does not arise. The learned Counsel for the appellant invokes the doctrine of eclipse and submits that S. 7-A as substituted by the Bihar Ordinances and the Bihar Act 15 of 1975 remained in a moribund or dormant state or eclipsed and, consequently, unenforceable against citizens so long as Art. 31 (2) was there. But after the deletion of that Article, the substituted S. 7-A became valid and enforceable.

20. The right to receive the market value of the undertaking is a debt or a chose in action and is property within the meaning of Art. 19 (1) (f) and Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution. Reference in this connection may be made to the decision of the Supreme Court in Madan Mohan Pathak v. Union of India, AIR 1978 SC 803. In that case, it has been observed by Bhagwati, J. that "property within the meaning of Art. 19 (1) (f) and Cl. (2) of Art. 31 comprises every form of property, tangible or intangible, including debts and choses in action, such as unpaid accumulation of wages, pension, cash grant and constitutionally protected Privy Purse". In view of the said decision of the Supreme Court, it follows that such property can be acquired by the State but it must conform to the provision of Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution, namely, the law acquiring such property must be for a public purpose and must provide for compensation for the property so acquired; such law cannot be called in question in any Court on the ground that the compensation provided by that law is not adequate.

21. The contention of the appellant is that the provision for payment of book value in the Ordinances and the Bihar Act 15 of 1975 is a provision for payment of compensation for the acquisition of the property of the respondent company, that is to say, its right to get the market value. We are unable to accept the contention. The respondent company, as observed earlier, had acquired the right to receive the market value of the undertaking under S. 7-A of the Act before it was amended. By Ss. 2 (ii) and 3 of the Bihar Act 7 of 1976, the said right of the respondent company to get the market value was taken away with retrospective effect and the respondent company was only entitled to receive the book value of the undertaking. Therefore, a portion of the property of the respondent company is sought to be acquired by the Bihar Act 7 of 1976 by providing for payment of book value which is less than the market value. The provision for the payment of book value cannot, in our opinion, be regarded as the provision for payment of compensation for the purported acquisition of the property of the respondent company.

22. Counsel for the appellant has drawn our attention to another observation of Bhagwati, J. in Pathak's case (AIR 1978 SC 803) (supra). Bhagwati, J. observed: "Where money is given as compensation for taking of money, the theory of forced loan may apply, but it is difficult to see how it can be applicable where chose in action is taken and money representing its value, which in a large majority of cases would be less than the amount recoverable under it, is given as compensation". Relying on the said observation, it is contended on behalf of the appellant that in the instant case also a chose in action is taken and the amount of compensation, that is, the book value of the undertaking is given. It is submitted that the amount of compensation in the shape of book value may be less than the market price of the undertaking, but in view of the provision of Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution, the provisions of Ss. 2 (ii) and 3 validating and applying the substituted S. 7-A with retrospective effect cannot be called in question on the ground of inadequacy of compensation. We are afraid, the said observation of Bhagwati, J. relied on by the learned Counsel for the appellant is not applicable to the facts of the instant case. That observation was made in the context of acquisition by the State of debts and choses in action owing by poor people to rich money lenders and not acquisition of such debts or choses in action due and owing by the citizens to the State. It has been pointed out by Bhagwati, J. that in the former case, there is no question of augmenting the revenue of the State, but in the latter, if the State acquires such debts and choses in action due and owing by people to the State, it would be a case of augmenting the revenue of the State or reducing State expenditure and that would clearly not be a public purpose and the legislation would plainly be violative of the constitutional guarantee embodied in Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution. Pathak's case (supra) is an authority for the proposition that the State cannot acquire any debt or chose in action due to it from citizens, for that would be only for the purpose of augmenting the State revenue or reducing the State expenditure which will not be a public purpose and, as such, void under Art. 31 (2). The purported acquisition of part of the debt or chose in action by Ss. 2 (ii) and 3 of the Bihar Act 7 of 1976 with retrospective effect is, therefore, without any public purpose. Sections 2 (ii) and 3 also do not provide for payment of compensation. In the circumstances, it must be held that Ss. 2 (ii) and 3 of the Bihar Act 7 of 1976 are ultra vires Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution.

23. Now we may consider the question of applicability of the doctrine of eclipse to the instant case. It is contended on behalf of the appellant that it may be that the substituted S. 7-A which was made retrospective in operation by Ss. 2 (ii) and 3 of the Bihar Act 7 of 1976 remained ineffective and unenforceable against the respondent-company so long as Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution was there, but after the deletion of Art. 31, the bar of constitutional limitations is removed and the substituted S. 7-A read with Ss. 2 (ii) and 3 became valid and enforceable in spite of the fact that it sought to acquire a part of the property of the respondent-company, namely, its right to get the market value of the undertaking, without providing for payment of compensation. In support of his contention that the doctrine of eclipse is applicable not only to pre-Constitutional laws but also to post-Constitutional laws, the learned Counsel for the appellant has placed reliance on the following decisions of the Supreme Court: Bhikaji Narain Dhakras v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1955 SC 781; M. P. V. Sundaramier & Co. v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1958 SC 468; L. Jagannath v. Authorised Officer, L. R. Madurai, AIR 1972 SC 425 and The State of Gujarat v. Shri Ambica Mills Ltd., AIR 1974 SC 1300. On the other hand, Mr. Bajoria, learned Counsel for the respondents has relied on some other decisions of the Supreme Court in support of his contention that the doctrine of eclipse is not applicable to post-Constitutional laws. These decisions are: Saghir Ahmad v. State of U. P., AIR 1954 SC 728; Behram Khurshid Pasikaka v. State of Bombay, AIR 1955 SC 123; Basheshar Nath v. Commr. of Income-tax, Delhi and Rajasthan, AIR 1959 SC 149; Deep Chand v. State of U. P., AIR 1959 SC 648 and Mahendra Lal Jaini v. State of U. P., AIR 1963 SC 1019.

24. It appears from the above decisions of the Supreme Court that there is a divergence of opinion as to the applicability of the doctrine of eclipse to post-Constitutional laws. We do not, however, propose to enter into the conflict, but we may proceed on the assumption that the doctrine is also applicable to post-Constitutional laws. It is true that by S. 2 (ii) and S. 3 of the Bihar Act 7 of 1976 the substituted provisions of Ss. 6 and 7-A have been validated and made applicable with retrospective effect. But there is a serious difficulty in applying the doctrine of eclipse to the instant case with retrospective effect. The constitutional limitations under Art. 31 (2) were operative when the Bihar Act 7 of 1976 was enacted. It is quite immaterial that Art. 31 has been deleted from Part III of the Constitution by the Constitution (44th Amendment) Act, 1978 with effect from June 20, 1979. The deletion of Art. 31 not being retrospective, any law passed before such deletion must stand the test of the provision of Art. 31 (2). In this connection, we may refer to the decision of the Supreme Court in Waman Rao v. Union of India, AIR 1981 SC 271. In that case, Chandrachud, C. J. observed as follows (at p. 278):

"By S. 7 of the Constitution (Forty-fourth Amendment) Act, 1978 the reference to Article 31 was deleted from the concluding portion of Art. 31-A (1) with effect from June 20, 1979, as a consequence of the deletion by S. 2 of the 44th Amendment of Cl. (f) of Art. 19 (1) which gave to the citizens the right to acquire, hold and dispose of property. The deletion of the right to property from the array of fundamental rights will not deprive the petitioners of the arguments which were available to them prior to the coming into force of the 44th Amendment, since the impugned Acts were passed before June 20, 1979 on which date Art. 19 (1) (f) was deleted."

Reference may also be made to the decision of the Supreme Court in Ishwari Khetan

Sugar Mills (P.) Ltd. v. State of U. P., AIR 1980 SC 1955 where Desai, J. who delivered the majority judgment observed (at p. 1971):

"And now to the oft beaten track of legislation being void as being in contravention of Art. 31 (2) as it stood at the relevant time. The impugned legislation was put on the statute book on Aug. 27, 1971. Therefore, Article 31 (2) as it stood on the relevant date may be noticed. The Article as amended by Constitution (Twentyfifth Amendment) Act, 1971, will, therefore, not be attracted."

In Tara Prasad Singh v. Union of India, AIR 1980 SC 1682, the Supreme Court had to consider the constitutional validity of the Coal Mines (Nationalisation) Amendment Act, 1976. In that connection, Chandrachud C. J. speaking for the Court observed "We are not concerned with the amendment introduced by the 44th Amendment Act which deleted the reference to Art. 31, since that Amendment Act came into force prospectively with effect from June 20, 1979."

25. In the instant case, the Bihar Act 7 of 1976 was passed before June 20, 1979 on which date Art. 31 (2) was deleted from the Constitution and, accordingly, in view of the above decisions of the Supreme Court, the validity of the said Act can be assailed on the ground that it is violative of Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution. It has been already held by us that S. 2 (ii) and S. 3 of the Bihar Act 7 of 1976 having sought to apply the provisions of Ss. 6 and 7-A as substituted by the Bihar Act 15 of 1975 with retrospective effect depriving the respondent-company of its right to get the market value of the undertaking, which is property within the meaning of Articles 19 (1) (f) and 31 (2) of the Constitution, without any public purpose and without any provision for compensation are violative of Article 31 (2) of the Constitution and are void. The doctrine of eclipse has no manner of application in the instant case on the ground of deletion of Art. 31 from the Constitution, such deletion being prospective and not retrospective.

26. The position, therefore, is that the Bihar State Electricity Board having exercised its option to purchase the undertaking of the respondent-company under the unamended S. 6 of the Act, S. 7-A as substituted by the said Bihar Ordinances and ultimately by the Bihar Act 15 of 1975 will not apply. Sections 2 (ii) and 3 of the Bihar Act 7 of 1976 which made the substituted provisions of Ss. 6 and 7-A applicable to the exercise of option under the unamended provision of

S. 6 of the Act being ultra vires Art. 31 (2) of the Constitution and void, and the doctrine of eclipse not being applicable, the right of the respondent-company to receive the market value of the undertaking under S. 7-A of the Act before it was substituted remains unaffected.

27. It is, however, made clear that so far as the prospective application of the substituted provisions of the said Ordinances as replaced by the Bihar Act 15 of 1975 is concerned, they are valid and effective. In other words, after the said provisions were substituted by the Bihar Ordinance 50 of 1974 any notice given under the substituted S. 6 exercising option by the concerned authority for the purchase of an undertaking, the licensee would only be entitled to the book value of the undertaking to be determined in accordance with the provisions of the substituted S. 7-A. But, as held already where, as in the instant case, the option was exercised under S. 6 before it was amended by the said Bihar Ordinance 50 of 1974, the provisions of the substituted S. 7-A providing for the payment of book value would not apply. In such a case, the licensee would be entitled to market value of the undertaking under S. 7-A of the Act.

28. Before we part with this appeal, we may notice the contention of Mr. Somendra Chandra Bose, learned Counsel appearing on behalf of the added respondent, the Bank of India, which claims to be the creditor of the respondent-company. It is contended that in view of the provision of S. 37 (1) of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1948, the debt due to the added respondent is attached to the purchase money payable to the respondent-company who is liable to pay the debt of the added respondent out of such purchase money. We do not think that in this appeal we are called upon to consider the claim of the added respondent. All that we say is that we have not said anything in this judgment which may prejudice the right, if any, of the added respondent to realise the debt due to it from the purchase price payable to the respondent-company, in accordance with law.

29. In the circumstances and for the reasons aforesaid, this appeal is dismissed. In view, however, of the facts and circumstances of the case, there will be no order for costs.

A. K. SARKAR, J.:— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 83MANASNATH ROY, J.

Smt. Krishna Kamalini Debeya, Petitioner v. Junior Land Reforms Officer, Khandagosh and others, Respondents.

Civil Rule No. 4983 (W) of 1977, D/-30-3-1981.

West Bengal Land Reforms Act (10 of 1956), Ss. 14K (c) and 14-J — Right of maintenance of parents of Raiyat cannot be equated with right of separate ceiling. (Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act (78 of 1956), S. 20).

The right of the parents of the Raiyat to be maintained by him or his heir, on his death, has no relation to separate ceilings to be given to them and such obligations, as mentioned in Act 78 of 1956, cannot be equated with the right of having separate ceilings by the parents of the Raiyat. (Para 21)

Under S. 20 of Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act 78 of 1956, a Hindu has been saddled with the burden to maintain some persons or another at some stage of his or her life. Apart from the obligation of a husband to maintain his wife, he must maintain his children till the age of minority, the daughter till marriage, and thereafter, if she becomes a widow, apart from maintaining the old and infirm parents, if they are unable to maintain themselves, out of their own earnings or other properties. So, to maintain the old and infirm parents is a qualified obligation under Hindu Law and every Hindu male was under a legal obligation to maintain his aged parents and such liability was not dependent on the possession of property by the son. No burden has been placed by statute, on the property inherited by an individual and the liability under the said 1956 Act continues to be a personal one, but may be enforced against the estate in the hands of the heirs and such liability will be proportional to the estate inherited. (Para 18)

Section 14K (c) of Act 10 of 1956 has defined 'family' and has included therein persons whom a Raiyat, was obliged to maintain under the said Act 78 of 1956 or in law. But, such definition has not included, rather, has excluded the old and infirm parents, who, in terms of the said Act 78 of 1956 were and are required to be maintained by a Raiyat, while alive and such right could be enforced against the estate in the hands of the heirs, apart from the fact that such liability or obligation, would also be preferential to the estate inherited. Such being the position, the widowed mother of the deceased Raiyat as in this case, was required to be maintained by the widow of the Raiyat, from out of the properties, which she has inherited or would inherit, on the death of her husband, the erstwhile Raiyat. The right of maintenance, as in the provisions of the said Act 78 of 1956 cannot thus be equated with the right of separate ceiling or holding the same. If old and infirm parents, were meant to be maintained or entitled to get a separate ceiling area, then the legislature would not have left them in consideration of the ceiling area of a 'family,' more particularly when, the other heirs or members, who were and are required to be maintained, have been included. AIR 1981 SC 522, Foll. (Para 19)

The non obstante clause as in S. 14J, would mean to be operating to set aside as no longer valid, anything contained in Ss. 18 to 21 of the said Act 78 of 1956, as otherwise, the same would be inconsistent with the said Act. The non obstante clause in S. 14J should prevail, despite anything contrary in any other provision. (Para 21)

Ashoka Kumar Sen Gupta and S. P. Mitra, for Petitioner; K. M. Yusuf, for Respondents,

ORDER:— The present petitioners in the Rule, which was obtained on 28th July 1977, with the corresponding interim order for maintaining of status quo, are the heirs of the original petitioners and were substituted by an order dated 29th Jan. 1981, as the original petitioner died on 28th Nov. 1980, leaving them, as her heirs and legal representatives,

2. In the Rule, an order of vesting under the provisions of West Bengal Land Reforms Act 1955 (hereinafter referred to as the said Act), has been challenged,

3. It is the case of the petitioners that the family of the original petitioner Smt. Krishna Kamalini Debeya, since deceased, consisted of herself and her mother-in-law, Smt. Nanibala Debeya, besides five members of the family of her brother Shri Gopi Nath Goswami, one foster daughter, two whole-time servants and one whole-time maid-servant. The members of the said brother's family have been stated to include the brother, his wife, their two daughters and a son,

4. Admittedly, the husband of the erstwhile petitioner, Smt. Krishna Kamalini Debeya, died in or about 1942 B. S., leaving behind the mother, the widow and two unmarried daughters, who have since been given in marriage and have been substituted in the manner as mentioned hereinbefore, in place and stead of the original petitioner. It is the case of the petitioners that the original petitioner was holding and possessing 14.95 acres of lands, including agricultural and non-agricultural, apart from danga lands and lands comprised of homestead and orchard, as per the finally published Record of Rights under S. 44 (2) of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act 1954. Such holdings, according to petitioners, were within the ceiling limit under the said Act. It has also been stated that those lands were and are out of the D. V. C.

command at present and as such, the question of irrigation by canal water would not arise. It has been stated that a notice dated 30th Dec. 1974, from the Sub-divisional Land Reforms Officer, Sadar, Burdwan and Revenue Officer, under Chap. IIB of the said Act, purported to be issued in connection with case No. 17, Khandaghosh 1974, directing the petitioner to furnish a return in Form 7A, and such return was filed. Thereafter, time was prayed for by the erstwhile petitioner, through her letter dated 12th Jan. 1975, stating inter alia amongst other relevant facts and also intimating the authorities concerned, that she along with her mother-in-law never possessed landed properties in excess of the ceiling limits as prescribed under the law. The petitioners have stated that in response to such answer, no further notice was served in connection with the connected case No. 17 but a memo dated 25th June 1976, was received from the Settlement Officer. Khandoghose, being Respondent No. 3, directing to show cause by 5th of July 1978, as to why suitable measures should not be taken, as per the provisions of Sec. 14T (4) of the said Act and the lands in excess of the family ceiling, as may be determined after due enquiry, should not be declared vested in the State and taken possession of by or in the manner as prescribed. It is the case of the petitioners that in compliance with the said memo, a list of total lands in the possession of the erstwhile petitioner and the brother Shri Gopi Nath Goswami and so also disclosing the names of the members of the family, were submitted and thereafter, the original petitioner came to learn from the Junior Land Reforms Officer concerned being Respondent No. 1, that several plots of lands were vested in the State of West Bengal, out of her total lands. The petitioners have stated that for such vesting, no notice was ever duly and properly served and as such, an objection, through a petition dated 18th Oct. 1976, to the Charge Officer, Settlement Charge Office, Burdwan, being Respondent No. 2, was filed,

5. It has been claimed that thereafter, it was learned that again, another ex parte order of vesting was passed by the Settlement Officer concerned, without giving any opportunities to the petitioners, to exercise option in respect of the lands to be retained and without giving any opportunities of being heard. Such order has been claimed to have been made, ignoring the actual facts and without any enquiry as to the members of the family. As such, it has been stated that the erstwhile petitioner, filed another application, praying for exercise of option for the lands to be retained in her possession and she, on or about 28th Apr. 1977, received a memo of that date, directing her to depute a representative in the Circle Office at Khandoghosh on 29th Apr. 1977. These facts, the petitioners have stated, would prove that the concerned order was not issued by the Revenue Officer under Chap. IIB of the said Act. It has been stated that on 29th Apr. 1977, the representative, as directed, was sent but the officer concerned did not consider the documents as produced, but acted on his own motion. The petitioners have further stated that from a reference to a communication dated 19th Oct. 1976, from the Sub-divisional Officer Right Bank Irrigation Sub-division, Sheriha, Burdwan, it would appear that all the mouzas of Jaitinpur, Salon, Pandua and Taldanga were out of D. V. C. Command at that time and as such, the question of irrigation by canal water would not arise. This communication was addressed to Shri Gopi Nath Goswami. It has been stated that thereafter, the Junior Land Reforms Officer, Respondent No. 1, came to the village and threatened the erstwhile original petitioner, not to cultivate the lands, so purported to be vested, without giving any list of the vested lands and further threatened her that those lands would be distributed very soon. It has been claimed that such order of vesting of the lands in question, was bad in law and against all principles of natural justice, inasmuch as the order of vesting was passed ex parte and without hearing the objections as filed and the documents as produced. It has also been claimed that the Settlement Circle Officer concerned, acted illegally and arbitrarily, in not taking the erstwhile petitioner's mother-in-law, as a member of her family and further acted illegally and arbitrarily, in passing the order of vesting of the erstwhile petitioner's lands, inasmuch as the said order was made without any enquiry as to the members of the family. It has also been claimed that the said officer, further acted illegally and arbitrarily, in taking into account all the lands as irrigated, in contravention of the provisions as contained in the said Act.

6. It has further been stated that the erstwhile petitioner took every step to get the copy of the ex parte order of vesting, but she could not get the same, as the officials concerned refused to entertain any application for such copy. However, an unofficial copy has been annexed in Annexure-H and the petitioners have stated that such copy of the vested lands was procured by them with great strain. The erstwhile petitioner was admittedly, found to be the only and sole surviving member of the family and the findings by the Settlement Circle Officer concerned, have been claimed by the petitioners, to be arbitrary and illegal, apart from being contrary to law. It should be noted here that although the erstwhile petitioner, initially claimed the members of the family to be eight, but at the time of hearing, Mr. Sen Gupta, in his usual fairness contended that the family would not be composed of eight, but the same should have been treated as consisting of two viz., the erstwhile petitioner and the mother-in-law.

7. The affidavit-in-opposition, which is dated 3rd Oct 1977, has been filed on behalf of Respondent No. 3, by Shri Monish Chandra Chowdhury and it has been stated there, that the lands in question might be out of the D. V. C. command, but they are irrigated by deep tubewell and such fact was also claimed to be confirmed by one Shri Subhoj Chandra Mukherjee, son-in-law of Gopi Nath Goswami, who incidentally was the brother of the petitioner. It has been claimed that the Settlement Circle Officer, Khandoghosh, duly asked the original petitioner to appear at the hearing on 5th July 1976 and Sarbashree Subol Chandra Mukherjee and Gopi Nath Goswami, attended the hearing and submitted a statement of the total quantum of lands, plot by plot, noting as to which plots get irrigation facilities and which under the deep tubewell system. It has also been stated that those representatives also filed a statement of family members numbering two, and as such, claimed that no land as stated in the statement, stood vested. The deponent has stated further that according to the report of the Halka Officer, Sasangu, the erstwhile petitioner's family was consisting of one. It has also been stated that the Settlement Circle Officer concerned, conducted a local enquiry and on such enquiry, the statements of the erstwhile petitioner, about the members of her family, proved to be false and as such, the said officer, vested the lands which were in excess of the ceiling, providing for one member and allowed retention of lands to her in accordance with law. It has further been stated that on the basis of the erstwhile petitioner's petition dated 26th Mar. 1977, the officer as mentioned above, fixed the case for review on 29th Apr. 1977. It is the case of the answering Respondent that even after due and proper notice, none appeared on the date of the hearing of the review case and as such, the said review matter was also decided ex parte, allowing the erstwhile petitioner, to retain all ceiling lands to which she was entitled, out of the plots specifically mentioned for retention of lands in her petition dated 26th Mar. 1977. It has been claimed that Gopi Nath Goswami appeared on 4th May 1977 and not on 29th Apr. 1977 as claimed, and he was also allowed to choose the lands on behalf of the original petitioner and thereafter, the vested land statements, already sent to the J. L. R. O. Khandoghosh, was corrected as per the option. In view of the aforesaid facts, the Respondents have claimed that there is no illegality or any irregularity or any violation of principles of natural justice, for which any interference at this stage, should or need be made.

8. The affidavit-in-reply to the affidavit-in-opposition as mentioned hereinbefore, was dated 26th Feb. 1981 and the deponent of the same was Shri Subol Chandra Mukherjee and the said deponent practically denied the material allegations contained in the affidavit-in-opposition and he reiterated the statements as contained in the petition. Apart from denying the material allegations as contained in the affidavit-in-opposition, the deponent has further required the Respondents to prove their allegations as contained in the affidavit-in-opposition.

9. Mr. Sen Gupta, claimed and contended firstly, that in view of the communication in Annexure "G" to the petition, which shows and establishes that the question of irrigation by canal water, in respect of the lands in question did not arise, the claims of the answering respondents that the lands are getting water through deep tubewell, should not be allowed to be agitated or canvassed. He, on a reference to Ss. 14K and N of the said Act, contended that the erstwhile petitioner would have been entitled to 6.17 acres of lands. He of course, stated that he could not follow how and under what calculation, 7.05 acres of land was allowed to be retained. The calculations as mentioned above, were put forward by Mr. Sen Gupta, taking the lands as in irrigated areas. He then claimed, that even if the lands are considered to be in non-irrigated area, then the petitioners would be entitled to 8.64 acres. The petitioners were allowed to retain 7.05 acres and Mr. Sen Gupta claimed that such retention which was allowed, was not according to the choice as furnished. At this stage, Mr. Yusuf stated that since, even after due notice, the erstwhile petitioner had not taken any steps to represent her case at the review stage, so the choice of lands had to be made by the officer concerned ex parte. But, Mr. Yusuf, in his usual fairness, stated that if such opportunities are asked for by the petitioners and also granted by this Court, then the Respondents concerned would be prepared to re-hear the case of the petitioners now and allow them to retain lands up to 7.05 acres according to their choice.

10. It was secondly, contended by Mr. Sen Gupta that the officer concerned, was wrong in holding the family of the erstwhile petitioner to be one and not consisting of two and his elimination of the widow mother-in-law, for considering the members of the family, was improper. It was claimed and contended by Mr. Sen Gupta that since under S. 20 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 which is to (and is referred to hereinafter as the said 1956 Act) the following effect: Maintenance of children and aged parents:— (1) Subject to the provisions of this section a Hindu is bound, during his or her lifetime, to maintain his or her legitimate or illegitimate children and his or her aged or infirm parents.

(2) A legitimate or illegitimate child may claim maintenance from his or her father or mother so long as the child is a minor.

(3) The obligation of a person to maintain his or her aged or infirm parent or a daughter who is unmarried extends in so far as the parent or the unmarried daughter, as the case may be, is unable to maintain himself or herself out of his or her own earnings or other property,

Explanation :— In this section "parent" includes a childless step-mother;

the husband of the petitioner No. 1, had an obligation to maintain his aged or infirm parents, so, even if the word parents are not mentioned in S. 14K of the said Act, but the members of the family, for computing the ceiling area, they or any of them, if alive should also be considered as a member of the family and such obligation to maintain those aged and infirm parents, was cast on the erstwhile petitioner viz. the widow of their son and as such, the family in the instant case, should have been composed, not only of the widow but also of the widow mother-in-law and as such, the same should have been directed to be consisting of two. Mr. Sen Gupta further contended that if the family was allowed to be consisting of two, then the ceiling area as granted, would have been more. In this connection, S. 14K (c) which lays down that "family" in relation to a Raiyat shall be deemed to consist of (1) himself and his wife, minor son, unmarried daughter, if any, (2) his unmarried adult son, if any, who does not hold any land as a Raiyat, (3) his married adult son, if any, where neither such adult son nor the wife nor any minor son or unmarried daughter of such adult son holds any land as a Raiyat, (4) the widow of his predeceased son, if any, where neither such widow nor any minor son or unmarried daughter of such widow holds any lands as a Raiyat, (5) minor son or unmarried daughter, if any, of his predeceased son, where the widow of the said predeceased son is dead and any minor son or unmarried daughter of such predeceased son does not hold any land as Raiyat, but shall not include any other person, with the Explanation and proviso thereunder, will have to be considered. Admittedly, the relations as mentioned under Sec. 14K (c) have not included the parents and in this case widowed mother of the Raiyat. Thus, the question to be answered is, as to whether the widowed mother of the deceased Raiyat, should be considered as the member of the family, on the basis of the requirements of Sec. 20 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act. Under that section, every Hindu has been burdened with the maintenance of some person or another at some stage of his or her life and under the said section of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, it would mean when property passes without any distinction, liabilities which are concomitants to it, must also pass. Under that section, apart from the liabilities of a husband to maintain his wife, a person must maintain his children, till the age of minority, whether such children are born by grace or nature, he or she must maintain his or her daughter till marriage and when the married daughter becomes a widow, the liability revives. The said section also requires that he or she as mentioned therein must maintain the aged and the infirm parents, if such parents are unable to maintain themselves out of their own earnings or other property. The said Sec. 20 as mentioned, also casts a liability on the son and the daughter, to maintain their aged and infirm parents, who are unable to maintain themselves out of their own earnings or other properties. Under the old Hindu Law, every male Hindu was under a legal obligation to maintain his aged parents and such liability was not dependent on the possession of property by the son. The dependants have also been defined in Sec. 21 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956. While on this question, the provisions of Sec. 14J of the said Act, which lays down that provisions of Chap. IIB shall have effect notwithstanding (anything) to the contrary contained elsewhere in the said Act or in any other law for the time being in force, will have to be considered. Before that, it must also be remembered that those provisions in Chapter IIB have been found to be intra vires by the Supreme Court in the case of Sasanka Sekhar Maity v. Union of India (1980] 4 SCR 716; (AIR 1981 SC 522).

11. Section 14J, as mentioned hereinbefore, contains that the provisions of Chap. IIB, shall have effect notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained elsewhere in the said Act or in any other law for the time being in force. The words "notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force," have been determined in the case of Brij Raj Krishna v. S. K. Shaw, AIR 1951 SC 115, to prevent reliance on any other law to the contrary. It has also been observed in the case of Raj Bahadur Kanwar Rajnath v. Shri Pramod C. Bhatt (1955) 2 SCR 977 : (AIR 1956 SC 105) that the provisions are obviously intended to repel a possible contention that Sec. 12 in that case, does not by implication repeal statutes, conferring rights on lessees and cannot prevail as against them and have been inserted ex abundanti cautela. In that case, it has of course been observed further that those words cannot be construed as cutting down the plain meaning of the operative portion of the section. The word "notwithstanding" means "without prejudice."

12. Mr. Sen Gupta, of course relied on the determinations in the case of Jugal Kishore Saraf v. Raw Cotton Company Ltd., AIR 1955 SC 376, wherein, it has been observed that the cardinal rule of construction of statutes is to read the statute literally. The words used by the legislature will have their ordinary, natural and grammatical meaning. If, however, such a reading, leads to absurdity and the words are susceptible to another meaning, the Court may adopt the same. But, if no such alternative construction is possible, the Court must adopt ordinarily the rule of literal interpretation. Thus, it was submitted by Mr. Sen Gupta that when Sec. 20 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, has cast an obligation to maintain the infirm parents who could not maintain themselves out of their own earnings or other properties, so even in spite of the provisions of Sec. 14J of the said Act, it was the obligation in this case on the Raiyat, since deceased, and thereafter, the erstwhile petitioner, Smt. Krishna Kamalini Debey, to maintain the widowed mother of the Raiyat.

13. While on non obstante clause, it should first be ascertained what the enacting part of the section provides on a fair construction of the words used, according to their natural and ordinary meaning and the non obstante clause is to be understood as operating to set aside as no longer valid anything contained in relevant existing law which is inconsistent with the new enactment. The enacting part of the statute, must, where it is clear, be taken to control the non obstante clause as observed in the case of Thangia v. Hanuman Bank Ltd., AIR 1958 Mad 403, that where both cannot be read harmoniously, for even apart from such clause, a later law abrogates earlier laws, clearly inconsistent with it. The words of statute, as observed in the case of Attorney General v. Milne (1914) A. C. 765, must prima facie, be given their ordinary meaning or literal meaning. The Courts in proper cases, can call before it persons to show what the meaning of a particular word should be in a specialised document, but the Courts have no such power in interpreting the statute. Hence the legislature usually annexes an interpretation clause and in other cases General Clauses Acts, to supply the Court with a meaning of the words in a statute. If there is one rule of construction for statutes and other documents, it is that, nobody should imply anything in them, which is inconsistent with the words expressly used. In terms of the determinations in the case of New Piecegoods Bazar Co. Ltd. v. Commr. of Income-tax AIR 1950 SC 165, the primary duty of the Court, in interpreting a statute is to give effect to the intention of the legislature as expressed in the words used by it, and no outside consideration can be called in it, to find out the intention. In terms of the determinations in the case of State v. B. K. Mondal AIR 1962 SC 779, which was made on a reliance on the determinations in the case of Ramanandi v. Kalawati, AIR 1928 PC 2, where there is a positive enactment of the Indian Legislature, the proper course is to examine the language of that statute and to ascertain its proper meaning, uninfluenced by any consideration derived from the previous state of the law or of the English law, upon which it may be founded. So, in terms of the determinations of the Supreme Court in the case of Tirath Singh v. Bachittar Singh, AIR 1955 SC 830, it is only when the language of a statute, in its ordinary meaning and grammatical construction, leads to manifest contradiction of the apparent purpose of the enactment, or to some inconvenience or absurdity, hardship or injustice, presumably not intended, a construction may be put upon it, which modifies the meaning of the words and even the structure of the sentence. On the basis of the observations in the case of Kanwar Singh v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1965 SC 871, the Courts can depart from dictionary meaning of the word and give it a meaning which will advance the remedy and suppress the mischief. It further provided that the Courts do not have to act on conjecture or surmises. A construction should be adopted in accordance with the policy and the object of the statute. What is sometimes called the Golden Rule, appears to be modification of the rule of literal interpretation. Thus, in the case of Beacky v. Smith [1836] 2 M and W 191, such rule has been observed to be very useful one in the construction of a statute. It has also been observed in the case, that adherence to the ordinary meaning of the words used, and to the grammatical construction, should be made, unless that is at variance with the intention of the legislature, to be collected from the statute itself, or leads to any manifest absurdity or repugnance, in which case, the language may be modified, so as to avoid such inconvenience, but no further. As mentioned, earlier statutes, like documents must be read as a whole and all the parts made consistent with one another, if possible, and a construction to avoid absurdity, should be adopted by the Courts, whenever possible. It should also be noted that a non obstante clause is used in a provision to indicate that, that provision should prevail despite anything to the contrary in any other provision. In this matter, reference may be made to the determinations of the Nagpur High Court, in the case of Vasant Rao Mangroo v. Election Commission of India AIR 1953 Nag 237.

14. In the case of Sasanka Sekhar Maity v. Union of India (AIR 1981 SC 522) (supra), it has been observed that the definition of "family" in S. 14K (c), is more realistic than the definition of the terms in similar laws, for imposition of ceiling on agricultural holdings enacted in other States. It has also been observed that the definition is much wider, and far more generous and humane, because it takes into consideration the existence of a widowed and divorced daughter. It has further been observed that the legislature on a correct perspective, has enlarged the definition of a family to the maximum possible extent, and provides for as many as nine members. It has further been observed in that case, that normally, the father of a raiyat would be entitled to a separate ceiling area of his own determined under Sec. 14M. On a reference to such determinations, Mr. Sengupta contended that the Supreme Court has not ruled out the possibilities of the case of a family, consisting of two members viz, the widow and the widowed mother of the Raiyat, rather, on implications of the findings, have accepted that such exceptional cases, however few in number, may be possible viz. the widowed mother of the Raiyat, whom the Raiyat, under the law as mentioned above, was obliged to maintain, should be maintained by the widow of the Raiyat, as on the death of the Raiyat, the obligation to maintain his widowed mother and that too out of the estate, devolved on the widow. It was also contended that if such construction is not given, then the position may be awkward and embarrassing, both for the widow and widowed mother of the Raiyat, as the widowed mother, can bring proceedings against the widow of the Raiyat, for fulfilment of the obligations under Sec. 20 and Sec. 21 of the said 1956 Act and at the same time, she may also be refused to be maintained by the widow of the Raiyat out of the estate and as such to have the obligations, as involved or cast upon, to be frustrated. Mr. Sengupta also contended that thus on reasonable interpretation, the word "himself" as used in the section, should be held to be including the old and infirm parents and as in this case, the widowed mother,

15. While on the question of interpretation and construction of the section, Mr. Sengupta submitted that the construction must not only be agreeable to justice and reason, but the construction as given or made, should try to avoid possibility of any injustice, apart from contending that the construction must not be absurd or doing away with the obligation, which was fastened on the Raiyat in this case and if possible, every endeavour should be made to avoid any loss to any innocent person or to protect such person, from any illegality. In support of his submissions as mentioned above and to augment them, Mr. Sengupta referred to relevant passages in Maxwell on the Interpretation of Statutes (Twelfth Edition). It is true that such construction to a statute or the terms of the same, should be endeavoured to be granted, which would be agreeable to justice and reason and there is a presumption against doing something, which would be inconvenient and unreasonable, apart from the fact, that such construction should be sought to be avoided, which would bring about unreasonable and inconvenient results. It is also true that possible injustice, on the basis of interpretation, should also be sought to be avoided. That apart, every endeavour is to be done, to see that no absurdity results, on the basis of the interpretation or meaning as made or given to a statute or the words used therein and there is also a presumption that while interpreting a section or its terms, the obligations as devolved on the basis of other statutes or enactments, must not be interfered with and as mentioned hereinbefore, in terms of the determinations in the case of Brown v. Roberts (1955) 1 QB 1, so also of those in Goodfellow v. Johnson, (1966) 1 QB 83, that whenever possible, the words of an Act, should be construed, so as not to involve innocent persons in illegality. Mr. Sengupta claimed that if interpretations contrary to the above and as contended by him, are given, that would expose the widow of the Raiyat in illegality, as if she refuses to maintain the widowed mother of the Raiyat, she may bring appropriate action against her, contending that the refusal by her to maintain the widowed mother of the Raiyat viz. her mother-in-law, was illegal, as the said action would be contrary to law.

16. In support of his submission on the rules of interpretation of statutes and the words or phrases used therein, Mr. Sengupta further referred to the determinations in the case of Jugal Kishore Saraf v. Raw Cotton Co. Ltd., (AIR 1955 SC 376) (supra), and more particularly to the determinations that the cardinal rule of construction of statutes is to read the statute literally, that is, by giving, to the words used by the legislature, their ordinary, natural and grammatical meaning. It has also been observed that if, however, such a reading leads to absurdity and the words are susceptible to another meaning, the Court may adopt the same. But, if no such alternative construction is possible, the Court must adopt the ordinary rule of literal interpretation. Then, Mr. Sengupta referred to the determinations in the case of Chandra Mohan v. State of Uttar Pradesh AIR 1966 SC 1987, and more precisely to the observations that the fundamental rule of interpretation is the same, whether one construes the provisions of the Constitution or an Act of Parliament viz. that the Court will have to find out the expressed intention from the words of the Constitution or the Act, as the case may be. But, if, however, two constructions are possible, then the Court must adopt that, which will ensure smooth and harmonious working of the Constitution and eschew the order, which will lead to absurdity or give rise to practical inconvenience or make well-established provisions of existing law, nugatory. Lastly, reliance was placed by Mr. Sengupta on the determinations in the case of Ramaswamy Nadar v. State of Madras, AIR 1958 SC 56 and particularly to the observations that if, in construing the section, the Court has to supply some words in order to make the meaning of the statute clear, it will naturally prefer the construction, which is more in consonance with reason and justice.

17. There cannot be any doubt or dispute regarding the canons of construction of a statute or the terms of the same, the particulars whereof have been referred to hereinbefore by Mr. Sengupta. But, one thing is certain that with the object of achieving such reasonable constructions or effect, the provisions of a statute or the terms of the same, should not be made or felt to be unreasonable. The said Act, was incorporated in 1955 and Chap. IIB, was incorporated with retrospective effect from 15th Feb. 1971 and such incorporation, as indicated hereinbefore, has been found to be in order and authorised. The said 1956 Act, received the assent of the President on 21st Dec. 1956 and the same has codified the existing law for adoption and maintenance among Hindus. In terms of the determinations in Rex v. Nain Sukhi Das, AIR 1949 All 345, every legislation is to be interpreted in a way, so that the aims and object of the same, are promoted and preserved. A Hindu is under a moral and legal duty, to maintain certain relations in certain circumstances and the main circumstances being the denial to that relation, the right to inherit or the right to partake, but not to separately enjoy the property of the family. What exactly constitutes maintenance under Hindu Law is difficult to define, it is certain that the right to residence, expenses of marriage and that of funeral expenses, fall under the category of maintenance. "Maintenance" has been defined under Sec. 3 (b) of the said 1956 Act and embraces within the ambit, provisions for food, clothing, residence, education, medical attendance and treatment and in the case of an unmarried daughter, the reasonable expenses of her marriage. Sec. 4 of the said 1956 Act lays down the overriding effect upon Hindu Law and maintenance is a personal obligation and on the death of the person to be maintained, the obligation is no longer attached to the estate, unless a charge has been created specifically by agreement, will or decree of a competent Court.

18. Under-Sec. 20 of the said 1956 Act, a Hindu has been saddled with the burden to maintain some persons or another at some stage of his or her life. Apart from the obligation of a husband to maintain his wife, he must maintain his children till the age of minority, the daughter till marriage, and thereafter, if she becomes a widow, apart from maintaining the old and infirm parents, if they are unable to maintain themselves, out of their own earnings or other properties. So, to maintain the old and infirm parents is a qualified obligation under Hindu Law and every Hindu male was under a legal obligation to maintain his aged parents and such liability was not dependent on the possession of property, as observed in the case of Appibai v. Khimji ILR (1936) 60 Bom 455: (AIR 1936 Bom 138), by the son. The class of dependants under the said 1956 Act have been defined in section 21. The word dependant, has been used in Sections 18 to 20 of the said 1956 Act. The circumstances in which dependants are required to be maintained, have been enumerated in section 22 of the said 1956 Act. It should be noted that no burden has been placed by statute, on the property inherited by an individual and the liability under the said 1956 Act continues to be a personal one, but may be enforced against the estate in the hands of the heirs and such liability will be proportional to the estate inherited. The terms of Sec. 22 will apply only to cases where property passes by intestate succession and not when it passes through a will or by survivorship in a joint Mitakshara family.

19. It should further and also be noted, that S. 14K (c) has defined 'family' and has included therein persons whom a Raiyat, was obliged to maintain under the said 1956 Act or in law. But, such definition has not included, rather, has excluded the old and infirm parents, who, in terms of the said 1956 Act, were and are required to be maintained by a Raiyat, while alive, and such right could be enforced against the estate in the hands of the heirs, apart from the fact that such liability or obligation, would also be preferential to the estate inherited. Such being the position, the widowed mother of the deceased Raiyat as in this case, was required to be maintained by the widow of the Raiyat, from out of the properties, which she has inherited or would inherit, on the death of her husband, the erstwhile Raiyat. The right of maintenance, as in the provisions of the said 1956 Act, cannot thus be equated with the right of separate ceiling or holding the same. If old and infirm parents, were meant to be maintained or entitled to get a separate ceiling area, then the legislature would not have left them in consideration of the ceiling area of a 'family,' more particularly when, the other heirs or members, who were and are required to be maintained, have been included. The definition of 'Family' under the said Act and in terms of the determination in the case of Sasanka Sekhar Maity v. Union of India (AIR 1981 SC 522) (supra) has been found to be more realistic than the definition of the terms in similar laws, for imposition of ceiling on agricultural holdings enacted in other States and such definition, in the words of the Supreme Court is much wider, and far more generous and humane and the legislature has, on correct perspective, enlarged the definition of 'Family' to the maximum possible extent.

20. The obligation under S. 20 of the said 1956 Act, of a person to maintain the aged and infirm parents amongst others, arises only when they are unable to maintain themselves, out of their own income or properties and to that extent, the obligation ceases to be personal. The Supreme Court, in the case of Kamalammal v. Venkatalakshmi Ammal, AIR 1965 SC 1349, has observed, that the liability to maintain may arise either from the existence of a particular relationship, independent of possession of property viz. the liability to maintain the wife, minor sons, unmarried daughters and aged parents or it may arise on possession of property e.g. the liability to maintain a disqualified heir. The obligation to maintain the relations as mentioned above, is personal and legal in character and no doubt arises from the very existence of the relationship between the parties. The obligation to maintain parents and an unmarried daughter extends, in so far as any one of the latter is unable to maintain himself or herself, out of his or her own earnings or other property. There is no evidence available in this case that the widowed mother of the deceased Raiyat was not in a position to maintain herself either of her earnings or the property.

21. In view of the above, and the specific ouster of old and infirm parents, from the purview of the 'Family' as under S. 14K (c) of the said Act, read with the intention of the Legislature viz. the non obstante clause in S. 14J, I am of the view, that the constructions as sought to be put forward by Mr. Sengupta, cannot be accepted. The non obstante clause as in Sec. 14J, would mean, here in this case, to be operating to set aside as no longer valid, anything contained in Ss. 18 to 21 of the said 1956 Act, as otherwise, the same would be inconsistent with the said Act. The non obstante clause in S. 14J, in my view, should prevail, despite anything contrary in any other provision. Thus, the arguments advanced by Mr. Sengupta that even in spite of the provisions of S. 14J and specific definition of "Family" as in 14K (c) and even though such definition does not include or speak of parents, they should be maintained by the Raiyat or his heir and as such the parents of the deceased Raiyat, would be entitled to separate ceiling, should fail. I hold as such, as in my view, the right of the parents of the Raiyat to be maintained by him or his heir, on his death, has no relation to separate ceilings to be given to them and such obligations, as mentioned in the said 1956 Act, cannot be equated with the

22. At this stage, Mr. Sengupta contended that if the lands are in irrigated area, then, under the provisions of the said Act, the petitioner would not be entitled to get 7.90 acres and as such he failed to understand, why such retention of ceiling was allowed. He then contended that if the lands are treated to be in non-irrigated area, then also the appropriate ceiling would be 8.64 and perhaps the lands were considered to be in non-irrigated area. Mr. Sengupta, thus contended that when, taking the lands to be in non-irrigated area, the petitioner was allowed the retention of 7.90 acres and the petitioner, in law would be entitled to 8.64 acres, so in all fairness, the Respondents concerned, should be directed to allow the petitioner the balance of .74 acres (8.64-7.90) and that too in terms of a choice to be exercised by her. Mr. Yusuf, in his usual fairness contended, that such claim of the petitioner, as made now, may be considered, if directed by the Court. The submissions as made by Mr. Sengupta, appeared to me, to be reasonable and considering the fair stand as taken by Mr. Yusuf, even though, I discharge the Rule, I direct the Respondents now to consider the ceiling area of the petitioner, on treating the lands in non-irrigated area if they really are after giving her the due and necessary option, in accordance with law.

23. The Rule is thus discharged as above. There will be no order as to costs.

Rule discharged.

M. M. Ghosh, P. K. Mookherjee and Dipankar Chakrabarty, for Petitioner; Harendra Nath Halder, for Opposite Party.

B. C. CHAKRABARTI, J.:— This is revisional application at the instance of the petitioner, State Bank of India and is directed against an order dated Dec. 3, 1980 passed in Act 39, Case No. 414/78 of the Court of the District Delegate at Alipore.

2. Facts are simple and may be stated thus,

3. One Juthikabala Porel wife of the opposite party No. 1 kept certain ornaments and jewellery in a Safe-Deposit Locker of the State Bank of India at its main branch, Calcutta. She having died, her husband the opposite party herein applied for succession certificate in respect of the said goods which was registered as Act 39, Case No. 414/78. After the filing of the said application a question was raised by the Court as to whether the prayer for grant of succession certificate in respect of the said goods was maintainable. After hearing the learned Advocate for the opposite party the petitioner in that case, the learned District Delegate by his order dated June 12, 1978 held, on the authority of the decision in the case of Dina Nath v. Balakrishna, AIR 1963 All 46, that the liability to refund the ornaments was a debt and as such the application for the grant of succession certificate in respect of the same was maintainable. The petitioner was accordingly directed to file the requisite stamp duty. Subsequently on Feb. 18, 1980 the succession certificate was granted. Thereupon the petitioner herein, the State Bank of India filed an application for reconsideration of the order dated June 12, 1978. This application was disposed of by the order impugned. It was held that the question regarding maintainability of the application for succession certificate was thoroughly considered by the order dated June 12, 1978 and on the basis thereof the succession certificate was granted by the Court on Feb. 18, 80. The learned Judge held that the application of the State Bank of India was misconceived in so far as the order for grant was required to be revoked before the order dated June 12, 1978 could be reconsidered. The application was accordingly rejected.

4. The petitioner being aggrieved has moved the present revisional application which has been heard on notice to and upon contest by the opposite party.

5. Mr. Ghosh appearing in support of the revisional application contended that the ornaments which were kept in deposit in the Safe-Deposit-Locker of the State Bank were neither a debt nor a security within the meaning of the provisions of Sec. 370 of the Indian Succession Act and as such no succession certificate could be asked for or granted in respect of the said goods. The expression 'security' has been explained in sub-sec. (2) of Sec. 370 but the expression 'debt' has neither been explained nor defined. It is however nobody's case that the ornaments in question fall within the category of security within the meaning of Sec. 370. The question therefore is whether it is a debt or not. In support of the contention that it is not a debt, Mr. Ghosh relied on a decision in the case of Shyam Sundari Devi v. Sarti Devi, AIR 1962 Pat 220. The facts of that case however were different. There the deceased had pledged with a bank certain ornaments by way of security for the debt (loan?) which the Bank had advanced. It was held that succession certificate could not be granted and asked for in respect of the ornaments since it was not a debt due from the Bank. In that case the Bank had advanced a loan to the deceased and the ornaments were pledged with the Bank merely as a security for the repayment of the same. In the circumstances the Bank could not be said to be a debtor in respect of the articles. On the contrary the deceased was a debtor to the Bank. Therefore, this decision does not seem to be directly touching the point involved in the case before us.

6. The decision relied on by the learned Judge as also by the opposite party before us is also not to the point. There a lady died during the Kumbhamela tragedy and the ornaments found on her body were taken possession of by the District Authorities. On an application for the grant of succession certificate in respect of the same it was held that the refund of the ornaments became an obligation on the authorities to hand over the same or the value thereof to the rightful claimant and that for such a liability an application for succession certificate could be asked for and granted. We are, however, unable to agree to such a broad proposition that any liability owing from one person to another whether in cash or in kind, secured or unsecured, whether ascertained or ascertainable, arising out of any obligation, is a debt. In the particular case however the facts also were different in so far as it was not the deceased who had kept the ornaments with the District Authorities but that the District Authorities themselves collected the ornaments on their own and as such incurred the liability to refund the same to the rightful claimant. This aspect of the matter distinguishes the case from the facts of the case before us. Here the deceased Juthikabala had herself deposited the articles with this Bank for safe custody; she had the option to go and collect it at any time she liked. The Bank was merely a custodian of the same. In ordinary parlance debt means a sum certain due from one person called the debtor to another called the creditor. In Stroud's Judicial Dictionary a debt is defined as a sum payable in respect of a liquidated money demand recoverable by action. One of the essentials of a debt is an ascertained amount or readily calculable amount. In that sense the State Bank of India in this case could not be said to stand in the position of a debtor nor could Juthikabala be called a creditor in respect of the ornaments. But that apart the more important distinguishing point is that unlike in cases of debt, the Bank had no right of disposition of any kind in respect of those ornaments. The Bank stood in the position of a bailee or a trustee to whom though possession was entrusted, there was no intention of transferring the ownership. It is settled law that debt is not trust and any and every liability irrespective of its true legal character does not become a debt. Since succession certificate can be granted only in respect of debts and securities and not for any other kind of property, we are of the opinion that in this case succession certificate could not be granted. In this connection reference may be made to the decision in the case of Assam Bengal Rly. Co. v. Atul Chandra (1937) 41 CWN 524: (AIR 1937 Cal 314). The application for grant of the same was not therefore maintainable.

7. Mr. Halder in opposing the revisional application contended that the State Bank had asked for reconsideration of the order dt. June 12, 1978 but since following that order succession certificate was actually granted on Feb. 18, 1980, the prayer of the State Bank was not entertainable until the grant itself was revoked. It was argued that since the State Bank had not made a prayer for revocation of the grant this application had been rightly rejected. We are unable to accept the contention. The impugned order itself indicates that the learned Judge had granted the succession certificate on the basis of the order dated June 12, 1978. The grant was merely consequential to that order. Therefore if that order is found to be bad in law the consequential order passed on the basis thereof must necessarily fail. We find that succession certificate could not be asked for in the facts of this case. The order dated June 12, 1978 was therefore erroneous and is liable to be set aside. The consequential order made on the basis of that order must also therefore fail. Consequently the order for grant of succession certificate founded upon the order dated June 12, 1978 cannot stand.

8. The revisional application accordingly succeeds. The impugned order dated Dec. 3, 1980 is set aside. The order dated June 12, 1978 holding that the application for grant of succession certificate was maintainable is found to be erroneous and the order for grant of succession certificate founded on that order is also set aside.

9. There will be no order for costs.

ORDER :— This is an application asking for admission of an appeal preferred from the order of Roy Chowdhury, J. refusing to stay proceedings under Ss. 397 and 398 of the Companies Act, 1956 being Company Petition No. 169 of 1981, Company Application No. 93 of 1981. The appellant's case is that the Suit No. 209 of 1981 had been filed prior to the institution of the company petition. The appellant further contends that the matters in controversy are in substance the same and though the parties are not identical the real issue between the parties is the same and the High Court has jurisdiction in both the matters and it would be incorrect, according to the appellant, that the Company Court has exclusive jurisdiction under S. 10 of the Civil P. C. In view of the fact that the suit had been instituted prior to the institution of the company petition it is submitted that the suit should have been stayed.

2. Without going into the abstract question whether the civil court in any particular situation hearing a suit under Code of Civil Procedure can exercise the powers which are exercisable by the Company Court under Ss. 397 and 398 of the Companies Act, 1956 it appears to us that in this case the causes of action in essence, in two matters, are different. There is a case of oppression against the minorities and mismanagement by the Guhas. Looked at from that point of view it appears to us that in this case it would be incorrect to say that the controversy in both the matters is in essence the same.

3. Leaving aside the question that the parties are different we are inclined to the view that S. 397 is a special code by itself as observed by the Supreme Court in the case of Cosmosteels Pvt. Ltd. v. Jairam Das Gupta, AIR 1978 SC 375. This view has also been expressed by the Division Bench of this Court in the case of Debijhora Tea Co. Ltd. v. Barendra Krishna Bhowmick, (1980) 50 Com Cas 771. The learned advocate for the appellant, however, drew our attention to the observations of the Division Bench of the Allahabad High Court in the case of Smt. Patna Devi v. Harihar Prasad Naik, 1978 Tax LR 2292 where the Division Bench of the Allahabad High Court was of the view that the civil court could take cognisance of the matter because it possessed jurisdiction to do so under S. 9 of the C. P. C. and not because of anything contained in the Companies Act. The Division Bench was further of the view that it would not be correct to say that the party concerned should first seek his remedy from the Company Court under Ss. 155, 397 and 398 of the Act and then he could file a suit only if the Company Court refused to grant any relief. In an appropriate case where the suit is cognisable under S. 9 C. P. C. simply because some of the allegations in that suit also attract the provisions of S. 397 or 398 or S. 155 of the Companies Act, 1956 it may not be obligatory on the party to await an adjudication by the Company Court to institute a proceeding under the Civil P. C. But if a particular type of relief sought for can only be given in an appropriate proceeding under Ss. 397 and 398 which, as we have mentioned before, are code by themselves as held by the Supreme Court then it is not possible to circumvent that procedure by instituting proceedings in a civil court. The facts in the context of which the Division Bench of the Allahabad Court made the aforesaid observations are entirely different. Quite apart from any of these theoretical questions we have examined the reliefs that have been asked for in the 397 application in the instant case. The main relief seems to be on the ground of oppression and framing of a scheme and appointment of directors which is distinctly different from the relief asked for in the suit restraining some directors nominated by the Government from functioning.

4. In this view of the matter prima facie we are satisfied that the learned Trial Judge was right in not granting stay under S. 10 of the Civil P. C. In the premises, we are of the opinion that we cannot stay the operation of the order of the learned Trial Judge until the disposal of the appeal. Save the order that we have already made, that is to say, admitting the memorandum of appeal there will be no further order on this application. Save to that extent all interim orders are vacated.

5. Appeal from the orders dated 27th July, 1981 and 15th July, 1981 is to be consolidated and one set of Paper Book cyclostyled or typewritten in both the appeals is to be filed within one month from date. Notice of appeal is waived. Settlement of index is dispensed with. All papers used in the Court below including the order appealed from and the order admitting the appeal will be included in the Paper Book. In case certified copies of the orders are not available within the time aforesaid, liberty is given to the appellant to file a supplementary Paper Book to include the certified copies of the orders. Department to issue certified copies of the orders expeditiously.

6. Costs of this application will be costs in the appeal.

Order accordingly.

v. M/s. Lasco, Defendant.

Suit No. 67 of 1980, D/- 31-7-1981.

Arbitration Act (10 of 1940). S. 20 — Application to file in court arbitration agreement — Court should not pass order for filing of the agreement, in case of strained relationship between the parties and when arbitrator cannot be impartial.

An arbitration agreement which is admitted by the parties ordinarily should be held to be binding between the parties and the Court also at the first instance would be inclined to give effect to the said arbitration agreement provided there is a congenial atmosphere prevailing evidencing good relation between the parties. As a whole the idea of arbitration is cheapness, speed and to maintain the cordial relation between the two parties on the transaction, but if the Court finds from the facts of a particular case that enforcement of arbitration clause will lead to injustice and the arbitrator cannot be impartial and expected to exercise the fundamental principles of justice, fair-play and good-conscience, the Court will hesitate to give effect to the said arbitration clause. Sankar Ghosh with Dr. Tapas Banerjee and S. P. Majumder, for Plaintiff; S. B. Mukherjee with Shib Das Banerjee, for Defendant.

ORDER : This is an application under S. 20 of the Arbitration Act, 1940, for filing the arbitration agreement dated 18th/23rd of Oct., 1979 and for order of reference of the dispute to the Arbitrator in terms of the arbitration agreement and consequential reliefs.

2. By a letter dated 18th/23rd of Oct, 1979, the plaintiff/petitioner appointed the defendant/respondent purely on a temporary basis for a period of three months as the Clearing Agent at Calcutta for clearance of imported cargo improvement and local transportation jobs and other related items of works as set out in the said letter and also in paragraph 3 and sub-paragraphs thereof in the petition. Pursuant to the said agreement the defendant/respondent and the plaintiff/petitioner started acting as only Clearing Agent of the Calcutta Port on and from 1st of Nov. 1979, till 15th of Dec. 1980 as the terms were extended from time to time. During the period the defendant/respondent acted as the Clearing Agent of the plaintiff/petitioner and handled cargo, namely, skimmed milk powder and rubber oil consigned to the plaintiff/petitioner by different vessels as mentioned in paragraph 7. It is alleged that in course of clearing of the said consignment, the said cargo sufferred and/or incurred demurrage and on that account the plaintiff/petitioner is alleged to have paid a sum of Rs. 1,87,000/-. Therefore, it is alleged that the plaintiff/petitioner has suffered the said loss and demurrage due to the lack of proper care and steps and proper clearance not being effected by the defendant/respondent. It is also alleged that the plaintiff/petitioner with the defendant/respondent did not submit quarterly statement of claims lodged, settled or pending and therefore, the plaintiff/petitioner is not in a position to know what steps the defendant/respondent has taken in respect of claim, refund, compensation or the insurance value of the lost cargo with the Calcutta Port Trust, Steamer Agent and Under-Writers. The plaintiff/petitioner is claiming a sum of Rs. 5,46,520/- insured value of which is Rs. 8,46,520. The defendant/respondent is alleged to have not informed the plaintiff/petitioner what steps they have taken and whether any claim has been lodged with the Insurance Company. After various correspondence disputes and differences are alleged to have arisen between the parties and the same has been summarised in paragraph 22 and various sub-paragraphs thereof in the petition and having regard to the arbitration clause in the said agreement between the parties which is set out in paragraph 21 of the petition being the following terms :

"In the event of any question dispute or difference arising under these conditions or any special conditions of contract or in connection with this contract (except as to any matter the decision of which is especially provided for by these or the special conditions) the same shall be referred to sole arbitration of an officer to be appointed by the Managing Director of the Corporation."

"There will be no objection to appointment of a person as arbitrator on the ground that he had to deal with the matter or had expressed views on all or any of the matters in dispute or difference. The award of the arbitrator shall be final and binding on the parties to this contract."

3. The present application was filed on the 24th of July 1980, and in the application under S. 20, the plaintiff/petitioner also made an application under

S. 41 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 in which an ad interim order was made appointing a Receiver to realise the amount sum or sums on account of refund from the Calcutta Port Authority or other Authorities as mentioned in prayer (a) of the said petition under S. 41.

4. In course of hearing it transpires that during the pendency of the present application the plaintiff/petitioner has already realised diverse sums of monies from the Insurance Co. directly which form part of the alleged claim against the defendant/respondent in this application and also took delivery of the goods alleged to be short landed at Calcutta Port which appears to have been landed at Bombay and, therefore, the total claim made in the present application against the defendant/respondent by the plaintiff/petitioner has been reduced by about Rs. 5,00,000/-. In that view of the matter I directed the parties to file supplementary affidavits on the 12th of June, 1981 and pursuant to that affidavits were filed from which it is admitted that the plaintiff/petitioner has collected diverse sums of money from the Insurance Company as the beneficiary under the insurance policy for which claim was lodged against the defendant/respondent in this application as one of the disputes to be referred to arbitration and also taken delivery of goods from Bombay Port which were alleged to be short landed at Calcutta Port and it was landed in Bombay which was taken delivery by the plaintiff/petitioner. It is admitted by the plaintiff/petitioner in the affidavit of one Mekhat Parameshwar Gopalkrishna Kurup affirmed on the 18th of June, 1981, and also further affidavit of the said deponent affirmed on the 19th of June, 1981, that the plaintiff/petitioner admitted that various amounts has been received from the Under-Writers by cheques as set out in the said affidavit and also it is admitted that the major portion of the short landed goods which appear to have been landed by the Steamer Agent at Bombay has been received by the plaintiff/petitioner and taken delivery from the Steamer Agent at Bombay and in this process a major portion of the claim appears to have been realised during the pendency of the present application in spite of the fact that the Receiver has been appointed in the application under S. 41 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 pending the S. 20 application, to collect the said amount and it further appears that the plaintiff/petitioner's attitude is such as they have that they are entitled to receive the said payments without informing the Court or the Receiver or the defendant/respondent in any way whatsoever during the pendency of this application with a view to intimate this Court about the fact which the defendant/respondent alleged that the plaintiff/petitioner has realised the claims from the Insurance Company and also taken delivery of the goods which are alleged to have been short landed at Calcutta Port in respect of which alleged claims are raised against the plaintiff/petitioner.

5. Mr. Sankar Ghosh, appearing with Dr. Tapas Banerjee and Mr. S. P. Majumder, submitted that the amounts and the goods which has been realised and recovered by the plaintiff/petitioner during the pendency of this application would be given credit in respect of the claim of the plaintiff/petitioner against the defendant/respondent and as such, the claim will be reduced in the reference accordingly and for the balance the disputes should be referred to arbitration in terms of the arbitration agreement to the sole arbitration of Managing Director or any Officer to be appointed by him in terms of the arbitration clause in the agreement. Mr. Ghosh submitted that there cannot be any objection regarding the appointment of the Managing Director or any other Officer to be appointed by him as Arbitrator in terms of the arbitration agreement as the parties have agreed to it and, therefore, all the conditions under S. 20 of the Arbitration Act, 1940 being satisfied, that is, no suit is pending, no steps have been taken by the plaintiff/petitioner under Chapter II of the Arbitration Act, 1940, and the disputes are covered by the arbitration clause and no sufficient cause has been shown by the defendant/respondent and, therefore, the order should be made as prayed for. He further submitted that there is no allegation against the Managing Director but against some other Officers being the said Kurup the deponent, who has affirmed the petition and reply and also the supplementary affidavit. Mr. Ghosh cited a Division Bench decision of the Madras High Court in Ama Corporation, Madras v.

Food Corporation of India, AIR 1981 Mad 121 where it was held that in an application under S. 20 the machinery prescribed in the arbitration agreement for appointment of an Arbitrator must be adhered to and appointment of an Arbitrator by Court otherwise than what is prescribed in the arbitration agreement is not according to the terms of the arbitration agreement and, therefore, such an order is not sustainable. The said decision is a well-settled principle. Nobody can dispute the same. But here the question is not appointment of some other Arbitrators than the Arbitrator appointed under the arbitration agreement. The question is whether sufficient cause has been shown by the defendant/respondent in the facts and circumstances of this case having regard to the conduct of the plaintiff/petitioner earlier and also during the pendency of this application in this Court by realising insurance due and receiving goods from the Shipping Agent in respect of the alleged claim against the plaintiff/petitioner in spite of the fact that they got a Receiver appointed for that purpose in the application under S. 41 pending the S. 20 application. Further, there is a question whether having regard to the strained relationship between the parties, it is proper to force the defendant/respondent to arbitration in terms of the arbitration agreement who will be no one else than the Managing Director or an Officer to be appointed by him under the employment of the plaintiff/petitioner who has acted in most high-handed manner in this proceeding by realising the amounts directly from the Insurance Company and taking delivery of the goods alleged to be short landed during the pendency of this application in spite of the appointment of a Receiver obtained by them for the same purpose without intimating the Receiver or the Court at all at any time. It is only when the defendant/respondent brought to the notice of the Court and the supplementary affidavits were directed to be filed, those facts came to light and were admitted by the plaintiff-petitioner that they have collected nearly Rs. 5,00,000/- which form very substantial portion of the alleged claim against the plaintiff/petitioner which are the disputes to be referred to arbitration. It is true that an arbitration agreement which is admitted by the parties set out before ordinarily should be held to be binding between the parties and the Court also at the first instance would be inclined to give effect to the said arbitration agreement provided there is a congenial atmosphere prevailing evidencing good relation between the parties. As a whole the idea of arbitration is cheapness, speed and to maintain the cordial relation between the two parties on the transaction, but if the Court finds from the facts of a particular case as, in my view, which is apparent from the conduct of the plaintiff/petitioner that enforcement of arbitration clause will lead to injustice and the arbitrator cannot be impartial and expected to exercise the fundamental principles of justice, fairplay and good-conscience, the Court will hesitate to give effect to the said arbitration clause.

6. In this case Mr. S. B. Mukharjee, appearing with Mr. Shibdas Banerjee, for the defendant/respondent, has rightly submitted that the defendant/respondent in violation of the Court's order made in the application of the plaintiff-petitioner under S. 41 of the Arbitration Act 1940 appointed a Receiver to collect all the amounts from the Insurance Company, Shipping Agent and the Customs Authority as the case may be. But now admittedly the plaintiff/petitioner has collected nearly Rs. 5,00,000/- without the leave of the Court or intimating the Receiver in any way whatsoever. In these circumstances, the conduct and attitude of the defendant/respondent is such that having regard to the relationship as evidenced from the correspondence placed before me and annexed to the pleadings it is quite apparent that apprehension of bias of the Arbitrator who is no one else than the Managing Director of the plaintiff-petitioner or any Officer to be appointed by him under the Arbitration Clause. Those are sufficient causes as Mr. Mukherjee rightly submitted shown by the defendant/respondent why the matter should not be referred to the Arbitrator under the arbitration clause.

7. In reply, Dr. Tapas Banerjee submitted that all the conditions under Section 20 are fulfilled and an order should be made. He also submitted that all the conducts of the plaintiff/petitioner are justified as they are to collect the amount as beneficiary under the Insurance Policy and they have done so and the claim against the defendant/respondent will be reduced to that extent. So, also the explanation about the collection of shortlanded materials from the Bombay Port about which a claim was raised as a dispute in the said S. 20 application. The value of the said goods would be deducted from the claim in the reference against the defendant/respondent, and as such, there is no difficulty in continuing the balance claim of the plaintiff-petitioner against the defendant/respondent in the reference. Whatever the Receiver appointed under S. 41 has already collected Rs. 44,000/- from the Shipping Company as a claim should be refunded to the Insurance Company who has been substituted in place of the plaintiff/petitioner for whom defendants/respondents were acting as Clearing Agents to raise a claim has already received from the Insurance Company in respect of the said claim. In these circumstances, the plaintiff/petitioner submitted that an order should be made as prayed for in this application and the claim of the plaintiff/petitioner would be reduced by the amount already received which is admitted to be about Rs. 4,82,980/-. Therefore, it is admitted that a substantial portion of the claim has already been realised during the pendency of the present application by the plaintiff/petitioner without any notice to the Court or with its leave or informing the Receiver about the same. It is only at the instance of the defendant/respondent the facts were disclosed to this Court and thereafter, direction for filing supplementary affidavits were given and after taking several adjournments the plaintiff/petitioner admitted realisation of the amount by themselves directly and they justified the same as their right to do so under the Insurance Policy and under the Contract of Shipment. But that does not relieve the defendant/respondent from their liability to the plaintiff/petitioner as claimed in the petition under S. 20 save and except the claim would be reduced by the amount collected by the plaintiff/petitioner during the pendency of the application or earlier.

8. Considering the matter very carefully and also the correspondence between the parties it is quite apparent that the plaintiff/petitioners' conduct is most high-handed and not conducive to a reference to arbitration as in the prevailing circumstances and strained relationship where mutual faith and confidence has been lost and acrimonious allegations against each other are hurled in the correspondence between the parties and particularly against Mr. Kurup. It will not be just and proper to refer the disputes between the parties to arbitration as prayed for by the plaintiff/petitioner in the S. 20 application. As I am satisfied that in the peculiar and particular facts of this case there is sufficient cause shown by the defendant/respondent as to why relief should not be granted under S. 20 and the matter should not be referred to arbitration.

9. In this case the Arbitrator also, in my view, cannot be expected to be a impartial one and there is reasonable apprehension in the mind of the plaintiff/petitioner in the facts and circumstances of this case after acrimonious correspondence between the parties and after proceedings are started in this Court and the utter callousness on the part of the plaintiff/petitioner to appraise the realisations made by them directly overreaching the Court's order and superseding the Receiver's function whose appointment was obtained by the plaintiff/petitioner themselves in the S. 41 application and in fact, the Receiver has already collected a sum of Rs. 44,000/- from the Shipping Agent as damages in respect of a particular shipment, whereas in respect of that claim the plaintiff/petitioner has collected the amount from the Insurance Company. In these circumstances, I hold that there are sufficient causes why the matter should not be referred to arbitration.

10. Now, as to what is sufficient cause under S. 20 (4) a guideline has been laid down by the Supreme Court in the decision of Abdul Kadir Samsuddin Bubera v. Madhav Prabhakar Oak, AIR 1962 SC 406 where Wanchoo, J. observed at page 410, paragraph 12, as follows :

"Sub-section (4) of S. 20 lays down that where no sufficient cause is shown, the Court shall order the agreement to be filed and make an order of reference to the Arbitrator. It is therefore open to a Court under this sub-section, where sufficient cause is shown not to order the agreement to be filed and not to make a reference to the Arbitrator. The words of this sub-section leave a wide discretion in the Court to consider whether an order for filing the agreement should be made and a reference made accordingly. It is neither necessary nor desirable to lay down general terms what would be sufficient cause which would entitle a Court to refuse to order the agreement to be filed and thus refuse to make an order of reference. The Court will have to decide on the facts of each case where sufficient cause has been made out for not ordering the agreement to be filed and not making the order of reference."

11. Therefore, it is for the Court to decide in the peculiar facts of a particular case whether it should exercise its discretion in favour of making an order of reference or not as I have already indicated that this is not a matter which should be referred to arbitration and there is sufficient cause which appears to the Court as pointed out by the defendant/respondent. Firstly, the conduct of the plaintiff/petitioner is such which is not conducive to a fair and impartial arbitration by one of its Officers and secondly, the Arbitrator appointed or to be appointed under the arbitration clause is an employee of the plaintiff/petitioner who in the facts and circumstances of this case cannot be expected to be fair and impartial although the plaintiff/petitioner has framed the arbitration clause in the agreement in such a manner to which the defendant/respondent had to agree that no objection on the ground that the Arbitrator is an employee of the plaintiff/petitioner can be raised because, in my view, in the facts and circumstances of this case taking present day attitude of ordinary persons and human conduct it cannot be expected that an employee of the plaintiff/petitioner, if he acts as an Arbitrator, can have an impartial mind and exercise fundamental principles of justice and equity so far as the defendants/respondents are concerned. The words 'sufficient cause' under S. 20 (4) of the Arbitration Act, 1940, also occurred in paragraph 17 (4) of the Second Schedule of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, which has been repealed by the Arbitration Act, 1940, and is pari materia came up for consideration before a Division Bench of the Oudh High Court in the case of Giridharilal v. Gobardhandas, AIR 1937 Oudh 436 at p. 437 which is an observation as follows :—

"Sub-paragraphs 3 and 4 clearly show that the Court had discretion to order the agreement to be filed or not as the circumstances may require. The learned Counsel for the appellant contended that 'sufficient cause' within the meaning of sub-paragraph 4 means grounds such as are mentioned in paragraph 14, namely the award having left undetermined any of the matters referred to arbitration, or determining any matter not so referred, the award being indefinite and incapable of execution, and there being an objection to the legality of the award apparent on the face of it. We see no reason whatever to put such a restricted meaning on the words 'sufficient cause' occurring in sub-para. 4 and we are of opinion that these words cover all the grounds of justice, equity and good conscience on which a Court thinks an agreement should not be ordered to be filed. In 1935 All LJ 998: (AIR 1935 All 886) it was held that the Court can order an agreement to refer to arbitration to be filed under Para 17 (4), Sch. 2 Civil P. C., only where no sufficient cause is shown to the contrary, and in 143 I. C. 635, the Court of the Judicial Commissioner of Sind held that the words "sufficient cause" are not to be confined within the narrow compass of fraud, coercion and undue influence, and that there are other causes besides these which may be sufficient for the reversal of an order under Sch. 2, Para 17, Civil P. C."

12. In my view, the Supreme Court decision and the Oudh decision make it quite clear that the Court has wide discretion which should be exercised judicially in the facts and circumstances of a particular case and not capriciously or arbitrarily and the facts may vary from case to case and it is for the Court to decide whether it should be just and proper or according to the principles of equity and good conscience to order reference to arbitration or not under Section 20 (4) of the Arbitration Act, 1940.

13. Under the English Arbitration Act, 1950, the revocation of authority of an Arbitrator in a case similar to the present one it is provided in Sec. 24 (1) as follows:—

"Power of Court to give relief where arbitrator is not impartial or the dispute involves question of fraud;

24. (1) Where an agreement between any parties provides that disputes which may arise in the future between them shall be referred to an arbitrator named or designated in the agreement, and after a dispute has arisen any party applies, on the ground that the Arbitrator so named or designated is not or may not be impartial, for leave to revoke the authority of the Arbitrator or for an injunction to restrain any other party or the Arbitrator from proceeding with the arbitration, it shall not be a ground for refusing the application that the said party at the time when he made the agreement knew, or ought to have known, that the arbitrator, by reason of his relation towards any other party to the agreement or of his connection with the subject referred, might not be capable of impartiality

(2)-(3)....."

14. Although there is no analogous provision in our Arbitration Act, but, in my view, the principles can be applied if there is an apprehension of bias having regard to the strained relationship between the parties, the Arbitrator will be no one else than an employee of the plaintiff/petitioner. It will not be just, proper or fair to appoint such an Arbitrator and that constitutes a sufficient cause under Sec. 20 (4) of the Arbitration Act, 1940, for exercise of the Court's discretion in dismissing the application and the parties to be relegated to a suit and not to arbitration.

15. In the result, I dismiss the application under Sec. 20 of the Arbitration Act, 1940.

Application dismissed.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 101

B. C. RAY J.

Sree Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya and another, Petitioners v. The State of W. B. and others, Respondents,

C. R. No. 4984 (W) of 1977, D/- 29-7-1981.

(A) Constitution of India, Arts. 26, 29, 30 — Religious minority — Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Sect constitutes religious minority — Institution established and run by such sect is entitled to benefits under Art. 30. (W. B. Board of Secondary Education Act (5 of 1963) Sec. 45 — Management of Recognized Non-Govt. Institutions (Aided and Unaided) Rules, 1969, R. 8.)

JY/KY/E598/81/MVJ

The members professing Jain faith and belonging to the Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Sect constitute a religious minority in India, particularly in West Bengal. It professes a faith different from the Hindu religious faith. Therefore, the institution established by Sree Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya Society in West Bengal is entitled to benefits of Art. 30 (1) of Constitution. (Para 21)

Considering the decision in AIR 1972 S. C. 2119 and also of the specific mention of Jains both in the Hindu Law as well as in the various Acts such as Hindu Marriage Act, Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, Hindu Succession Act etc, it would be clear that Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Sect professes a faith different from Hindu Religion. The members of Jain sect do form minority in comparison to the total population of India as well as of West Bengal. The Jain Swetamber Sect is therefore a religious minority in the State of West Bengal and as such it is entitled to the benefit conferred by Arts. 29 and 30 of the Constitution, AIR 1972 SC 2119; AIR 1954 SC 282 and AIR 1958 SC 956, Foll. (Para 18)

In the instant case this institution has been established by the society solely with the funds contributed by the members of that religious minority community viz. Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Sect primarily for the purpose of promoting their culture and religious tenets and imparting the same to the pupils belonging to their community. Therefore this institution is entitled to the benefit of Art. 30 (1) of the Constitution. The impugned order rejecting the prayer for Special Constitution as regards the constitution and/or reconstitution of the Managing Committee of this school is therefore wholly illegal and bad. Further R. 8 of the Rules framed for Management of Recognised Non-Government Institutions (Aided or Unaided), 1969 is not applicable to this institution in as much as it purports to interfere with the fundamental freedom guaranteed to the religious minority, i. e., the Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Sect to administer their educational institutions according to their choice, AIR 1979 SC 52 Foll. (Para 21)

(B) W. B. Board of Secondary Education Act (5 of 1963) Sec. 19 — Management of Recognised Non-Government Institutions (Aided and Unaided) Rules 1969, R. 8 — Special Constitution of Committee of institution — Approval by Board — Matter cannot be referred to Recognition Committee — Refusal to approve on basis of Report of Recognition Committee is illegal.

Rule 8 does not require the Board to take the opinion and/or report of the Recognition Committee on the question of Constitution of Special Committee. Moreover, Sec. 19 of the Act, clearly specifies the powers and functions of the Recognition Committee. Sub-sec. (3) of the Section provides that the Recognition Committee shall advise the Board on all matters concerning recognition of institution and no recognition to any institution shall be accorded by the Board except on the recommendation of the Recognition Committee. Therefore, the Recognition Committee which is a statutory body has not been empowered to exercise any power of considering and giving any opinion on the question of the Special Constitution of a Committee of an institution. Therefore, the resolution adopted by the W. B. Board of Secondary Education at its meeting wherein the report of the Recognition Committee was considered and the prayer for Special Constitution in respect of Sree Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya was rejected is not a proper and valid order as the order is vitiated by taking into consideration the report of the Recognition Committee and determining matter on its basis. It is now well settled that statutory powers are to be exercised by the statutory bodies in the manner as provided in the statute or statutory Rules and Regulations framed thereunder. 1915 A. Mr. Rabindra Nath Mitra, K. Ganguli, L. C. Bihani and Miss S. Mukherjee, for Petitioners; A. P. Chatterjee Standing Counsel and Paritosh Mukherjee, for Administrator, P. Chatterjee, for the Board and S. Pal, with Asit Sen-gupta, for Respondents, ORDER :— The petitioner No. 1, Sree Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya, a society registered under the West Bengal Societies Registration Act, 1860, and the petitioner No. 2, Assistant Secretary of the said society have made this Writ application challenging the validity of the orders passed by the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education dated 19th Mar, 1977 and 25th July, 1977 respectively holding that the Election of members of the Managing Committee from the Guardians' Constituency was not valid and directing the appointment of an Ad hoc Committee or an Administrator to run the administration of this School as well as to complete re-constitution of the Managing Committee in accordance with the Rules and also by the later order rejecting the prayer for Special Constitution as regards the reconstitution of the Managing Committee of this school.

2. The salient facts of the case as appeared from the Writ application is that the petitioner No. 1 is a society registered under the West Bengal Societies Registration Act, 1860 and the purpose of the society as appears from its memorandum and Articles of Association is to take over, maintain, manage, regulate, conduct, guide, help, locate, remove, improve and develop the present existing educational institution known as Sree Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya; to impart, free of charge or otherwise secular, moral, physical, commercial and religious education according to the tenets of Jain Swetamber Tarapanthi Community in particular and to the boys and girls of other community in general. It was also provided therein that all properties of the Vidyalaya both moveable and immoveable including its funds shall be held by the Board of Trustee in the name of the Vidyalaya and they shall hold the said properties and funds, subject to the Rules and Regulations of the Vidyalaya and Trustees of any settlement endowment or donation shall hold the same subject to the terms thereof. The Executive Committee was vested with powers and duties of appointment of teachers, professors and other officers and employees of the said institution on such terms and conditions as they may think fit and proper and the Executive Committee is also empowered to suspend or dismiss or grant leave to any of the teachers, professors, officers or other employees of the Vidyalaya. It has been stated that the petitioner No. 1 i. e., the society has been all along managing and running three schools, viz., (1) Sree Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya (Boys' High School), (2) Sree Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya (Girls' High School) and (3) Sree Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya (Primary Section). The petitioner No. 1 it has been stated, is the financing, founder and the Managing Body having full control and power over the funds, properties and other assets of all the three Schools. It has also been stated that this society was formed in the year of 1916 for preservation of its culture, heritage, religion, philosophy, ethics, etc., and for imparting moral, physical, commercial and religious education according to the tenets of Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Religion to the children belonging to the said community and also to other boys reading in the said School. The term of the Managing Committee expired sometime on 31st Dec, 1974. The Secretary, Managing Committee of the said institution convened a meeting of the Managing Committee for preparation of the Election Programme for reconstitution of the Managing Committee. The provisional voters' list and inclusion and substitution applications of guardians etc. were finalised according to the said programme at a meeting of the Managing Committee held on 21st Sept. 1974. The Election Officer was also appointed in the meeting of the Managing Committee, and the Election Officer also accepted his appointment and agreed to hold the Election. The election from the teachers' category was completed on 4th Oct. 1974 and election from the categories of Founder, Donor, Medical Practitioner and the Persons interested in education was also completed by the Election Officer on 9th Oct. 1974. The election of the Guardians' Category was scheduled to be held on 13th Oct. 1974, but owing to the filing of a suit being Title Suit No. 1484 of 1974 and an interim order made therein, the said election could not be held on the date fixed. The interim order, was, however, vacated on 19-3-1975 and thereafter election from the Guardians' category was held on 15-4-1975. The same was duly intimated to the respondent No. 3, President, West Bengal Board of Secondary Education and it was also notified on the Notice Board of said institution. No objection was raised to the holding of such election from any quarter. After completion of election the same was duly communicated to the Director of Public Instruction and District Inspector of Schools. But unfortunately no departmental nominee was placed nor any communication was received from the District Inspector of Schools (S. E.) or from the Director of Public Instruction in this matter. In the meantime an Ad hoc Committee was appointed by the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education for running the administration of this institution on 9th Feb. 1976. Against that an application was moved before this Court and after hearing the parties the Court directed to appoint a Supervisor to supervise the election of the Managing Committee to be held within a period of six months. Against that an appeal being F. M. A. No. 491 of 1976 was preferred. The appeal was disposed of with this direction that the appellants will hand over the copies of the documents relating to the holding of election to the learned Advocate appearing for the Board and the President of the Board will consider the papers and also papers which he received from the office of Director of Public Instruction as well as from the District Inspector of Schools and will pass appropriate orders. The President after considering those papers as well as the papers which were supplied by the petitioners held that election held on 15-4-1975 was not valid. It was also held that there should be a fresh election of Guardians' representative according to the Rules and procedure laid down by the Board. The term of the Managing Committee appointed on 7th Feb. 1976 was also over, and in order to avoid an administrative vacuum the Board would take an appropriate step to appoint an Administrator or an Ad hoc Committee with direction to complete reconstitution of Managing Committee according to the Rules. This order was made by the Board on 19th Mar. 1977 and this has been annexed as Annexure 'A' to the petition. Against this order the petitioner moved an application in the Writ jurisdiction and obtained Civil Rule No. 2361 (w) of 1977 and an order of interim injunction restraining the respondents from appointing an Administrator or an Ad hoc Committee in this institution and also from interfering with the functions of the petitioners in respect of administration and management of this institution for a week. This interim order, however, was converted into an order of maintaining status quo in respect of management and administration of the School and the respondents were directed to consider the application of the petitioners for Special Constitution within a period of two months from the date. On 25th July, 1977 the Secretary of the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education intimated the petitioners that the application for Special Constitution was considered by the Board and the same was rejected in respect of this institution. This has been annexed as Annexure 'C' to the petition. The above two orders have been challenged in this Writ application on the ground inter alia that this institution is run by Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya which is a religious and linguistic minority and as such they are entitled to maintain and manage their institution without any interference from the Board in respect of the constitution of the Managing Committee of the School. In other words, it has been submitted that this institution is entitled to get the benefit of Arts. 29 and 30 of the Constitution of India, which provide that a religious community being minority has right to establish and administer educational institutions according to their own choice. It has also been submitted that no reasonable opportunity of hearing was given before rejecting their application for Special Constitution, and therefore, it is violative of the principles of natural justice. The instant Rule was issued and an interim order of maintaining status quo for a period of fourteen days were made from 22nd

Sept. 1977. The said interim order was subsequently vacated.

3. An affidavit-in-opposition has been filed on behalf of Respondents Nos. 2, 3 and 4 sworn by Sri Anil Chandra Biswas, Secretary, West Bengal Board of Secondary Education. It has been stated that the Board took the decision at its meeting dated July 21, 1977 after considering the views of the Director of Secondary Education contained in their memo dated June 14, 1977, to the following effect:—

(a) Sri Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya is said to have been started in 1916.

(b) That an Association named "Sri Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya" is said to have been formed and registered in 1937.

(c) The Association appears to have been formed and registered nearly two decades after the School was started.

(d) The jurisdiction and control of the said Association over the High School is subject to further probe.

(e) The name of the Association as "Sri Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya" is also intriguing.

(f) The affairs of the High School in recent times had been in bad shape in consideration of which the Board appointed an Ad hoc Committee to manage the institution.

4. It was further decided that the Directorate recommended that in order to bring normalcy to the institution and tone up discipline and academic standard the prayer for Special Constitution should be rejected.

5. In para 9 of the said affidavit-in-opposition it has also been averred that from the records of the school as well as from the Souvenir published in 1973 six persons were mentioned as the founders. It has also been stated that the name of the society was not recognised by the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education as the "Founder" of the school, and the object of the society, it was stated, was for taking over management and not to sponsor or start the Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya. It has also been stated in para 10 of the said affidavit-in-opposition that the petitioners in the writ petition are society and Society and the Managing Committee are two distinct entities. As such the writ application at the instance of the society is not maintainable, in law, as the Managing Committee has been superseded earlier, and the same had become defunct long ago having no valid existence. In para 13 of the said affidavit-in-opposition it has been denied that the institution was started according to the tenets of the Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Religion. It has also been averred in para 16 of the affidavit-in-opposition that it is disputed that the petitioners belong to Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Community, which is a religious and linguistic minority community within the meaning of Arts. 26, 29 and 30 of the Constitution of India. In para 23 it has been stated that in considering the application for Special Constitution the Board had to take into consideration the recommendation of the Director of Secondary Education under R. 8 (2) of the Rules of 1969. It has been further stated that the Recognition Committee being a committee of the Board took a tentative decision in this matter as per settled practice and custom of the Board and the final decision had been taken by the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education in its meeting held on July 21, 1977.

6. A supplementary affidavit has been filed on behalf of the petitioners. In para 2 it has been stated that Jain community is divided into two sects, viz., Swetamber community and Digamber community. The petitioners are followers of Swetamber community which is the follower of Lord Mahavira. The Jain community has its own culture, heritage, philosophy and religion. It has its own language, namely Prakrita Language in which its canonical works are written though at present the Prakrita Language is not a spoken language. The Jain community is a religious minority community in India. According to the Census, 1971, the members of the Jain Community formed 0.47% of the total population of India. It has been stated in para 5 of the said supplementary affidavit that Sree Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya (Registered Society) was established in the year of 1916 and at that time 81 families of Jain Swetamber Terapanthi religious and linguistic minority community donated to the tune of Rs. 94,167/- and a Trust Fund was created with the aforesaid donations with the object of establishing a Vidyalaya.

The institution was established to run, manage, establish and administer and to finance the Jain Swetamber Terapanthi, Vidyalaya i.e., the institution for the purpose of imparting the religious education, heritage, philosophy and culture to the children of the members of the said religious community and this institution was established by the said society which was at that time un-registered. The school is being run, managed and administered by Sree Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya, the society and it is the only educational institution of the Jain community. The society which was already in existence being found as early as in 1916 and which established the school also in 1916 was registered under the Societies Registration Act, 1860 in the year 1936-37. 81 families of the community who donated for the Trust Fund for the establishment as well as administration of the said Vidyalaya were made life members of Sree Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya (Regd. Society) under Cl. 4 of the Memorandum of Association. It has also been stated that after the registration of the society in 1937 on an application for recognition made by the society this school got its first affiliation from the Calcutta University vide its letter No. 16169/PRO. 923 dated June 17, 1940. The said recognition continued up to the year 1943. The school due to the outbreak of the second World War was closed. Thereafter the society purchased the land at premises Nos. 3 and 4, Portuguese Church Street, Calcutta comprising of an area of 28 Cottah of land in accordance with the resolutions dated 23-4-45, 28-2-46 and 20-12-48 at a consideration of the Rs. 6,00,000/- in the year 1949. After spending about Rs. 1 lakh in respect of repairing, construction and for furniture and fixtures etc. for the purpose of its educational, religious and social activities as well as for the other purpose of the school, the said school was restarted from Mar. 30 1950, by Sri Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya (Regd. Society) at the said premises and since then the said institution is being run in an atmosphere of religious surroundings and teachings of the Jain religion which is one of the subjects of the school's curriculum. On Dec. 13, 1950, the petitioner No. 1 society applied for renewal of affiliation to the Registrar, University of Calcutta.

On Jan. 1, 1952 the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education by his letter dated 13th Dec. 1951, through its Secretary intimated the Secretary of the petitioner No. 1 that the President granted provisional recognition to the school for one year with effect from 1st Jan. 1952 subject to fulfilment of certain conditions. A Managing Committee thereafter was constituted according to the Rules of the School Code, 1961. The election of the members of the Managing Committee was not held according to the Rules of Management framed under the Act. But it was completed by nomination by the Executive Committee of the petitioner No. 1 and the petitioner No. 1 requested the Board of Secondary Education to approve the same. The Board allowed the unapproved Managing Committee to function as a Caretaker Committee till the reconstituted Managing Committee is approved by the Board. It has also been stated that the society is running the administration of the school and it has been always giving the financial aid and assistance to the members of the teaching and non-teaching staff and also for other purposes of the school as the Founder of the said school. It has also been stated that all the furniture and fixtures and all other assets of all these four schools which are being run in the said premises have been provided by Sri Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya (Regd. Society), the petitioner No. 1, and the same belongs to it. It has been further stated that R. 8 of the Rules of Management of Recognised Non-government Institutions (Aided and Unaided) is violative of Art. 14 of the Constitution of India inasmuch as there is no clear guideline suggesting in which case the Special Constitution would be sanctioned and in which case it would not. No affidavit in counter have been made controverting the statement of allegations made in supplementary affidavit.

7. Mr. Rabindra Nath Mitra, learned Advocate, appearing on behalf of the petitioner has submitted that the Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya i.e. the High School for Boys and Girls has been established and administered by the Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya, a society registered under the Societies Registration Act for the purpose of imparting the religious education, heritage and culture of Swetamber community which is a religious minority community having a special script, Prakrita of its own. It has been stated by Mr. Mitra that this institution is further entitled to the benefit of Arts. 26, 29 and 30 of the Constitution. R. 8 of the Rules framed under the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education Act, 1969 for Management of Recognised Non-government Institutions (Aided and Unaided) are not applicable to the reconstitution of the Managing Committee of this instant institution. Several decisions have been cited at the Bar on this point. It has been submitted further that the institution was not founded by the six members of the Jain community as has been stated in affidavit-in-opposition. This will appear from the Souvenir published in 1973 and also from the past records of this school. It has been submitted on the other hand, that it would appear clearly from the Souvenir as well as from the Register of life members maintained by the school that 81 persons belonging to Swetamber Jain community donated a sum of Rs. 94,187/- for the purpose of establishment of this institution, i.e. Sree Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya. It has also been submitted that the petitioner No. 1 is a society registered under the Societies Registration Act and it has been empowered to take over, maintain, manage and regulate the existing educational institution known as Sree Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya and also to impart secular, commercial and religious education according to the tenets of the Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Religion to the Boys and Girls of the said community and also to the Boys and Girls of the other community in general. It has further been submitted that the institution was established and run by the society which was at first an unregistered society and was subsequently registered under the Societies Registration Act.

8. It has been submitted by Mr. Mitra that the order passed by the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education at its meeting held on July 21, 1977 rejecting the prayer for Special Constitution in respect of this institution is wholly illegal, arbitrary and unwarranted inasmuch as the Board simply endorsed the report of the Recognition Committee of the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education without condering the same and coming to its independent decision. It has been submitted that to grant or not to grant Special Constitution is exclusively within the power of the Board and it is for the Board to decide the same at its meeting. The Board cannot send the matter to the Recognition Committee for its consideration and cannot merely accept the report of the Recognition Committee without giving into its own decision on this matter. It has been also submitted that the Recognition Committee is not empowered under the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education Act to consider the matter relating to the grants of Special Constitution for reconstitution of the Managing Committee and the impugned order is wholly illegal and without jurisdiction. The consideration of the said report by the Board vitiated the impugned order as contained in the letter of the Secretary dated July 25, 1977. It has been further submitted by Mr. Mitra that the Rules framed under the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education Act, 1963 for Management of Recognised Non-government Institutions (Aided and Unaided) Rules, 1969 shall not affect the power of the State Government to frame Rules for composition, powers and functions of the Managing Committee of an institution to which the provisions of Art. 26 or Art. 30 of the Constitution apply. The instant institution being established and administered by the religious minority is immune from the application of the provisions of these Rules and as such the provision is to be made by the Government for the constitution, powers and functions of the Managing Committee of this institution. Therefore, the rejection of the application for Special Constitution by the Board under R. 8 sub-rule (2) of the said Rules is also illegal and unwarranted being in contravention of the above Rule.

9. Mr. A. P. Chatterjee, learned Standing Counsel, appearing on behalf of the respondents Nos. 2, 3 and 4 has submitted firstly that in order to come within the provisions of Arts. 26, 29 and 30 it is incumbent on the part of the petitioners to prove that this institution was established and it is being administered by a minority sect either based on religion or on language. Mr. Chatterjee has submitted that this institution was founded by six persons whose names appear from old records of this school as well as from the Souvenir published in 1973, and the Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya, the petitioner No. 1, which is a society was registered under the Societies Registration Act some time in 1936-37 and from its Memorandum and Articles of Association, it appears that the society has been formed to run and administer the said institution which has been established already. Mr. Chatterjee, therefore submitted that Art. 30 is not applicable inasmuch as the institution was not established by the members of the minority sect or in other words, by the petitioner No. 1 — a registered society, for the purpose of promoting the religious and cultural tenets of this Jain Swetamber Community. In connection with this submission Mr. Chatterjee has also submitted that Jain Swetamber sect which is one of the sects within Hindu Religion cannot be termed a religious minority particularly in State of West Bengal where members of the Hindu Religion are admittedly a majority community. It has also been submitted by Mr. Chatterjee that Jain religion is a part of the Hindu Religion and Prakrita script which is claimed as the separate script of this sect is denied by Mr. Chatterjee the learned Standing Counsel. He has submitted that Prakrita is not the spoken language of the members of this community and it cannot be said to be the script of this community. It has also been submitted that several languages such as Sanskrit, Bengali etc. derived many expressions from this script. Therefore, it has been submitted by Mr. Chatterjee that this Jain Swetamber Community cannot be said to have a separate language or script of their own. In support of his submission Mr. Chatterjee strongly relied on the decision reported in AIR 1971 SC 1731 as well as 25 Cal WN 273 : (AIR 1921 PC 77) and (1904) ILR 31 Cal 11 (PC).

10. Mr. Chatterjee has also submitted that the decision of the Board in refusing to grant Special Constitution as regards the formation of the Managing Committee of this institution cannot be assailed on the ground that the Board considered the report of the Recognition Committee. The Recognition Committee which is formed under Section 18 of the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education Act, 1963 has been empowered to advise the Board on all the matters concerning the recognition of institution. The Board being a statutory body and an administrative authority as distinct from a Tribunal or a judicial body in the matter of considering an application for grant of Special Constitution it takes the opinion of the Recognition Committee in this matter for the purpose of giving a proper and fair decision of this matter, the said decision or determination of the Board cannot be said to be vitiated on that ground. It is entirely within the discretion of the Board how to exercise its discretionary power in this regard. Mr. Chatterjee has referred in this connection to the decisions of Local Govt. Board v. Arlidge (1915 AC 120).

11. As regard the first submission that the institution being established by the petitioner No. 1 for promotion of the religious tenets and culture of the Jain Swetamber Community, is entitled to the benefit of Arts. 29 and 30 of the Constitution of India, it is necessary to consider the scope of Arts. 29 and 30 of the Constitution of India which guarantee cultural and educational rights of the citizens belonging to a particular sect having a distinct language, script and culture of its own as well as minorities either based on religion or language to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice. This question has been clearly decided by the Supreme Court in re: Kerala Education Bill 1957, AIR 1958 SC 956 at p. 976 para 20 S. R. Das, C. J. who spoke for the Supreme Court observed as follows:

"The text and the marginal notes of both the articles show that their purpose is to confer those fundamental rights on certain sections of the community which constitute minority communities. Under Cl. (1) of Art. 29 any section of the citizens residing in the territory of India or any part thereof having a distinct language, script or culture of its own has the rights to conserve the same. It is obvious that a minority community can effectively conserve its language, script or culture by and through educational institutions and, therefore, the right to establish and maintain educational institutions of its choice is a necessary concomitant to the right to conserve its distinctive language, script or culture and that is what is conferred on all minorities by Article 30 (1) which has hereinbefore been quoted in full. This right, however, is subject to Cl. (2) of Art. 29 which provides that no citizen shall be denied admission into any educational institution maintained by the State or receiving aid out of State funds on grounds only of religion, race, caste, language or any of them."

It has also been held in the said case that to constitute a minority community in order to claim the fundamental rights guaranteed by Arts. 29 (1) & 30 (1) of the Constitution persons belonging to that community must numerically be a minority in the particular region or State in which the educational institution is or intended to be situated. It is to be considered first whether persons belonging to the Jain Swetamber faith do form numerically a minority compared to the total population of this State. It has been stated on oath in para 19 of the petition that Jain Swetamber Terapanthi sect, is a religious and linguistic minority. In the supplementary affidavit sworn on behalf of the petitioners on 22nd Apr. 1981 it has been averred in para 4 of that affidavit that the Jain Community is a religious minority community in India and according to the Census of 1971, the members of this community formed only 0.47%. There is no counter to the supplementary affidavit and this statement has not been controverted by the respondents Nos. 2 to 4. Moreover, the averments made in para 19 of the petition have also not been specifically traversed. The deponent in the affidavit-in-opposition merely disputed this statement made in para 19 of the petition. Therefore, in view of this state of pleadings, in my opinion, the members professing Jain faith and belonging to the Jain Swetamber Terapanthi sect do constitute a religious minority in India, particularly in West Bengal where this educational institution is situated. The next question interlinked with this is whether this Jain religion is a part of the Hindu Religion and as such the members belonging to the said religion cannot be called as belonging to a religious minority. Mr. Chatterjee, the learned Standing Counsel, has argued with a great force that Jain Religion is one of the branches of Hindu Religion and essentially and in fact it constitutes a part of the Hindu Religion. Therefore according to Mr. Chatterjee the members professing such faith cannot be termed as belonging to a sect different from the members of the Hindu Religion within the meaning of Arts. 29 and 30 of the Constitution of India. This argument has been tried to be repelled by Mr. R. N. Mitra by submitting that Jain Swetamber sect is different from the Hindu Religion and for this reason the Jains have been mentioned separately in the various Acts, such as Hindu Succession Act, 1956, Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956, Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956. According to Mr. Mitra the member belonging to the Jain sect profess a faith different from the Hindu Religion and as such they are entitled to the protection of Arts. 26, 29 and 30 of the Constitution of India as it is one of the religious minorities in the State of West Bengal.

12. Article 26 of the Constitution of India guarantees the fundamental right to every religious denomination or any section thereof to establish and maintain institution for religious purpose as well as to manage its own affairs in the matter of religion.

13. The word "denomination" has been defined in the Webster's Seventh New College Dictionary as a religious organisation, a general name for a category. The word "Sect" has been defined in the Webster's Seventh New College Dictionary, as a class or order, a separate group adhering to a distinctive doctrine. In 1954 SCR 1005 at pp. 1028-1029 : (AIR 1954 SC 282 at p. 291) the Commr., Hindu Religious Endowment, Madras v. Sree Lakshmindra Thirtha Swamiar, it was held that under Art. 26 (b) of the Constitution a religious denomination or organisation including a math enjoys complete autonomy in the matter of deciding what rights and ceremonies are essential according to the tenets of the religion they hold and no doubt the authority has no jurisdiction to interfere with their decision in such matters. Art. 29 guaranteed the fundamental right of any section of a citizen residing in the territory of India having a distinct language, script or culture of its own to conserve the same — only limitation being that in case of an educational institution maintained by such section and receiving aid out of the State Fund it cannot deny admission to its institution on grounds of religion race, caste or language. Similarly, Art. 30 ensures that all minority communities either based on religion or on language shall have the right to establish and administer educational institution of their choice. The scope of these above two Articles were considered in AIR 1958 SC 956 and it was held that the right of a minority community to establish and maintain educational institution of its choice is a necessary concomitant to the right to conserve its distinct language, script or culture, and this is conferred by Art. 30 (1). This is subject to cl. (2) of Art. 29. It has also been held that this benefit is not restricted only to the educational institution established by the religious or linguistic minority or students belonging to them. Such institution may also admit students of other community, and there being no limitation as to the subjects to be taught in such an educational institution, this institution may impart secular education also.

14. In AIR 1963 SC 540 Sidhrajibhai Sabbai v. State of Gujarat, Shah, J. who spoke for the Supreme Court observed as follows:—"The right established by Art. 30 (1) is a fundamental right declared in terms absolute. Unlike fundamental freedom guaranteed by Art. 19, it is not subject to reasonable restrictions. It is intended to be a real right for the protection of minorities in the matter of setting up of educational institution of their own choice, the right is intended to be effective and is not to be whittled down by so called regulative measures conceived in the interest not of the minority educational institution, but of the public or the nation as a whole. If every order which while maintaining the formal character of a minority institution destroys the power of administration is held justifiable, because it is in the public or national interest though not in its interest as an educational institution, the right guaranteed by Art. 30 (1) will be but a "teasing illusion," "a promise of unreality."

15. Similar view was taken in AIR 1969 SC 465 at p. 469 para 8, W. Proost v. State of Bihar, AIR 1974 SC 1389, The Ahmedabad St. Xaviers College Society v. State of Gujarat. Therefore, to avail of the benefit of Arts. 26, 29 and 30 it is necessary to establish that the Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Sect is a minority sect professing a faith different from the Hindu religious faith. In AIR 1972 SC 2119 Wealth Tax Commr. v. Champa Kumari at p. 2124 para 11 the Supreme Court observed that the question whether the Jains are a sect of Hindus or Hindu dissenters are not required to be decided in this case. Even if the religions are different, what is common is that all those who are to be governed by the provisions of these enactments are included in the 'Hindu'. In the statutes such as Hindu Marriage Act, Hindu Succession Act, Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, 1956 Jains were mentioned specifically and as such they are to be governed by the provisions of these enactments as the Hindus. The statutes thus accord legislative recognition to the fact that even though Jains may not be Hindus by religion they are to be governed by the same laws as the Hindus. In this view of the matter the expression 'Hindu undivided family' will certainly include the 'Jain undivided family'. "Therefore this decision clearly lays down that Jains may not be Hindus by religion. Para 6 cl. (iv) of the Hindu Law provides that the Hindu Law applies to Jains, Buddhist, Sikhs etc. in India. Therefore Jains have been specifically mentioned in the Hindu Law for the purpose of application of Hindu Law to them. In (1904) ILR 31 Cal 11 Bhagwan Koer v. J. C. Bose it has been held by the Privy Council that a Sikh is a Hindu within the meaning of the word Hindu as used in S. 2 of Probate and Administration Act (V) of 1881. It has also been held that as to Jains in India Hindu Law applies generally to their case in the absence of custom varying that law.

16. The Privy Council has observed in the case of Sheokuarbai v. Jeoraj, 25 Cal WN 273: (AIR 1921 PC 77) that the Jains are of Hindu origin, they are Hindu dissenters, although they do not practise the Sradhs or ceremony for the dead which is at the base of the religious theory of adoption, the Jains have so generally adopted the Hindu Law that the Hindu rules of adoption are applied to them in the absence of some contrary usage.

17. It has been submitted relying on this observation by Mr. Chatterjee, learned Standing Counsel, that Jains are Hindus and as such they cannot be regarded as a sect different from Hindu Religion for the purpose of the application of Art. 30 of the Constitution.

18. In my opinion considering the decision in AIR 1972 SC 2119 and also of the specific mention of Jains both in the Hindu Law as well as in the various Acts such as Hindu Marriage Act, Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act, Hindu Succession Act etc. Jain Svetamber Terapanthi Sect professes a faith different from Hindu Religion. In this connection I am fortified with the pronouncement of the Supreme Court referred earlier in 1954 S C R 1005 : (AIR 1954 S C 282) as well as the definition given to the word 'Denomination' and 'Sect' as used in Art. 26 of the Constitution and Art. 29 of the Constitution of India. The members of Jain Sect as appears from the statements made in the petition as well as in the supplementary affidavit do form minority in comparison to the total population of India as well as of West Bengal and according to the decision of the Supreme Court in AIR 1958 SC 956 at p. 977 para 21 that the minority is to be determined by reference to the entire population of that State. The Jain Svetamber Sect is therefore a religious minority in the State of West Bengal and as such it is entitled to the benefit conferred by Arts. 29 and 30 of the Constitution of India.

19. The argument of Mr. Chatterjee, the learned Standing Counsel, that the Jain Svetamber Community is a part of the Hindu religion and members of the Hindu religion constitute the majority community in the State of West Bengal and so the members of the Jain Svetamber Sect is not a religious minority is devoid of any merit. The decision in AIR 1971 SC 1731, D. A. V. College, Bhatinda v. State of Punjab does not support the submissions made by Mr. Chatterjee. In this case the question arose whether the D. A. V. College which was founded by the D. A. V. College Trust and run by a society registered under the Societies Registration Act and as association comprised of Arya Samajis are entitled to the benefit of Arts. 26, 29 and 30 of the Constitution as the members of the Arya Samaj is a religious and linguistic minority having 'Devnagri, script in running this college according to their choice and the circular issued by the Punjab University that Punjabi "will" be the sole medium of instruction and examination for the Pre-University even for science group with effect from the Academic Session 1970-71" is invalid and inapplicable so far as this college is concerned. It was held that it is not necessary to go into the question of whether it is a separate religious denomination for the purpose of Art. 26 (1) (a) or a linguistic minority for the purpose of Art. 30 (1) because if it is established that the Arya Samaj had a distinct script of their own and they were a religious minority, the Arya Samajis are entitled to invoke the protection of Arts. 29 (1) and 30 (1). It was held that the Arya Samajis who are a part of the Hindu Community in Punjab are a religious minority and that they had a distinct script of their own, the Devnagri which entitled them to invoke the guarantees under the aforesaid provisions of the Constitution.

20. The next question that requires consideration is whether the Jain Svetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya has been established by the members of the minority community belonging to the said sect, or in other words by the petitioner No. 1, the registered society. It has now been established by a decision of the Supreme Court in AIR 1968 SC 662 that to have the benefit of Art. 30 (1) of the Constitution the institution must be established and administered by the religious or linguistic minority. It has been submitted that this institution was established some time in 1916 and the registered society, i.e., the petitioner No. 1 was registered under the Societies Registration Act, in 1936-37 to run, maintain etc., the administration of this school already established. It has also been submitted that the institution was established only by persons, whose names appear as Founders from the Souvenir published in 1973 that about 81 persons belonging to Jain Svetamber Sect donated a considerable sum of money for the establishment of this institution. It also appears that this institution was temporarily closed during the Second World War and thereafter these donors and other members of the community got the petitioner No. 1 - society, which according to them was in existence from the beginning of the starting of the school was registered in 1936-37, and the society was entrusted with the entire functions for running the institution after the present site was acquired by the Society and the school buildings were reconstructed and/or remodelled and all the furniture and fixtures were also purchased by the Society with the funds donated by the members of the minority community to the society. It also appears that all the members of the society are members belonging to the minority community and it is they who contributed a considerable amount of money as stated by the petitioner amounting to Rs. 56 lakhs of rupees for carrying on the administration of this school. It also appears from the Memorandum of Association of the society that this school has been established and is being run for the purpose of promoting the culture and religious tenets of this sect primarily, along with the secular education imparted to its pupils, majority of which hailed from this minority sect or religion.

21. In these circumstances, I am constrained to hold that this institution has been established by the petitioner No. 1 society solely with the funds contributed by the members of that religious minority community viz, Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Sect primarily for the purpose of promoting their culture and religious tenets and imparting the same to the pupils belonging to their community. Therefore this institution is entitled to the benefit of Art. 30 (1) of the Constitution of India. The impugned order rejecting the prayer for Special Constitution as regards the constitution and/or reconstitution of the Managing Committee of this school is therefore wholly illegal and bad. I also hold that R. 8 of the Rules framed for Management of Recognised Non-government Institutions (Aided or Unaided), 1969 is not applicable to this institution inasmuch as it purports to interfere with the fundamental freedom guaranteed to the religious minority, i.e., the Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Sect to administer their educational institutions according to their choice. It will be appropriate to refer in this connection to the observations of the Supreme Court in AIR 1979 SC 52 (61) where it has been held that the right to administer the institution of minority's choice enshrined in Art. 30 (1) of the Constitution means 'management of affairs' of the institution. This right is, however, subject to the regulatory power of the State. This regulatory power is to be exercised in such a manner as to benefit the institution but if it exceeds that limit and imposes what is in truth not a mere regulation but an impairment of the right to administer the Article comes into play and the interference cannot be justified by pleading the interests of general public, the interest justifying interference can only be the interests of the minority concerned. Therefore, in my opinion, R. 8 is not applicable to the Constitution of the Managing Committee of this institution and the impugned order rejecting the prayer for Special Constitution is, to that extent, illegal and void.

22. In view of the findings made above it is not necessary to consider whether the order refusing Special Constitution by the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education dated 4th of July, 1977 is one made in accordance with the provisions of R. 8 (2) of the Rules for Management of Recognised Non-Government Institutions (Aided and Unaided), 1969 because of the consideration by the Board of the report of the Recognition Committee whom the matter was referred. However, as arguments have been advanced by the parties on this point, I think it proper to deal with this branch of submission made by the learned Advocates for the parties. Sub-rule (2) of R. 8 of the said Rules made in 1969 was amended and substituted by new Sub-r. (2) published in Calcutta Gazette dated 11th Jan. 1974. This Rule empowers the Board to approve on the application of any institution of the Special Constitution of a Committee in favour of such institution or class of institutions and in approving of Special Constitution of a Committee the Board shall pay due regard to the recommendations of the Director. This Rule merely requires the Board while considering the application for approval for Special Constitution of a Committee made by any institution shall consider the recommendation of the Director of Public Instruction, West Bengal. Therefore, this Rule does not require the Board to take the opinion and/or report of the Recognition Committee on this matter. Moreover, Sec. 19 of the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education Act, 1963 clearly specifies the powers and functions of the Recognition Committee, Sub-sec. (3) of the said Section provides that the Recognition Committee shall advise the Board on all matters concerning the recognition of institutions and no recognition to any institution shall be accorded by the Board except on the recommendation of the Recognition Committee. Therefore, the Recognition Committee which is a statutory body has not been empowered to exercise any power of considering and giving any opinion on the question of the Special Constitution of a Committee of an institution. The resolution adopted by the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education at its meeting held on 4-7-1977 wherein the report of the Recognition Committee was considered and the prayer for Special Constitution in respect of Sri Jain Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya was rejected is, in my opinion, not a proper and valid order as the said order is vitiated by taking into consideration of the report of the Recognition Committee and determining matter on its basis. It is now well settled that statutory powers are to be exercised by the statutory bodies in the manner as provided in the statute or statutory Rules and Regulations framed thereunder. Neither R. 8 (2) nor Sec. 19 of the said Act thus provide for referring the matter to the Recognition Committee on the question of Special Constitution of committee of an institution and consideration of the said report by the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education.

23. Mr. Chatterjee has tried to submit referring to the decision made by the House of Lords in the case of Local Govt. Board v. Arlidge (1915) A. C. 120 where question arose whether the Local Board rightly determined a matter on the report of the Inspector. It was held that when the duty of deciding an appeal is imposed on the authority, the authority is to act judicially while deciding the appeal. In doing so the authority may obtain information in any way it thought best giving a fair opportunity to those who were parties in the controversy to correct or contradict any relevant statement prejudicial to their view. If the authority failed in this duty, its order might be the subject of certiorari and it must itself be the subject of mandamus. This case has got no application to the facts of the present case in view of the fact that the Board was empowered by R. 8 (2) to exercise its power in determining Special Constitution of a committee in respect of an institution in the manner provided therein. I have held that the Board while deciding the matter did not act in accordance with the manner laid down in the said Rule and as such the decision is bad.

24. In the premises aforesaid this Rule succeeds and is made absolute.

25. Let a Writ in the nature of Mandamus be issued on the respondents Nos. 2, 3 & 4 to forbear from giving effect to the order of appointment of Administrator or Ad hoc Committee as made on Mar. 19, 1977 mentioned in Annexure 'A' to the petition as well as the order dated 4th of July, 1977 rejecting prayer of Special Constitution of Managing Committee for Swetamber Terapanthi Vidyalaya as annexed in the Annexure 'C' to the petition.

26. Let a Writ of Certiorari be issued directing the respondents to quash and set aside the impugned orders mentioned in Annexures 'A' and 'C' to the petition.

27. There will, however, be no order as to costs.

28. The prayer for stay is refused.

Petition allowed.

Claim cannot be granted in favour of 'B' after expiry of term of licence — Sec. 146 and O. 22, R. 10 do not apply.

Where the alleged interest of the plaintiff 'A' in the disputed land was not identical or at par with that of defendant 'B' owner of the land, inasmuch as the former held profits a prendre for a fixed term of only one year, i. e. 1375 B. S., then relief claimed by 'A' for permanent injunction that 'C' cannot disturb his licensee's right could not be granted, after expiry of period of licence, to 'B' on the ground that there was assignment or devolution of 'A's' interest within the meaning of O. 22 R. 10 in favour of 'B'. Rule 10 of O. 22 or S. 146 would have no application to such a case. The Court also could not take note of the subsequent grant of licence by 'B' in favour of 'A'. (Case law discussed).

N. R. Chatterjee, for Appellants; Dipak Kumar Sen Gupta (for No. 1), Saktinath Mukherjee with Samaresh Nandy (for No. 2), for Respondents.

JUDGMENT:— The plaintiff has alleged that the three disputed plots belonged to pro forma defendant No. 2 who retained the same under the provisions of the West Bengal Acquisition Act. He paid licence fee of Rs. 300/- and on the 15th Sravan, 1375 B. S., took a licence of that property for that year from pro forma defendant No. 2. The defendant No. 1 came to catch fish from that pond, but he put up obstruction. Due to such threat, the plaintiff has instituted the present suit for a permanent injunction on declaration that he is a licensee regarding that property in question under pro forma defendant No. 2.

2. Defendant No. 1 has filed a written statement denying the plaintiff's allegations. His defence is that out of the big plot No. 518, he took settlement of two bighas on the north east from pro forma defendant No. 2. He is in possession of that property. One Nitya Gopal Biswas took settlement of plot No. 293 and the area of the land taken settlement of by the latter from pro forma defendant No. 2 is 2.72 acres. He is a bargadar of that land under Nitya Gopal.

3. The learned Munsif believed the plaintiff's version and decreed the suit. The defendant No. 1 filed an appeal. The appellate court affirmed the decision of the learned Munsif and held that the case of the plaintiff's right in the disputed property as a licensee was true. The defendant No. 1 had no interest in two bighas of land out of the disputed plot No. 518. Nitya Gopal's case of settlement of 2.72 acres of land was not true. The appeal was dismissed. Hence this appeal on behalf of the defendant No. 1.

4. It has been contended on behalf of the appellant that when the judgment was delivered, the plaintiff was no longer a licensee regarding the disputed property. The case became infructuous, when the appeal was filed. P. W. 3, Gunindra Choudhury, admitted the receipts, Exts. A to A/2. But the courts below did not consider this material evidence. Defendant No. 1 called for the Muris from the office of the pro forma defendant No. 2, but those documents were not produced. Hence there will be an adverse inference against the pro forma defendant No. 2 for non-production of those documents. The learned courts below illegally rejected the evidence of the D. Ws. The entire evidence given by them was not discussed or considered. The evidence of P. W. 3, Gunindra Choudhury, was also not considered. There was a case with Maharaja of Nadia pro forma defendant No. 2, under Sec. 144 of the Criminal P. C. because there was an obstruction of the way to the disputed property and a police report, Ext. I, was submitted. But the courts below did not consider that report, Ext. I. The letter, Ext. E, written from the office of the Maharaja of Nadia shows that a direction was given to Bata Krishto Mondal not to depose in favour of defendant No. 1. Bata Krishto was intentionally withheld by pro forma defendant No. 2 and hence, there will be an adverse inference against him. In fact, pro forma defendant No. 2 has been pulling the strings from behind. The courts below illegally rejected the dakhilas, Ext. B series.

5. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent No. 1 supported the decision of the courts below.

6. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent No. 2 has stated that the appellant does not claim any title to the plot No. 293. He only says that the plot was erroneously recorded in the name of pro forma defendant No. 2 in the R. S. Khatian.

7. Now question arises whether the appellant has any interest in two bighas of land on the north-eastern portion of the big plot No. 518. That plot measures 17.94 acres. No commission was taken out by defendant No. 1 to establish the identity regarding the alleged two bighas of land. Moreover, both the courts below have concurrently disbelieved this portion of the appellant's case. Hence in second appeal this finding of fact cannot be disturbed.

8. The appellant does not claim interest in the second plot No. 562.

9. Then about the third disputed plot No. 293. The police report, Ext. I, cannot be considered in civil cases of this type. Bata Krishna is not the plaintiff's employee. There is no question of drawing any adverse inference for his non-examination, as defendant No. 2 is not the plaintiff. Nitya Gopal Biswas was not examined as a D. W. There is no explanation why he was not examined on behalf of the defendant No. 1. The entry in the R. S. Khatian regarding plot No. 293 is against defendant No. 1. That is a big plot. It has been rightly stated that Bata Krishto Mondal, who purported to issue dakhilas, Ext. A series, had no authority to grant the same. The courts below rightly negatived the appellants' claim, that of that plot 2.72 acres of land had been settled by the estate of Maharaja of Nadia to Nitya Gopal Biswas. This finding cannot be disturbed in second appeal. Consequently the appellant's claim, that he is a bargadar under Nitya Gopal Biswas regarding such 2.72 acres of land, cannot be accepted. The presumption of correctness of the R. S. Khatian has not been rebutted. The decision of the final court of fact cannot be reopened in second appeal, however erroneous that decision may be. This was laid down by the Supreme Court in the case in AIR 1959 SC 57 and of Kshitish Chandra in AIR 1981 SC 707. Hence though there was non-consideration of the receipts, Ext. A series, by the courts below, the judgment is not vitiated nor there was any failure of justice because the case of settlement in favour of Nitya Gopal Biswas was not established by clear and cogent evidence. Moreover, all these grounds were not taken by the appellant in his memo of appeal.

10. The important question arises whether the case has become infructuous. It has been stated that the plaintiff's case is that a licence regarding the disputed property had been granted to him only for the year 1375 B. S. Since that period is over, he cannot ask for declaration of his interest as a licensee and for a permanent injunction.

11. It has been argued on behalf of the respondent No. 2 that as the owner of the property, he is in constructive possession of the same through the plaintiff, who is in immediate possession and possession of defendant No. 2 is only "mediate." Reference has been made to pages 282, 283 and 285 of Salmond's Jurisprudence, 12th Edition. It has been contended that even where the landlord or the bailor transfers possession of the property to his tenant or his bailee, the latter and not the former has a right of action. When that property was in the possession of the plaintiff, who had merely profits a prendre, defendant No. 2 had no right of action. But there was a change of circumstances within the meaning of the provisions of O. 22 R. 10 and Sec. 146 of the Civil P. C. as it has been held that yearly licence was later granted to the plaintiff by defendant No. 2 up to 1379 B. S., i. e. beyond the 5th July, 1972, which is the date of the decree of the trial court. Due to such subsequent event, the latter has a right of action to ask for declaration regarding such right of a licensee and for permanent injunction as well.

12. Reference has been made to the case of Rai Charan v. Biswanath in (1914) 20 Cal LJ 107: (AIR 1915 Cal 103) to show that the trial of a suit cannot be arrested merely by reason of the devolution of interest of the plaintiff. The successor-in-interest may, if he chooses, obtain leave of the court under O. 22, R. 10 of the Code to continue the suit. In the case of Sourindra Mohun v. Siromoni Debi in (1901) ILR 28 Cal 171, the suit was filed by one Bishnu Charan Kaviraj as Manager of the Dhalbhoom encumbered estate against Raja Sourindra Mohun for arrears of rent. Subsequently, a prayer was made for substitution under Sec. 372 of the old Civil P. C. The Manager was only an agent of the party. Subsequently, there was a change of the ownership pending the suit and consequently, the prayer for substitution was allowed. In the case of Bepin Behari v. K. S. Bonnerjee in (1922) 26 Cal WN 361: (AIR 1921 Cal 422) a rent suit was filed by the Receiver of an estate and a decree passed. Subsequently, the Receiver was discharged and there was a devolution of interest. The decree made in favour of the Receiver was held not to be a bad one, but it would enure for the benefit of the party, on whom the interest devolved. Reference has also been made to the case of Saila Bala v. Nirmala Sundari in AIR 1958 SC 394 at p. 397 to show that even if a suit is pending, when the transfer in favour of the appellant was made, that would not affect the result when no application had been made by her to be brought on the record. An appeal is a proceeding for the purpose of Sec. 146 of the Civil P. C. and the expression "claiming under" used therein is wide enough to include cases of devolution and assignment, mentioned in O. 22 R. 10 of the Code. This decision was followed by the Supreme Court in the case of Zila Singh v. Hazari in AIR 1979 SC 1066 at pages 1071 and 1072, where it has been stated that Sec. 146 has been introduced with the object of facilitating the exercise of rights by persons in whom they came to be vested by devolution or assignment and being a beneficent provision, should be construed liberally so as to advance justice and not in a restricted or technical sense.

13. Reference has been made to Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 12, 3rd Edition, para 1359, to show that the owner of profits a prendre can bring an action for trespass at common law for their infringement. Although his primary remedy is trespass, he may in a suitable case maintain an action for nuisance if he is disturbed or adversely affected in the enjoyment. It has been urged that there was a devolution of interest in his favour within the meaning of provisions of Sec. 146 and O. 22 R. 10 of the Civil P. C. Defendant No. 1 has been trying to disturb his possession therein. Hence, the entire relief asked for by the plaintiff can be granted in his favour.

14. The plaintiff has made out a case that the owner-defendant No. 2 had parted with his possession in the disputed property and granted a licence thereof to him for 1375 B. S. In the case of State of West Bengal v. Saradiya Thakurani in AIR 1971 SC 2097 and of Ahindra v. Manmatha Nath reported in (1973) 77 Cal WN 129: AIR 1973 Cal 168 (SB), it has been stated that such right is a licence. In my opinion, it is not a bare licence as such licence is coupled with a grant. It is, therefore, more than a mere licence for it is profits a prendre. In the case of Bihar Eastern Gangetic Fishermen Co-operative Society Ltd. v. Sipahi Singh in AIR 1977 SC 2149 at p. 2153, it has been stated that the right to catch fish and carry it away being profits a prendre has to be regarded as immovable property within the meaning of the Transfer of Property Act read with Sec. 3 (26) of the General Clauses Act. The grant of profits a prendre has to be made by a registered instrument. It has been further observed that even if the settlement of jalkar is regarded as a lease, it would not make any difference because a lease of fishery, which is immovable property as defined by Sec. 2 (6) of the Registration Act, if it is for any term exceeding one year or reserves a yearly rent, has also to be made by a registered document as required by Sec. 17 (1) (d) of the Indian Registration Act and Sec. 107 of the Transfer of Property Act. Hence the aforesaid cases of Sourindra v. Siromoni ((1901) ILR 28 Cal 171) (supra) and Bepin Bihari v. K. S. Bonnerjee (AIR 1921 Cal 422) (supra) are distinguishable.

15. The case of Rai Charan v. Biswanath (AIR 1915 Cal 103) (supra) was on a different point because that was a suit for recovery of possession of land with mesne profits on declaration of title to the property in question. In the case of Saila Bala v. Nirmala Sundari (AIR 1958 SC 394) (supra), the second respondent, Sudhir Kumar, was the owner of two houses in Calcutta. He executed a mortgage regarding those houses in favour of the 1st respondent, Nirmala Sundari. The latter instituted the suit on the mortgage and a preliminary decree was passed. In a proceeding, which arose out of the execution of the mortgage decree, one Saila Bala, appellant of that case, sought to intervene, on the footing that she had purchased the property comprised in the decree. But after her purchase, the 1st respondent started the proceedings for the sale of the property. So, that case is clearly distinguishable.

16. Then about the other Supreme Court decision of Zila Singh v. Hazari (AIR 1979 SC 1066) (supra). That was a pre-emption case. The question arose whether the purchaser of the property could apply for execution of the decree.

17. In the case of Ram Ratan v. Bishnu Chand reported in (1907) 11 Cal WN 732, Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee and Halmwood, JJ. have stated that as a general rule, a court of appeal will confine itself to the state of the case at the time such judgment of the trial court was rendered and will not take notice of any facts which may have arisen subsequently. But in exceptional case, the Court will depart from this rule to shorten litigation and attain the ends of justice. It will appear from page 734 of the report that the court can take notice of the subsequent event where the plaintiff, who sued at a time when he had no subsisting title, was not allowed the benefit of a title which had accrued to him during the pendency of the case. This decision was approved by the Supreme Court in the case of Nair Service Society v. K. C. Alexander in AIR 1968 SC 1165 at p. 1177 of the report. In the case of Nuri Mian v. Ambica in (1916) 20 CWN 1099: (AIR 1917 Cal 716), the prayer was for pre-emption. There was a partition of the property after the suit was filed, but before the decree was passed. It was held that the court was bound to take notice of such subsequent event, because by a partition, the plaintiff's interest in the property was gone and so, the suit could not be maintained: vide page 1108 of the report.

18. Law is that a case is to be decided on the cause of action given in the plaint. Of course, this rule admits of some exceptions. But this is not a case where the application of any exception is called for. The alleged interest of plaintiff is not identical or at par with that of defendant No. 2, inasmuch as the former holds profits a prendre for a fixed term of only one year, i.e. 1375 B. S., whereas defendant No. 2 is its owner. The plaintiff's claim for a permanent injunction, so that defendant No. 1 cannot disturb his licensee's right, is different from the right of defendant No. 2, who is in mediate or constructive possession.

19. Cases filed by agents, managers or receivers stand on a different footing altogether for they have no personal interest in the subject matter of the litigation. They sue for and on behalf of their masters and represent the latter, who are the real plaintiffs. In view of the aforesaid decision of Bihar Eastern Gangetic F. C. Society v. Sipai Singh (AIR 1977 SC 2149) (supra), the holder of profits a prendre possesses an immovable property and has an independent right of his own. In case his interest in his immovable property is in jeopardy, he sues not to prove his grantor's interest but only to establish his own right therein. He does not sue for and on behalf of his grantor. When his fixed term of holding the property is over, neither he nor his grantor can claim any relief in that suit. As the defendant No. 2 does not hold that right of profits a prendre, his remedy is to file a separate suit to establish his claim.

20. This is not a case of assignment or devolution of interest within the meaning of R. 10 of O. 22 of the Code. That rule or S. 146 has no application. S. 146 of the Code says that save as otherwise provided by this Code or by any law for the time being in force, where any proceeding may be taken by or against any person, then the same may be made by or against any person claiming under him. Here, the plaintiff is claiming through defendant No. 2 and not vice versa. Even if the provisions of S. 146 of the Code be liberally construed, the position will not improve. So, it is held that the prayer for permanent injunction must fail and the plaintiff also cannot ask for an injunction and declaration of his interest as a licensee beyond 1375 B. S.

21. Of course, the learned Appellate Court affirmed the decree of the trial court on the footing that subsequently, a licence had been granted by defendant No. 2 to the plaintiff. The court ought not to have taken notice of such subsequent event. Defendant No. 2 did not and could not claim to be transposed to the category of the plaintiff. It is, therefore, held that since there was no devolution of interest or assignment, this right cannot be claimed by defendant No. 2. The submissions made on behalf of the respondent No. 2 on this cannot be accepted.

22. The appeal is allowed in part. The judgment and decree appealed against be hereby set aside. The suit is decreed in part. It is hereby declared that the plaintiff was a licensee regarding the property in question in 1375 B. S. The other prayers stand refused.

23. The parties will bear their own costs throughout.

Appeal partly allowed.

Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), S. 47 — Suit for specific performance of contract decreed on compromise — Defendant required to pay amount due within specified time — Court could not extend time for deposit on application by defendant without consent of plaintiff.

Where the suit for specific performance of the contract was decreed on compromise and the solenama mentioned time as the essence of the contract and on failure of payment by defendant within specified time the plaintiff could deposit and have Kobala executed through court by way of execution of the decree, the court could not extend the time ex parte without the consent of the plaintiff on an application for extension of time by the defendant a copy of which was served on the Advocate of the plaintiff. As the decree was passed on consent without the consent of the plaintiff the court could not extend the time ex parte after the decree of the suit by serving application for extension of time on the Advocate of the plaintiff as the Advocate of plaintiff became functus officio. Before extending the time the court would have to secure the consent of the plaintiff and without doing so the court would have no power or jurisdiction to change, vary or alter the terms of the Solenama decree. After the Solenama decree, the court looses seisin of the suit altogether and as such there is no scope for extension of time. AIR 1962 Cal 485 Ref. Dilip Kumar Seth, for Petitioner;

Aloke Chakraborty, for Opposite Party.

ORDER :— This application for revision arises out of an order dated December 22, 1979 passed by Shri K. Ganguly, Munsif 3rd Court, Diamond Harbour, disallowing an objection under Section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure which was numbered as Misc. Case No. 72A of 1979.

2. The facts giving rise to the filing of the objection under Section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure may be summarised as follows :—

The opposite party as plaintiff on 17-7-1973 instituted a suit being Title Suit No. 517/73 for specific performance of contract in the 3rd Court of the Munsif, Diamond Harbour, against the present petitioner. The plaintiff's case inter alia was that the defendant agreed to sell the suit property for a consideration of Rs. 1500/- and accepted a sum of Rs. 1300/- and executed an agreement for sale on 9-3-1972 corresponding to 25th Falgoon-1378 B. S. that the transaction was to be completed within 15th Chaitra B. S. on receipt of the balance of Rs. 200/- but in spite of successive offers by the plaintiff the defendant failed and neglected to complete the transaction and ultimately refused and hence the suit.

3. The defendant put in defence for contesting the suit. But eventually the suit was decreed on compromise filed on 13-7-1979 and the Solenama was recorded on 1-9-1979.

4. In terms of the Solenama the defendant agreed to pay a sum of Rs. 700 within 15th of Falgoon 1384 B. S. in two equal instalments payable at the interval of one year each in default the plaintiff was at liberty to apply for execution of the decree and to have the sale deed executed in his favour through court on deposit of Rs. 200.

5. On 14-3-1978 corresponding to 30th Falgoon 1384 B. S. the defendant made an application for extension of time for depositing the said sum of Rs. 700/-, a copy of which was served on the Advocate of the plaintiff. As no objection was raised the learned court below extended the time and on court's order the petitioner deposited the said amount in court.

6. But in spite of the fact the opposite party plaintiff deliberately and willfully executed the decree and got the Kobala through court on deposit of Rs. 200/- and thereafter was threatening to take possession of the suit tank. Accordingly the petitioner made an application under Section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The plaintiff filed written objection to the said application under Section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure. By an order dated 22-12-1979 the learned Munsif rejected the said application under Section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure holding inter alia that the learned court below had no jurisdiction to extend the time to the petitioner for making deposit of Rs. 700/-.

7. Mr. Dilip Kumar Seth, learned Advocate appearing for the petitioner contends that without setting aside or recalling the order extending the time, the learned court below had no jurisdiction to entertain the execution proceeding simply by holding that the earlier order was without jurisdiction. It is further contended that the learned court below could not go beyond the decree which stood concluded on the deposit of the amount within the extended time in view of the contingency imposed. Again the learned Munsif was said to have acted without jurisdiction in going behind the decree.

8. Mr. Aloke Chakraborty, the learned Advocate for the opposite party contends that the suit in question was decreed on compromise. The notice for extension of time by the petitioner was served on the Advocate for the plaintiff at a time when he was functus officio. It is contended by him that after a decree on compromise, extension of time could be allowed by the court only on the consent of the parties. In the absence of such consent the court had no jurisdiction to extend the time and as such the order having been passed without the consent of the plaintiff, was without jurisdiction. Accordingly the court acted justly and properly in ignoring the order permitting extension of time as that order was without jurisdiction.

9. It appears that under the terms of the Solenama the defendant petitioner was required to pay Rs. 350/- by 15th Falgoon 1383 B. S. and the balance of Rs. 350/- by 15th Falgoon 1384 B. S. It was specifically mentioned in the terms of the Solenama "the time was the essence of the contract" and in failure of such payment of Rs. 700/- the Opposite party plaintiff would deposit Rs. 200/- and would have the Kobala executed through court by way of execution of the decree.

10. The question now arises whether on the basis of such terms of agreement or contract the court could extend the time for making deposit. It is said that a copy of the petition had been served on the Advocate of the plaintiff but it is rightly pointed out by Mr. Chakraborty, after the decree of the suit the learned Advocate became functus officio.

11. As the decree was passed on consent without the consent of the plaintiff the learned Court below could not extend the time ex parte. So before extending the time the court could have secured the consent of the plaintiff, without doing so the court had no power or jurisdiction to change, vary or alter the terms of the Solenama decree.

12. Next question arises whether the order extending the time to make deposit is binding on the plaintiff or the court itself. It is apparent that the said order was passed without jurisdiction and as such the court need not pass any order vacating or expunging the order of extending the time. No notice be taken of such order.

13. Reference may be made to the decision of a Division Bench of this Court in the case of Bhutnath Das v. Sahodeb Chandra Panja, reported in 66 Cal WN 645: (AIR 1962 Cal 485) In this case the question was whether a trial court after it had ordered specific performance of a contract on a sum of money being put in within a specified time and also ordered that if the money be not deposited within that date, the suit would stand dismissed, had any jurisdiction there-after to extend the time. It was held that in such circumstances, the court had no jurisdiction to extend the time. The facts of the present case are stronger even. In this case the terms of the Solenama were recorded by the court and the decree was passed in terms of the Solenama. In this view of the matter without the consent of the other party, the court had absolutely no jurisdiction to extend the time for making the deposit of money. It also follows that after the Solenama decree, the Court lost seisin of the suit altogether and as such there was no scope for extension of time.

14. As found out earlier the order extending the time was without jurisdiction, and as such the learned court below committed no error in overruling the objection under Section 47 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

15. In the result, this application for revision is rejected and the Rule is discharged. Each party to pay and bear its own costs.

Application rejected

A. F. A. D. No. 705 of 1978, D/- 27-3-1981.

West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act (12 of 1956), S. 13 — Suit for eviction against tenant and his assignee — Assignee putting in appearance only after landlord filed application under S. 17 (3) — His written statement filed along with costs, accepted — Landlord withdrawing costs deposited — Application by him for framing additional issue as to existence of relationship of landlord and tenant between him and landlord — Cannot be resisted — Prior finding in that suit as to absence of tenancy would not operate as res judicata. (Civil P. C. (1908), S. 11; O. 14, R. 5.)

Where in a suit for eviction against the tenant and his assignee the written statement by the assignee who did not appear in the suit and entered appearance only at the time when the petition under S. 17 (3) was filed by the landlord was accepted on his paying the cost required to be paid by him and the landlord did not object to the acceptance of the written statement and even withdrew the amount deposited by the assignee, the landlord having acquiesced by acceptance of written statement could not at subsequent stage object to the prayer made by the assignee for framing additional issue as to existence of relationship of landlord and tenant or for adducing evidence in support of his written statement. The order passed in the earlier stages of the suit that there was no relationship of landlord and tenant between the landlord and assignee would not operate as res judicata and the assignee could be allowed to frame additional issue to that effect.

P. K. Sengupta, H. N. Halder and T. N. Banerjee, for Appellant; Malay Kr. Basu, and Bimal Jotsna Chatterjee, for Respondents.

JUDGMENT:— This appeal is from the judgment and decree passed by the learned Additional District Judge at Alipore in Title Appeal No. 775 of 1977 affirming the judgment and decree passed by the learned Munsif, 1st Additional Court at Alipore in Title Suit No. 35 of 1976. The suit was filed by the plaintiff respondent for ejectment of the defendant No. 1 on the ground of default and reasonable requirement of the owner. The defendant No. 2 was also made a party inasmuch as it was the case of the plaintiff that the defendant No. 1 had assigned his tenancy to the defendant No. 2, the present appellant. The defendant No. 1 was the tenant in respect of the entire ground floor flat of premises No. 2/D, Bawali Mandal Road, P. S. Tollygunge at a monthly rental of Rs. 126/- payable according to English Calendar month. The defendant No. 1 defaulted in payment of rent since Jan. 1971. The plaintiff respondent's further case is that the defendant No. 1 without the consent of the landlord plaintiff assigned his right in the said tenancy in respect of the suit property to his brother-in-law defendant No. 2 who is the present appellant before this Court.

Apart from the ground of default, the plaintiff respondent prayed for eviction on the ground of reasonable requirement for his own use and occupation and for the use and occupation of his family members and, in particular, for accommodating his daughter who is qualified as a doctor for the purpose of providing a chamber for practising as a doctor and also for providing a drawing room for himself and for accommodation of his other daughters whenever they come to live with him. Notices were served upon both the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 (vide Exts. 2 and 2/a). As the defendant No. 1 did not vacate the suit premises the plaintiff respondent filed the suit being Title Suit No. 35 of 1976. The defendant No. 1 appeared and contested the suit on filing a written statement but the defendant No. 2 did not appear in spite of notice being served upon him. The defendant No. 2 entered appearance at the time when the plaintiff respondent filed the petition under Section 17 (3) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act and the same was heard and allowed and filed a petition giving explanation for not coming to court in time together with written statement. On 13-6-1975 the learned Munsif passed the following order.

"Plaintiff present. Defendants 1 and 2 file haziras. Plaintiff filed objection against the petition to show cause to defendant No. 2. Copy served and objected to. Heard both sides. Considered. The causes shown by the defendant No. 2 are not accepted. However as a matter of indulgence defendant No. 2 will be allowed to contest and his written statement will be accepted if he pays cost of Rs. 100 by 14-7-1975. To 14-7-1975 for payment of cost (vide order-sheet)".

On 14-7-1975 a sum of Rs. 100 was deposited by the defendant No. 2 as per order dated 13-6-1975 and the learned Munsif passed the following order.

"Let the written statement of defendant No. 2 be accepted. To 1-9-1975 for framing further issues, if any".

On 10-12-1975 (vide order No. 85) upon a petition being filed on behalf of the plaintiff respondent for permitting him to withdraw the sum of Rs. 100/- deposited by the defendant No. 2 (present appellant), the learned Munsif granted the prayer of the plaintiff for withdraw-wal of the same and accepted the written statement of the present appellant (defendant No. 2). On 2-4-1976 (order No. 102) the petition filed by the defendant No. 2 appellant for allowing him to lead evidence on the point regarding his tenancy right was heard by the learned Munsif in presence of the learned Advocates of both sides. The defendant's petition dated 6-7-1976 for framing additional issues was also taken up along with his application for permission to lead evidence as stated above. The learned Munsif considered submissions on both sides and found that in view of the finding of his learned predecessor who found that there was no relationship of landlord and tenant between the plaintiff respondent and defendant No. 2, after hearing the learned advocates of both sides, on the issue whether there was any relationship of landlord and tenant between the respondent and the defendant No. 1 which was decided in favour of the respondent, this question could not be agitated again for framing fresh issue at the instance of defendant No. 2, the present appellant. As the finding of the court on an interlocutory matter is binding upon it at the subsequent stage and is, therefore, barred by the principles of res judicata and accordingly it was found that the defendant No. 1 was the tenant under the plaintiff, that finding was binding upon the defendant No. 2, the present appellant and accordingly the learned Munsif rejected the prayer of the defendant No. 2 appellant for framing an additional issue on the question that there was any relationship of landlord and tenant. On 11-1-1977 (vide order No. 110) the learned Munsif disposed of an application made on behalf of the defendant No. 2 on 4-1-1977 for adducing evidence. He rejected the prayer of the defendant No. 2 appellant on the ground that he was trying to set up a new defence by praying for permission to adduce evidence that he is not an assignee or a sub-tenant but that he has been in occupation of the suit premises on and from before 1956. Thus his prayer for adducing evidence that he was in occupation of the suit premises from Feb. 1956 was rejected. The learned Munsif however permitted the (defendant No. 2) appellant to cross-examine the plaintiff's witnesses on the question of assignment. The defendant appellant was debarred from challenging the plaintiff's case of reasonable requirement either by cross-examination or by leading evidence as well as also on the question that he had been residing in the suit premises from before 1956. The learned Munsif on a consideration of the evidence before him decreed the suit of the plaintiff respondent on the finding that the defendant No. 1 was a tenant under the plaintiff respondent and defendant No. 2 could not challenge that finding. He found that defendant No. 2 appellant could at best be regarded as a sub-tenant under the defendant No. 1 to which the plaintiff respondent had given no consent. He also found that the defendant No. 1 had left the premises in or after 1956 and her consent as landlord is necessary to validate the sub-tenancy of the defendant No. 2 if any. Against the judgment and decree of the learned Munsif, an appeal was preferred which was disposed of by the learned Additional District Judge at Alipore. He affirmed the finding of the learned Munsif and dismissed the appeal. This second appeal was admitted on the point, namely, whether the trial court was justified in debarring defendant No. 2 from raising an issue and giving evidence even though it accepted his written statement. It is submitted on behalf of the appellant by Mr. Sengupta that once the written statement of the appellant had been accepted by the court all the defence pleaded in the written statement would be available to the appellant (defendant No. 2) and, accordingly, he will be entitled to cross-examine the witnesses of the plaintiff and also to lead evidence on all the points raised by him in his written statement. As already referred to above, the appellant (defendant No. 2) was denied the opportunity of raising an additional issue as to whether there was relationship of landlord and tenant between the appellant (defendant No. 2) and the respondent and he was also debarred from cross-examining the plaintiff's witnesses on the question of relationship of landlord and tenant and also from adducing fresh evidence to support his defence that he was in occupation of the tenancy on and from before 1956. In this connection, Mr. Sengupta has pointed out to the provision of O. 9, R. 7 of the Civil P. C. which runs as follows:

"Where the Court has adjourned the hearing of the suit ex parte, and defendant, at or before such hearing, appears and assigns good cause for his previous non-appearance, he may, upon such terms as the Court directs as to costs or otherwise, be heard in answer to the suit as if he had appeared on the day fixed for his appearance."

The learned Munsif had accepted the written statement filed by the defendant No. 2 appellant on condition of his paying cost of Rs. 100/- which was complied with by the defendant No. 2, hence it is argued by Mr. Sengupta that all the defence that was taken in his written statement was accepted thereby. Accordingly, to debar him from raising an additional issue on the question of relationship of landlord and tenant between the (defendant No. 2) appellant and respondent and also to debar him from adducing evidence on the points raised by him including the point that he was in occupation of the suit premises on and before 1956 was illegal and in violation of the provision of O. 9, R. 7 of the Code. On the other hand, Mr. Basu appearing for the respondent has submitted that the condition precedent to the acceptance of written statement is the acceptance of cause shown by the appellant defendant. The cause shown by him was not accepted by the learned Munsif but his written statement was accepted as it would be clear from the order-sheet of the learned Munsif. The stress is on good cause being shown. As the cause being shown by him was considered to be unsatisfactory by the learned Munsif, it could not be said that he had accepted the same but he permitted him to file his written statement and only those points were open to him which were not earlier decided by the learned Munsif and Mr. Basu supports the orders dated 2-9-1976 and 11-1-1977. It is submitted by Mr. Basu that if the cause shown is accepted by the learned Munsif the written statement is accepted. But when the cause shown is not accepted and the acceptance of the written statement is only conditional, the defendant will only be permitted to cross-examine those witnesses who have not been cross-examined till the filing of his written statement on those points which have not been decided against him by the learned Munsif. The finding of the learned Munsif on the point decided by him previous to the filing of the written statement by the defendant No. 2 appellant namely the question of relationship of landlord and tenant between the plaintiff and the defendant will operate as res judicata and therefore, he cannot be permitted to reopen the same subsequently. In this connection, Mr. Basu has relied upon a decision reported in AIR 1960 SC 941. The question that came up before their Lordships of the Supreme Court in the case reported above is the scope and effect of Ss. 11 and 105 of the Civil Procedure Code. The relevant portion is at page 943 para 7 which runs as follows :

"The principle of res judicata is based on the need of giving a finality to judicial decisions. What it says is that once a res is judicata, it shall not be adjudged again. Primarily, it applies as between past litigation and future litigation. That a matter — whether on a question of fact or a question of law—has been decided between two parties in one suit or proceeding and the decision is final, either because no appeal was taken to a higher court or because the appeal was dismissed, or no appeal lies, neither party will be allowed in a further suit or proceeding between the same parties to canvass the matter again. This principle of res judicata is embodied in relation to suits in S. 11 of the Civil P. C. but even where S. 11 does not apply the principle of res judicata has been applied by courts for the purpose of achieving finality in litigation. The result of this is that the original court as well as any higher court must in any future litigation proceed on the basis that the previous decision was correct.

The principle of res judicata applies also as between two stages in the same litigation to this extent that a court, whether the trial court or a higher court having at an earlier stage decided a matter in one way will not allow the parties to re-agitate the matter again at a subsequent stage of the same proceedings."

"But an interlocutory order which had not been appealed from either because no appeal lay or even though an appeal lay an appeal was not taken can be challenged in an appeal from the final decree or order." It is this observation upon which Mr. Sengupta lays stress saying that in an appeal a question which was decided by the learned Munsif can be raised in appeal and decided as to whether debarring the appellant from raising an additional issue regarding the relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties in view of the earlier finding of the learned Munsif that there was no relationship of landlord and tenant between the defendant No. 1 and the respondent (sic). The other decision which has been relied upon by Mr. Basu is reported in AIR 1964 SC 993. That related to interpretation of O. 9, R. 7 C. P. C. The provision of O. 9, R. 7 C. P. C. comes into operation only where the court has adjourned the hearing of the suit ex parte. Obviously it assumes that there is to be a hearing on the date to which the suit stands adjourned. If the entirety of the hearing of the suit has been completed and the court being competent to pronounce the judgment then and there, adjourns the suit merely for the purpose of pronouncing judgment under O. 20, R. 1. there is clearly no adjournment of the hearing of the suit, for there is nothing more to be heard in the suit. In such a case O. 9, R. 7 could have no application and the matter would stand at the stage of O. 9, R. 6 to be followed up by the passing of an ex parte decree making R. 13 the only provision in O. 9 applicable. The portion relied upon by Mr. Basu is quoted below: (See pp. 1000 and 1001 of AIR 1964 SC 993).

"Where the principle of res judicata is invoked in the case of the different stages of proceedings in the same suit, the nature of the proceedings, the scope of the enquiry which the adjectival law provides for the decision being reached, as well as the specific provisions made on matters touching such decision are some of the material and relevant factors to be considered before the principle is held applicable." (AIR 1960 SC 941).

"There are other orders which are also interlocutory, but would fall into a different category. The difference from the ones just now referred to lies in the fact that they are not directed to maintaining the status quo, or to preserve the property pending the final adjudication, but are designed to ensure the just, smooth, orderly and expeditious disposal of the suit. They are interlocutory in the sense that they do not decide any matter in issue arising in the suit, nor put an end to the litigation. The case of an application under O. 9, R. 7 Civil P. C. would be an illustration of this type. If an application made under the provisions of that rule is dismissed and an appeal was filed against the decree in the suit in which such application was made, there can be no doubt that the propriety of the order rejecting the re-opening of the proceeding and the refusal to relegate the party to an earlier stage might be canvassed in the appeal and dealt with by the appellate court. In that sense, the refusal of the court to permit the defendant to set the clock back does not attain finality. But though the same court is not finally bound by that order at later stages, so as to preclude its being reconsidered, and even if the rule of res judicata does not apply it would not follow that on every subsequent day on which the suit stands adjourned for further hearing, the petition could be repeated and fresh orders sought on the basis of identical facts".

The O. 9, R. 7 is not of the kind which can operate as res judicata so as to bar the hearing on the merits of an application under O. 9 R. 13 C. P. C. On a consideration of the common decisions cited by both the parties I am of the view that once the learned Munsif accepted the written statement of the defendant No. 2 appellant it was open for the appellant to contest the suit on all the points raised by him in his written statement. It is significant to note that the condition regarding payment of cost which was the only condition imposed on the appellant for acceptance of his written statement was complied by him and not objected to by the other side, the plaintiff. In fact, the plaintiff withdrew the amount deposited by the appellant. He, having acquiesced by acceptance of the written statement, cannot at a subsequent stage object to the prayer made by the defendant No. 2 appellant for framing an additional issue or for adducing evidence in support of his written statement. So far as the order No. 102 dated 2-9-1976 is concerned for framing an additional issue the plea taken by the respondent-plaintiff that he cannot be allowed to raise such an issue in view of the decision by the predecessor of the learned Munsif that there was no relationship of landlord and tenant between the defendant No. 1 and the respondent as the same is binding on the defendant No. 2 appellant, the same being res judicata, I am inclined to hold that that order dated 2-9-1976 is bad in law and liable to be set aside in view of the acceptance of the written statement by the learned Munsif. That will not operate as res judicata so far as defendant No. 2 is concerned. The hands of the clock are set back by acceptance of the written statement and the appellant-defendant will be deemed to be in the position in which he would be had he filed the written statement at the time he was supposed to do so. The submission made by Mr. Malay Bose that the acceptance of written statement is a conditional acceptance of the same and is limited to the acceptance of the cause shown does not appear to be very reasonable, in view of the fact that the only condition that is imposed upon the appellant (defendant No. 2) is the condition of payment of cost which he did within the time. Therefore, all the pleas taken by the (defendant No. 2) appellant and the defence as set out in the written statement would be available to him and the suit should have been tried from the very beginning, as though the defendant No. 2 had appeared by filing the written statement within time.

2. In the result, the impugned orders are set aside and the judgment and the decree passed by the appellate court are set aside and the case remanded back to the trial court to frame fresh issues and to try the suit from the stage of filing of the written statement according to the directions given above.

3. The appeal is allowed without costs.

4. No decree need be prepared. Let a copy of the judgment be sent down to the court below at once.

Appeal allowed.

Where the cause title of a suit filed in Sept. 1975 described the defendant as the named General Insurance Company Ltd. of which the management vested in Govt. of India, the same would be liable to be dismissed as it was a suit against a dissolved company as the company had stood dissolved under Sec. 8 of the Scheme which had come into force on 1st of Jan. 1974. Also, mention of the Govt. as a party in the cause title could not be considered as a misdescription since the assets and liabilities of the company had vested in a company, which was a Government company. A Government company is a different entity from the Government of India. (Para 4)

P. C. Sen, for Appellant; S. K. Kapur with Sudipta Sarkar, for Respondent.

SABYASACHI MUKHARJI, J.:

This is an appeal from an order and judgment passed by Ajay K. Basu, J., dated 1st June 1976 dismissing the suit on an application made by National Insurance Co., Ltd. under O. 7 R. 11 of C. P. C. It appears, that a suit was instituted by the plaintiff/appellant against Ruby General Insurance Company Limited. In view of the contentions raised it would be appropriate to set out the description of the defendant in the cause-title which reads as follows:—

"Ruby General Insurance Company Limited of which the management is vested in the Government of India by the provisions of the General Insurance (Emergency Provisions) Act 17 of 1971 having its registered office at Ruby House at 6, India Exchange Place, Calcutta-1 within the aforesaid jurisdiction."

2. The cause-title indisputably mentions the provisions of General Insurance (Emergency Provisions) Act 17 of 1971. The suit in question was filed on the 18th Sept. 1975. In para 2 of the plaint it has been stated that the defendant, a public limited company carrying on business in General Insurance, was taken over and its management was vested in the Government of India by virtue of the provisions of the General Insurance (Emergency Provisions) Act 17 of 1971 as amended by the General Insurance (Emergency Provisions) Amendment Act 27 of 1972. Since then for the purpose of convenience the aforesaid Ruby General Insurance Company Ltd., thereafter referred to as the 'Insurance Company,' was functioning and was being managed by Messrs. National Insurance Company and/or was a unit of the latter.

3. It appears that the National Insurance Company Limited (Merger) Scheme, 1973 came into force, under Sec. 1, sub-sec. (2), on the 1st of Jan. 1974 and in that scheme, which was published in the Government of India Gazette Extraordinary on the 21st Dec. 1973, there is a definition of the Act which means the General Insurance, Business (Nationalisation) Act 1972 and under Sec. 8A merged company shall on the specified day stand dissolved without winding up. Therefore, the Ruby General Insurance Co. Ltd. by virtue of the aforesaid provisions has stood dissolved since that date. As we have mentioned before the suit was filed in Sept. 1975. The main point that was urged in this application and which found favour with the learned trial Judge was that the suit being against a dissolved company was an incompetent suit and liable to be dismissed under the provisions of O. 7. R. 11, C. P. C. On behalf of the appellant/plaintiff it was urged that the cause-title clearly indicated that this was a mere misdescription of the defendant. It was emphasised that there was no question of the present applicant being taken by surprise and if it was misdescription the plaint should be allowed to be amended on an oral prayer which was made at the time of hearing of the application before the learned trial Judge. The question, therefore, is whether the description of the defendant in the cause-title was a mere misdescription or was against a dissolved company. It is well settled that a company ceases to exist on dissolution. For this proposition reliance was placed on the observations of the Supreme Court in the case of Narendra Bahadur v. Shanker Lal, AIR 1980 SC 575 where the Supreme Court observed that after a company was dissolved the liquidator could not thereafter claim to represent the company and execute a registered deed of sale. Once the company was dissolved it ceased to exist and the company became a non-existing company.

4. In this connection reference was made to the observations of the Division Bench of this Court in the case of Malhati Tea Syndicate v. Revenue Officer, Jalpaiguri, AIR 1973 Cal 78 where at para 20 at p. 83 of the report the Court observed as follows:—

"There can be no doubt that on the day on which the appeal was filed, there was no company in existence by the name of Malhati Tea Syndicate Ltd. and the appeal purported to have been filed by a company which was not on the Register of Joint Stock Companies, and had therefore no existence in accordance with the provisions of the Companies Act, 1956, cannot but be held to be incompetent. Learned Advocate for the applicant contended that the appeal was competent by reason of the provisions in sub-s. (3) of S. 23, Companies Act, 1956. That sub-section runs as follows:—

"The change of name shall not affect any rights or obligations of the company or render defective any legal proceedings by or against it; and any legal proceedings which might have been continued or commenced by or against the company by its former name may be continued by or against the company by its new name."

There the Court was dealing with an appeal preferred by the dissolved company. It was held, an appeal filed by the dissolved company would mean an appeal by non-existent person. The same principle would be applicable in respect of a suit initiated by a dissolved company. Our attention was also drawn to the observations of the Division Bench of the Allahabad High Court in the case of Modi Sugar Mills v. Union of India, 1978 Tax LR 673 (All) where at page 675 of the report the Allahabad High Court observed that under civil law it was well known that an order against the dead person was a nullity. The Allahabad High Court applied this principle in the case of an assessment against the dissolved company. Counsel for the respondent also drew our attention to the decision in the case of Hiralal v. Kali Nath AIR 1962 SC 199. There, at p. 200 of the report, the Supreme Court observed that the Court was lacking inherent jurisdiction, if the suit was against a person, who was dead at the time of the institution of the suit. The same principle that a suit against a dead person is a nullity was reiterated by the Division Bench of Mysore High Court in the case of C. Muttu v. Bharat Match Works, AIR 1964 Mys 293. In that case, the Mysore High Court reiterated that there was no scope for amending the plaint where the Court has no jurisdiction. Because of it being a nullity, there is no scope for making an application for amendment. In this case the suit indisputably, as the cause title of the defendant indicates, was against the dissolved company and, as such, was incompetent. Learned counsel for the appellant contended that the Government was mentioned as a party and this was misdescription. That even was incorrect. The Ruby General Insurance Co. did not vest in the Government. The assets and liabilities of the company had vested in a company, which was a Government company. A Government company is a different entity from the Government of India. As such, this contention on behalf of the appellant also cannot be accepted. In view of the framing of the suit, in the description of the cause title, we are unable to accept the contention that it was a misdescription. Therefore we are on this aspect of the matter in agreement with the view taken by the learned trial Judge.

5. It was contended that in this case, in any event, in view of the arbitration clause which indicated that the claim had to be instituted in terms of cl. 19 of the arbitration agreement where it was stipulated that the company should not be liable for any loss or damages after the expiry of 12 months from the happening of loss or damages unless the claim was the subject matter of pending arbitration clause. In this case an attempt was made for the arbitration on behalf of the plaintiff. But there (as?) was clear from the affidavit, it was contended on behalf of the respondent, by the letter dated 21st March, 73 which was reiterated on 9th July, 1973 and 27th Aug. 1973 there was total repudiation of the claim and the question of the right of repudiation could, in any event, be not subject matter of arbitration because the arbitration clause covered only a limited dispute and that clause provided, inter alia, as follows:—

"If any difference arises as to the amount of any loss or damage such difference shall independently of all other questions be referred to the decision of an arbitrator, to be appointed in writing by the parties in difference, or, if they cannot agree upon a single arbitrator, to the decision of two disinterested persons as arbitrators, of whom one shall be appointed in writing by each of the parties within two calendar months after having been required so to do in writing by the other party. In case either party shall refuse to appoint an arbitrator within two calendar months after receipt of notice in writing requiring an appointment the other party shall be at liberty to appoint a sole arbitrator; and in case of disagreement between the arbitrators, the difference shall be referred to the decision of an umpire who shall have been appointed by them in writing before entering on the reference and who shall sit with the arbitrators and preside at their meetings. The death of any party shall not revoke or affect the authority or powers of the arbitrator; arbitrators or umpire respectively and in the event of the death of an arbitrator or umpire, another shall in each case be appointed in his stead by the party or arbitrators (as the case may be) by whom the arbitrator or umpire so dying was appointed. The costs of the reference and of the award shall be in the discretion of the arbitrator, arbitrators or umpire making the award. And it is hereby expressly stipulated and declared that it shall be a condition precedent to any right or action or suit upon this Policy that the award by such arbitrator, arbitrators or umpire of the amount of the loss or damage if disputed shall be first obtained."

But in this case the repudiation could not be the subject matter of the arbitration at all. In this case the plaintiff had made an attempt to refer the matter to arbitration and had appointed its arbitrator. The respondent also had appointed its arbitrator without prejudice to its contention that this was wholly without jurisdiction. Thereafter the arbitration did not proceed and by an order of this Court dated the 11th Sept. 1975 of Mr. Justice Sali K. Roy Chowdhury the authority of the arbitrators was revoked. It was, therefore, contended on behalf of the appellant that in view of these proceedings it could not be said ex facie under O. 7 R. 11 that the claim was barred by limitation and was not maintainable. Though we are inclined to think that there is good deal of substance in the contention raised on behalf of the respondent that the claim was barred on this score also, in the view we have taken on the first aspect of the matter it is not necessary to adjudicate on this aspect of the matter.

6. In the premises, the appeal fails and is accordingly dismissed with costs.

B. C. Dutt, Sudhis Das Gupta and P. Roy, for Appellant; M. N. Ghose and P. Bhattacharya, for Respondent.

B. N. MAITRA, J.:— The plaintiff has instituted the suit on the allegation that he is the owner of the property in question. The defendant, Messrs Tide Water Oil Company, was the tenant regarding the premises in question in the front portion of that building under him at a monthly rental of Rs. 650/- payable according to English calendar. Previously, he was posted in Bombay. At that time, one Mr. K. L. Gupta, defendant's officer, was transferred to Calcutta. The latter persuaded the plaintiff to let out the front portion of the ground floor of the house including the front lawn, the garden and the garage. He had been assured by Mr. Gupta that the demised portion would be vacated after he was transferred from Calcutta or on his retirement from service, whichever was earlier. That proposal was accepted. The plaintiff has retired from service and has been residing in Calcutta. He and his wife have been suffering from various ailments and it is extremely difficult for them to go upstairs. The only passage leading to that house is a very filthy and slippery one because the courtyard is used by the defendant's employees for cleansing utensils and storing garbage. The accommodation available to the plaintiff is not sufficient and reasonably suitable. He reasonably requires the disputed premises for his own use and occupation and for the occupation by the members of his family. He submitted a plan to the Corporation of Calcutta for building and rebuilding of the house for properly utilising the vacant space in front of the building for its economic user. The plan has been sanctioned. Unless the defendant is evicted, it is not possible for the plaintiff to make such building and rebuilding. That tenancy was duly determined by a notice to quit. The suit is for ejectment and for recovery of damages.

2. The defendant-company has filed a written statement denying the plaintiff's allegations. It has been alleged, inter alia, that no such assurance had been given by Mr. K. L. Gupta. The plaintiff's case is a false one. The accommodation available to the plaintiff is sufficient. The notice to quit is not valid in law and it was not properly served.

3. The learned Subordinate Judge accepted the defendant's version and dismissed the suit. The plaintiff went up in appeal.

4. The learned appellate Court held that no undertaking had been given on behalf of the defendant to the plaintiff within the meaning of the provisions of S. 13 (1) (k) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. He found that the plaintiff's case of reasonable requirement for his own use and occupation and the case of illness of his wife, and of himself could not be accepted. The further finding was that a valid notice was duly sent by the plaintiff and received by the defendant-company. The further finding was that the plaintiff's case regarding the provisions of Section 13 (1) (f) required further consideration. So, the suit was sent back on remand with some observations along with a direction to consider whether the plaintiff could make the proposed construction without evicting the defendant from the disputed premises and if total or partial eviction would be necessary. Against that decision, the present appeal has been filed by the defendant as first miscellaneous appeal.

5. The plaintiff-respondent filed a cross-objection beyond time, i. e., only on the 24th November, 1981, with a prayer under S. 5 of the Limitation Act to condone the delay and to accept the same.

6. It has been argued on behalf of the appellant that the learned Additional District Judge arrived at a right finding regarding the provisions of Ss. 13 (1) (k) and 13 (1) (ff) of the West Bengal Act XII of 1956. The plaintiff's case of reasonable requirement is false. No undertaking was given by or on behalf of the defendant to vacate the premises. The notice to quit, Ext. 3, was sent by registered post. It came back with an endorsement that it had been received by M/s. Andrewyule & Co. Ltd, Ext. 5. According to the amended provisions of S. 324A of the Companies Act, which was inserted with effect from 3-4-1969, the posts of Managing Agents, Secretaries and Treasurers have been abolished with effect from 3-4-1970. Previously, Messrs Andrewyule, Co., could act as the defendant's agent. But after such mandatory provisions of the Companies Act came into force, that company could no longer act as the defendant's agent. Even if the alleged notice to quit had been received by Messrs Andrewyule & Co. Ltd., that company had no authority to receive the same on behalf of the defendant. So, it was an unauthorised action. The provisions of S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act have been referred to. The notice to quit was, therefore, not properly received and the same is invalid in law. The plea of building and rebuilding as envisaged by the Cl. (f) of sub-sec. (1) of S. 13 of the Act, does not come into the picture because the evidence on the record shows that an alteration of only a few inches can serve the plaintiff's purpose. It is not necessary to evict the defendant even if the plaintiff has the luxury of making a new construction on the vacant space in front of the building by spending a huge sum of two lakhs of rupees. The plaintiff's requirement in that respect is not a bona fide one. The case in AIR 1963 SC 499, has been cited to show that the landlord must have bona fides and honest intention in this respect. The case in AIR 1979 SC 1559 has also been referred to.

7. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the plaintiff-respondent has contended that he will not press the belated cross-objection. Nevertheless, according to the provisions of law, he can urge all the points mentioned in the cross-objection because the appeal was allowed.

8. There is an observation by the learned Additional District Judge that the point regarding the provisions of S. 13 (1) (k) of the Act was not argued before him. But an admission by a lawyer on a wrong point of law or on a misapprehension of the position of law cannot bind the client. The cases in (1899) 3 Cal WN 222, (1900) 4 Cal WN 274 (PC), (1907) 11 Cal WN 340, (1918) 27 Cal LJ 447 : (AIR 1919 Cal 972) and AIR 1937 Bom 81, have been cited. The learned Courts below did not properly consider the letters, Ext. 6 series, by which a clear undertaking was given on behalf of the defendant to vacate the disputed premises by 30th June, 1974. So, the Court will hold that since the defendant gave an undertaking in writing to vacate the disputed premises within 30th June 1974, a decree for eviction can be passed. There is no difficulty in this respect because S. 13 (6) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act says that notwithstanding anything in any other law for the time being in force, no suit for ejectment on any of the grounds mentioned in sub-section (1), except the grounds mentioned in Cl. (j) and (k) shall be filed by the landlord unless he has been given by the tenant one month's notice expiring with a month of the tenancy. Since the case is squarely covered by the provisions of S. 13 (1) (k), no notice to quit is necessary. The defendant did not state in the written statement that the notice to quit was not received by them. The plaintiff is partially paralytic and his wife is also seriously ill. The two rooms in the ground floor were used as a godown and so, a man of the plaintiff's status cannot be expected to live in those rooms in the ground floor. The notice to quit was properly addressed and registered. It was received by M/s. Andrewyule & Co. Ltd. The defendant did not produce its Register of letters received and issued to show that, in fact, no such notice to quit was actually received by it.

9. It has already been indicated that the cross-objection has not been pressed at present. Nevertheless, law is well-settled on this because of the provisions of Order 41 R. 22 (1) of the Civil P. C. The decision of the Privy Council in the case of Lala Gourisunker v. Janki in (1890) ILR 17 Cal 809 (PC), the cases in AIR 1962 SC 779, AIR 1963 SC 1516 (Panna Lal v. State of Bombay) and AIR 1964 SC 1425 (Virdha Chalam Pillai v. Chaldean Bank) at page 1438 may be referred to show that the respondent can challenge an adverse finding without filing an appeal or a cross-objection.

10. The first question is, whether the plaintiff can succeed according to the provisions of S. 13 (1) (k) of the Act. This clause read with sub-sec. (6) thereof will show that a decree for ejectment can be passed without serving any notice if subsequent to the creation of the tenancy, the tenant agreed in writing with the landlord to deliver vacant possession of the premises to the landlord and he had failed to do so. Ext. 6 (d) is the letter by which the premises in question was let out by the plaintiff to the defendant-company. The agreement was that the defendant-company was prepared to take lease of the premises for a period of two years and thereafter on the basis of one month's notice". It is, therefore, clear that in that letter, there was no undertaking to vacate the premises by 30th June, 1974. The letter, Ext. 6 (a), dated 13th February, 1974, shows that the Chairman of the defendant-company wrote to the plaintiff that the feasibility of vacating the disputed premises by the company was only being examined. No written undertaking was given by the defendant in this respect. The last letter addressed by the defendant-company is dated 23rd May, 1974, vide Ext. 6 (a). It shows that while the defendant-company was eager to co-operate with the plaintiff, the latter was requested to appreciate that unless Mr. Gupta was in a position to find out an alternative accommodation, no question of vacating the premises would arise. The last sentence shows that Mr. Gupta was out of Calcutta. He would return on the 10th June, 1974, or so and then the defendant-company would discuss the matter with the plaintiff and advise him on the same. There was no further correspondence by the defendant on this.

11. The aforesaid discussion clearly shows that no definite date was given by the defendant-company to vacate the premises in question. Hence it is of no consequence if this point was not argued in the court of appeal. No written undertaking was given by the defendant, as alleged. We, therefore, hold that the plaintiff cannot avail of the provisions of S. 13 (1) (k) of the Act.

12. Then about the question of reasonable requirement, within the meaning of the provisions of S. 13 (1) (ff) of the Act. In this respect, there is concurrent finding of fact by the courts below against the plaintiff. The trial court did not state anything about the plaintiff's physical condition when he was in the dock. Of course, according to the latest amendment, the present appeal cannot be treated as a second appeal and it has to be considered only as a first misc. appeal. Nonetheless, there is concurrent finding of fact on this against the plaintiff.

13. It has been contended on behalf of the plaintiff that he is partially paralytic and he has been suffering from heart trouble. This has been stated by P. W. 2, Kalidas Banerjee, (plaintiff). He examined Dr. Bata Krishna Ghosh, P. W. 3, to support his version. But the evidence of this last witness shows that he is a pathologist and not a cardiologist. In such circumstances, the courts below rightly refused to place any reliance on the plaintiff's evidence in this respect.

The submissions advanced on behalf of the appellant on this cannot be accepted. We, therefore, find that the plaintiff's case of reasonable requirement for the purpose of his own use and occupation and for the occupation by the members of his family cannot be accepted, within the meaning of the provisions of S. 13 (1) (ff) of the Act,

14. Then about the question of notice. In the plaint, it has been clearly stated that the notice to quit was properly addressed, registered and sent to the defendant. It was received by M/s. Andrewyule & Co. Ltd., Ext. 5. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent has pointed out that the notice of the suit, which was instituted in 1976, i. e., long after the amendment of the aforesaid S. 324A of the Companies Act, was received by Messrs Anderwyule & Co. Ltd., on behalf of the defendant-company. When the appeal was filed, a registered notice was issued and that was also received by Messrs. Andrewyule & Co. Ltd. The postal acknowledgment receipt Ext. 5, of the notice to quit was received by Messrs. Andrewyule & Co. Ltd. So the question has to be considered whether the receipt of the notice to quit by Messrs. Andrewyule & Co. Ltd. and not by the defendant-company itself would make the same invalid in law and if the presumption of proper service has been rebutted.

15. Two bench decisions of this Court may be referred to. The first case is of Radharani v. Angurbala, reported in (1961) 65 Cal WN 1119 at pp. 1123 and 1124. Following the famous Privy Council case of Harihar v. Ramshashi in (1919) 23 Cal WN 77 : (AIR 1918 PC 102) it has been stated that in the absence of very strong evidence to the contrary, when in the matter of service by registered post, as acknowledgment comes back, signed or purported to be signed by some persons on behalf of the addressee, it is good service under the law. The next case is of Seuli v. Maydha in (1970) 74 Cal WN 647. There also a Bench of our Court has stated that the notice had been properly directed and posted under registered post with acknowledgment due and it was addressed to the defendant No. 3 being at Titagarh, where the cinema house was located. The acknowledgment due with regard to three notices came back to the sender. It was held that the notice had been properly directed and posted per registered post because they were presumed to have reached defendant No. 3. It has been further held that even if the signatures in the acknowledgment receipt have been subscribed on behalf of the defendant No. 3 by somebody who was not proved to have any authority from defendant No. 3 to receive the same, still the service would be a good one. In the case of V. Dhanapal Chettiar v. Yesodai Ammal in AIR 1979 SC 1745, the Special Bench case in AIR 1964 Cal 1 was overruled. It was held that at present no notice to quit under S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act was required. So now only the provisions of S. 27 of the General Clauses Act, and not of S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, have to be considered. In the latest case of Har Charan v. Shivrani, reported in (1981) 2 SCC 535 at p. 542 : (AIR 1981 SC 1284 at p. 1288) it has been stated that Section 27 of the General Clauses Act deals with the topic "meaning of service by post" and says that where any Central Act or regulation authorises or requires any document to be served by post, then unless a different intention appears, the service shall be deemed to be effected by properly addressing prepaying and posting it by registered post and that section raises a presumption of due service or proper service if the document sought to be served is sent by properly addressing, prepaying and posting by registered post to the addressee and such presumption is raised irrespective of whether any acknowledgment due is received from the addressee or not.

16. The notice was only sent by registered post, Ext. 4. There is no whisper in the written statement that the notice to quit was not received by the defendant.

17. The evidence of D. W. 1, Bejoy Kumar Tandon, employee of the defendant-company, shows that he looks after the suit on the defendant's behalf. He has stated in his cross-examination that prior to 1971, M/s. Andrewyule & Co. Ltd., were the Treasurer and Secretary of the defendant-company. The office of Andrewyule & Co., is at 8, Clive Row

He also says that he has not filed any paper to show that Andrewyule & Co. has ceased to be the Treasurer and Secretary of the defendant-company.

18. The address of appellant-company (defendant) is 8, Clive Row D. W. 1, Bejoy Kumar Tandon, has made a very significant statement that Mr. R. Lall is the Chairman of the Board of Directors of their Company and also the Chairman of the Board of Directors of Andrewyule & Co. He has further admitted that in their office, they maintain a Register of letters received and letters issued. That Register has not been produced.

19. It has been contended on behalf of the appellant that the Register for letters received and issued was not called for by the plaintiff and hence, the defendant was not bound to produce the same. But in the case of T. Pillai v. Manicka Vasaka Desika Gana Sambandha in (1917) 21 Cal WN 761 : (AIR 1917 PC 6) Lord Shaw has stated that regarding the parties to the suit those desiring to rely on a certain state of facts are not justified in withholding written evidence in their possession which would throw light upon the proposition, merely because the onus of proof may be on the other side. When it is so withheld, the Court is free to conclude that if the same had been produced, they would have supported the case of the opponent. In the case of Gopal Krishnaji v. Mohamed Haji Latif in AIR 1968 SC 1413 at page 1415, it has been stated if a party to a suit is in possession of best evidence which will throw light on the issue in controversy and withholds it, the Court should draw an adverse inference against him though the onus of proof does not lie on him. It has been further stated that Court cannot rely on mere onus of proof and say that there is no onus on him or he was not called upon to produce the document. Thus, there will be an adverse inference against the defendant-company for not producing its Register of letters received and issued. The submissions made on behalf of the appellant cannot be accepted. We, therefore, hold that the notice to quit, Ext. 3, was properly addressed and registered and it was duly received by the defendant-company and it is valid in law. We further find that the presumption of proper service has not been rebutted by the defendant-appellant, 20. Lastly about the provisions of S. 13 (1) (f) of the Act. The learned Court of appeal has pointed out that in the case reported in AIR 1975 SC 1750 it has been stated that the landlord has a right to demolish his property to build a new one with a view to improving his business or for getting better return on his investment. But he has made an observation that the facts of the instant case are entirely different from those of the aforesaid Supreme Court case. After considering the submissions made by both the sides, we are of opinion that the matter must be remitted to the learned appellate Court for considering whether the plaintiff's case under Section 13 (1) (f) has been proved and whether the proposed construction can be carried out without evicting the defendant from the premises. If that Court finds that the plaintiff's case in this respect has been established, then he will consider the provisions of Section 18-A of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act and pass necessary orders. We make it clear that the unwarranted observations made by the learned Appellate Court on this are set aside. All the points on this are left open.

21. The appeal is allowed to the extent indicated above. The judgment and decree of the appellate Court be set aside. The matter is remitted to the learned Additional District Judge for disposal according to law in the light of the observations made in the body of the judgment.

22. There will be no order as to costs. The cross-objection is rejected without costs.

23. Preparation of formal decree is dispensed with.

BANERJEE, J.:— I agree.

Order accordingly.

A. F. O. D. No. 524 of 1973, D/- 1-12-1981.

(A) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), S. 11, O. 23, R. 1 — Res judicata — Withdrawal of suit alleging determination of lease — Determination of lease by efflux of time — Subsequent suit for khas possession — Not barred by S. 11. (Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 111 (a)).

Where in an earlier suit it was alleged that the lease executed in tenant's favour regarding the disputed land along with structure for a certain period had been determined, but the suit was withdrawn, a subsequent suit, after determination of lease by efflux of time for khas possession of the disputed land could not be said to be not maintainable on the ground of res judicata as a new cause of action arose after the determination of the lease by efflux of time, within the meaning of S. 111 (a) of T. S. B. Bakshi, for Appellant; S. N. Mukherjee and S. P. Roy Chowdhury, for Respondent.

B. N. MAITRA, J.:— The plaintiff has alleged that on the basis of a deed of lease executed by the defendant and also by the plaintiff and his brother, Rabindra Nath Mukherjee, as well on the 7th Sept., 1949, the disputed land was leased out to the defendant for 15 years expiring with the 31st Dec., 1964. The condition was that after the expiry of the period of the lease, the defendant would deliver vacant possession of the suit land after removing the structures standing on the land at his own cost, failing which the structures would belong to the lessors. Then on the 16th Aug., 1962, a partition was effected between the plaintiff and his brother, Rabindra Nath Mukherjee, and the disputed property was exclusively allotted to his share. Though the defendant's tenancy was determined by efflux of time on the expiry of 31st Dec., 1964, he did not vacate the property. Though he was not entitled to any notice, still a notice to quit was served on the defendant. The defendant did not vacate. Hence this suit for recovery of khas possession.

2. The defendant has filed a written statement alleging, inter alia, that the suit is not maintainable in law. He is a 'thika' tenant regarding the disputed property because the structures on the property had been constructed by him. There was a holding over of the tenancy with effect from the 1st Jan., 1965.

3. The learned Judge of the City Civil Court accepted the plaintiff's version, decreed the suit and directed the defendant to remove the structures. Hence this appeal by the defendant.

4. It has been contended on behalf of the appellant that previously a suit was filed by alleging that the lease had been determined, but that suit was withdrawn. There is no new cause of action for filing this suit because the lease in question had already been determined when the previous title suit for ejectment was filed. So, on that score, the suit is not maintainable in law. Moreover, the corporation taxes were paid by the defendant-appellant, from the 1st of Jan., 1965, and hence, there was holding over within the meaning of the provisions of S. 116 of the T. P. Act. The structures do not belong to the landlord. The schedule to the plaint clearly shows that the plaintiff also has asked for recovery of khas possession regarding the disputed land along with the structures. There is no prayer for declaration of title regarding the structures. So, the suit is bad on that score as well.

5. According to the provisions of Section 111 (a) of the T. P. Act, a lease of immovable property determines by the efflux of time limited thereby. Here, the lease executed in the defendant's favour regarding the disputed land along with the structures was for a period of 15 years expiring with the 31st Dec., 1964. That period is over. It is true that the previous suit was filed and there was no decision in that case. Hence, simply because the previous suit was filed, there cannot be any question of res judicata. In the case of V. Das v. Madanlal in AIR 1970 SC 987, it has been stated that mere identity of some issues will not do. The cause of action and relief claimed in the second suit must be the same as the first one. The cause of action of the first suit was the alleged determination of the lease. But a new cause of action arose after the determination of the lease on 31-12-1964 by efflux of time, within the meaning of Cl. (a) of S. 111 of the T. P. Act. The first contention advanced on behalf of the appellant is overruled.

6. Then about the holding over. In this respect, the cases of Kai Khurshroo v. Bai Jerbai in AIR 1949 FC 124 decided by Sir B. K. Mukherjee, of Ganga Dutt v. Kartick Chandra in AIR 1961 SC 1067 and of Bhawanji v. Himat Lal in AIR 1972 SC 819 may be cited. It has been stated that mere holding over after expiration of the term of the lease does not create a tenancy of any kind. Mere acceptance of an amount equivalent to rent by a landlord cannot be regarded as evidence of a new agreement.

7. According to the provisions of lease executed on 7-9-1949, the corporation taxes were payable by defendant. There was no intention to create a new agreement or a new lease and the landlord did not assent to his continuing in possession, within the meaning of the provisions of S. 116 of the T. P. Act. We hold that there was no holding over by the defendant and there was no new tenancy in his favour, as alleged.

8. Now about the structures. It is true that the plaintiff asked for recovery of khas possession of the land as well as of the structures standing thereon. No prayer for any declaration was made regarding the structures. The learned Judge passed a decree that the defendant must remove the structures within two months. This direction is correct. Unless the structures are removed by the defendant, the plaintiff is legally entitled to remove the same. Hence, this contention also will fail.

9. The appeal is, therefore, dismissed.

10. There will be no order as to costs.

BANERJEE, J. : I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

Kashinath Dey, for Petitioner; Tarun Chatterjee and Jiban Ratan Chatterjee, for Opposite Party.

ORDER :— The order dated the 25th May, 1981 passed by the Munsif 5th Court, at Alipore, allowing an application under S. 17 (3) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, has been challenged before this Court. The suit in question being Title Suit No. 295 of 1973 was commenced by the opposite party for ejectment of the petitioner from the suit premises only on the ground of reasonable requirement. The tenancy was said to be held at a rental of Rs. 100/- per month according to English Calendar Month. The petitioner defendant after appearance deposited rent under S. 17 (1) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, since December, 1975 and made an application under S. 70 (2A) (b) of the Act for liquidating the admitted arrears since August, 1973 upon which on a joint petition by the parties, the learned Munsif by an order dated 30-11-

76 directed to liquidate the arrears by 29 months. The petitioner also filed an application for fixation of fair rent in the office of the Rent Controller Alipore, wherein the rent was assessed at Rs. 37/- per month. On appeal the District Judge remanded the case to the Rent Controller against which the petitioner moved this Court and obtained a Rule and by an interim order the order passed by the District Judge was stayed till the hearing of the Rule. Thus following the aforesaid fixation case the petitioner made an application under S. 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure for modification of the order passed under S. 17(2A) of the Act permitting the petitioner to deposit the current rent at the rate of Rs. 37/- per month, and also to deposit the arrears of the rent at such rate. The petitioner however did not deposit any current as well as arrears of rent, as he was under the impression that he would deposit the same after the modification of the order under S. 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The opposite party thereafter filed an application under S. 17 (3) of the Act. On petitioner's insistence on disposing of the application under S. 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure prior to the disposal of the application under S. 17 (3), the learned Munsif by an order dated 29-3-79 rejected the application under S. 151 of the Code. The petitioner against that order came in revision before this Court.

2. On 17-6-80 the rule against the order of the District Judge was discharged after an observation that the petitioner would be entitled to raise objection during the hearing of the application under S. 17 (3) of the Code.

3. The application under S. 17 (3) was disposed of by the impugned order on 20-5-1981.

4. It is contended by Mr. Kashinath Dey, the learned Advocate for the petitioner that the learned Munsif failed to exercise jurisdiction in not considering the fact that in view of the order passed in C. R. 9538 (W) of 1978 the order passed by the Rent Controller fixing the rate of rent at Rs. 37/- per month was in force and the petitioner was entitled to adjust the excess amount paid by the petitioner and as such the petitioner could not come within the mischief of S. 17 (3) of the Act.

5. The objection raised by the petitioner during hearing of the application under S. 17 (3) of the Act was dispelled by the learned Munsif by observing that the Rent Controller was not a Court in the strict sense as its order is not binding upon this Court. In Brajananda Sinha v. Jyoti Narain reported in AIR 1956 SC 66 it was observed pronouncement of a definitive judgment is considered to be essential sine qua non of a Court and unless and until a binding and authoritative judgment can be pronounced by a person or body of persons it cannot be predicted that he or they constituted a Court. On an application under S. 8 (1) (c) of the Act, the Rent Controller is to fix fair rent on evidence under S. 9 of the Act. Thus in doing so the Rent Controller is to pronounce a judgment. So it should not be laid down that the Rent Controller is not a Court. Now it is to be seen whether the petitioner was justified in not depositing the rent at the rate of Rs. 100/- per month because of fixation of rent at Rs. 37/- per month.

6. Mr. Tarun Chatterjee, the learned Advocate for the opposite party contends that the petitioner being a statutory tenant was not competent to file a petition for fixation of rent. In support of his contention he makes reliance on the decision in the case of Sudhir Kr. Chakraborty v. Ashutosh Bhattacharya reported in (1980) 1 Cal LJ 36 : (AIR 1980 Cal 108). It is held therein by G. N. Ray, J., that after the determination of tenancy statutory tenant cannot make an application under S. 8 of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act for determination of fair rent by the Rent Controller. But in Dhanapal Chettiar v. Yesodai Ammal, reported in AIR 1979 SC 1745, it is held by the Supreme Court that a tenant continues to be so even after determination of the tenancy and till the date of Khas possession. Such is also the definition of the tenant under S. 2 (h) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. Having regard to the decision of the Supreme Court and to the definition as hereunder there is little difference between a contractual tenant and a statutory tenant. Be that as it may we need not enter into the controversy whether a tenant after service of notice to quit can file an application for fixation of fair rent under S. 8 of the Act. It can be remembered in this case, this application under S. 8 was filed on 15-5-73 and the suit was filed on 5-8-73. Thus this application for fair rent was filed at a time when there was no suit for ejectment pending against the petitioner.

7. Lastly, Mr. Tarun Chatterjee contends that there was no dispute as to the rate of rent under S. 17 (2) of the Act. In such circumstances, the petitioner tenant was under an obligation to pay rent under S. 17 (1) of the Act at the rate at which it was last paid. S. 17 of the Act lays down that a tenant in order to enjoy protection against delivery of possession is to deposit either within one month from the service of summons or within one month from his appearance in Court, or with the Controller or pay to the landlord an amount calculated at the rate of rent at which it was last paid, for the period for which the tenant may have made default, including the period subsequent thereto up to the end of the month previous to that in which deposit or payment is made together with statutory interest.

8. Mr. Chatterjee next places reliance on the decision of a Division Bench of this Court in the case of Central Coal Fields Ltd. v. Rabindra Nath Dutta reported in AIR 1980 Cal 114 at page 117 wherein it is stated that under S. 17 (1) a tenant is required to deposit or pay to the landlord the entire amount calculated at the rate of rent at which it was last paid for the period for which the tenant may have made default. Mr. Chatterjee also relies on another Division Bench decision of this Court in Ahmed Ali Khan v. Mrs. Ivy Claire Nabi Buksh, reported in (1960) 64 Cal WN 391. It is laid down therein that proper interpretation of S. 17 (2) would be that in a case where rent is standardized before or during the pendency of the ejectment suit and the tenant brings it to the notice of the Court and raises the relevant dispute as to the amount of rent payable by him which includes the rate of rent or the rate at which it is to be paid, the Court in spite of S. 17 (1) is entitled on the tenant's application to determine and fix the rate payable under sub-sec. (2) at the standardized figure.

9. But in this case there was no application under S. 17 (1) of the Act. The rate of rent was not challenged earlier. It was only for fixation of fair rent at Rs. 37/- per month the petitioner being elated? filed an application under S. 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure for reconsideration or modification of the order passed under S. 17 (2A) of the Act. In agreement with Mr. Chatterjee, I would hold that in order to claim protection the tenant had no other alternative but to pay or to deposit an amount equivalent to rent at the rate at which it was paid last. It is contended however, by Mr. Jiban Ratan Chatterjee, for the opposite party that the decision under S. 17 (3) of the Act can be deferred till the disposal of the writ application filed by the petitioner. As it goes in favour of the petitioner. I do not object to such proposition but before doing so it is to be seen whether the petition under S. 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure was mala fide. As the Rent Controller fixed the rent at Rs. 37/- per month the petitioner was under the impression that the Court would reconsider the order. In view of the matter, before striking out the defence under Section 17 (3) of the Act, the learned Munsif should have given the petitioner another opportunity to comply with the order passed by the Court on 30-11-76. There is no dispute to the fact that petitioner deposited rent from Dec., 1975 to April, 1977. In view of the foregoing findings the impugned order is set aside and the petitioner should be given another chance to comply with the order. In case the petitioner fails to comply with the order the learned Munsif would dispose of the application filed under S. 17 (3) of the Act according to law. It is for him to see whether this would be deferred till the disposal of Writ Petition filed by the petitioner before the High Court. The application is thus disposed of. There will be no order for costs.

Order accordingly.

DIPAK KUMAR SEN, J.

Sumani Ferro Alloys Ltd. v. Super Forging Steel Sales Pvt. Ltd. and another. Suit No. 27 of 1981, D/- 18-11-1981.

Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 37, R. 2 — Plaintiff drawing Hundies on bank defendant No. 2 — Acceptance by defendant No. 1 — Bank presenting Hundies to defendant No. 1 for payment — Dishonour of Hundies — Bank endorsing those Hundies in favour of plaintiff for value received — Suit by plaintiff under O. 37 — Defendant No. 1 would be entitled to defend suit. (Negotiable Instruments Act (1881), S. 9).

Plaintiff had drawn some Hundies on the Bank defendant No. 2 which were accepted by the defendant No. 1. The Hundies were presented by the Bank to the defendant No. 1 for payment when they matured but were dishonoured. After that the Bank endorsed the Hundies in favour of the plaintiff for value received. The plaintiff filed a suit under O. 37 on the basis of Hundies. The defendant No. 1 filed application praying for leave to defend the suit, as he had a counter-claim against the plaintiff.

Held, that the plaintiff could not claim to be holder in the due course of the Hundies under S. 9 of Negotiable Instruments Act as the same were not payable to bearer and as the Bank endorsed the same in favour of the plaintiff after the amount mentioned in the Hundies became payable and also after the Hundies were dishonoured. In that view the counter-claim of the defendants could be a sufficient defence to the claim of the plaintiff. Therefore the defendant No. 1 would be entitled to defend the suit. (Para 11)

ORDER:— The Sumani Ferro Alloys

Ltd., the plaintiff instituted this suit under O. 37 of the Civil P. C. against Super Forging Steel Sales Private Limited and the Bank of India, defendants Nos. 1 and 2 respectively, claiming a decree for Rs. 3,62,131/- with interests and costs. The plaintiff's cause of action is based on several Hundies, all drawn by the plaintiff on the defendant No. 2 and accepted by the defendant No. 1 in March, 1979. It is alleged that the said Hundies matured in April and May 1979 when it is alleged they were presented by the defendant No. 2 to the defendant No. 1 for payment but were dishonoured.

2. On or about the 25th Aug., 1980 it is alleged that the defendant No. 2 endorsed in favour of the plaintiff the said Hundies for value received.

3. The plaintiff claims to have become the holder of the said Hundies in due course and alleges that it again presented the said Hundies to the defendant No. 1 for payment but the same were again dishonoured. In this application the plaintiff prays for a final judgment of the amount claimed in the suit with interest and costs.

4. There is another application by the defendant No. 1 praying for leave to defend this suit. The case of the defendant No. 1 is, inter alia, that the transaction between the plaintiff and the defendant No. 1 was for supply of 458 tonnes of steels ingots of different specifications by the plaintiff to the defendant No. 1 at agreed rates. It was a term of the said transaction that the defendant No. 1 would pay the plaintiff for the supply by Hundies presented through the Bank provided the plaintiff was entitled to such payment. The defendant No. 1 alleges that only 84,290 metric tonnes ingots were supplied by the plaintiff in nine instalments, but the same did not conform to the agreed specifications or quality were defective; could not be rolled or forged and were wholly unfit for the purpose for which they were purchased. The defendant No. 1 it is alleged rejected the said ingots supplied and intimated the plaintiff of such rejection directly and through the latter's broker. The defendant No. 1 alleges that it has a counter-claim of over Rs. 9 lakhs against the plaintiff on account of damages and or non-supply.

5. The defendant also contends that the said Hundies are invalid as they are not properly and sufficiently stamped as required in law.

6. At the hearing, learned Counsel for the plaintiff cited a decision of the House of Lords in Nova (Jersey) Knit Ltd. v. Kammgarn Spinnerei G. M. B. H. reported in (1977) 2 All ER 463 for the proposition that a claim for unliquidated damages could not be raised by way of defence, set off or counter-claim to an action on a bill of exchange.

7. Learned Counsel for the defendant No. 1 cited Jade International Steel Stahl Und Eisen Gamb H. & Co. K. G. v. Robert Nicholas Steels Ltd., reported in (1978) 3 All ER 104. In this case the plaintiff sold to the defendants a quantity of steel to be delivered in two consignments and drew a bill of exchange payable on the defendants for the price of the first consignment. The bill was accepted by the defendants. The plaintiff discounted the bill with their Bank which was thereafter discounted with two other Banks. The first consignment of steel was delivered to the defendants. The defendants did not honour the bill on the ground that the first consignment delivered was sub-standard. The bill traced its course back to the plaintiff's Bank which debited the plaintiff's account for the amount and returned the bill to the plaintiff. The plaintiff brought an action against the defendants and applied for a summary judgment. The defendant alleged that they had good defence by way of a counter-claim and applied for leave to defend. In the Court of the first instance leave was not granted to the defendants to defend the action on the ground that in an action on a bill of exchange defence by way of counter-claim could be put up if the action was between immediate parties to the bill. The plaintiffs having discounted the bill they were not immediate parties to it and they derived their title to it through the holders in due course. The Appeal Court sustained the said order.

8. Submissions were made by learned Counsel on different aspects of the Stamp Act.

9. In the instant case it appears to me that the Hundies were payable to the order of the Bank, the defendant No. 2. The case of the plaintiff is that the Bank endorsed the said Hundies in favour of the plaintiff and returned the same to the plaintiff for value received.

10. S. 9 of the Negotiable Instrument Act, 1881 reads as follows:—

" 'Holder in due course' means any person who for consideration became the possessor of a promissory note, bill of exchange or cheque if payable to bearer, or the payee or indorsee thereof, if (payable to order) before the amount mentioned in it became payable, and without having sufficient cause to believe that any defect existed in the title of the person from whom he derived his title."

11. The plaintiff cannot claim to be the holder in due course of the said Hundies under the said section as the same are not payable to bearer and as the Bank endorsed the same in favour of the plaintiff after the amount mentioned in the Hundies became payable and also after the Hundies were dishonoured. In that view the counter-claim of the defendants can be a sufficient defence to the claim of the plaintiff. I need not express any final opinion on the disputes raised as to the validity or sufficiency of the stamps at this stage. In my view the defendant No. 1 has raised triable issues and is entitled to defend the suit.

12. Leave is given to the defendant No. 1 to defend the suit unconditionally.

Learned Counsel for the defendant No. 1 on instructions waives service of the Writ of Summons. The defendant No. 1 will file its written statement within three weeks from date; cross-orders for discovery within two weeks thereafter; inspection forthwith thereafter. The Suit will appear in the appropriate prospective list for hearing ten weeks hence.

13. This order disposes of both the applications.

Order accordingly.

A. F. O. D. No. 371 of 1978, D/- 5-11-1981.

(A) Hindu Marriage Act (25 of 1955), S. 13 (1) (iii) — Suit for divorce under — Under S. 13 (1) (iii) word "or" has been used after expression "has been incurably of unsound mind" — Averment in plaint that wife became incurably of unsound mind and that she is also intermittently suffering from mental disorder — Plaint is defective as wife cannot become incurably of unsound mind and cannot at the same time intermittently suffer from mental disorder. (Para 9)

(B) Hindu Marriage Act (25 of 1955), S. 13 (1) (iii) — Divorce — Grounds — Allegation that wife suffered from incurable schizophrenia — Maintainability of.

Each case of schizophrenia has to be considered on its own merits. Schizophrenia is an illness of slow insidious onset developing over years. There may be report of strange, odd inappropriate behaviour. There will be progressive deterioration in the level of performance at work and socially; school report, examination results and the employment record will provide objective and usually reliable indices of intellectual performance, its maintenance or decline. According to the Cl. (iii) of the section, two elements are necessary to get a decree of divorce. The party concerned must be of unsound mind or intermittently suffering from schizophrenia or mental disorder. At the same time that disease must be of such a kind and of such an extent that the other party cannot reasonably be expected to live with her. So only one element of that clause is insufficient to grant a decree. (Paras 9, 15)

LY/AZ/F846/81/SAD/MVJ

In the instant case the husband has stated in his evidence that the wife is schizophrenic and she cannot be permanently cured. But the case of schizophrenia did not appear in the report or prescriptions, submitted by him. He has admitted in cross-examination that a schizophrenic patient can recover from illness after treatment and after such recovery she can appear in examination, do all domestic work and such other work. The doctor examined the wife and stated that she has been suffering from mental aberration. The doctor further certified that she was under his treatment for some time and that she had recovered from her illness. It was thus clear that she had no progressive deterioration. Wife's own case was that she was in Mental Hospital. No sign of abnormality was detected in the hospital. Moreover, the doctor in the Hospital examined her only on two occasions. So such examination by him was not sufficient to form an opinion that she had been suffering from schizophrenia. The husband or his mother did not utter a word that it was unsafe to live with her, she ever misbehaved with them or tortured or abused or behaved with them in any violent manner. This evidence could be sufficient for the Court to conclude that her slight mental disorder was not of such kind and to such an extent that the husband could not reasonably be expected to live, with her within meaning of the second portion of S. 13 (1) (iii) of the Act. Dipankar Ghosh, P. K. Roy and P. C. Roy, for Appellant; S. N. Mukherjee and B. K. Banerjee, for Respondent.

B. N. MAITRA, J.:— The husband has filed the present suit for divorce. The case is that on the 4th Dec., 1969, he was married to the respondent, Rita Roy, according to Hindu rites. The marriage was consummated. After the marriage she showed signs of abnormality. On the 8th Dec., 1970, a daughter was born out of the wedlock. Once she attempted to commit suicide. After observing her abnormal mental condition, he had her examined in the Mental Observation Ward, Bhowanipore, in Jan./Feb., 1970. She was also under the treatment of one Dr. Gobinda Sen. In 1973, she was examined by doctor. Subsequently, she was admitted to Gobra Mental Hospital for treatment. From Jan., 1973, the respondent became incurably of unsound mind and has been suffering intermittently from mental disorder of such kind and to such an extent that she cannot safely and reasonably be expected to live with the petitioner.

2. The respondent filed written statement denying the material allegations made by the husband. Her case is that before the marriage she had passed the Higher Secondary Examination. She had been treated with cruelty after she gave birth to the daughter. In Jan., 1973, she was in a family way. A forced abortion was made and the same told upon her health heavily. She had to go to Gobra Mental Hospital for treatment. After treatment for a short period, she was declared fit.

3. The learned Additional District Judge has believed the petitioner's version, found that the wife has been intermittently suffering from mental disorder which includes schizophrenia and her mental disorder is of such kind and to such an extent that the husband cannot reasonably be expected to live with her. The suit was decreed. The wife has preferred the present appeal.

4. It has been argued on behalf of the appellant that the plaint is defective. Initially a prayer was made before the learned District Judge for representing her by her guardian mother. The learned District Judge examined her and turned down that prayer. The evidence given by the petitioner's side only shows that she has only some mental disorder. But she is not of incurably unsound mind or has not been continuously or intermittently suffering from mental disorder. At any rate, such slight mental disorder is not of such kind and to such an extent that the husband cannot reasonably be expected to live with her, within the meaning of the later portion of the amended S. 13 (1) (iii) of the Hindu Marriage Act. Reference has been made to the certificate Ext. A to show that after treatment she was declared fit in 1974. The case of Bennett v. Bennett, reported in (1969) 1 All ER 539, Cleary v. Cleary, in (1974) 1 All ER 498 and Thurlow v. Thurlow, in (1975) 2 All ER 979 have been cited. It has been stated that this slight mental disorder is curable after treatment and she can fully recover, behave properly and do her household duty. The letters written by her, Ext. B series, demonstrate her normality and coherency. Though in the petition filed by the husband, there is no allegation that her father is off his head. But P. W. 4, Sitesh, petitioner, has stated that her father is also a crazy fellow. There is no evidence that there is no prospect of her recovery. So, the Court should reject the husband's prayer.

5. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the husband has stated that she has been suffering from schizophrenia. Reference has been made to the pages 237, 245, 266, 270, 275 and 324 of Clinical Psychiatry, Mayer-Gross, Slater and Roth, 3rd Edition. It has been stated that schizophrenia is of various kinds. In some case life-long hospitalization is necessary. At page 245, there is a table to show how a child born of a patient suffering from schizophrenia may also be a victim of such disease. The element of association is also important and others may be affected. There is abnormality of thinking, disturbance of the thought process and of volition. Such a patient does not always act out of his own volition and there is hardly any voluntary action. He or she is not a free agent. Sometimes he is aggressive and sometimes there are manifestations of schizophrenia. On most occasions he is a normal being and his abnormality is not continuous or patent. The Court shall have to consider the future life of the petitioner, who is a young man and has a social life. From 1969 to 1973 she lived with the petitioner. In the later portion of 1973 she went to her father's family and lived there. In 1975, she returned to the husband's place. Then she was again treated at the Gobra Mental Hospital. This has been admitted in the evidence, vide the statement made by D. W. 1 Rita Roy. The letters, Ext. B series, also prove the husband's version. So considering the facts of the case, the Court should have no hesitation in stating that Rita is incurably of unsound mind or she has been suffering intermittently from schizophrenia of such a kind and to such an extent that the husband cannot reasonably be expected to live with her, within the meaning of S. 13 (1) (iii) of the Act.

6. So the point for consideration is whether Rita has been incurably of unsound mind or has been suffering intermittently from schizophrenia or mental disorder of such kind and to such an extent that the husband cannot reasonably be expected to live with her.

7. There is no denial on behalf of the appellant that Rita had some mental disorder. Through the evidence of P. W. 2 Swadeshi Bala, petitioner's ex-maid-servant, and P. W. 3, Gautam, petitioner's extenant, an attempt was made to show when she tried to commit suicide and how Rita behaved after the marriage and up to 1973. Similarly the petitioner examined P. W. -5 Basudeb Majumdar, who speaks of the incident and Rita's behaviour at the time of her 'Boubhat' and the period subsequent thereto. This evidence is hardly relevant because in the plaint, the petitioner's allegation is that Rita is of incurably unsound mind from Jan. 1973 and since then she has been intermittently suffering from the same. But after the alleged attempt to commit suicide and strange behaviour, a daughter was born. P. W. 2 Swadeshi Bala left the petitioner's service in 1975. P. W. 3 Goutam ceased to be the petitioner's tenant in 1973. Hence this chapter of the petitioner's evidence is of no consequence in this case.

8. It has been rightly pointed out on behalf of the Appellant that the plaint is defective because in S. 13 (1) (iii) of the Act the word "Or" has been used after the expression "has been incurably of unsound mind". In paragraph 4 of the plaint the averment is, "The respondent became incurably of unsound mind since Jan., 1973 and that the respondent is intermittently suffering from mental disorder” This statement in the plaint is inconsistent because if Rita is incurably of unsound mind from Jan., 1973, she cannot at the same time intermittently suffer from mental disorder for the same period.

9. Then about schizophrenia, which is a mental disorder. In the bench case of Pronab v. Krishna, reported in (1974) 78 Cal WN 448 : (AIR 1975 Cal 109), it has been stated that each case of schizophrenia has to be considered on its own merits. Schizophrenia is an illness of slow insidious onset developing over years. There may be report of strange, odd inappropriate behaviour. There will be progressive deterioration in the level of performance at work and socially; school report, examination results and the employment record will provide objective and usually reliable indices of intellectual performance, its maintenance or decline; vide page 454 (of Cal WN) : (at p. 113 of AIR) of the report. The observations made by Handerson and Gillespies (10th edn) at page 279 may also be referred to.

10. Let us apply the principles of law discussed in this case to the facts of the present one. P. W. 1, Dr. Gobinda Sen, examined the wife in 1973. He has stated in his evidence that she is schizophrenic and she cannot be permanently cured. But the case of schizophrenia does not appear in the report or prescriptions, Ext. 1 series and A, submitted by him. He has admitted in cross-examination that a schizophrenic patient can recover from illness after treatment and after such recovery she can appear in examination, do all domestic work and such other work.

11. Let us now look to the report submitted by him. His report is Ext. A dated 3-2-1974. This doctor examined the wife Rita on that date and stated that she has been suffering from mental aberration. Any way, this doctor further certified that she was under his treatment up to 13-11-1973 and at present she has recovered from her illness. It is thus clear that she had no progressive deterioration.

12. In the case of Dr. Narayan Ganesh v. Mrs. Sucheta Narayan, reported in AIR 1970 Bom 312 that Court dealt with the case of schizophrenia elaborately. It will appear from the page 317 of the report that it will always be wise, even for the consultant psychiatrist to see the patient on several occasions before ruling out schizophrenia, and his relatives, employers and friends should be interviewed. A single interview may not disclose any abnormalities. But if he can be observed in hospital, quite blatant signs may be recognized. Now, the petitioner's own case is that she was in Gobra Mental Hospital. No blatant sign of abnormality was detected in the hospital. Moreover, P. W. 1 Dr. Gobinda Sen examined her only on two occasions. So such examination by him is not sufficient to form an opinion that she has been suffering from schizophrenia.

13. There is a very important aspect of the case because she has stated in her evidence that her husband can have no fear if he lives with her, vide the evidence of D. W. 1 Rita Roy. No Cross-examination was levelled on this. It will be pertinent to point out that according to the amended R. 3A of O. 18 of Civil P. C. the petitioner was required to be examined first. If he is examined later, the Court shall have to record reasons and grant him permission to be examined subsequently. No such permission was given by the Court. Still the husband, P. W. 4, Sitesh, or his mother (P. W. 6 Saila Roy) does not utter a word that it is unsafe to live with her, she ever misbehaved with them or tortured or abused or behaved with them in any violent manner. This evidence is sufficient for the Court to conclude that her slight mental disorder is not of such kind and to such an extent that the husband cannot reasonably be expected to live with her within the meaning of the second portion of S. 13 (1) (iii) of the Act.

14. The letters Ext. B, series, written by her to her relations in 1976 consistently show her sobriety and coherency as well. The husband's case is that in 1976 she was thoroughly deranged. There is no cogent and clear evidence on behalf of the husband to show that such slight illness cannot be fully recovered.

15. A party's behaviour is associated with mental disorder, Reference may be made to Raydon on Divorce. Vol. 2, thirteenth edition, at p. 226, that in dealing with the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1973, it has been stated that broadly speaking the phrase “The respondent has behaved in such a way that the petitioner cannot reasonably be expected to live with the respondent” is within the same range as conduct amounting to constructive desertion, that is, grave and weighty conduct—serious conduct — which reasonably results in one party leaving the other: or, to put the matter another way, it may broadly be said to be cruelty without injury to health. It has already been stated that though the husband was examined later, he does not say anything that she was either cruel in her behaviour or she ever misbehaved with him on any occasion. According to the aforesaid cl. (iii), two elements are necessary to get a decree. The party concerned must be of unsound mind or intermittently suffering from schizophrenia or mental disorder. At the same time that disease must be of such a kind and of such an extent that the other party cannot reasonably be expected to live with her. So only one element of that clause is insufficient to grant a decree.

16. The case of Bennett v. Bennett (1969-1 All ER 539) (supra) shows that the parties were married in 1965, but were together for only short periods. Before the marriage she was admitted to a mental hospital on two occasions, she received shock treatment and was subsequently discharged. The husband was not aware of those facts. In Nov., 1965, the husband returned home and came to know of the same. He went abroad and returned in 1966. He did not see the wife. But he immediately consulted a solicitor and filed a petition for a decree of nullity under S. 9 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1965. It has been held that there was no evidence that the wife had suffered from recurrent attacks of insanity, within the meaning of S. 9 (1) (b) (iii), insanity being interpreted to mean the same as unsoundness of mind in S. 9 (1) (b) (i). It has been further held that although the wife had been temporarily insane and of unsound mind for a short period in 1955, she suffered from a temporary hysterical neurosis, within the definition of mental disorder in S. 4 of Mental Health Act, 1959. There was no evidence that she was suffering from a mental disorder of such kind or to such an extent as to be unfitted for marriage and the procreation of children, within the meaning of S. 9 (1) (b) (ii) of the section. The husband's petition was, therefore, dismissed. The case of Cleary v. Cleary (1974-1 All ER 498) (supra) is on adultery and has therefore no bearing on the facts of the present one. The next case of Thurlow v. Thurlow (1975-2 All ER 979) (supra), cited on behalf of the appellant, shows that the wife was suffering from increasingly severe neurological disorder and she ceased to do any house work. The husband had to do the house-work and nurse the wife in addition to his full time employment. She had an attack of epilepsy. So, that case is also distinguishable.

17. It has been contended on behalf of the respondent that the husband filed an application before the learned District Judge that the wife was completely insane and without her medical examination, his case could not be proved. The wife was not willing to subject herself to any medical examination. Hence the prayer was not allowed. The Full Bench case in AIR 1971 Cal 1 has been cited. It has been stated that in that case one of the parties to the marriage was reluctant to be examined by a doctor. Since Rita was not willing to get herself examined by a doctor, there will be an adverse inference against her.

17-A. That case is clearly distinguishable because that was a case of impotency and not of insanity. Moreover, there is no provision in the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955, or in the rules framed thereunder or in the Civil Procedure Code or in the Indian Evidence Act to compel the wife to subject herself to such medical examination. The P. W. 1 Dr. Govinda Sen examined her twice. The matter would not have improved by her examination again by a doctor. So there is no scope for drawing any adverse inference.

18. It has been further contended on behalf of the respondent that there will be an adverse inference because her mother was not examined. This contention cannot be accepted because the wife was under no legal obligation to examine her mother. The husband has to prove his own case and he cannot succeed on the weakness of the wife's case. There can be no adverse inference for the non-examination of Rita's mother.

19. The prescriptions, Ext. 1 series, show that only tranquilisers were prescribed for her. The husband's version is that in 1976 her madness did aggravate. But the letter Ext. B (9) dated 9-1-1976 will show that after an examination she was selected as a candidate for training in the education institution. True the prescription Ext. 1 (a) dated 30-6-1976 reveals that she was in an anxious state of mind. But such anxiety is expected of such a young wife because her letter Ext. B (3) of March 1976, clearly shows that the husband's side was having consultations with lawyers and she asked her mother not to go to see her for her husband's elder brother forbade anyone of her house to go to her.

20. Thus from the aforesaid discussion, the contention put forward on behalf of the respondent cannot be sustained. We are clearly of opinion that she only has slight mental disorder and she has been suffering intermittently from the same. But after considering the totality of the evidence and the impact on the husband, we must hold that such mental disorder is not of such a kind and to such an extent that the husband cannot reasonably be expected to live with her, within the meaning of the second portion of cl. (iii) of S. 13 (1) of the Act. One expects that the husband would be tolerant and not file a suit for divorce seven years after the marriage, specially when a child was born. We, therefore, find that the decisions arrived at by the learned Additional District Judge are erroneous.

21. The appeal is allowed. The judgment and decree of the trial Court be hereby set aside and the suit dismissed.

22. There will be no order as to costs.

BANERJEE, J.:— I agree.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 143

RAMENDRA MOHAN DATTA AND

C. K. BANERJI, JJ.

Shib Nath Paul, Appellant v. Jaharlal Paul and others, Respondents.

Suit No. 1032 of 1980 and Appeal No. Nil of 1981, D/- 16-6-1981.

Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 39, R. 1 — Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 44 — Transfer of premises by one co-sharer to outsider — Right of transferee to joint possession — Grant of injunction to co-sharer.

There is no dispute that there is no bar in a co-sharer transferring his share in a property belonging to an undivided family. Section 44 of the T. P. Act itself proceeds on such basis and recognises such right of transfer by a co-sharer. S. 44 of the T. P. Act has two limbs. Under the first limb the purchaser by the purchase acquires, inter alia, the right to joint possession of the property along with the other co-sharers. Under the second limb the section does not entitle him to joint possession. Acquisition of a right to joint possession and giving effect to such right are distinct questions. A purchaser is entitled to possession of the property purchased from his vendor according to the nature of such property: if it is in the possession of tenants by letters of attornment and if it is in the possession of the vendor by actual physical possession. Under the second limb the transferee is not entitled to joint possession or other common or part enjoyment of the house. AIR 1975 SC 1409 and AIR 1976 SC 49, Rel. on. (Paras 14, 17)

In the instant case the plaintiff a co-sharer filed a suit for declaration that he was the exclusive owner of the part of the premises in dispute. In this suit opposite part also one of the co-sharers made an application for an injunction restraining the plaintiff from parting with possession of premises in dispute. The application was disposed of without any order on it. During the pendency of appeal filed thereon, the property was sold by the plaintiff to a person who was not a member of the family.

Held, that an order restraining the plaintiff from parting with possession of the vacant portion of the disputed premises to the purchaser until the disposal of the appeal could be granted. (Para 18)

Jayanta Mitra, for Appellant; P. C. Sen, (for No. 1) and Swapan Mallik, for No. 2), for Respondents.

C. K. BANERJI, J.:— In this interlocutory application the appellant is asking, inter alia, for an injunction restraining the respondent No. 1, his servants, agents and assistants from parting with possession of the vacant portion of Lot 'B' of premises No. 203/4C, Bidhan Sarani, Calcutta, to Sm. Monika Ghose or to any other stranger to the family.

2. The short facts relating to the property in dispute may be briefly stated. By an Award dated 12th April, 1949 Mr. Hem Chandra Majumder, Barrister-at-law, divided the original premises No. 203/4, Cornwallis Street (now Bidhan Sarani) into four lots being lots A, B, C and D.

Lot A was allotted to Ananda the respondent No. 2, Lot B was allotted to Jahar the respondent No. 1, Lot C was allotted to Manick and Lot D was allotted to Sushila Bala the mother. A decree was passed thereafter in terms of the said Award. The said lots were subsequently separately numbered by the Corporation of Calcutta whereby Lot A was numbered as 203/4B, lot B as 203/4C, lot C as 203/4D and lot D as 203/4A Bidhan Sarani. Lot C allotted to Manick and numbered as 203/4D, Bidhan Sarani was sold in execution of a decree some time in 1960 to Subal Chandra Pan and others strangers to the Paul family who are residing and enjoying the same exclusively.

3. By a Deed of Settlement Sushila Bala gave away lot D being No. 203/4A, Bidhan Sarani to Manik's son Shibnath through the medium of a Trust of which Jahar was appointed the Trustee. Sushila Bala died, on or about 7th Nov., 1977.

4. Shibnath filed a suit in this Court being Suit No. 701, of 1979 against Jahar claiming absolute ownership of 203/4A Bidhan Sarani and also for a decree for a large sum. An application made by Shibnath in the said Suit was decided against Jahar and on an appeal therefrom by Jahar, the appeal was disposed of by an order dated the 5th Dec., 1980 made by the Appeal Court allowing Jahar to sell No. 203/4C, Bidhan Sarani being the lot B allotted to him upon his furnishing Bank guarantee for a sum of Rs. 20,000.00 to secure the claim of Shibnath.

5. The suit herein out of which this appeal arises, was filed by Jahar, inter alia, for a declaration that he was the exclusive owner of premises No. 203/4C Bidhan Sarani, injunction restraining Ananda and Shibnath from obstructing enforcement of the said Award by construction of partition walls and for a declaration that he has a right of passage through premises No. 203/4A, Bidhan Sarani.

6. It may be noted that in the said Award a plan was annexed demarcating each lot; but there was no separation of the lots by raising boundary walls and by constructing separate stair cases, privies, etc., except for 203/4D, Bidhan Sarani which was purchased by Subal Chandra Pan and others and separated by metes and bounds by raising boundary walls to make it separate from the rest of the dwelling house.

7. On or about 5th Jan., 1981 Shibnath made an application in the said suit of Jahar out of which this present appeal arises, inter alia, for an injunction restraining Jahar, his servants and agents from parting with possession or vacating premises No. 203/4C, Bidhan Sarani to Sm. Monika Ghose or her servants or agents or to any other stranger who is stranger to the Paul family. It was urged on behalf of Shibnath in the Court below that the said application was made under S. 44 of the Transfer of Property Act. The said application was disposed of by the Court below on the 20th Feb. 1981 by making no order on the said application. The present appeal was filed by Shibnath against the said order.

8. Since then on or about 12th Mar., 1981 Jahar sold the premises No. 203/4C, Bidhan Sarani to Sm. Monika Ghose.

9. Mr. Jayanta Mitra appearing for the appellant Shibnath submitted that the said application in the Court below was made under S. 44 of the T. P. Act. Alternatively, it was in the nature of a quia timet action for an injunction against a threatened injury, namely, sale by Jahar of 203/4C, Bidhan Sarani whereby the purchaser would be entitled to possession of the said premises. S. 44 of the T. P. Act confers a right to other co-sharers to prevent the purchaser from taking possession; the threatened injury being the threat of possession by the intending purchaser upon purchase of the property by her. In any event, even if S. 44 did not apply in terms when the said application was made in Court below as there was no transfer of the property at the time, yet today the admitted position is that there has been a transfer in fact. The Appeal Court will, therefore, take note of the subsequent event and will deal with the matter as if it is a re-hearing of the application in the Court below as on this date and, therefore, grant relief to the appellant under S. 44 of the T. P. Act on equitable considerations and to avoid multiplicity of proceedings. In support of the above Mr. Mitter cited two decisions of the Supreme Court (1) Pasupuleti Venkateswarlu v. Motor & General Traders, reported in AIR 1975 SC 1409; (2) Rameshwar v. Jot Ram reported in AIR 1976 SC 49 Mr. Mitter next contended that the different lots, apart from 203/4D which has been made a separate unit and sold to Subal Chandra Pan and others, still constitute a dwelling house belonging to an undivided family. All the three lots although separately numbered, are in joint and common use and enjoyment of the parties and the parties constitute an undivided family in respect of the said lots. The four points which weighed with the learned Judge of the Court below in making the order appealed from were: (1) existence of tenants, (2) lot C bearing No. 203/4D, Bidhan Sarani sold in execution of a decree to Subal Chandra Pan and others, who were strangers to the family, (3) demarcation in the plan was sufficient to constitute partition by metes and bounds to take the said lots out of the mischief of S. 44 of the T. P. Act and S. 4 of the Partition Act and (4) the application was outside the scope of the suit in which it was made and, as such, not maintainable. Mr. Mitter submitted that the suit was to enforce the partition directed by the said Award. So it could not be said that an application under S. 44 of the T. P. Act could not be made in such suit. The consideration for the Court was if a co-sharer could prevent a stranger purchaser from taking possession as contemplated by the said section. Mr. Mitter cited several decisions of this Court and other High Courts to show the meaning of the expression "share of a dwelling house belonging to an undivided family" in S. 44 of the T. P. Act and to establish that it did not affect the position if there were tenants or even if a separated portion of the property had been sold to a stranger and that such an application could be made even after the final decree in a partition suit inasmuch as there was no actual physical partition and separation of the divided portions of the property. The cases cited by Mr. Mitter were Boto-krishna Ghose v. Akhoy Kumar Ghose (1950) 54 Cal WN 660; (AIR 1950 Cal 111); Dulal Chandra Chatterjee v. Gostha Behari Mitra (AIR 1953 Cal 259); Satyendu Kundu v. Amar Nath (AIR 1964 Cal 52); Satya Narayan Chakravarty v. Biswanath Paul. ((1970) 74 Cal WN 871), Harendra Nath Mukherjee v. Shyam Sunder Kuer, (AIR 1973 Pat 142).

10. Mr. Swapan Mallik appearing for Ananda the respondent No. 2, submitted that there has been no actual physical partition and separation of lots A, B and D which are still in joint possession and enjoyment of the parties as one property. The Thakur Ghar and the bathroom are in common use and enjoyment of the parties. There is only one staircase which is used by all the parties and the parties have to go through the other lots to reach their individual lots.

11. Mr. P. C. Sen appearing for Jahar the respondent No. 1 urged that the application by the appellant in the Court below was barred by res judicata by reason of the order dated 14th Jan., 1981 passed by the Appellate Court constituted by A. N. Sen, C. J. (as he then was) and M. M. Dutt J. granting leave to Jahar to sell premises No. 203/4C, Bidhan Sarani upon furnishing Bank guarantee for the sum of Rs. 20,000.00. The respondent No. 1 in view of such leave granted could not now be restrained by an injunction from making over possession to the purchaser.

12. He next urged that S. 44 of the T. P. Act recognises the right of a co-sharer to transfer a share of the property. There is no legal bar on such transfer. The respondent No. 1 having lawfully transferred his lot to Sm. Monika Ghose cannot be restrained from making over possession to her which he is bound to do under the law and also under the Conveyance. Under S. 44 of the T. P. Act the remedy of the appellant, if any, is against the transferee and not against the transferor. The transferee is not a party to the proceeding and no order can be made against her. By seeking an order of injunction against the respondent No. 1 the appellant is trying to get indirectly what he could not get directly. Mr. Sen next urged that the application in the Court below was made at a time when there was no transfer by Jahar of his lot either to Monika Ghose or to any other person. Section 44 of the T. P. Act would be attracted only when there has been a transfer. Thus the said application in the Court below was misconceived and was not maintainable under the said section. There is no scope for applying the principles of quia timet action for an injunction against a threatened injury on equitable grounds, sale by respondent No. 1 to Monika Ghose was not an injury threatened or otherwise. If sale cannot be prevented, what the purchaser may do or may not do after purchase cannot be a matter of injunction against the respondent No. 1 the vendor. In any event the purchaser not being before the Court any order of injunction against the respondent No. 1 will be meaningless and will neither affect nor bind the purchaser. She would be entitled to take possession on her own rights as the purchaser.

13. Mr. Sen urged that, the decisions cited by Mr. Mitter have no application to this case. All those cases are after the purchaser has come into the picture or either has taken proceedings or has been made a party to the proceedings. None of them relates to an intending purchaser.

14. There is no dispute that there is no bar in a co-sharer transferring his share in a property belonging to an undivided family. S. 44 of the T. P. Act itself proceeds on such basis and recognises such right of transfer by a co-sharer.

15. Jahar was lawfully entitled to transfer his share in the property and he has, therefore, done so. The order of A. N. Sen, C. J. (as he then was) and M. M. Dutt J. secured the claim of Shibnath against Jahar directing him to furnish security. Prima facie, it does not appear that the said order could be said to operate as res judicata.

16. It is true that S. 44 of the T. P. Act did not apply in terms when the said application was made by Shibnath in the Court below as there was no transfer at the time by Jahar to Monika Ghose. The substantial question which would arise in the appeal is whether this Court would take note of the subsequent event, that is, transfer by Jahar to Monika Ghose and grant the relief accordingly. The further substantial question would be whether there has been such partition and separation of the joint property by the said Award and demarcation of the lots in the plan annexed thereto so as to take the said property out of the mischief of S. 44 of the T. P. Act and the said property has ceased to be a property belonging to an undivided family.

17. Section 44 of the T. P. Act has two limbs. Under the first limb the purchaser by the purchase acquires, inter alia, the right to joint possession of the property along with the other co-sharers. Under the second limb the section does not entitle him to joint possession. Acquisition of a right to joint possession and giving effect to such right are distinct questions. A purchaser is entitled to possession of the property purchased from his vendor according to the nature of such property. If it is in the possession of tenants by letters of attornment and if it is in the possession of the vendor by actual physical possession. The second limb provides "nothing in this section shall be deemed to entitle him (transferee) to joint possession or other common or part enjoyment of the house". Apart from the tenanted portion of premises No. 203/4C, Bidhan Sarani the rest of the said premises is in the possession of Jahar and the purchaser Monika Ghose is, therefore, entitled thereto from Jahar and thus she would get joint possession or common or part enjoyment thereof. In that view of the matter prima facie it appears, that the contention of Mr. Jayanta Mitter that an injunction against Jahar would be sufficient is not wholly without any substance. There are arguable points to be decided in the appeal.

18. In that view of the matter there will be an order restraining the plaintiff respondent No. 1, his servants and agents from parting with possession of the vacant portion of premises No. 203/4C, Bidhan Sarani, Calcutta, to Smt. Monika Ghose until the disposal of the appeal.

19. The appeal is expedited in the manner following: The notice of appeal is waived. Settlement of index is dispensed with. All papers used in the Court below as well as the order appealed from and the order admitting the appeal be included in the Paper Book which is to be filed within six weeks from date. Appeal to appear at the top of the appropriate Warning List eight weeks hence. The Department to issue the certified copies of the aforesaid Orders forthwith on a signed copy of the minutes. Costs cost in the appeal.

C. R. Nos. 2487 and 2488 of 1980, D/-22-12-1981.

West Bengal Land Reforms Act (10 of 1956), Secs. 8 and 14-M — Order as to pre-emption — Determination of ceiling area is not condition precedent. (1981) 2 Cal LJ 22 and (1978) 2 Cal LJ 155, Overruled.

The expression "subject to limit...etc" in Sec. 8 does not require the Munsif to determine the ceiling area before making the order of pre-emption. It only means that after the order of pre-emption is made it shall be subject to the limitations prescribed by Sec. 14-M. (Para 13)

The use of the above expression in Sec. 8 may not be very happy but where the main object and intention of a statute are very clear, it must not be reduced to a nullity or absurdity by the draftsman's unskillful or unnecessary use of words. Even if the expression had not been introduced in Section 8, the pre-emption would still then have been subject to Sec. 14-Y and therefore to Section 14-M as well. The use of the words "subject to the limit mentioned in Section 14-M" was clearly redundant but it can never be construed to confer a jurisdiction on the Munsif to determine the ceiling which jurisdiction is exclusively conferred by clear and unambiguous terms on the Revenue Officer. Mihir Kumar Ray, for Petitioner;

B. C. CHAKRABARTI, J.:— These two Rules are directed against an appellate order passed in Misc. Appeal Nos. 87/78 and 88/78 of the 3rd Court of the 1d. Additional District Judge, Murshidabad affirming an order of pre-emption under Sec. 8 of the West Bengal Land Reforms Act passed in Misc. Case Nos. 19/77 and 20/77 of the 2nd Court of Munsif at Jangipur. The miscellaneous cases were disposed of by a common judgment and the appeals too were heard analogously.

2. Both the courts below having allowed the prayer for pre-emption, the petitioners in these revisional applications have raised a short point in opposing the order, namely whether the court could legally make any order for pre-emption in view of the provisions of Sec. 14-M of the Land Reforms Act. (hereinafter referred to as the Act), without determination of the ceiling area mentioned in the said section.

3. Section 14-M appertains to Chapter IIB of the Act which was introduced by the West Bengal Land Reforms (Amendment) Act, 1971. The section provides for a ceiling area which the different categories of raiyats referred to in the various sub-sections of Sec. 14-M, may hold and retain. Lands in excess of such area vest in the State in view of Section 14-S of the Act. With the introduction of Chapter IIB, Sec. 8 also was amended. The section, in material part now reads as follows:— "(1), If a portion or share of a holding of a raiyat is transferred to any person other than a co-sharer in the holding, any co-sharer raiyat of the holding may, within three months of the service of the notice given under sub-sec. (5) of Sec. 5 or any raiyat possessing land adjoining such holding, may, within four months of the date of such transfer, apply to the Munsif having territorial jurisdiction, for transfer of the said portion or share of the holding to him, subject to the limit mentioned in Sec. 14-M on deposit of the consideration money together with a further sum of ten per cent of that amount."

4. In view of this provision the petitioners raised a point before the lower appellate court that no order for pre-emption could be lawfully made until determination of the question whether the land sought to be pre-empted if added to the land already held by the raiyat would or would not exceed the limit prescribed by Sec. 14-M. Relying upon a single Bench decision in the case of Asraf Hossain v. Jahangir Hossain reported in (1978) 2 Cal LJ 143, the appellate court overruled the contention.

5. Being aggrieved at the decision the petitioners have moved the present revisional applications. In view of conflicting decisions on the point, the Rules which were previously pending before a learned single Judge of this Court, have been assigned to us for disposal.

6. Mr. Roy appearing in support of these applications relying on the authority of a single Bench decision in the case of Pasupati Mondal v. Subhrangsu Mondal reported in (1981) 2 Cal LJ 22, and another single Bench decision in the case of Kalipada v. Dulal (1978) 2 Cal LJ 155, contended that Sec. 14-M of the Act enjoins a duty on the court to take into consideration the limits mentioned in the said section, the grant of pre-emption being dependant on the limit prescribed therein. Mr. Roy argued that pre-emption is a very weak right encroaching on the contractual right of a person to acquire or transfer property, and it is incumbent on the court to construe the provisions rather strictly and meticulously. He contended that determination of the ceiling is a condition precedent to the grant of pre-emption.

7. There is indeed some conflict of opinion in the decisions referred to above. Necessarily the point deserves a closer examination. The question that falls for our consideration precisely is whether determination of the ceiling is a condition precedent to the grant and whether the Munsif in seisin of an application for pre-emption has the requisite jurisdiction to make such determination.

8. We have already indicated that Sec. 14-M prescribes the maximum quantum of land that a raiyat may hold. Sec. 14-S provides for vesting of lands in excess of ceiling area in the State free from all incumbrances. Sec. 14-T casts a duty on every raiyat owning land in excess of the ceiling area to furnish a return to the Revenue Officer containing a description of the lands he proposes to retain together with a description of the lands which are in excess of the ceiling. Sub-sec. (3) empowers the Revenue Officer on receipt of a return, to determine the extent of land which is to vest in the State under Sec. 14-S and take possession of such lands. The proviso to sub-sec. (3) lays down that the Revenue Officer may, in appropriate cases even disregard the choice exercised by the raiyat. Sub-section (4) provides for imposition of penalty if a raiyat fails to furnish the return or wilfully makes any omission or incorrect statements therein. S. 14-Y lays down that if any raiyat acquires any land, whether by transfer, inheritance or otherwise, after the commencement of the provisions of this Chapter namely Chapter IIB, and such land, together with the land owned by him, exceeds the ceiling area applicable to him under Sec. 14-M, the area of land which is in excess of such ceiling shall vest in the State and all the provisions relating to ceiling on holding shall apply to such land. Finally Sec. 14X provides that no civil court shall have jurisdiction to decide or deal with any question or to determine any matter which is, under the provisions of this Chapter determinable by the Revenue Officer.

9. These are the relevant provisions touching the point now awaiting decision by us. It is clear that acquisition of property is not prohibited by the provisions of Chapter IIB. Pre-emption in substance is also a mode of acquisition of property. Such acquisition is subject to the provisions of S.14Y which lays down what is to be done in the case of future acquisition meaning thereby acquisitions made subsequent to the introduction of the Amending Act of 1971. The raiyat in such a case would be required to furnish a further return. The Revenue Officer is then required to act in terms of Chapter IIB to determine as to how to deal with the acquired land. In this connection a reference to the Rules framed under the Act may be usefully made. Under S. 60 of the Act the rules made shall have effect as if they were incorporated in the Act. Rule 14C deals with the form and manner of submission of return. Sub-rule (3) lays down that if any raiyat acquires land whether by transfer, inheritance or otherwise after the 15th day of Jan. 1971 and such land exceeds the ceiling he shall within 3 months from the date of such of acquisition furnish a return in triplicate, in Form 7A to the Revenue Officer having jurisdiction in the area. It may be mentioned here that the impugned sales which are sought to be pre-empted took place in 1975. It follows therefore that future acquisition is not prohibited and in case of future acquisition a further return in the prescribed form is required to be submitted to the Revenue Officer. Acquisition by pre-emption being also an acquisition within the meaning of the Act, what is necessary is the submission of a fresh return. If the land pre-empted either in whole or in part exceeds the limit, it is for the Revenue Officer to deal with it. Needless to say that the right to determine the ceiling is with the Revenue Officer.

10. Again, the land pre-empted may be partly within the ceiling and partly outside. The raiyat in such a case can exercise his choice of retention. For the sake of homogeneity and compactness he may choose to retain the pre-empted land and give up other lands lying scattered and elsewhere. Under S. 14T, it is for the Revenue Officer to decide whether the choice exercised by the raiyat should be accepted or not. The Munsif in dealing with an application for pre-emption cannot require the raiyat to exercise his choice of retention and then assume a jurisdiction to deal with it. The statute does not confer any such powers on him.

11. Now if Mr. Roy's contention is accepted it would mean as if the Munsif dealing with an application for pre-emption would be required to determine whether the pre-empted land or any part of it if added to the land already held by the raiyat would exceed the limit prescribed by S. 14M. Such determination being in the exclusive jurisdiction of the Revenue Officer, in terms of S. 14X, the Munsif would be incompetent to make any such determination. Even if he does, the Revenue Officer's jurisdiction would not be fettered thereby. He would still be entitled to determine the ceiling in his own way and under the statute the latter determination should prevail. In such a situation, any determination by the Munsif, before granting pre-emption, apart from being without jurisdiction, would lead to an absurdity which can never be the intention of the legislature. Considered in that light, the use of the expression "subject to the limit mentioned in the Section 14M" in S. 8 of the Act can only mean that the order for pre-emption would not be exempt from the operation of S. 14M or for the matter of that, other provisions of Chapter IIB.

12. The use of the above expression in S. 8 may not be very happy but where the main object and intention of a statute are very clear, it must not be reduced to a nullity or absurdity by the draftsman's unskilful or unnecessary use of words. Even if the expression had not been introduced in the S. 8, the pre-emption would still then have been subject to S. 14Y and therefore to S. 14M as well. The use of the words "subject to the limit mentioned in Sec. 14M" was clearly redundant but it can never be construed to confer a jurisdiction on the Munsif to determine the ceiling which jurisdiction is exclusively conferred by clear and unambiguous terms on the Revenue Officer. We are therefore inclined to accept the view taken in Asraf v. Jahangir (1978-2 Cal LJ 143) (supra) and respectfully differ with the contrary view expressed in the other cases.

13. It may be that an order granting pre-emption may enable a raiyat to hold lands in excess of the ceiling temporarily but that is inevitable. And if such a situation can arise in the event of acquisition of land in any other mode, we do not see why there should be a departure in the case of acquisition by pre-emption. This apart it will bear repetition that the jurisdiction of the Civil Court and necessarily of the Munsif is expressly taken away by S. 14X. In the result we find that the expression "subject to the limit etc." does not require the Munsif to determine the ceiling before making the order. It only means that after the order is made it shall be subject to the limitations prescribed by S. 14M.

14. In this view of the matter, we are unable to accept the contention of Mr. Roy. The revisional applications are thus liable to fail and are hereby dismissed.

15. Rules are discharged. There will be no order for costs.

S. C. Mitter, N. D. Roy and Bhudeb Bhattacharjee, for Appellant; Bholanath Bhattacharjee, for Respondent.

B. N. MAITRA, J. :— The plaintiff has alleged that the defendant, Amitava Ghosh, was her tenant regarding the disputed premises at 2E, Kala Chand Sanyal Lane, Shyampukur, Calcutta, at a monthly rental of Rs. 250 payable according to the English Calendar. The defendant is a defaulter from November, 1973. He has illegally sublet or transferred a portion of that flat without her permission after the provisions of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956, came into force. She requires the said premises for her own use and occupation. The defendant's tenancy was duly determined by a notice to quit. The suit is for ejection.

LY/AZ/F836/81/MRD/RSK

2. The defendant filed a written statement denying the plaintiff's allegations and stated that he did not transfer or sublet the premises in question.

3. The learned Judge of the City Civil Court disbelieved the plaintiff's version, held that the defendant was not a defaulter and the plaintiff did not require the premises in question for her own use and occupation. He also disbelieved the story of subletting to Sadhan Sarkar. The suit was, therefore, dismissed. Hence this appeal by the appellant.

4. It has been contended on behalf of the plaintiff-appellant that the evidence on record clearly shows that the plaintiff's version is the true one. The documentary evidence has clearly established her case.

5. It has been urged on behalf of the respondent that the plaintiff failed to establish her case. Sadhan Sarkar is a friend of the defendant's family. He occasionally comes to the defendant's flat and stays there. But he is a permanent resident of Kanchrapara. The learned Judge rightly disbelieved the plaintiff's version.

6. The question for consideration is whether the defendant has sublet a portion of the disputed premises without the previous consent in writing of the landlord, as alleged. It is necessary to point out at the outset that the plaintiff's case is that the alleged subletting took place after the provisions of the West Bengal Act XII of 1956 came into operation.

7. The plaintiff's husband, P. W. 1, Samir Kar, was examined to prove her version of subletting by defendant to Sadhan Sarkar. She has also examined P. W. 2, Krishna Chandra Polley, P. W. 3, Amarendra Nath Acharya, and P. W. 4, C. S. Venkatesh, to substantiate her allegations. She has also produced an employee of the State Bank of India viz., P. W. 3, Amarendra Nath Acharya. He works in the Shyambazar branch of the State Bank of India. He says that one Sadhan Chandra Sarkar of 2E, Kala Chand Sanyal Lane opened an account in their branch. P. W. 4, C. S. Venkatesh, proved Sadhan Chandra's signature on the application form of Metal Box Co. of India Ltd. The learned Judge disbelieved this evidence on the ground that the identity of D. W. 2, Sadhan Chandra Sarkar, was not established. In other words, the plaintiff could not prove that the account holder at the Shyambazar branch of the State Bank of India and of the fixed deposit of Metal Box Co. was the same person as D. W. 2, Sadhan Chandra Sarkar, who is claimed by the plaintiff as the sub-tenant of the defendant.

8. Let us now go to the evidence of the defendant, D. W. 1, Amitava Ghosh, is the defendant. He says that Sadhan Babu occasionally stays in his house. But no such case was made out in the written statement. D. W. 2, Sadhan Sarkar, has made the same version by saying that he occasionally stays at premises No. 2E, Kalachand Sanyal Lane.

9. Law in this respect is clear. In the case of Trojan and Company v. Nagappa, reported in AIR 1953 SC 235 at page 240 it has been stated that the decision of a case cannot be based on grounds outside the parties' pleadings and it is the case pleaded that is to be found by the court. In the case of Venkatramana reported in AIR 1958 SC 255, it has been stated that a case which has not been made out in the pleading should not be considered by the court and evidence to support such case cannot be allowed. This decision of the Supreme Court was followed by a Bench of this Court in the case of West Bengal Co-operative Bank v. S. N. Ghosh reported in (1980) 84 Cal WN 221. Since no such case was pleaded in the written statement, the learned Judge was absolutely wrong in allowing D. W. 1, Amitava, and D. W. 2, Sadhan, to adduce evidence that the latter occasionally stays at premises No. 2E, Kala Chand Sanyal Lane. Mr. Mitter has pointed out that D. W. 1, Amitava Ghosh, has stated that Sadhan does not live in his premises for the last 5 years. He has also drawn our attention to the documentary evidence, Ext. 6, which was issued by the Metal Box Company of India Limited. It relates to interest of fixed deposits regarding Sadhan Chandra Sarkar of 2E, Kala Chand Sanyal Lane. That document is dated 30th June, 1978. It shows that interest was due to Sadhan Chandra Sarkar of 2E Kala Chand Sanyal Lane from the 1st April, 1978, to 30th June, 1978.

10. Let us now turn to the evidence given by D. W. 2, Sadhan Chandra Sarkar. He has admitted in his chief that he has an account with the State Bank. The authority wanted for a local address and so he gave the address of Amitava Babu as his address. He further admits in his chief that he also made a fixed deposit with Metal Box describing his address as that of Amitava Babu only to avoid postal difficulties. One fails to understand how after this evidence given by D. W. 2, Sadhan Sarkar, the learned Judge could come to the conclusion that the plaintiff failed to establish her case. In view of this evidence, the learned Judge should have believed the evidence given by P. W. 3, Amarendra Nath Acharya, and P. W. 4, C. S. Venkatesh. It cannot be believed that such fixed deposit was made with the Metal Box Company by Sadhan Chandra Sarkar to avoid postal difficulties. This untrue statement should not have been accepted by the trial court. We hold that the trial court was wrong in finding that such identity of D. W. 2, Sadhan Ghosh, was not proved.

11. It has been further contended on behalf of the appellant that the money order coupon, which was marked XI for identification by the learned Judge, shows that one S. C. Sarkar gave his address at 2E, Kala Chand Sanyal Lane, Calcutta-4 and the money order coupon was signed by one Rasik Chandra Sarkar. D. W. 2, Sadhan's deposition shows that he is Rasik Chandra Sarkar's son. It is not the defence case that there is anybody else of the name of Sadhan Chandra Sarkar who stayed at 2E, Kala Chand Sanyal Lane, Shyampukur Lane, Calcutta.

12. Thus, from the aforesaid discussion the submissions made on behalf of the respondent cannot be accepted. We believe the plaintiff's version and find that Sadhan Chandra Sarkar actually lives at 2E Kala Chand Sanyal Lane, Calcutta, the defendant has sublet a portion of the disputed premises to Sadhan Chandra Sarkar without the written consent of the landlord and hence, he is liable to be evicted on that ground alone.

13. The appeal is allowed. The judgment and decree appealed against be hereby set aside and the suit decreed. The plaintiff do eject the defendant from the disputed premises. There will be no order as to costs.

14. On the prayer made on behalf of the respondent, the operation of this order is stayed for three months from date.

BANERJEE, J.:— I agree.

Appeal allowed.

J. N. Roy, for Trustees.

S. C. GHOSE, C. J.:— This application has been made against the respondents for committing them to prison or visiting them with such punishment as this Court may think proper on account of violation of court's order of injunction restraining the respondents from selling, disposing of, transferring or in any way encumbering any of the assets of the Estate and from incurring any liability until further orders. This order was passed in an appeal for the removal of the trustees from their offices on 22nd June 1979 and thereafter confirmed in the presence of the parties.

2. At the material time after the said order of injunction was in force the trustee-respondents sold a metergauge saloon as also a shed belonging to the Darbhanga Raj Estate.

3. Mr. J. N. Roy appearing on behalf of the trustees admitted that such sale was made but the same, according to him, was not made in a contumacious disobedience of the order of the Court. The said sale was made to avoid waste and inasmuch the said properties could not be maintained or protected by the trustees. Mr. Roy tendered unconditional apology for the said sale made by the trustees without knowing the implication of violating the order of the Court. The said sale, according to Mr. Roy, was made bona fide for the purpose stated hereinbefore. Mr. Roy tendered unqualified apology on behalf of the trustee-respondents.

4. In the facts and circumstances of this case, it appears to us that the said sale was made without understanding the implication thereof and bona fide for the protection of the properties of the Darbhanga Raj Estate. In the circumstances, in our opinion, we think fit to accept the unqualified apology tendered by Mr. Roy on behalf of his clients.

5. Against the respondent No. 4 it does not appear to us that there is any case made out in the petition. In our opinion, he has been unnecessarily dragged into this proceeding.

6. For the aforesaid reasons, we do not think fit to pass any order in this application save and except that the trustee-respondents shall pay the costs of this application to the petitioner. The respondent No. 4 shall pay and bear his own costs.

(A) Civil P. C. In disposing of an application for temporary injunction under O. 39, R. 1 and 2 the court must take into consideration all aspects. The fact that such a prayer is being made in aid of a relief for enforcement of an alleged negative covenant must enter into consideration as much as the mutual convenience of the parties and other attending circumstances like the conduct of the parties in relation to such a covenant. (Para 12)

Where a lessee under a permanent lease has already raised permanent structures on the leasehold land long back without any objection in this regard on the part of the lessor, it would be too hasty a conclusion at the time of considering the question of grant of interim injunction commanding the lessee to pull down a construction that has reached an advanced stage, to hold that Section 108 (1) (p) of the T. P. Act was not ruled out by an agreement to the contrary due to the conduct of lessor merely because there was no express agreement to the contrary. Consequently, interim injunction as sought for, could not be granted, especially when the lessor had not made out what prejudice would be caused to him if the injunction was not granted and the grant of injunction would cause irreparable loss to the lessee. In considering an application under O. 39, Rr. 1 and 2, the court cannot exclude the consideration of the balance of convenience and inconvenience of the parties. ORDER :— This Rule was obtained by the defendants in Title Suit No. 362 of 1980 of the Court of the learned Munsif, Uluberia on a revisional application and is directed against an appellate order dated June 29, 1981, passed by the learned Subordinate Judge, 3rd Court, Howrah, in Misc. Appeal No. 28 of 1981 thereby affirming an order of temporary injunction granted by the learned Munsif as against the defendants. The Rule is being contested by the plaintiff/opposite party, the Zilla Parishad, Howrah.

2. It is not in dispute that by a registered deed of lease dated December 10, 1906, the District Board of Howrah, the predecessor-in-interest of the present plaintiff granted permanent lease in respect of 8 cottahs 9 chittaks and 35 square feet of barrow pit land described within boundaries in favour of the predecessor-in-interest of the present defendants. It would appear from the boundary of the leasehold land as set out in the said deed of lease that but for a village pathway on the north and Bagāan Station Road on the west there was no land of the lessor on the other two sides of the land so leased out. Such a permanent lease was granted on the consideration that the predecessor-in-interest of the present defendants excavated a tank for the District Board on his own land adjacent to the leasehold land abutting on the village pathway. It is also not in dispute that the predecessor-in-interest of the present defendants erected permanent structures on a part of the leasehold land since recorded in the C. S. records of 1930 — the leasehold land being recorded as C. S. dags Nos. 1108, 1100 and 1099. It is also not in dispute that the total area of these three C. S. plots has been recorded as 20 decimals or near about 12 cottahs but the whole of it has been recorded as in the possession of the defendants.

3. In that background when the present defendant/petitioners started raising further constructions of permanent nature on the 3 plots as aforesaid, the plaintiff raised a dispute to the effect that the defendants are encroaching upon Zilla Parishad land to the extent of nearly 4 cottahs. A proceeding under S. 144 of the Criminal P. C. was initiated on behalf of the Zilla Parishad where in an enquiry being held through an engineer it was found that there is no major encroachment either on the Station Road or on the village pathway and the defendants having given an undertaking in writing to the court that they would make no construction which would in any manner encroach upon the Station Road or the village pathway as per the enquiry report submitted in the said proceeding, the learned Magistrate disposed of the said proceeding recording the said undertaking.

4. The Zilla Parishad authorities, however, were not satisfied by the said order and they instituted the aforesaid Title Suit No. 362 of 1980 against the defendants for the following reliefs, namely,—

“(i) permanent injunction restraining the defendants from making any further construction of permanent nature on the leasehold land or any structure on the rest of the land in suit;

(ii) an injunction commanding the defendants to demolish the pucca structures made by them on the lands in suit;

(iii) temporary and ad interim injunction to the above effect.”

5. Having filed such a suit the plaintiff filed an application under O. 39, Rr. 1 and 2 of the Civil P. C. for injunction restraining the defendants from raising any construction of permanent nature on the suit land which included not only the land alleged to have been encroached upon but also the leasehold land.

6. This application for injunction was strongly contested by the defendants. They disputed the claim of the plaintiff that there had been any encroachment whatsoever. According to them, the lease was granted at a time when the record of rights was not prepared. What had been recorded subsequently in the C. S. records as the area of the three plots is not the area of the leasehold land but also a part of the land belonging to the defendants' predecessor lying to the contiguous east of the leasehold land which alone explains the discrepancy as to the area. According to them, again the District Board or its successor the Zilla Parishad having no land contiguous to the disputed leasehold land there was no question of any encroachment on any land belonging to either of them. In opposing the prayer for interim injunction, the defendants not only claimed that they as permanent lessees are entitled to raise such construction but further pleaded that their predecessor had long ago raised such structures without any objection by the District Board. Moreover they made out a strong case of prejudice that they would suffer in the event such an injunction is granted on the ground that they had already proceeded with the construction to a great extent and the structures up to the ground level and part of the first floor, having been already completed and they having made all arrangements including collection of materials for completion of the construction, they would suffer irreparable loss and injury in the event such an interim injunction is granted.

7. On the pleadings as aforesaid, the learned Munsif proceeded to consider the plaintiff's prayer for interim injunction. The learned Munsif found that on the entries in the settlement records the defendants must be found to be in possession of the 3 plots measuring 20 decimals and at this stage it is not possible to hold as to whether there has been any encroachment by the defendants or not. But nonetheless relying on the provision of S. 108 (1) (p) of the Transfer of Property Act the learned Munsif took the view that even as a lessee the defendants are not entitled to raise any permanent structure on the leasehold land without the consent of the lessor. In that view, according to the learned Munsif the plaintiff was entitled to an order of injunction as prayed for. The learned Munsif did not consider the respective cases of convenience and inconvenience though he observed that in view of the provision of S. 108 (1) (p) of the Transfer of Property Act, the balance of convenience and inconvenience must be found in favour of the plaintiff. The defendants preferred an appeal, being Misc. Appeal No. 28 of 1981 as aforesaid. The learned Subordinate Judge not only concurred with the finding of the learned Munsif regarding the defendants' possession of the 3 plots, but he went on further to hold that the entries in the C. S. and R. S. records raise a presumption that the defendants have acquired a tenancy right in respect of the entire 20 cents of the aforesaid 3 plots under the plaintiff. He further found that the defendants are in possession of the entire 3 plots as tenants under the plaintiff and that they had already raised certain permanent structures thereon. Notwithstanding such a finding the learned Subordinate Judge went on to hold that in the absence of any agreement to the contrary cl. (p) of S. 108 (1) of the Transfer of Property Act must be read as an implied covenant between the parties and, as such, the defendants are prohibited from raising any structures of permanent nature without the consent of the plaintiff notwithstanding the fact that the lease is one for perpetuity. On the question of convenience or inconvenience of the parties, the learned subordinate Judge relied on a single Bench decision of the Kerala High Court in the case of Kurian v. Job, AIR 1975 Ker 175 in holding that the question of convenience or inconvenience is of no moment when the breach complained of is in respect of a negative covenant. In that view the learned Subordinate Judge dismissed the appeal and confirmed the order of injunctions as passed by the learned Munsif. Feeling aggrieved, the defendants have now challenged those orders in the present revisional application.

8. Mr. Mukharji appearing in support of this Rule has strongly contended that the court of appeal below misguided itself in thinking that in the matter of granting an interim injunction in a case like the present one convenience and inconvenience of the parties would be of no moment and, as such, required no consideration. According to Mr. Mukharji the court of appeal below failed to appreciate that at this stage the court is not enforcing any negative covenant but is merely exercising its discretion in terms of Order 39 Rules 1 and 2 of the Code which must necessarily be based upon consideration of all factors relevant to the exercise of such jurisdiction. A negative covenant, if any, has to be established at the trial and enforced by the decree. It has further been contended by Mr. Mukharji that the two courts below were in error in thinking that there is no agreement to the contrary and, as such, cl. (p) of S. 108 (1) of the Transfer of Property Act must be read as an implied covenant between the parties. According to Mr. Mukharji when it had consistently been held by this court that a right in favour of the lessee to raise permanent structure is an element indicative of permanency of the lease, the very fact that in the present case the lease on its express terms is a permanent one, indicates an implied agreement between the parties conferring a right on the lessee to raise permanent structure. According to Mr. Mukherji this aspect having been overlooked by the two courts below, the said courts arrived at a wrong conclusion that cl. (p) of S. 108 (1) of the Transfer of Property Act must be read as an implied covenant between the parties in the present case.

9. Mr. Banerji appearing on behalf of the plaintiff/opposite party has contested all the points raised by Mr. Mukherji. According to Mr. Banerji conferment of a right to raise permanent structure does not necessarily lead to the conclusion that the lease is a permanent one. According to him even a lessee in respect of a temporary lease may be conferred the right to raise permanent structure on the leasehold land during the period of lease. Hence, according to Mr. Banerji the right to build a permanent structure is not necessarily a constituent element of a permanent lease. Mr. Banerji in his turn has strongly contended that in the absence of any express agreement to the contrary the two courts had rightly held that cl. (p) of S. 108 (1) of the Transfer of Property Act must be read as an implied covenant between the parties which would entitle the plaintiff to ask for an interim injunction for enforcement of such a prohibition irrespective of the consideration of convenience or inconvenience of the parties. Incidentally, Mr. Banerji has raised a preliminary objection that the two courts below having jurisdiction to make an order of interim injunction, this court should not in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction set aside an order so made even if the same was erroneously made as contended for by Mr. Mukherji.

10. Before I proceed to consider the contentions raised by Mr. Mukherji on their merits, I must, in fairness to Mr. Banerji, dispose of the preliminary objection raised by him to the effect that in the facts and circumstances this court should not in exercise of its revisional jurisdiction interfere with the order of injunction passed by the two courts below. On a careful consideration of the legal position in the facts and circumstances of the present case, I am, however, unable to sustain this objection raised by Mr. Banerji. I would have felt no hesitation in accepting such a contention if the ground for the challenge to the order had been merely one of error of law or fact not affecting the exercise of jurisdiction. In the present case the learned Munsif did not consider the mutual convenience and inconvenience of the parties while making the order of interim injunction though he observed that in view of the prohibition incorporated in S. 108 (1) (p) of the Transfer of Property Act the balance of convenience and inconvenience must be held to be in favour of the plaintiff. Before the learned Subordinate Judge this point was specifically raised and the learned Subordinate Judge obviously found that this aspect had not been gone into by the learned Munsif. But nonetheless he observed that convenience or inconvenience of the parties is of no moment because what the plaintiff prays by an order of injunction is enforcement of a negative covenant. According to Mr. Mukherji the learned Subordinate Judge overlooked the position that the suit had not reached the stage where any negative covenant being established is to be enforced by a decree of injunction irrespective of the consideration of inconvenience or damage to be suffered by the party who had agreed to such a covenant. According to Mr. Mukherji at this stage the court is merely considering an application under Order 39, Rules 1 and 2 of the Code which requires the balance of convenience and inconvenience of the parties to be duly considered before an order of injunction is made and, as such, such a consideration could not have been excluded. If this contention of Mr. Mukherji be accepted then it would be well established that the courts below have exercised their jurisdiction in disposing of an application under Order 39, Rules 1 and 2 of the Code without due consideration of necessary elements which are required in law to go into the consideration of a court exercising such a jurisdiction. That makes the exercise of the jurisdiction one in breach of the provision of Order 39, Rules 1 and 2 of the Code and necessarily makes it a case where the court had exercised its jurisdiction if not illegally at least with material irregularity so that if it had resulted in serious prejudice to the defendants the order becomes open for challenge even in revision. In this view, I overrule the preliminary objection raised by Mr. Banerji.

11. This leads me to consider the more important point raised by Mr. Mukherji on merit, viz., whether the two courts below could have granted the injunction prayed for without considering the balance of convenience and inconvenience between the parties. In the facts set out hereinbefore it is quite apparent that though the plaintiff came with a primary complaint that the defendants had encroached upon a part of the plaintiff's land beyond the leasehold, upon the concurrent finding of the two courts below up to this stage no prima facie case in this regard has been made out. As a matter of fact the last court of fact has found that the defendants are in possession of the entire 20 cents of land covered by the 3 disputed plots as lessees under the plaintiff. Having found as such the two courts below proceeded to grant injunction solely because of the provisions of cl. (p) of S. 108 (1) of the Transfer of Property Act reading the prohibition prescribed by the said clause as an implied covenant between the parties. It has, however, rightly been pointed out by Mr. Mukherji that such a clause is subject to an agreement to the contrary as provided for by sub-section (1) itself. The court of appeal below proceeded upon an assumption that there is no such agreement to the contrary overlooking the position that it is yet for the court of fact to find at the trial whether such an agreement to the contrary is ingrained in the lease itself, it being a permanent lease or is otherwise established on evidence having regard to attending circumstances and the conduct of the parties. Though right to raise permanent structures does not always lead to establish the lease to be a permanent one, it goes without saying that such a right is considered by courts to be a relevant element indicating the lease to be permanent. If, therefore, right to raise a permanent structure is one of the elements of a permanent lease Mr. Mukherji has rightly pointed out that it is yet for the court to construe the lease, which admittedly is a permanent one, and determine whether it incorporates by necessary implication such a right in favour of the lessee at the trial. Moreover to me it appears when it is undisputed that the lessee under such a lease had already raised permanent structures since prior to 1930 without any objection in this regard on the part of the lessor it would be too hasty a conclusion at this stage of the suit to hold that Sec. 108 (1) (p) of the Transfer of Property Act is not ruled out by an agreement to the contrary. Any observation of mine in this regard should not go to prejudice the decision of the courts below on that issue now awaiting adjudication at the trial. All that I mean is that at this stage of the suit in disposing of an application for interim injunction the courts below should not have assumed that there being no agreement to the contrary Section 108 (1) (p) of the Transfer of Property Act must be read as an implied covenant between the parties. Such a view again was taken without reading the lease itself properly in the context of the conduct of the parties in this regard.

12. In this view I proceed to consider the main point raised by Mr. Mukherji viz., whether the court could have disposed of the prayer for injunction without considering the respective convenience or inconvenience of the parties and their mutual prejudice. On this point I feel inclined to agree with Mr. Mukherji that the courts below could not have ruled out consideration of convenience and inconvenience of the parties or their mutual prejudice while considering the prayer for interim injunction. It may be that the prayer for interim order is one in support of the principal relief in the suit which may be for enforcement of a negative covenant. But even then the court is exercising its discretion under Order 39 Rules 1 and 2 so that all matters relevant for the exercise of such a discretion must form part of its consideration. A negative covenant is to be so enforced as an agreement between the parties irrespective of inconvenience or damage to be suffered by the party who had agreed to such a covenant. But it has been rightly pointed out by Mr. Mukherji that such is the position when the suit is to be decreed or the final order is to be passed on an adjudication which establishes such a covenant. The decision of the Kerala High Court relied on by the court of appeal below lays down nothing more. In that case, the court had granted a decree enforcing a negative covenant against the lessee by injunction and the only point raised before the High Court was whether such a covenant could be enforced even during the continuance of the tenure of the lease. In that case the Kerala High Court was not called upon to consider whether convenience and inconvenience of the parties should form part of the consideration of the court disposing of an application for temporary injunction only because the temporary injunction has been sought for in aid of a relief for enforcement of an alleged negative covenant. In my view in disposing of an application under Order 39 Rr. 1 and 2 of the Code, the court must take into consideration all the aspects. The fact that such a prayer is being made in aid of a relief for enforcement of an alleged negative covenant must enter into consideration as much as the mutual convenience of the parties and other attending circumstances like the conduct of the parties in relation to such a covenant. Such was the view expressed by the Madhya Pradesh High Court in the case of Md. Latif v. Smt. Amritkala, AIR 1959 Madh Pra 309 with which I respectfully agree. The learned Judge in the court of appeal below in citing authorities from Halsbury and Snell failed to appreciate the fact that there the point dealt with is with regard to the general mode of enforcement of negative covenants as a part of the agreement between the parties and not a point as to how an application for temporary injunction is to be dealt with. Mr. Mukherji on the other hand has cited Spry on Equitable Remedies pp. 498-500 and Snell on Principles of Equity 20th Edition page 571 in contending that the rule that a negative covenant has to be enforced irrespective of other consideration is not such an absolute proposition that it admits of no exception particularly when such a covenant is not an express one. It is, however, not necessary for me at this stage to go into that issue. But I agree with Mr. Mukherji that in the present case orders impugned having been passed without taking into consideration the relevant factors cannot be sustained.

13. On the conclusion as above, the normal course for me to follow is to set aside the orders passed by both the courts and then send back the application for injunction to the trial court for re-consideration having regard to all material facts and considerations relevant for grant or refusal of an interim injunction. But I propose to dispose of the application myself since all the materials are on record and a remand at this stage would constitute harassment to the parties. The two courts have found prima facie that the lease of the defendants extends to the plots in dispute and no case of encroachment has yet been made out. Whether the lease excludes a right to build permanent structure on the leasehold land is not free from doubt particularly when such structures were allowed to be raised since before 1930 without any objection from the lessors. Further structures which are now being raised are at an advanced stage when the ground floor and part of first floor are nearing completion. They have done so upon an undertaking given in the proceeding under Sec. 144 of the Code of Criminal Procedure that they would not raise any structure encroaching upon either the Station Road or the village pathway. In such a situation to restrain them by an injunction would necessarily mean irreparable loss and prejudice to them. On the other hand, the plaintiff had failed to make out what prejudice they would suffer if the defendants be permitted to complete the construction subject to the undertaking given by them. No case of prejudice so far as the plaintiff is concerned, having been made out in the facts and circumstances only on the off chance of the plaintiff being entitled to read cl. (p) of Sec. 108 (1) of the Transfer of Property Act as an implied covenant between the parties, the plaintiff should not be favoured with an interim injunction.

14. In the result, this revisional application succeeds and the Rule is made absolute. The orders of injunction passed by the two courts below being set aside, the plaintiff's application for injunction is dismissed. There will be no order for costs.

Revision allowed.

S. A. No. 1471 of 1973, D/- 17-12-1981.

Transfer of Property Act (4 of 1882).

Secs. 11, 28, 32 — Deed of settlement — Construction — Defeasance clause — What amounts to. (Succession Act (1925), Secs. 131, 138, 135) — (Deed — Construction).

In a case where the donor grants an absolute estate to the donee and in a subsequent clause in the deed provides that on the happening of a contingency the absolute estate would be curtailed to a life estate after the death of the donee by exclusion of all the heirs at law of the donee from inheritance, such a clause is a defeasance clause as it defeats or extinguishes the absolute estate and not a repugnant clause. (Para 3)

Where the settlor made a deed of settlement and transferred the properties to his wife for her life and thereafter to his son absolutely with right to transfer by way of sale or gift and enjoy the properties in any manner he liked being succeeded by his heirs from generation to generation and further there was a clause in the deed according to which if both the wife and the son of the settlor died during the settlor's lifetime the properties would revert to the settlor as an absolute estate, then the said clause would be a defeasance clause and not a clause repugnant to the grant of absolute estate to the settlor's son because the effect of that clause was to reduce or curtail the absolute estate granted to the son of the settlor to a life estate on the happening of the contingency. Consequently, where the settlees died during the lifetime of the settlor, the property would revert to the settlor and having become the absolute owner thereof he would be competent to dispose it of. JUDGMENT:— This is an appeal from the decision of the learned Additional District Judge at Suri in Title Appeal No. 59 of 1971 affirming the judgment and decree of the learned Munsiff, First Court at Rampurhat by which he has decreed the Title Suit No. 163 of 1968 for a declaration of title and permanent injunction.

2. The only point that arises in this appeal relates to the construction of the terms of a deed of settlement. Admittedly the disputed tank in Plot No. 1390 of Mouza Karkariya, 8 annas share in which is the subject matter of the suit, originally belonged to Janaki and Aghor Nath Banerjees who were two brothers. Janaki executed a deed of settlement dated 25th Aug. 1918 (8th Bhadra 1325 B. S.) in respect of his 8 annas share in the disputed tank and other properties in favour of his wife Brojendra Bala and son Dhawajadhari. The relevant recitals in the said deed of settlement are as follows:—

"Tumi Srimati Brojendra Bala Debi Adya Nija Jibankal Parjanta Nicher Likhita Sampattite Swatwabati Thakia Tahar Jabatiya Utpanna Grahanadi Jadechcha Bhog Dakhal Karibe O Tomar Ante Oi Sakal Sampattite Amar Putra Tomi Sriman Dhawajadhari Bandyopadhyay Dan Bikrayadi Hastantar Karaniya Dattaswatwa Malik Haia Pct-rapautradi Wariskrame Jadechcha Bhog Dakhal Karibe Tahate Amar Kono Ojar Apatta Chalibe Ne, Adya Haite Ami Nicher Likhita Sampattite Niswatwa Hailam, Iswar Na Karen Jibitakale Tomader Ubhayer Lokantar Ghatile Nicher Likhita Sampatti Amake Arshibe. O Taha Ami Jadechcha Byabahar O Dan Bikrayadi Karite Pariba, Ar Tumi Srimati Brojendra Bala Jibitakale Sriman Dhawajadhari Baba Jibaner Lokantar Ghatile Tumi Srimati Brojendra Bala Debi Nicher Likhita Sampattite Dan Bikroyadir Hastantar Karaner Swatwasaha Sampurna Malik Haibe."

Thus according to the terms of the deed of settlement the settlor transferred the properties to his wife Brojendra Bala for her life and thereafter to his son Dhawajadhari absolutely with right to transfer by way of sale or gift and enjoy the properties in any manner he liked being succeeded by his heirs from generation to generation. Then the deed provided that in case both the wife and the son of the settlor died during the settlor's lifetime, in that event the properties would revert to the settlor and the settlor would be free to enjoy the properties with right to transfer them by sale or gift. The deed further provided that in the event of the death of the settlor's son during the lifetime of the settlor's wife, she will become absolute owner of the properties with right to transfer them by way of sale, gift, etc. It has been found by the courts below that the deed of settlement was properly executed and was acted upon. These findings of fact are not challenged in second appeal. It is in evidence that Brojendra Bala died in 1329 B. S. and thereafter Dhawajdhari died in 1332 B. S. leaving his minor son Kamakshya who is the plaintiff and widow Anna Kali. Janaki, the settlor survived both the settlees as he died sometime after 1347 B. S. Before his death Janaki transferred 8 annas share in the disputed tank to his brother Aghore Nath by a registered kobala dated 21st Jaistha 1347 B. S. (Ext. A-2). Aghore Nath died in 1367 B. S. leaving a will which was duly probated and by which he bequeathed his property including the disputed tank to his four sons the defendants Nos. 1 to 4 who subsequently sold the suit property to the defendants Nos. 5 and 6 by two registered kobalas dated 8-4-68 and 15-4-68 respectively. The plaintiff has claimed the suit property on the basis of the deed of settlement of 1325 B. S. and his case is that the vested interest transferred to Dhawajdhari under the said deed devolved on him as the other clauses in the deed of settlement were invalid as they were repugnant to the grant of absolute interest to his father. On the other hand, the contesting defendants have resisted the plaintiff's claim on the ground that the absolute interest created under the deed of settlement in favour of the plaintiff's father was contingent on his surviving the settlor and as he predeceased the settlor he became divested of the settled properties which became vested in the settlor who had legal right to transfer the suit property to the predecessor-in-interest of the defendants. According to the defence there were conditions superadded to the absolute grant in the deed of settlement by way of defeasance clause. The court of appeal below has construed the terms of the deed of settlement in the following words:—

"Giving my most careful consideration it appears to me that the terms of the deed conferred an absolute estate upon Dhawajadhari. By the conditions superadded the interest of the grantee was not sought to be terminated. On the contrary by the added clauses a further interest was sought to be given to the settlor himself after or on the termination of the grantee's interest. It is not a defeasance clause. The condition superadded being derogatory to the grant is void for repugnancy. In my view, S. 31 of the T. P. Act cannot apply to this case. I accordingly hold that upon the death of Dhawajadhari the property did not revert to Janaki but devolved upon his son the plaintiff."

In that view the first appellate court has held that the plaintiff has title to the suit property consisting of 8 annas share in the disputed tank and has further found that the defendants have totally failed to establish that they possessed the tank in assertion of their hostile title. So, the appeal court has affirmed the decree passed by the trial court in favour of the plaintiff.

3. I cannot concur in the view taken by the learned Additional District Judge on the construction of the relevant clause in the deed of settlement according to which if both the wife and the son of the settlor died during the settlor's lifetime the properties would revert to the settlor as an absolute estate. In my opinion, the said clause is a defeasance clause and not a clause repugnant to the grant of absolute estate to the settlor's son Dhawajadhari because the effect of that clause is to reduce or curtail the absolute estate granted to the son of the settlor to a life estate on the happening of the contingency. In a case where the donor grants an absolute estate to the donee and in a subsequent clause in the deed provides that on the happening of a contingency the absolute estate would be curtailed to a life estate after the death of the donee by exclusion of all the heirs at law of the donee from inheritance, such a clause is a defeasance clause as it defeats or extinguishes the absolute estate and not a repugnant clause. The test bringing out the nice distinction between a defeasance clause and a repugnant one has been formulated by the Madras High Court in the case of Govindaraja Pillai v. Mangalam Pillai AIR 1933 Mad 80 in the following words. Where the intention of the donor or testator is to maintain the absolute estate conferred on the donee but he adds some restrictions in derogation of the incidents of such absolute ownership the clause is a repugnant one and is therefore void. If, however, the intention expressed or to be necessarily implied is to extinguish the absolute estate on the happening of a contingency and where the effect of the termination of the said estate would not be violation of any rule of law, the clause is a defeasance clause and would operate according to its tenor. In the Bench decision in the case of Golak Behari Mondal v. Suradhani Dasi, ILR (1939) 1 Cal 63: (AIR 1939 Cal 226), the learned Judge Mitter J. held that the intention to terminate a gift or bequest may be an express one or may be inferred by necessary implication and where it is an absolute one, — an estate of inheritance having been conferred on the donee or legatee — and the contingency is one which is to happen if at all, the moment the donee or legatee dies and not earlier, that intention would be necessarily implied if at that moment of time the donee or legatee's absolute estate is cut down by the words used by the donor or testator to a life estate. An absolute estate so conferred can only, where there are no express words of conversion into a life estate, be cut down to a life estate if the quality of heritability be destroyed and that can be done by exclusion of all the heirs of the donee or legatee then living. The exclusion by a subsequent clause of some of the heirs or only a class of heirs of the donee or legatee who has been given an absolute estate, an estate of inheritance, would not make the clause a defeasance clause but only a repugnant one. In the said reported case the testator after granting an absolute estate to his three sons in equal shares provided by a subsequent clause in the will that if any of his sons died without leaving any son then the widow and the daughter of the deceased son of the testator that is to say two only out of a large number of his possible heirs would be deprived of the inheritance. So, it was held that the said clause of the will could not be construed as a defeasance clause but must be taken to be a repugnant clause and so void. In that case the learned Judge Sen J. in his separate judgment observed as follows:

"I also agree with the proposition stated by the learned advocate for the respondent that where it is sought to be established that an absolute estate granted in one part of a will has been defeated by a subsequent clause it must be shown that the defeasance clause shuts out all heirs from inheriting and reduces the heritable estate to a life estate. A defeasance clause by its very terms means a clause which defeats or destroys. An absolute estate of inheritance cannot be defeated unless the quality or attribute of heritability is destroyed. A clause which does not completely destroy the heritability of the estate but merely modifies it or interferes with the course of succession cannot therefore operate as a defeasance clause."

In the case of Bhoobun Mohini Debia v. Hurrish Chunder Chowdhury (1878) 5 Ind App 138 the Privy Council gave effect to a defeasance clause on the interpretation that all the heirs of the donee were shut out on the donee dying without issue. Their Lordships interpreted the deed as granting to the donee an absolute heritable estate which was defeasible on the donee dying without issue and which was in such event to revert to the donor and his heirs. In the present case the contingency in the subsequent clause in the deed of settlement on the happening of which the absolute estate granted to settlor's son Dhvajadhari was intended to be defeated by implication is that if Dhvajadhari after getting the absolute estate died before the settlor, the quality of heritability of the estate of Dhvajadhari would be destroyed and the estate would revert to the settlor as an absolute estate. On the foundation of the reported decisions mentioned above, I hold that the subsequent clause in question in the deed of settlements is a defeasance clause and not a repugnant one. So, I find that after the death of Dhvajadhari during the lifetime of the settlor Janaki the estate reverted to Janaki who became absolute owner thereof and was competent to transfer the disputed 8 annas share in the tank in suit to his brother Aghore Nath by a registered kobala dated 21st Jaistha 1347 B. S. (Ext. A-2). Aghore Nath died in 1357 B. S. bequeathing his properties including the suit property to his four sons defendants Nos. 1 to 4 by a will duly probated and defendants Nos. 5 and 6 purchased the suit property from the defendants Nos. 1 to 4 by two registered kobalas dated 8-4-68 and 15-4-68 respectively. So, the plaintiff who has claimed the suit property as the legal heir of Dhwadhari on the basis of the deed of settlement cannot succeed in his suit. As no other point has been raised in this appeal, the appeal must succeed.

4. The appeal is allowed. The judgment and decree of the court below are set aside. The suit is dismissed on contest. There will be no order for costs throughout.

Appeal allowed.

AIR 1962 Cal 283 10

JUDGMENT:— Steel Authority of India Limited, the plaintiff, has instituted this suit against Transworld Marine Limited and Messrs. Chowgule Brothers, the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 respectively, claiming, inter alia, decree for Rs. 50,59,365.48; interests and costs.

2. The plaintiff's cause of action in the plaint appears to be that on or about the 13th June 1979 the plaintiff shipped a consignment of 434 pieces of mild steel plates on board the vessel "M. V. Chaofong" owned by the defendant No. 1, a company incorporated under the laws of Taiwan and (hereinafter referred to as the said vessel) for being carried from the port of Kachsiung, Taiwan to Calcutta.

3. On the 8th August 1979, the said vessel while proceeding towards the Port of Calcutta sank near the Sandheads at Diamond Harbour and the entire consignment of steel plates were lost. It is alleged that the vessel was unseaworthy and that there was lack of care for the cargo.

4. The plaintiff alleges that the defendant No. 2 is the agent of the defendant No. 1 at Calcutta and gave out by conduct and implication to be liable and responsible for the acts of the defendant No. 1.

5. The present application is by the defendant No. 2 on notice dated the 11th August 1981. In this application it is prayed that the suit be dismissed as against the defendant No. 2 and/or the name of the defendant No. 2 be struck out from the plaint.

6. The case of the defendant No. 2 is that the plaint filed discloses no cause of action against the defendant No. 2 and that the defendant No. 2 is not a necessary party to these proceedings. It is alleged further that the defendant No. 1 does not carry on business in India through the defendant No. 2 and that the latter is only the protecting agent of the defendant No. 1 at Calcutta. It is also alleged that there is no privity of contract or any legal relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant No. 2. It is contended further that the defendant No. 2 is not a party to the contract of carriage between the plaintiff and the defendant No. 1 and that it did not sign the bill of lading. The defendant No. 2 was also not responsible for the navigation of the said vessel or taking care of the cargo.

7. This application is opposed. It is contended on behalf of the plaintiff that the defendant No. 1 is a foreign shipping company and carries on business of shipping through its recognised and notified agent the defendant No. 2. It is contended further that in law as well as by usage and custom of trade the defendant No. 2, as the agent of the defendant No. 1, is bound by the contract of carriage between the plaintiff and the defendant No. 1 and is also privy to the contract. The other allegations in the petition have been denied and the contentions disputed.

8. At the hearing, learned Advocates appearing for the parties reiterated their respective contentions in the pleading. The learned Advocate for the defendant No. 2 referred to S. 230 of the Contract Act and submitted that under the terms thereof the principal having been sued the plaintiff was not entitled to sue the agent at the same time. He submitted that it was nobody's case that there was a contract by which the defendant No. 2 as the agent of the defendant No. 1 made itself liable to be sued in respect of the said contract of carriage.

9. Learned Advocate for the plaintiff contended to the contrary. In the facts and circumstances of and on the pleadings the plaintiff in my view cannot get over the mischief of S. 230 and sue both the principal and the agent. It is not the case of the plaintiff that by an express contract the defendant No. 2 made itself liable for the contract of carriage. The plaintiff's cause of action is founded on certain representations which, according to the plaintiff, create some sort of estoppel in his favour. Nothing further has been disclosed in the affidavit filed in opposition on behalf of the plaintiff on which the plaintiff can be given a chance to amend its plaint and make out a cause of action against the defendant No. 2.

10. For the reasons stated above, the defendant No. 2 succeeds in its application. The plaint however cannot be struck out in its entirety. Following the decision of the Division Bench in P. B. Shah & Co. v. The Chief Executive Officer reported in AIR 1962 Cal 283. It is directed that the name of the defendant No. 2 be struck out and deleted from the cause title of the plaint in this suit.

11. The defendant No. 2 is entitled to the costs of this application.

Application allowed.

ORDER :— The order dated 28-4-1981 passed by Sri A. K. Chatterjee, Judge, City Civil Court in Misc. Case No. 1429 of 1979 rejecting the application under O. 21, R. 106 has been challenged under the present revision.

2. The decree for ejectment obtained by O. P. against one Narayan Prasad Ghosh was put into execution by Ejectment Execution Case No. 379 of 1979. The execution of the decree being resisted the decree-holder filed an application under O. 21, R. 97, C. P. Code for police help, which was allowed on 21-2-1981.

3. The petitioner wanted to have the said order set aside by an application under O. 21, R. 106. It is observed by the learned Judge that the petitioner entered appearance in the proceeding, cross-examined one of the witnesses for the petitioner and thereafter retired from the proceeding. Accordingly, it was held that the application under O. 21, R. 106 was incompetent. In the result it was rejected.

4. Against that order this Court has been moved in revision. But an appeal has been provided for against such order in O. XLIII, R. 1 (ja). It is argued on behalf of the petitioner that O. XLIII, R. 1 (ja) will not be attracted because of the fact that the application under O. 21, R. 106 has not been disposed of on merits but only on a preliminary point. There is hardly any distinction. The ultimate result is that the application under O. 21, R. 106 was rejected; and such an order is appealable.

5. It is argued by the learned Advocate for the opposite party that the petitioner filed an appeal, being F. M. A. T. 668 of 1981, challenging the order for police help dated 21st Feb. 1981 which was dismissed summarily, and the result is the order of the trial Court merged in the order of the Appeal Court. In the circumstances the petitioner should not be allowed to reopen the matter by an application under O. 21 R. 106, C. P. C. Reliance is placed on the decision in the case of Smt. Jagat-janani Devi v. Smt. Jyotsna Basu, reported in 1978 Cal HN 537: (AIR 1978 Cal 392).

6. In any view of the matter, the petitioner cannot succeed by way of filing an application for revision which is incompetent. The Rule is accordingly discharged.

7. There would be no order as to costs.

8. Oral prayer for stay of operation of this order is rejected.

Rule discharged.

AIR 1982 CALCUTTA 163

Mrs. PRATIBHA BONNERJEA, J.

Dunia Lal Datta, Plaintiff v. Nagendra Nath Datta and another, Defendants.

Suit No. 651 of 1977, D/- 15-9-1981.

Specific Relief Act (47 of 1963) Sections 31, 34 and 35 — Suit under—Maintainability — Conditions to be satisfied for a suit under S. 31 — Jurisdiction of Court under S. 34 when can be invoked.

A plaintiff in a suit under S. 31 of the Act, has to establish three conditions: (1) That the plaintiff is such a person against whom the instrument is void or voidable; (2) that the plaintiff can entertain a reasonable apprehension that if such an instrument is left outstanding it may cause him serious injury and (3) that the court must adjudge the instrument void or voidable. AIR 1972 All 376, Rel. on. (Para 6)

The plaintiff filed a suit against N and B under Ss. 31, 34 and 35 of the Act for adjudication that the decree passed in a declaratory suit by N against B to which he was not a party was void, inoperative and not binding upon him, for an order that the said registered decree be delivered up and cancelled, and for injunction etc.

Held: The expression "written instrument" in S. 31 means an instrument which has not already been adjudged by any formal court or Tribunal. The first condition is not fulfilled as the decree is not a "written instrument" which is void or voidable against the plaintiff. The second condition also is not fulfilled because the decree cannot be vexatiously or injuriously used against him due to provisions of S. 35. This decree is not binding on him, he being a stranger to the said suit. Under the circumstances, the question of adjudging the said decree as void or voidable will not arise. Hence no relief could be granted to plaintiff under S. 31. A decree is not an unadjudged document which can be adjudged void or voidable. No suit will lie under S. 31 on the facts and circumstances of the case. (Paras 5, 9)

(ii) The declaratory decree as sought for could not be given under S. 34 also. S. 34 does not contemplate that a declaratory decree would be passed when the facts of the case come under S. 35. The impugned decree in N's suit cannot be used against plaintiff. Therefore such a declaration will be futile. S. 35 fully protects plaintiff and no further declaration is necessary. Further, when the circumstances of the case showed that if the plaintiff could obtain such a declaration that would be a stepping stone for further litigation and will be of no practical effect, it would not be a proper exercise of jurisdiction to pass declaratory decree. P. K. Das with Sen, for Plaintiff; Bankim Dutta with H. M. Dutta, for Defendant No. 1.

JUDGMENT :— The present suit was instituted by the plaintiff against the defendants for adjudication that the decree passed in T. Suit No. 451 of 1971 by the learned 9th Bench, City Civil Court at Calcutta and registered on 7-2-1974 was void, inoperative and not binding upon the plaintiff, for an order that the said registered decree be delivered up and cancelled, injunction etc. The circumstances under which the suit was instituted will appear from the short list of dates set out below.

Aug. 1946 — The defendant No. 2 Balai was inducted as a tenant by the defendant No. 1 Nagendra in respect of premises No. 50 Doctor Lane, Calcutta. Nagendra was the owner of this property, 9th Spet. 1946 — A deed of sale was executed by Nagendra in favour of Balai in respect of the premises No. 50 Doctor Lane to avoid creditors. Nagendra alleged that the deed was a benami transaction.

5th June 1971 — T. Suit No. 451 of 1971 was instituted by Nagendra against Balai for declaration that the deed executed on 9-9-1946 in favour of Balai was invalid, inoperative and was never acted upon. The plaintiff in the present suit, Dunialal, was not a party to the said suit.

1971 — Dunialal filed T. Suit No. 676 of 1971 against Balai in the City Civil Court for partition of the premises No. 50, Doctor Lane. Nagendra was not a party to the said suit.

12th Sept. 1973 — A decree was passed in the said T. Suit No. 451 of 1971 on contest declaring the deed dated 9-9-1946 was invalid, inoperative etc.

8th Feb. 1974 — Nagendra again filed another T. Suit No. 176 of 1974 against Balai and Dunialal for their eviction from the premises No. 50, Doctor Lane and for recovery of possession on the allegation that Balai had surrendered the tenancy on 6-1-1974 and had informed Nagendra that Dunialal was in wrongful occupation of the said property. Balai contested the said suit but Dunialal did not enter appearance, did not contest the suit.

2nd Jan. 1975 — In T. Suit No. 176 of 1974 a decree for eviction was passed on contest against Balai and ex parte against Dunialal — the present plaintiff.

Thereafter Nagendra started execution Case No. 21 of 1975 for evicting Balai and Dunialal.

April 1975 — In execution of the decree in T. Suit No. 176 of 1974, Nagendra started another Misc. Case No. 329 of 1975 for possession with the help of police.

11th April 1975 — A partition decree was passed in Dunialal's partition Suit No. 676 of 1971.

21st April 1975 — Another Misc. Case No. 331 of 1975 arose as Dunialal took out an application under O. 9, R. 13 of the C. P. C. for setting aside the ex parte decree dated 2-1-1975 against him in Suit No. 176 of 1974.

16th Sept. 1976 — Dunialal's application under O. 9, R. 13 of the C. P. C. was dismissed.

3rd Jan. 1977 — Dunialal preferred an appeal with an application under Sec. 5 of the Limitation Act against the order of dismissal of his application under O. 9, R. 13 of the C. P. C. and obtained C. R. No. 12 (M) of 1977 and C. R. No. 907 (M) of 1977 both of which were subsequently discharged.

1977 — Dunialal thereafter filed T. Suit No. 597 of 1977 in the City Civil Court for setting aside the ex parte decree in T. Suit No. 176 of 1974.

8-6-1978 — Dunialal's T. Suit No. 597 of 1977 was dismissed for default.

2. In the premises aforesaid the decree for eviction against Dunialal in T. Suit No. 176 of 1974 became final and binding on him. The aforesaid court proceedings are all admitted by the parties to the suit.

3. When the present suit was opened, the contesting defendant Nagendra raised an objection regarding the maintainability of the suit and both the parties to the suit agreed that this preliminary issue should be decided first. The two preliminary issues were framed as follows :—

(1) Is the suit maintainable under Ss. 31, 34 and 35 of the Specific Relief Act of 1963 ?

(2) Is the suit barred by res judicata by reason of the City Civil Court decree dated 2-1-1975 passed in T. S. No. 176 of 1974 ?

4. Let us take the first issue first. Mr. Das, counsel for the plaintiff, submitted that in T. Suit No. 451 of 1971, the present plaintiff Dunialal was not a party and if this decree would remain outstanding, that would cause serious prejudice to him. Hence this decree should be adjudged void and delivered up and cancelled under S. 31 of the Act. He further submitted that the plaintiff would be entitled to this declaration as of right in view of the provisions of S. 35 of the Act. S. 35 of the Act is as follows :—

Section 35 "A declaration made under this chapter is binding only on the parties to the suit, persons claiming through them respectively....."

5. Sections 34 and 35 are under Chapter V of the Act. The provisions of Section 35 obviously relate to the decree passed under S. 34 of the Specific Relief Act. If the decree in T. Suit No. 451 of 1971 was passed under S. 34 of the Specific Relief Act, 1963, then under S. 35 such a decree will not be binding on Dunialal who was a stranger to the suit. The statute makes the position clear. On the facts and circumstances of this case, is Dunialal entitled to bring a suit under Sec. 31 of the Act? Let us now examine the requirements of Sec. 31 of the Act.

Section 31 (1) "Any person against whom a written instrument is void or voidable, and who has reasonable apprehension that such instrument, if left outstanding may cause him serious injury may sue to have it adjudged void or voidable, and the Court may, in its discretion, so adjudge it and order it to be delivered up and cancelled."

6. The relief as to delivery and cancellation of an instrument is founded upon the administration of the protective justice for fear that the instrument may be vexatiously or injuriously used by the defendant against the plaintiff or it may throw a cloud or suspicion over his title or interest. A plaintiff in a suit under S. 31 of the Act has to establish three conditions:

(1) that the plaintiff is such a person against whom the instrument is void or voidable.

(2) that the plaintiff can entertain a reasonable apprehension that if such an instrument is left outstanding it may cause him serious injury.

(3) that the Court must adjudge the instrument void or voidable.

7. The aforesaid conditions were laid down in AIR 1972 All 376 relying on a Full Bench decision reported in AIR 1960 Mad 1. Will a decree of a competent Court come under the expression "written instrument" in Sec. 31? In (1960) 64 Cal WN 616: (AIR 1960 Cal 702) (Pratabmull Rameswar v. K. C. Sethia) a Division Bench of this High Court had held at p. 628 (of Cal WN): (at p. 709 of AIR):—

"But an award or a judgment of Court is not in this sense a written instrument within the meaning of S. 39 of the Specific Relief Act, the words 'adjudged' and 'delivered up' appear to support this argument, in other words the word 'adjudged' means that where a written instrument such as a written contract has already been 'adjudged' by a Court or Tribunal S. 39 cannot be applied. It is only when a written instrument has not been 'adjudged' by a Court or Tribunal but remains an unadjudged written instrument that S. 39 can be invoked. Similarly the 'delivery' of the written instrument cannot be made to include delivery of an award or judgment of Court to be 'cancelled'. There is no question of delivery or cancellation in such a case because the judgments or awards on which judgments are pronounced are public records and the parties can have them by making the proper application to Court for those copies and which can be set aside according to the law or procedure applicable and not delivered for cancellation as contemplated in S. 39 of the Specific Relief Act. We are inclined to think that Section 39 of the Specific Relief Act cannot be applied in the case of judgments of a Court or an award of a Tribunal although they may come within the general expression 'written instrument'. We consider that the expression 'written instrument' in Section 39 means an instrument which has not already been adjudged by any formal Court or Tribunal."

8. I am in full agreement with this decision which is also binding on me. This decision applies in full force in the present case as S. 31 (1) of the Specific Relief Act 1963 is verbatim reproduction of S. 39 of the repealed Act.

9. Therefore the 1st condition in AIR 1972 All 376 is not fulfilled as the decree in T. Suit No. 451 of 1971 is not a "written instrument" which is void or voidable against the plaintiff. The second condition also is not fulfilled because the plaintiff cannot entertain a reasonable apprehension that the decree in T. Suit No. 451 of 1971, if left outstanding will cause him serious injury because it cannot be, vexatiously or injuriously used against him due to the provisions of S. 35 of the Act. This decree is not binding on him, he being a stranger to the said suit. Under the circumstances, the question of adjudging the said decree as void or voidable will not arise. So the 3rd condition is also not fulfilled. Hence no relief can be given to the plaintiff under S. 31 of the Act. In my opinion, the plaintiff has no right to invoke S. 31 of the Specific Relief Act of 1963. Realising this difficulty, the plaintiff's counsel submitted that he was abandoning prayers for delivery and cancellation under Sec. 31 and would be satisfied with declaration only. This again cannot be done. A decree is not an unadjudged document which can be adjudged void or voidable. I have no hesitation to hold that no suit will lie under S. 31 of the Act on the facts and circumstances of this case. The plaintiff's counsel then urged that this suit could be treated as a suit under S. 34 of the Act. The provisions of S. 34 are as follows :—

Section 34 "Any person entitled to any legal character or to any right as to any property, may institute a suit against any person denying or interested to deny his title or such legal character or right and the court may in its discretion make therein a declaration that he is so entitled and the plaintiff need not in such suit ask for any further relief."

10. In the present suit the plaintiff did not pray for any such declaration. On the contrary, the documentary evidence of records of Courts which were freely used by both the parties during hearing, clearly proved that in 1974 Nagendra had filed the T. Suit No. 176 of 1974 in the City Civil Court wherein he claimed to be the owner of the premises No. 50, Doctor Lane and alleged that Balai and Dunialal were trespassers and prayed for their eviction from the said property. Balai filed a written statement admitting Nagendra's title over premises No. 50, Doctor Lane but denying that he was a trespasser. Dunialal did not contest the suit. On 2-1-1975, a decree for eviction was passed in the said T. Suit No. 176 of 1974 against Balai on contest and ex parte against Dunialal. Dunialal failed to set aside this ex parte decree in spite of repeated attempts as will appear from the list of dates set out above. This decree has become binding on him. According to Mr. Dutt, counsel for the defendant Nagendra, Dunialal had no title in respect of this property when the present suit was filed in 1977. As he had no interest, he could not invoke the jurisdiction under S. 34 and claim a declaration. He cannot agitate the question of his alleged title to this property in the present suit as that issue would be barred by the principle of res judicata by virtue of the decree in T. Suit No. 176 of 1974. The counsel for the plaintiff Dunialal, however, submitted, that the plaintiff would be entitled to raise this dispute in the present suit in spite of the decree in T. Suit

No. 176 of 1974 as this Court is a superior Court. The principle of res judicata will apply if the Court which passed the decree and the court in which the same dispute is raised subsequently are of concurrent jurisdiction. A decree by lower Court on an issue will not be treated as res judicata, if the same issue is raised before a superior Court. In support he relied on AIR 1962 SC 214 paragraphs 4, 5, 6, 10, 11 and 12. But his submissions are completely irrelevant so far as the present suit is concerned. In the present suit, the plaintiff did not ask for a declaration of his title over premises No. 50, Doctor Lane and did not make any allegation that the decree in T. Suit No. 176 of 1974 was not res judicata. The plaintiff has completely suppressed this fact from Court. His only prayer is that the decree in T. Suit No. 451 of 1971 is void against him. Such a decree would be unnecessary in view of the provisions of Sec. 35 of the Act. Sec. 34 does not contemplate that a declaratory decree will be passed when the facts of the case come under the purview of Sec. 35 of the Act. The decree in T. Suit No. 451 of 1971 cannot be used against him. Therefore such a declaration will be futile. This jurisdiction under Sec. 34 is equitable and discretionary. In AIR 1927 Pat 286 it has been held at page 287 :—

"It is well settled that a court will not make a declaration of an abstract right exclusive of practical utility especially when that declaration may not be productive of any benefit to the party obtaining the declaration."

11. Other authorities on this point are AIR 1929 Cal 422 and AIR 1953 Assam 162.

12. In my opinion, the provisions of Sec. 35 of the Specific Relief Act fully protect the plaintiff in the present suit and no further declaration is necessary. Then why the plaintiff is so keen in getting a declaration from Court that the decree in Suit No. 451 of 1971 is not binding? It appears from the facts of this case that the parties to the suit are veteran litigants and there were several litigations between the parties, concerning the premises No. 50, Doctor Lane. It also appears from the facts of the case and the surrounding circumstances, that if the plaintiff can obtain such a declaration that will be a stepping stone for further litigation. It is well settled that to allow a declaratory decree to be passed which will be used as a stepping stone for further litigation and will be of no practical effect, is not a proper exercise of the jurisdiction. (1922) 20 All LJ 557 : AIR 1922 All 349.

13. I am convinced looking at the prayers in the plaint, that the present suit cannot be treated as a suit under Section 34 of the Act. It is a suit filed under Chapter IV Sec. 31 of the Specific Relief Act and I have already held that such a suit will not lie on the facts of this case. The present suit is therefore, not maintainable and is liable to be dismissed. In view of my finding on the preliminary issue No. 1, it is not necessary to decide the preliminary issue No. 2. The suit is therefore, dismissed with costs in favour of the appearing defendant.

Suit dismissed.

Mrs. PADMA KHASTGIR, J.

Nanajal Madhavji Varma, Plaintiff v. State of Andhra Pradesh, Defendant.

(A) Constitution of India, Art. 299 (1) — Additional Chief Engineer, Electricity for State of A. The plaintiff alleged a binding contract between him and the State of A. P. on the basis of certain letters between him and the Additional Chief Engineer, Electricity, State of A. P. It appeared that the alleged agreement was not entered into in the name of the Governor of the State of A. P., nor it was signed for and on behalf of the Governor of A. JUDGMENT:— This suit had been filed by Nanajal Madhavji Varma against the State of Andhra Pradesh for recovery of a sum of Rs. 62,887 p. interest and costs. It is the plaintiff's case that on 19th of Aug. 1958 the Official Liquidator of the Barasat Basirhat Light Railway Co. (in liquidation) published an advertisement in the Statesman in Calcutta inviting tenders for the purchase of moveable properties of the said company including rails on various terms and conditions. The maximum selling price of the said rails was fixed by the Iron and Steel Controller at Rs. 700/- per ton. Under the said terms and conditions the purchaser was to sell the said according to the directions of the Official Liquidator. Thereafter several tenders and offers were received by the said Official Liquidator and on 6th of Oct. 1958 the plaintiff was accepted and confirmed by this Court as the highest bidder. The Iron & Steel Controller by letter dated 24th Jan. 1959 arranged for supply of second hand rails to the parties specified in a list at a price not exceeding Rs. 700/- per tons ex-stockyard.

By letter dated 24th Jan. 1959 the plaintiff was directed by the Iron & Steel Controller to release to the defendant the State of Andhra Pradesh in the name of its Additional Chief Engineer for Electricity P. W. D. Hyderabad division as allottee of 1325 tons of second hand rails of the following kinds:

35 lbs.	=	84 tons
35/41½ lbs.	=	23 tons
41 lbs.	=	1, 218 tons.

Total — 1, 325 tons.

2. By letter dated 28th Jan. 1959 addressed from Calcutta to the defendants Additional Chief Engineer, Electricity, Hyderabad the plaintiff asked the defendant for confirmation of the said sale and to take delivery of the allotted goods. By letter dated 2nd of Feb. 1959 the defendant through the said Additional Chief Engineer, Hyderabad desired to purchase 890 tons of the said goods which were allotted and released to the defendant of the following kind:—

35/lbs/yd.	=	56 tons.
35/41½ lbs/yd.	=	16 tons.
41/lbs/yd.	=	818 tons.

3. The price was agreed to be at Rs. 700/- per ton ex-stockyard to be sent on freight to pay basis and all the materials with the railway receipts were agreed to be sent to the parties. It was agreed that the railway receipts and the bills in duplicate would be presented through the plaintiff's bankers at Vijayawada in the name of the defendant's Superintending Engineer and the entire price would be paid within 14 days from the date of the presentation of the bills and railway receipts through the plaintiff's bankers with sight draft. The other terms and conditions agreed upon by and between the parties would appear from the correspondences referred to by and between the parties. The plaintiff accepted those terms by his letter dated 9th of Feb. 1959.

4. It was the plaintiff's case that from time to time pursuant to the arrangement as aforesaid the plaintiff despatched and supplied to the defendants all the contracted goods and sent bills to and drew sight drafts on the defendant's Superintending Engineer and presented such drafts for acceptance and payment by the defendant being the price of the goods so supplied and accepted and honoured such drafts except two drafts for the price of a portion of goods. The said two drafts were duly accepted but dishonoured on presentation on due dates. These were in respect of 43 tons 18 CWT 2 lbs for Rs. 31,538.15/- and 43 tons 11 CWT for Rs. 31,268.90/- totalling Rs. 62,807.5p. Those two despatches were made on 17th of April, 1959 and 22nd of April, 1959 respectively. It was plaintiff's case that there was a valid and binding contract by and between the parties under which the said goods were despatched and the defendant having received the materials should make payment for the same. In the alternative it is the plaintiff's case that the plaintiff was entitled to compensation for the supply of the said goods which the plaintiff did not do gratuitously and the defendant having enjoyed the benefit thereof should compensate for the same.

5. The main defence on behalf of the defendant was that there was no concluded agreement by and between the parties as the provisions of Art. 299 (1) of the Constitution were not complied with and as a result there was no valid and binding contract by and between the parties which could be enforced against the defendant. Secondly the plaintiff did not despatch and supply to the defendant all the contracted goods as according to the defendant rails weighing 1196 maunds 16 seers alleged to have been despatched by the plaintiff covered under the railway receipts Nos. 388867 dated 24th July, 1959 never reached its destination. In respect of the other 21 consignments and/or railway receipts after the arrival of the goods they were weighed by and/or on behalf of the defendant and/or the railway authorities and it was found that although railway receipts contained some figures of weights purported to have been sent by the plaintiff, but on actual weighment being made they were found to be far less than the weights shown in the railway receipts by the plaintiff. In respect of 10 consignments and/or railway receipts, no such weighment could be made as the goods were already unloaded and mixed with other goods. Giving full credit to weight of the goods given in the said 10 railway receipts, the defendant only received 35106 maunds 35 seers which would appear from Annexure 'A' to the written statement. Under the circumstances the defendant was under an obligation to pay only for the 35106 maunds 35 seers whereas the defendant in fact had made payment to the plaintiff in respect of 35405 maunds and 9 seers, in the premises the defendant had made over-payment to the plaintiff in respect of 298 maunds and 14 seers representing a sum of Rs. 7869.28/-. The drafts were accepted by the defendant on the belief that the consignor had mentioned the actual weight of the goods as mentioned in the railway receipts but subsequently when the non-delivery and short-delivery were discovered the defendant withheld payment in respect of the two consignments. Under the circumstances the defendant denied its liability to pay any further sum to the plaintiff. On the contrary it is the defendant's case that because of non-supply of the contracted qualities (quantities?) the defendant had suffered damages and reserved its right to institute a suit for recovery of the sum over-paid to the plaintiff with damages suffered by the defendant. The defendant completely denied that it ever enjoyed the benefits of the entire quantity of goods contracted for. Under the circumstances the defendant denied its liability to make any compensation to the plaintiff to the extent of Rs. 62,807.5/-. So far the railway receipt No. 388867 dated 21st Feb. 1959 was concerned the weight stated in the railway receipts was 1196 maunds and 16 seers, the same was not received at all by the consignee as the said wagon was mislaid and/or could not be traced earlier but it was subsequently discovered to have been delivered elsewhere and not to the consignee. Out of the 32 consignments made by the plaintiff to the defendant the defendant paid for the entire consignment save and except the consignment No. 529778 dated 21st April 1959 stated to contain 1185 maunds and 21 seers and railway receipts No. 529755 dated 16th April, 1959 stated to contain 1195.29 seers which on actual reweighment was found by the defendant to be less than what was shown on the R/R receipts as the actual weight found by the defendant in respect of the said consignments was 80 tons less which would be evident from the documents disclosed by the parties and tendered in evidence.

6. The plaintiff examined Sudhir K. Majhi a general assistant of the plaintiff to substantiate the case as made out in the plaint. It was his evidence that so far the two outstanding bills were concerned the defendants never raised any objection as to the quantity of the goods for which the price remained unpaid. He had admitted that the defendant had paid for the wagon which never reached its destination against which the defendant did not receive any consignment of goods covered by the said railway receipt. The parties mainly relied on the contemporaneous documents that passed by and between the parties. The plaintiff also examined Nanda Kishore Sinha an assistant of the South Eastern Railway for the purpose of proving certain letters. The plaintiff examined Sri Subimal Ghosh, an assistant from the Iron & Steel Controller Office to prove certain letters only. On behalf of the defendant two witnesses were examined from the railways to prove that a wagon containing the consignments as indicated earlier never reached its destination and also to prove that on weighment by the railways it transpired that R/R containing the stated weight did not tally with the actual weight taken by the railways at the destination.

7. From the series of correspondences that have been referred to by and between the parties and from the letters, stated by the plaintiff to form the agreement by and between the parties, were mostly signed by the Additional Chief Engineer Electricity of the State of Andhra Pradesh and in one of such letters the signatory whose name could not be deciphered signed for and on behalf of the State of Andhra Pradesh. It was the definite case of the defendant that these letters on which the plaintiff relied on for the purpose of coming to the conclusion that there was a valid and binding agreement by and between the parties it would appear that the agreement was not entered into in the name of the Governor of the State of A. P. nor it was signed for and on behalf of the Governor of A. P. nor did it disclose that the person who signed the said document was duly authorised by the Governor of A. P. From the State of A. P. Financial Code, Vol. I under the Expenditure General Principles and Rules under Art. 51 (b) at page 20 under appendix 4, a list of the authorities empowered to enter into contracts on behalf of the Governor had been given. Even for the purpose of any material variation under the terms of an existing contract made on behalf of the Government it was directed that the matter should be referred to the Government for orders. From the appendix Item No. 27 it would appear that all contracts, deeds and other instruments connected with the administration and working of Electricity Department must be done by the Chief Engineer, Electricity, Chief Electrical Inspector to Government subject to any limits and conditions fixed by the departmental orders by the Chief Operation Engineers and Chief Construction Engineers and the Superintending Engineer in charge of power systems. In the A. P. Electricity Department Manual Vol. 2. Appendix page 22 under Item No. 46 the details of the persons such as Chief Engineer, Chief Operation Engineer, Chief Construction Engineer, Superintending Engineer have been given with the powers of entering into contracts. The Chief Engineer has been given unlimited power, Chief Operation Engineer has been given powers up to three lakhs. Chief Construction Engineers up to 1 lakh and Superintending Engineer up to Rs. 15,000/- only. Full particulars of such powers and/or limits and/or authorities would appear from Item No. 46 of the appendices page 22. It would be abundantly clear that the Additional Chief Engineer who had signed the letters had no authority under the said rules to enter into any contract for and on behalf of the State of A. P. Under the circumstances the provisions of Art. 299 (1) of the Constitution of India had not been complied with which provides that:—

"299. Contracts — (1) All contracts made in the exercise of the executive power of the Union or of a State shall be expressed to be made by the President, or by the Governor of the State, as the case may be, and all such contracts and all assurances of property made in the exercise of that power, shall be executed on behalf of the President or the Governor by such persons and in such manner as he may direct or authorise."

Under the circumstances it appears that the contract did not comply with Art. 299 (1) of the Constitution of India. As a result, there was no valid and binding contract by and between the plaintiff and the defendant. In a case reported in AIR 1977 SC 2149, The Bihar Eastern Gangetic Fishermen Co-operative Societies Ltd. v. Sipahi Singh it had been held (at p. 2152) that:—

"The provisions of Art. 299 of the Constitution which are mandatory in character require that a contract made in the exercise of the executive power of the Union or of a State must satisfy three conditions viz.

(i) it must be expressed to be made by the President or by the Governor of the State, as the case may be;

(ii) it must be executed on behalf of the President or the Governor, as the case may be and (iii) its execution must be by such person and in such manner as the President or Governor may direct or authorise. Failure to comply with these conditions nullifies the contract and renders it void and unenforceable. There is no question of estoppel or ratification in a case where there is contravention of the provisions of Art. 299 (1) of the Constitution."

8. It would appear that under the common publication Andhra Pradesh Financial Code, Appendix 4 Vol. 2 Item No. 26 it would appear that in view of the present contract being for Rs. 9 lakhs the Chief Engineer alone had the power to enter into the contract but from the letters dated 28th Jan. 1959, 2nd Feb. 1959 and 9th Feb. 1959 which had been pleaded in para 7, 8 and 9 of the plaint it would appear that these letters were written for and on behalf of the Additional Chief Engineer. Moreover the letter dated 2nd Feb. 1959 was signed not even by the Additional Chief Engineer but by someone on his behalf. Under the circumstances it appears that the Chief Engineer, Electricity of the State of Andhra Pradesh had nothing to do with the said letters. As indicated earlier that the three conditions as set down under Art. 299 (1) of the Constitution are mandatory provisions and they should be complied with for the purpose of forming a valid and binding contract by and between the parties. Under the circumstances the contract was void and it was unenforceable by the plaintiff against the defendant.

9. Lyonel Moore was examined on behalf of the defendant and also proved the shortage in weight and difference between the weight given by the consignor in the railway receipts with the weighments which were made actually by the railway on receipt of the goods which fact would appear from Exhibit 'P' tendered on commission. It was agreed by and between the parties that the payment would be made on actual weightment basis which would appear from the letter dated 9th March, 1959 appearing at page 56 of Exhibit 'A'. From Page 206 of Exhibit 'A' the letter dated 13th Nov. 1959 it would appear that there had been 80 tons shortage in weight in respect of the total consignments received by the defendant. From the order it would appear that it was agreed that party was entitled to charge Rs. 700/- per ton ex-stockyard and not on the basis of length or section weight. Under Clause 8 it was provided that a clear receipt for each piece and weight should be specifically given. But what the plaintiff tried to do instead of giving the actual weight on tonnage basis, gave the weight on section and length basis. In view of the fact that these rails were second hand rails being used and operated by the Barasat and Basirhat Railway when in existence their actual weight deteriorated due to wear and tear. Under the circumstances calculating the weight on section basis as also length basis was not only contrary to what was agreed upon by and between the parties but that was also erroneous. The price could only be charged at Rs. 700/- per ton on actual weightage and not on the basis of section weight. Although the plaintiff has claimed for two consignments in respect of which goods had been supplied and no shortage has been detected by the Railways as such it would not appear from exhibit 'L' tendered on commission while Lyonol Moore was being examined but it was the case of the defendant as made out in the written statement that such weight was taken by the defendant itself upon receipt of the goods. However, the defendant did not choose to examine any witnesses' on its behalf to substantiate the same but the fact remains that taken all the consignments together the defendant did not receive the total quantity of the goods contracted. The defendant had fully paid for the total quantity of goods supplied by the plaintiffs to the defendant. In fact it was the case of the defendant which would appear from the series of correspondences passed by and between the parties and admitted in evidence by consent of the parties that in effect there had been overpayment made by the defendant to the plaintiff. However, no claim so far had been preferred by the defendant against the plaintiff for the same. The question of payment for the supplies would only arise after the actual weight was found out on re-weightment. It was an admitted fact which would appear from the correspondence that the plaintiff could charge Rs. 700/- per ton on actual weight basis and not on the basis of section weight or long weight. Under the circumstances it would be extremely unfair to allow the plaintiff to get any unjust enrichment under Sec. 70 of the Contract Act. It is true that so far the plaintiff's claim in respect of the two consignments referred to in the plaint are concerned the goods had been supplied and in view of no evidence being led that there was any shortage in weight it would be admitted to be correct, that the defendant had received the goods as per the consignment but no piece-meal case could be made in respect of the said two consignments in view of the fact that the entire consignments made by the plaintiff to the defendant arose in respect of the same arrangement, which although did not form a contract in view of the violations of the provisions of Art. 299 (1) of the Constitution of India, but they were part of the same transaction.

The whole purpose of giving benefit to a party under Sec. 70 is on the basis of the principles of equity and good conscience when on admitted facts it would appear that there had been shortage of weight in respect of other supplies for which the plaintiff had been fully paid and in respect even of the wagon which was mislaid and the defendant did not get any benefit of the goods sent by the plaintiff in the said wagon against the said railway receipt. The defendant in fact paid for the entire quantity of the goods actually received by the defendant. Under these circumstances it could not be held that the defendant No. 1 had unjustly enriched itself at the cost of the plaintiff, on the contrary it is the plaintiff who had been paid more than what the plaintiff was entitled to. Even after giving credit to the value of the goods as claimed in the plaint there would be a surplus payment to the tune of Rs. 7000/-.

10. Mr. Roy's submission that there had been substantial compliance of Art. 299 sub-clause (1) cannot be accepted although he relied on the case reported in AIR 1971 SC 141 at p. 142 to that effect. In that case it was held that there was sufficient compliance as the officer entrusted to enter into the contract on behalf of the Government entered into the contract but did not mention that he was so doing in the contract itself on behalf of the Government. Under the circumstances as the Officer concerned had authority to enter into the contract on behalf of the Government, the mere non-mention that the contract was being entered into on behalf of the government did not render the contract invalid as the learned Judges came to the conclusion that there had been substantial compliance with the requirement of law. The principles as laid down in the said case could not be applied to the facts of the present case. In view of the fact that there had been no formal agreement in the instant case nor it was mentioned that the contract was being entered into on behalf of the Government of Andhra Pradesh on the contrary the Additional Chief Engineer under the rules referred to above had no authority whatsoever to enter into any contract for and on behalf of the Governor of Andhra Pradesh. The other case referred to by Mr. P. K. Roy reported in AIR 1981 NOC 82 (Cal) is of no assistance as there it was held that the authority to deal with the original contract would automatically include the authority to enter into any addendums or supplementary contracts. There in that particular case the person had the authority to deal with the original contract but here in the instant case the Additional Chief Engineer Electricity had no authority whatsoever to enter into the contract on behalf of the Governor of Andhra Pradesh. From the facts it would appear that in total the plaintiff supplied 32 consignments to the defendant, out of which one consignment was mislaid and it never reached the destination — Out of the balance 31 consignments no weighing could be made in respect of the 10 consignments which were mixed up with other materials. Out of the balance 21 consignments 17 consignments were weighed by the railways and found to be short in weight. The balance four consignments were weighed by the defendant out of which payment had been made in respect of the two consignments but no payment had been made rather payments were withheld in respect of the balance two consignments. The present suit had been filed for recovery of the price in respect of the said balance two consignments.

11. Although there was no evidence tendered on behalf of the defendants to indicate that in respect of these consignments, for which this suit had been filed by the plaintiff, there had been any shortage in the weight of the goods than the weight mentioned in the R/R railway receipts, but taking the entire consignment of goods made by the plaintiff to the defendant it would appear that there had been shortage in weight of the rails supplied by the plaintiff to the defendant as a result not only the plaintiff had been paid in toto for the total amount of goods supplied by the plaintiff to the defendant but in fact there had been an over-payment made by the defendant to the plaintiff. Under those circumstances it would be extremely difficult to come to a finding that the defendants had unlawfully or unjustly enriched themselves with the rails supplied by the plaintiff to the defendant. The basis for compensation under Section 70 is not the same as on contractual rights, but it is granted in proportion to the benefit enjoyed by the party for whom a thing was done or to whom a thing was delivered. Under this section a person receiving a benefit is deemed to have impliedly agreed to pay compensation or to return the thing delivered to him. A person whose contract is void for non-compliance with Art. 299 (1) of the Constitution is entitled to compensation under Sec. 70 of the Contract Act. It is, however, his duty to account to the other party for what he has received in the transaction before his right to restitution arises. If he fails to do so his claim for compensation or refund for deposit will be dismissed. In the case reported in AIR 1968 SC 1218 Mulamchand v. State of Madhya Pradesh it had been held (at p. 1222) that:

"The provisions of Sec. 175 (3) of the Government of India Act 1935 or the corresponding provisions of Art. 299 (1) of the Constitution of India are mandatory in character and the contravention of these provisions nullifies the contracts and makes them void. There is no question of estoppel or ratification in such a case.

These provisions have not been enacted for the sake of mere form but they have been enacted for safeguarding the Government against unauthorised contracts. They are based on the ground of public policy, on the ground of protection of general public, and these formalities cannot be waived or dispensed with. If the plea of estoppel or ratification is admitted that would mean in effect the repeal of an important constitutional provision intended for the protection of the general public.

The provisions of Sec. 70 can be invoked by the aggrieved party to a void contract. The first condition to be satisfied under the section is that a person should lawfully do something for another person or deliver something to him; the second condition is that in doing the said thing or delivering the said thing he must not intend to act gratuitously; and the third condition is that the other person for whom something is done or to whom something is delivered must enjoy the benefit thereof. If these conditions are satisfied Sec. 70 imposes upon the latter person the liability to make compensation to the former in respect of, or to restore the thing, so done or delivered.

In a case falling under Sec. 70 the person doing something for another or delivering something to another cannot sue for the specific performance of the contract, nor ask for damages for the breach of the contract, for the simple reason that there is no contract between him and the other person. So where a claim for compensation is made by one person against another under Sec. 70, the juristic basis of the obligation is not founded upon any contract or tort but upon a third category of law, namely, quasi-contract or restitution.

Applying these principles, it is manifest that a person whose contract is void for non-compliance with Art. 299 (1) of the Constitution would be entitled to compensation under Sec. 70 of the Contract Act if he had adduced evidence in support of his claim.

It is well established that a person who seeks restitution has a duty to account to the defendant for what he has received in the transaction from which his right to restitution arises. In other words, an accounting by the plaintiff is a condition of restitution from the defendant.

12. Applying the said test as laid down in the case referred to above it would appear that although a person who seeks restitution has a duty to account to the defendant for what he received from transaction from which his right to restitution arises which is a condition of restitution and the plaintiff must comply with such condition of accounting to the defendant for the total amount received by him in the transaction before he can claim his right under Sec. 70. In the instant case the plaintiff has failed to account for the total amount of money received from the defendant in the transaction. The plaintiff failed to give any evidence with regard thereto. In the absence of any evidence on this point tendered by the plaintiff the plaintiff is not entitled to restitution or payment in respect of the two consignments for which the present suit has been filed. Under these circumstances the plaintiff is not entitled to any benefit under Sec. 70 of the Contract Act.

13. In the case reported in AIR 1962 SC 779 State of West Bengal v. B. K. Mondal & Sons it was held (at p. 789) that:

"The whole powers of granting relief under Sec. 70 is the relationship arising not because the party claiming compensation has done something for the party against whom the compensation is claimed but because what has been done by the former has been accepted and enjoyed by the latter."

"What Sec. 70 prevents is unjust enrichment and it applies as much to individuals as to corporations and Governments."

14. The underlying principle of granting a relief under Sec. 70 is based on the principle that the defendant must have enjoyed the benefit or use of the goods so supplied. Taking into consideration the entire facts of this case it would be extremely difficult to come to the conclusion that the State of Andhra Pradesh had the full enjoyment and/or use of the materials for which it had made the payments. It is true that there was no evidence that the goods covered by these two consignments had not been received by the defendant but these two consignments cannot be considered disjunctively by segregating the same from the other consignments in respect of which the defendant did not receive the entire quantity of goods mentioned in the Railway receipt.

15. Under the circumstances and in view of the facts and law indicated above I answer the issues in the manner following:

16. I answer issue No. 1 (a) in the negative. In view of the fact that the three mandatory conditions under Article 299 (1) had not been complied with by the parties as a consequence I answer issue No. 1 (b) in the negative. So far issues Nos. 2 (a) and 2 (b) are concerned the defendant did not dispute the fact of sale by the Official Liquidator in favour of the plaintiff. Under the circumstances I answer issues Nos. 2 (a) and 2 (b) in the positive. In view of no dispute being raised by the defendant I answer issue No. 3 in the positive. I answer issue No. 4 in the negative. I answer issue No. 5 in the negative, as it would appear from the admitted facts that although the plaintiff is stated to have despatched the goods but the defendant did not receive all the goods agreed to be supplied by the plaintiff to the defendant. I answer issue No. 6 (a) in the positive. I answer issue No. 6 (b) in the negative. Out of 21 consignments 17 consignments had been weighed by the railways and found to be short in weight which would be supported by exhibit 'L' tendered in commission at the time of examination of Lyonel Moore. So far the balance four wagons were concerned, although those were weighed by the defendant but the defendant failed to tender any evidence in support of the same. Under the circumstances I answer issue No. 7 in the positive. In view of no claim having been made and no submission having been made in terms of issue No. 8 (a) I need not answer the same. Although no counter-claim had been made in the suit nor any suit has been filed by the defendant for the excess payment made by the defendant but from the correspondence it would appear that the defendant had not been supplied the total quantity of the goods as a result there had been excess payment made by the defendant. As no evidence has been led so far issue No. 9 (a) and 9 (b) is concerned I answer the same in the negative. I answer issue No. 10 (a) in the negative as the defendant had not enjoyed the benefit of all the goods delivered by the plaintiff to the railways. As discussed above I am of the view that the defendant was under no obligation to make any compensation. Hence I answer issue No. 10 (b) in the negative. Issue No. 11 had not been pressed. Under the circumstances

I do not answer the same. So far issue No. 12 is concerned I dismiss the plaintiff's suit with cost.

Suit dismissed.

SUDHINDRA MOHAN GUHA, J.

Smt. Usha Das (Roy), Petitioner v. Smt. Arati Kar (Maiti), Opposite Party.

C. R. No. 2303 of 1981, D/- 22-12-1981.

(A) Specific Relief Act (47 of 1963), Secs. 14, 34 — Contract of personal service — Not enforceable — Employee of private School — Removal of — Remedy of employee is in damages and not by way of declaration.

A contract of personal service cannot ordinarily be specifically enforced and a court normally would not give a declaration that the contract subsists and the employee even after having been removed from service can be deemed to be in service against the will and consent of the employer. Where specific obligations are incorporated under a statute equitable considerations can hardly arise. The Managing Committee of a school constituted in accordance with the rules framed under the West Bengal Secondary Education Act 1950 is neither a body corporate nor a statutory body. An employee of such a private school does not acquire a statutory status. Again, on removal, the remedy of such an employee is in damages and not by way of declaration. (Paras. 14, 13)

(B) Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 39 R. 2 — Suit by P (officiating Headmistress of School) against D (duly approved Headmistress) for declaration — Application for injunction — Effect of granting injunction — Great loss to service of D and her salary, while P (suspended teacher) allowed to reap benefit — P would get her usual pay even in absence of injunction — Injunction could not be granted in favour of P. (Para 27)

(C) W. B. Board of Secondary Education Act (5 of 1963), Sec. 22 (3) — Order of Administrator affecting service of officiating Headmistress of School — Her remedy is to prefer appeal to appeal Committee. (Para 24)

S. B. Bhunia and P. K. Samanta, for Petitioner; R. N. Mitra, J. N. Maity, (for No. 5) and J. K. Banerjee, for Opposite Party.

ORDER:— This application for revision arises out of an order dated 29th June 1981 passed by Sri B. Bhattacharjee, Additional District Judge, Midnapore, Misc. Appeal No. 227 of 1980 reversing the order passed by the Munsif, 1st court, Tamluk, rejecting an application for temporary injunction in title suit No. 243 of 1979.

2. This suit was commenced by O. P. No. 1 Sm. Arati Kar (Maity) against the petitioner Sm. Usha Das (Ray) and ors. for a declaration that she is the officiating Headmistress of Tulia Sitala Balika Vidyapith and the resignation by the petitioner defendant No. 2 was final and irrevocable and order of approval of appointment of defendant No. 2 dated 21st Feb. 1978 showing the purported date of the appointment as on 23rd Aug. 1977 was a nullity and invalid and the order of plaintiff's suspension passed by the Administrator was without jurisdiction.

3. Plaintiff's application for temporary injunction was rejected by the Munsif upon the finding that the plaintiff's (petitioners) resignation was duly withdrawn, that the Administrator was legally appointed by the Board and that the Administrator had duly suspended the plaintiff. These findings of Court were reversed in appeal.

4. It is against that order, defendant No. 2 petitioner has come up in revision.

5. Facts, relevant for our purpose and which would appear from the materials on record, may be stated as follows.

6. The petitioner submitted a letter of resignation on 21-9-76 to the Secretary of the School requesting him to release the petitioner with effect from 21-12-76; but this letter of resignation, annexed to the plaint, is stated to be a false and fabricated one by the Administrator. The petitioner also filed a copy of the letter of resignation. But the Secretary by a letter dated 18-12-76 requested the petitioner to withdraw the letter of resignation within a week. Accordingly by a letter dated 24th Dec. 1976 the petitioner withdrew her resignation and prayed for leave from 22-12-76 to 24-12-76.

7. Thereafter the petitioner on 2-1-1977 made an application for leave on medical ground. In the meeting of the Managing Committee dated 3rd April 1977 the original appointment of the petitioner was approved by the Managing Committee. The Board of Secondary Education appointed the Administrator of the school and he took over the charge on 7th July, 1977.

8. The petitioner reported for duty on 11th Sept. 1977 But Subal Chandra Maity, Secretary of the school, by a letter dated 26th Sept. 1977 intimated that the petitioner's resignation letter was accepted in the meeting of the Managing Committee dated 5-6-1977. But this was communicated after the appointment of the Administrator. It may be mentioned that one Sri Bharat Chandra Maity filed a title suit being T. S. No. 195 of 1978 in the 1st Court of Munsif, Tamluk, for declaration and injunction regarding the present school and regarding the parties to the present litigation. But that was ultimately withdrawn. Be that as it may, the petitioner reported the matter to the Administrator by a letter dated 3-10-77 who sent a full report to the District Inspector. The District Inspector of schools approved the appointment of the petitioner temporarily as Headmistress for two years with effect from 23-8-1976 by a letter dated 22-2-1978. This letter dated 22-2-1978 was made Annexure "I" to the plaint. But the date was said to be interpolated and changed from 23rd Aug. 1976 to 23rd Aug. 1977. Subsequently, the petitioner was appointed Headmistress permanently with effect from 24-8-1978.

9. During the absence of the petitioner, the plaintiff O. P. 1 was asked to act as a "teacher in charge" by an order dated 7th July 1977 annexure "C" to the plaint. The Administrator by a letter dated 25th Mar. 1978 terminated the functioning of the plaintiff as teacher in charge on 27-3-1978, and by an order dated 25-3-1978 the Administrator directed the petitioner to join on 27th Mar. 1978. By an order dated 11th May 1978 the Administrator asked the plaintiff/O. P. No. 1 to hand over all the documents to the petitioner. Ultimately, the plaintiff was suspended by an order dated 9th Aug. 1978. The suit by the plaintiff was filed on the 20th August 1979. Herein the plaintiff by annexure D gave out that the Administrator by an order dated 6th Sept. 1977, directed her to officiate as Headmistress of the school till the joining of the duly approved Headmistress. This letter was said to be false by the Administrator himself. It is pointed out that in the booklet published by the petitioner (plaintiff) herself the petitioner (plaintiff) described herself as teacher in charge, which she would not have done had she really been appointed as officiating Headmistress from 10-9-1977.

10. Mr. S. B. Bhunia learned Advocate for the petitioner points out from the above mentioned facts that the order of suspension was in force when the plaintiff commenced the suit. But the Appellate Court, according to him, enjoined the approved Headmistress and a suspended teacher was allowed to function. In doing so, the learned Appellate Court observed that the alleged letter of withdrawal by defendant No. 2 petitioner was submitted two days after the expiry of the period of three months. It is argued by Mr. Bhunia that the learned Judge overlooked that before the expiry of three months the Secretary refused to accept and requested the petitioner to withdraw the same within a week from 18-12-1976. So, the petitioner was either to agree or refuse reconsideration. So, the period of three months was extended by a week. In this view of the matter, the letter of resignation cannot be irrevocable and final.

11. The learned Judge held that the suspension order of O. P. No. 1 was bad because it was passed one year after the appointment of the Administrator and R. 8 (3) does not permit such appointment. It is contended by Mr. Bhunia that subsequently D. I. and Board accepted the Administrator as Administrator and asked him to follow up the suspension order by disciplinary proceeding. In Annexure 'U' it is contended that the terms of the Administrator were extended and he was allowed to continue to 30-10-1981 and thereafter to 31st Dec. 1981. By the impugned order again the learned Judge upheld the validity of the appointment of the Administrator as he permitted him to fill up the post of Headmistress.

12. Lastly, it is contended by Mr. Bhunia that the school is not a statutory authority, the contract of service is a private contract and prospective resignation can be withdrawn at any time before it is accepted by a resolution of the Managing Committee.

13. It is pointed out by Mr. Bhunia with reference to the decision in the case of subh Narayan Sinha v. Hari Singh Havalakha reported in (1975) 79 Cal WN 672 that in India the specific performance of an act rested on personal volition or contract is forbidden under the Specific Relief Act 1877. Where specific obligations are incorporated under a statute equitable considerations can hardly arise. The Managing Committee of a school constituted in accordance with the rules framed under the West Bengal Secondary Education Act 1950 is neither a body corporate nor a statutory body. An employee of such a school does not acquire a statutory status. Again, the remedy of such an employee is in damages and not by way of declaration.

14. A contract of personal service cannot ordinarily be specifically enforced and a court normally would not give a declaration that the contract subsists and the employee even after having been removed from service can be deemed to be in service against the will and consent of the employer. He refers to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Executive Committee of Vaish Degree College v. Lakshmi Narain reported in AIR 1976 SC 888. So, it is contended that if the suit itself is not maintainable an order of injunction cannot follow. Next reference is made to the decision of Justice P. B. Mukherji (As his Lordship then was) in the case of Baidyanath Bose v. Smt. Sudha Roy reported in (1966) 70 Cal WN 571. He specifically draws my attention to para 18 of the report at p. 577. This para as it involves important points of law can be reproduced herein :

"This point can also be viewed from another angle. In making an order under S. 21 of the Specific Relief Act or making a declaration that the plaintiff is still continuing as a teacher of the school under Section 42 of the Specific Relief Act or even granting an injunction to the plaintiff restraining the school committee from interfering with her duties as a teacher the court exercises a discretionary power in the nature of an equitable relief although in India granted by the Statute of Specific Relief Act. Nevertheless the discretion is always with the court. To force a teacher on the Managing Committee where she is not wanted may not in the facts of this case be conducive either to the cause of education, school or even the plaintiff teacher herself. On that ground the court would be justified in not exercising that discretion to grant reinstatement even if it had the power to do so, as it has the power to grant injunction. This is only on the exercise of the Court's discretion in respect of such a relief as reinstatement or injunction where there has been a wrongful dismissal from service. In that view of the matter it will not be necessary to discuss such decisions as State Medical Faculty of West Bengal v. Kshiti Bhusan Dutt, (1960) 64 Cal WN 842, at pages 854 to 857 : (AIR 1961 Cal 31 at pp. 37 to 39) the Special Bench decision in Nripendra Nath Bagchi v. Chief Secretary, Government of West Bengal, (1961) 65 Cal WN 361, at page 383 : (AIR 1961 Cal 1 at p. 12) which is recently affirmed by the Supreme Court and Barada Kanta Adhikari v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1963 Cal 161."

15. Next it is contended by Mr. Bhunia that the plaintiff O. P. No. 1 being appointed as on an officiating basis or on a temporary basis cannot claim any right to the post by way of declaration. He relies on the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Union of India v. K. R. Tahiliani reported in AIR 1980 SC 953. With reference to the decision in the case of Republic Stores (Trade) v. Jagajit Industries Ltd. reported in (1977) 81 Cal WN 646 : (AIR 1978 NOC 76), Mr. Bhunia reiterates his points that the plaintiff's suit is barred under S. 34 of the Specific Relief Act and if main relief cannot be granted in the suit the question of granting an injunction cannot arise at all. It is held in the decision referred to above that no injunction can be granted for the specific performance of a contract which is determinable at the will of the parties,

16. As to the withdrawal of the resignation it is contended by Mr. Bhunia that the petitioner is not a Government servant and that letter of resignation cannot be operative unless accepted by the Managing Committee. In this case the rule of three months, according to Mr. Bhunia, would not be applicable because of subsequent facts and circumstances as to the request of withdrawal by the Managing Committee. According to him the letter of resignation was withdrawn before it finally became operative. Reference is also made for guidance to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Union of India v. Gopal Chandra Misra reported in AIR 1978 SC 694.

17. In conclusion, it is contended by Mr. Bhunia that under S. 34 of the Specific Relief Act the plaintiff has no legal character to maintain the suit and she has not and cannot claim any further relief to oust the Headmistress the petitioner appointed by the authority by way of injunction. She should have availed of statutory remedy of appeal and cannot come to court. If the plaintiff O. P. No. 1 had any reasons to be aggrieved by the decision of the Administrator she was to file an appeal under S. 22 (3) of the West Bengal Board of Secondary Education Act, 1963. It is argued by Mr. Bhunia that it is somewhat peculiar that the plaintiff did not pray for any order of injunction against the Administrator. It is also contended by him that it was pointed out to the Appellate Court that O. P. No. 1 used a false document to claim that she had been officiating as the Headmistress. But the learned Judge by-passed the issue by holding that there is no difference between teacher in charge and officiating post, overlooking altogether the real point that the plaintiff O. P. No. 1 came to court with unclean hand. According to him, the learned Judge also overlooked the fact that even if officiating the post or being teacher in charge she cannot have right to the post of Headmistress in view of the position of the approval of defendant No. 2 the present petitioner to the post of Headmistress by the District Inspector.

18. Learned Judge held that the suspension order of O. P. 1 is bad because it was passed after one year of the appointment of the Administrator and R. 8 (3) does not permit such an order. But subsequently the District Inspector and the Board accepted the Administrator as the Administrator of the school and asked him to follow up the suspension order by disciplinary proceeding. The injunction order thus stultifies the disciplinary proceeding and interferes with the internal management of the school.

19. As to the balance of convenience and inconvenience it is stated that the approved Headmistress has been enjoined causing great loss to the service and her salary. The suspended teacher on the other hand has been allowed to reap the benefits, and thus prejudging the issue in the suit.

20. Mr. J. N. Maity, learned Advocate for the Administrator, defendant No. 1 practically adopts the arguments advanced by Mr. Bhunia and makes reliance on the decisions discussed above.

21. Mr. J. K. Banerjee, learned Advocate for O. P. No. 1, points out at the outset that O. P. No. 5 has no locus standi to take part in the proceeding, as he was not a party in the original suit. It is pointed out by Mr. Maity that O. P. No. 5 came in place of the Administrator defendant No. 1 in the original suit and he also filed written statement.

22. As to the jurisdiction of this court with reference to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Managing Director, Hindustan Aeronautics Ltd., Balanagar, Hyderabad v. Ajit Prasad Tarway reported in AIR 1973 SC 76 and specially referring to para 5 of the report at p. 77 it is argued by Mr. Banerjee that the order of the first Appellate Court may be right or wrong may be in accordance with law or not but one thing is clear that it had jurisdiction to make that order. So that order must not be interfered by this court in revision. Mr. Banerjee also makes reference to the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of State of M. P. v. Lakshmi Shankar Mishra reported in AIR 1979 SC 979 in this connection. But that decision, to my mind, has no application. It is held therein that the period during which one acted in officiating capacity should be taken into account for computing the length of service,

23. Then with reference to Regn. 9 framed under West Bengal Board of Secondary Education Act it is contended by Mr. Banerjee that the plaintiff O. P. No. 1 was under no obligation to prefer an appeal against the decision of the Managing Committee or for the matter of that of the decision of the Administrator, to the appeal committee.

24. It should be remembered that the order of Administrator was against the plaintiff affecting her service. So she should have preferred an appeal to the appeal committee, as required under Sec. 22 and Regn. 9.

25. As to the jurisdiction of this court it appears that the learned Judge failed to exercise jurisdiction vested in him in not appreciating the materials on record and as such exercised jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity.

26. Again if the order be not reversed, there would be failure of justice and cause irreparable injury to the petitioner. The petitioner has been deprived of her post of Headmistress and thus disentitling her to the regular salary and other benefits and on the other hand O. P. No. 1 would get her usual pay etc. as an Assistant teacher, in case there be no order of suspension, even if there is no order of injunction.

27. In this view of the matter, to my opinion, the impugned order cannot be allowed to stand. It is thus vacated. The order passed by the learned Munsif is restored.

28. The Rule is accordingly made absolute with costs. Hearing fee is assessed at 5 gold mohurs.

Rule made absolute.

Rabindra Nath Mitra, Subol Chandra Moitra and Miss Aparajita Banerjee, for Petitioner; Saktinath Mukherjee, S. P. Roy Chowdhury and Jayanta Das Gupta, for Opposite Party.

ORDER:— The order dated May 26, 1981 passed by Shri S. K. Mitra, Judge, City Civil Court, Calcutta in Miscellaneous Case No. 971 of 1978 rejecting an objection under S. 47 of the Civil P. C. on the ground of limitation has been challenged under the present Rule.

2. A suit for ejectment being Ejectment Suit No. 530 of 1969 was filed against the petitioner on April 15, 1969 which was decreed ex parte on 4th July, 1969. This decree was put into execution on Aug. 26, 1969 by Ejectment Execution Case No. 611 of 1969. On Nov. 12, 1969 the opposite party filed an application for allowing Police help which was numbered as Misc. Case No. 880 of 1969.

3. On May 6, 1970 the petitioner filed an application under O. 9, R. 13 of the C. P. Code which was numbered as Misc. Case No. 431 of 1970. Misc. Case No. 880 of 1969 for Police help was allowed ex parte on Dec. 21, 1970. The application for setting aside ex parte decree i.e. Misc. Case No. 431 of 1970 was dismissed on contest on Mar. 25, 1972. The appeal against the order being F. M. A. 457 of 1972 was dismissed on contest on April 17, 1979. The petitioner tenant, however, was allowed time till the end of July 1979 for rendering vacant possession. Further proceedings of Ejectment Execution case remained stayed from May 7, 1970 to July 31, 1979. On July 31, 1979 the petitioner came up with the objection under S. 47 of the C. P. Code. This was numbered as Misc. Case No. 971 of 1979. On the following day an application under S. 5 read with S. 14 of the Limitation Act and S. 151 C. P. Code was filed for condonation of delay. By the impugned order the application for condonation of delay as well as objection under S. 47 was rejected.

4. Mr. R. N. Mitra, learned Advocate for the petitioner contends that the objection under S. 47 of the Code is not an application and as such the provision of Art. 137 of the Limitation Act would not be applicable. It is only by way of abundant caution the petitioner filed an application for condonation of delay. With reference to Civil Rules and Orders Vol. I. Rule 776 it is contended that the objections under S. 47 of the Code has been described as cases and not applications and that the learned Judge was not justified to treat the objection as an application. Reliance is made on the cases reported in AIR 1935 All 1016 (Pokhar Singh v. Tularam) and AIR 1961 All 436. (Nar Singh Datt v. Ram Pratap). It is held therein that no limitation is prescribed for an objection under S. 47, C. P. Code. Objection under that section cannot fall within Art. 181 of the Limitation Act. For an analogy Mr. Mitra refers to the decision of a Division Bench of this Court in the case of Birendra Nath Banerjee v. Smt. Snehalata Devi reported in AIR 1968 Cal 380, wherein it is held that an application for pre-emption under S. 4 of the Partition Act, 1893 can be made at any stage while the suit is pending or in other words before final decree for partition is made. An application claiming pre-emption at any time when the appeal against final partition decree is pending cannot be held barred by limitation on the ground that it has been filed beyond three years of the passing of the preliminary decree. Again in support of the contention that even if the objection be taken to be an application, that being filed in a pending proceeding, will not be attracted under Art. 137 reliance is placed on the decision in the case of Paritosh Kumar Ghose v. Smt. Saraswati Nandi reported in AIR 1980 Cal 280. It is contended by Mr. Mitra that there is hardly any difference between a pending suit and a proceeding for execution.

5. Mr. Saktinath Mukherjee, learned Advocate for the opposite party on the other hand contends that the Division Bench of this Court held that a proceeding under Sec. 47 of the C. P. C. will be governed by Limitation Act. He makes reliance on the decision in the case of Hafez Uzir Ali v. Nisaimannessa Bibi reported in AIR 1928 Cal 865. It is held therein that an application under S. 47 falls within Art. 181 of the Limitation Act. In a subsequent decision in the case of Basir Ulla v. Nabin Ch. Shaha reported in ILR 1947 (1) Calcutta page 22 another Division Bench was exactly of the same view and at page 30 of the report it is observed by Their Lordships as follows: "From the records of the case it appears, however, that the appellant in the first place claimed relief under S. 47 of the Civil P. C. by filing an application under that section and that this application was subsequently treated by the court as a suit under the provision of S. 47 sub-clause (2) of the Code. This being the case, in our opinion, there can be no doubt that, as regards limitation the Article of the Limitation Act which applied was Art. 181 which relates specifically to application and prescribes a period of three years with effect from the date when the right to apply accrued."

6. With due respect to Their Lordships of the Allahabad High Court I am of the view that it is obligatory on my part to follow the Division Bench decision of this Court. Accordingly, agreeing with the learned trial Judge I would hold that Art. 137 of the Limitation Act would govern an application under S. 47 of the Civil P. C. This application on the ground of limitation, therefore, was rightly rejected.

7. In reply, it is contended by Mr. Mitra that the decree was a nullity and such an objection can be taken at any stage of the execution and even in collateral proceedings. It transpires from the records that such a contention was never raised earlier. Mr. Shyama Prasanna Roy Chaudhury, the learned Advocate for the opposite party relying on the decision in the case of Biswa Bhushan Bose v. Smt. Kusum Agarwalla reported in (1981) 1 Cal LJ page 1, contended that it would not be safe to say that the decree had been passed by a court having no jurisdiction. Whether an objection of nullity can be taken at any stage of the proceeding, it is to be found first that the decree was a nullity. In the absence of such finding I would refrain from making any observation or comment on the arguments advanced by Mr. Mitra on this score.

7. In view of the foregoing findings, the Rule is discharged. Interim orders of this Court are vacated. There will be no order as to costs.

Order accordingly.

S. D. Banerjee, P. Mukherjee and A. Roy, for Petitioner; S. Gupta with A. Chakraborti, for Respondents; S. Gupta and Mrs. Ruma Pal with Suchit Banerjee, for the C. F. S. C.

ORDER :— The petitioners who claimed to be the owners of the property being premises No. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta has come up before this Court with the instant writ application assailing the validity of the order of requisition made under Section 3 (1) of the West Bengal Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act, 1948 (West Bengal Act, II of 1948) on the ground that the order of requisition has not been served on the petitioners as required under the Act framed thereunder and that the order was made under colourable exercise of power as there was no formation of opinion and there was no application of mind. The said order has also been challenged on the ground that there was no public purpose for requisition of this land and the said land being previously notified for acquisition and the same being pending the order of the requisition was also illegal and bad.

2. The facts in brief are that the petitioners jointly purchased the property at premises No. 2, Park Lane on or about Aug. 1, 1952 out of their joint funds. The petitioner No. 2 was the first wife of the petitioner No. 1 being married in 1940 under the Special Marriage Act and she obtained a decree of divorce in a suit from the High Court at Madras. A partition suit was instituted on or about Jan. 7, 1980 at the instance of the petitioner No. 2 in the court of the 4th Bench of City Civil Court, Calcutta and on Jan. 8, 1980, on the basis of a compromise decree the petitioner No. 1 was allotted Sch. 'C' property and the petitioner No. 2 was allotted Sch. 'B' property the detail description of which was given in paragraph 4 of the petition. It has also been stated that after the partition was affected, the petitioner No. 2 had applied on or about Sept. 13, 1980, before the Assessor of the Calcutta Corporation for mutation of her name in respect of her half share in the entire property and such mutation was accordingly granted. It has also been further stated that there is a pucca structure on the said premises No. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta and there is an office accommodation for petitioner No. 1. A Darwan of the petitioner No. 1 is residing in one of the rooms in the said premises. Negotiations between the petitioner No. 1 and the Calcutta Electricity Supply Corporation (India) Ltd., respondent No. 6, for sale of the premises were carried on and the price was settled. A draft agreement was prepared and it was sent with letter dated June 14, 1978 to M/s. Talbot and Company, the land agent of the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation (India) Ltd. but the said negotiation, however, did not materialise and it was ultimately abandoned on or about Jan. 9, 1979 because of the adamant attitude of the respondent No. 6. A notification being No. 9346 — L. A./K. S./1979 dated June 22, 1979 under S. 4 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 (Act 1 of 1894) was published in Calcutta Gazette (Extraordinary) for acquisition of the said land for the alleged public purpose "for construction of House for 'Urdhu Academy'". The land notified for acquisition as mentioned in the said notice was more or less 0.1063 Hectare or 0.2627 acre. A copy of the said notice was annexed as annexure 'C' to the petition. The petitioner submitted an objection against the said proposed acquisition under S. 5 (A) of the said Act and prayed for personal hearing. The objections were heard but the determination on the same was never communicated to the petitioner. As such the petitioner could not know about the results of the said land acquisition proceedings. The petitioner is under the belief that the said proceeding is still pending. During the pendency of the said land acquisition proceedings on or about Oct. 16, 1981 another order of requisition being No. 12/81/11/48 dated Oct. 16, 1981 was purported to be passed by the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta, the respondent No. 3, under S. 3 (1) of the West Bengal Land (Requisition & Acquisition) Act, 1948 (West Bengal Act II of 1948) for requisition of premises No. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta for the public purpose of establishment of power distribution station. It has been stated that this order has not been served on the petitioners in the manner prescribed by Rules 3 (a) to 3 (d) of the West Bengal Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Rules, 1948. The petitioner No. 1 had received the said order which was handed over to the adjoining Ration Shop owner on his return from Madras on October 22, 1981. A copy of the said notice has been annexed as annexure 'F' to the petition. It has been specifically ordered that the possession of the said premises, would be taken, on Oct. 17, 1981 in terms of S. 3 (2) of the said Act. It has been stated therein that the order was not served on any of the 'Recorded joint owner' and no attempts were made to be served upon them the said order. It has been further stated that the petitioner No. 1 was away in Madras from Oct. 7, 1981 till Oct. 22, 1981 and, on receiving information through telegram dated Oct. 9, 1981 from his darwan, Sri Sitaram Singh he returned back from Madras on Oct. 22, 1981. On returning back from Madras on Oct. 22, 1981 the petitioner No. 1 came to know for the first time from his Darwan that an order had been handed over on the adjoining Ration Shop on or about Oct. 16, 1981 at 8 P. M. and the petitioner No. 1 was further informed by the said Darwan that some persons claiming themselves to be the employees of the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation (India) Ltd., respondent No. 6, had broken open the lock of the main gate of the premises No. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta at about 11 A. M. on 17-10-1981 and drove out the Darwan by physical force from his room for which the Darwan had lodged a complaint with the Officer-in-Charge, Park Street, Police Station.

3. On these allegations and facts the instant writ application has been moved in this Court with a prayer for a writ of or in the nature of Mandamus commanding the respondents not to give any effect or further effect to the impugned order of requisition dated October 16, 1981 (annexure 'F' to the petition). There was also a further prayer for release of the premises and a prayer for a writ of certiorari directing the respondents to certify and transmit the records relating to the land acquisition proceedings as well as the requisition proceedings so that the same may be quashed and set aside.

4. On Oct. 30, 1981, the instant Rule was issued and an interim order was made restraining the respondents from changing the nature and character of the premises by way of demolition or new construction till two weeks after the long vacation with liberty to the petitioners to apply for extension of the same upon notice to the respondents. The interim order dated 19-11-1981 was extended till Wednesday next and leave was granted to respondents to file an application for vacating the interim order. Pursuant to the leave two applications for vacating the interim order was filed — (1) one by the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation (India) Ltd., respondent No. 6 and (2) another on behalf of the respondents Nos. 1, 2 & 3, that is, the State respondents. By order dated 25th Nov. 1981, both these applications along with the Rule were directed to be placed for hearing.

5. Mr. Sankardas Banerjee, learned Counsel, with Mr. Paritosh Mukherjee, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioner contended in the first place that the order of requisition is illegal and bad being not in compliance with the mandatory provisions of S. 3 of the West Bengal Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act, 1948 read with the Rules framed thereunder as the order has not been served on the petitioners in their residences nor on the premises purported to be requisitioned. It has been further submitted in this connection that the petitioner No. 1 was away from his residence from Oct. 7, 1981 as he was then in Madras and was there till Oct. 22, 1981. The copy of the order was also not served on 2, Park Lane, Calcutta but it was handed over to the nearby ration shop. As such it has been contended that the purported order of requisition is wholly bad and illegal and the requisition proceedings should not be proceeded with. It has been next submitted that the order of requisition was made in a mala fide manner and it was a colourable exercise of power because the premises in question which was notified for requisition was previously proposed by the respondent No. 6 to the petitioner No. 1 for purchase of the same. Negotiations were carried on and price was fixed, agreement was prepared but the said transaction could not be materialised due to the adamant attitude of the respondent No. 6 and the negotiation failed in 1979. It has been submitted that in these circumstances there is in fact no existence of any public purpose which necessitates the making of the order of requisition by the Government as has been done here. The order of requisition in question is therefore mala fide and it has been made on a total non-application of mind. The formation of opinion by the respondent No. 3 in this circumstance is also bad as conditions precedent for forming such an opinion and the existence of relevant circumstance are completely absent. It has also been submitted that the formation of opinion though subjective can be challenged on the ground of opinion being formed on a non-application of mind and/or on a consideration of irrelevant and extraneous materials and circumstances. It has been thirdly submitted that the order of requisition is also bad inasmuch as a portion of the said premises were notified for requisition for construction of the House for 'Urdhu Academy' and the said acquisition proceedings had not been abandoned and/or dropped. It has been lastly submitted that the principles of natural justice which is applicable in this case as the purported order of requisition has civil consequences has not been observed as no opportunity of hearing was given to the petitioner before the order was made nor any opportunity of hearing was given to file objections against the purported order of requisition. It has been further submitted that the order though an administrative order affects civil rights of the petitioner and as such the principles of natural justice are applicable. Non-observation of these rules of natural justice renders the proceeding as well as the order invalid and inoperative in law.

6. Mr. Gupta, learned Additional Advocate General appearing on behalf of the State has submitted that the order of requisition has been served as required under the West Bengal Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Rules, 1948 on the petitioners both at his residence at 60, Lake Place, Calcutta as well as on the requisitioned premises No. 2, Park Lane, on 16th Oct. 1981. The allegation that there was no service of the order of requisition as required under the rules is without any foundation. It has also been submitted by Mr. Gupta that the order of requisition is not made mala fide nor it was made on a total non-application of mind. The land was urgently required for implementation and/or establishment of a power distribution station in order to provide electricity to the tall buildings which are coming up in that area. Though the entire vacant land comprising in premises No. 2, Park Lane cannot be retained by the petitioners under the Urban Land (Ceiling and Regulation) Act, 1976 still in view of the urgency of the need the Government thought it fit to requisition the entire premises instead of proceeding under Urban Land (Ceiling and Regulation) Act, 1976. There is the existence of the public purpose and the premises in question is required to be requisitioned for the said public purpose. It has, therefore, been submitted that the order of requisition is neither mala fide nor the same has been made on a total non-application of mind or on a consideration of extraneous and irrelevant considerations. It has been further submitted by the learned Additional Advocate General that the rules of natural justice have been excluded by the Act inasmuch as it provides for requisition of land and premises for maintaining supplies and services essential to the life of the community which is an urgent and immediate necessity. It has been submitted that the said Requisition Act cannot be held to be bad on this core as objections can be filed by the petitioners after the order is made. Such objections if filed would be duly considered by the concerned authorities. The petitioners had not filed the objection to the impugned order of requisition and as such they are not competent to challenge the order of requisition on the ground of violation of the rules of natural justice. A decision of the Supreme Court has been cited at the bar in this connection. It has been further submitted by Mr. Gupta that the earlier acquisition proceedings initiated under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 had been cancelled and the Deputy Secretary, Land and Land Revenue Department intimated to the First Land Acquisition Collector, respondent No. 3, about this already and directed him to send a draft notification cancelling the notification published under S. 4 of the Land Acquisition Act. The draft cancellation notification was submitted by the respondent No. 3 through the Commissioner of Presidency Division. Of course, the same has not yet been published. Therefore, the land acquisition proceeding has been dropped already before the issuance of the order under Section 3 (1) of the said Act which is neither illegal nor bad. The requisition proceedings are perfectly valid in law and possession of the requisitioned land has been taken already and the same has been made over to the respondent No. 6, the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation (India) Ltd. it has been therefore submitted that the instant Rule should be discharged and the interim order should be vacated.

7. The excerpt of the order of requisition dated 16th Oct. 1981 runs as follows: "Whereas in my opinion it is necessary for a public purpose for maintaining supplies and services essential to the life of the community by establishment of a power distribution system to requisition the land described in the schedule below: Now therefore, in exercise of the power conferred by sub-section (1) of Section 3 of the West Bengal Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Act, 1948 (West Bengal Act II of 1948) (read with the authority so vested in me as aforesaid) I do hereby requisition the land mentioned in the schedule below and make the following further orders namely :—

That the land described in the Schedule below shall be placed at my disposal and control on 17-10-1981 at 10-30 A. M. when an officer deputed from this office will take charge and possession of the said land."

8. This order as appears from paragraph 10 of the application for vacating and/or modifying the interim order filed on behalf of the respondents Nos. 1 to 3 and affirmed by the Bimal Kr. Bhat-tacharya, First Land Acquisition Collector, respondent No. 3, was served on the petitioner No. 1, Nil Kamal Bejbaruah at his residence, that is, at 60, Lake Place, Calcutta. It has been stated that the process server of the respondent No. 3 went to the residence of petitioner No. 1 with the said requisition order to serve upon him personally on 16th of October, 1981. But the petitioner No. 1 was not available at his residence and as such the requisition order was served by affixing the same at the main outer door of the said premises No. 60, Lake Place, Calcutta. The Process Server also went to the premises No. 2, Park Lane on the same day, that is, 16-10-1981 with the order of requisition. The Darwan of the petitioner No. 1 was found available who refused to accept the order after reading the contents of the order and accordingly the said Process Server served the requisition order by affixing the said requisition order at the entrance of the requisitioned premises in presence of one Shyamlal Agarwal who is the owner of a ration shop opposite to the requisitioned premises. In the affidavit-in-opposition sworn by Prabhat Kamal Bez Baruah, son of Dr. Nil Kamal Bez Baruah on 26th November, 1981 it has been stated in paragraph 8 that the Darwan was not in the premises on October 17, 1981 and as such the question of his refusal of accepting the order did not arise at all. It has been stated that the Darwan was not authorised to accept the order nor the obligation on the part of the Land Acquisition authorities, could be discharged by taking alternative mode of service, by affixation in nearby Ration Shop. This has been affirmed as true to the knowledge of the deponent. These averments in the affidavit-in-opposition are not acceptable on the ground that the absence of the Darwan on 17th October, 1981 from the requisition premises cannot be true to the knowledge of the deponent in the absence of any supporting affidavit affirmed by the Darwan himself. Moreover, the statement as made in paragraph 12 in the petition are also not acceptable inasmuch as the petitioner on his own statement left Calcutta for Madras on Oct. 7, 1981 and returned from there on 22nd Oct. 1981. Therefore, the question of non-service of the order at his residence at 60, Lake Place does not arise. Nor he is competent to say that the notice was not served on the requisitioned premises because of his absence from Calcutta at that time. These averments in paragraphs 12 and 13 have been sworn as true to the knowledge of the petitioner No. 1. It is inconceivable how the petitioner who was away from Calcutta at the relevant time can know whether the requisition order was served either at his residence or at the requisitioned premises by the peon on 16th October, 1981 or not and how this fact can be true to his knowledge. No affidavit is forthcoming from the Darwan in question who was actually present at the relevant time at the requisitioned premises. Therefore, this statement cannot be relied upon. It has been urged with great force and persuasiveness that no notice was served on respondent No. 2 who is the divorced wife of the petitioner. It appears from the averments made in paragraph 7 of the petition that the petitioner alone carried on the negotiations for sale of property with the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation (India) Ltd., respondent No. 6. It also appears from letter dated 14th June, 1978 addressed to M/s. Talbot Co. that the petitioner No. 1 alone is carrying on the negotiations and the draft agreement which has been annexed as annexure 'B' to the petition that the said agreement was purported to be made between the petitioner No. 1 on the one hand and the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation (India) Ltd. on the other hand and the petitioner No. 2, the divorced wife of the petitioner is a confirming party. This prima facie goes to show that the petitioner No. 1 is carrying on all negotiations as sole owner of the property. Even assuming that the petitioner No. 2, the divorced wife has got some share in the property on the basis of the decree in the partition suit still then from the circumstances stated hereinbefore it is quite evident that the petitioner No. 1 is dealing with this property and that shows he might have been authorised by the respondent No. 2 to do so. The order of requisition, as appears from the report of the peon of respondent No. 3, was served at the main entrance of the requisitioned premises on 17th of Oct., 1981. It also appears from annexure 'D' to the requisition order that the notice was served by the Process Server by affixing the order on the outer door of the residence of the petitioner No. 1 at 60, Lake Place, Calcutta. Rule 3 of the West Bengal Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Rules, 1948 provides four alternative modes of service of which the modes of service specified in 'a' & 'd' are quoted hereinbelow:—

(a) by delivering or tendering a copy thereof, endorsed either by the person authorised by the Act to make the order or by the Collector, to the person on whom the order is to be served or his agent or

(d) by fixing a copy thereof in some conspicuous part of the land to which the order relates and also in some conspicuous place of the office of the Collector."

In this case I have already said hereinbefore that the peon of the respondent No. 3 served the copy of the order both at the residence of the petitioner No. 1 as well as the requisitioned premises. Therefore, even if it is assumed for argument's sake that the copy of the order as required to be served on the petitioner No. 2 has not been served still then the copy of the order being served on the requisitioned premises as provided in R. 3 (d) of the said Rules, there has been in my opinion, no violation or breach of the provisions prescribing the manner of service of orders under R. 3 of the West Bengal Land (Requisition and Acquisition) Rules, 1948. The decision reported in 63 Cal WN 101 : (AIR 1959 Cal 402) Sri Luxmi Janardan Jew v. State of West Bengal, where it has been held that the order of requisition is bad and the requisition proceedings cannot be allowed to continue as the notice were not served upon all the parties do not apply to this case. The order of requisition have been duly served and as such there is no infirmity in the matter of service of the order under S. 3 of the said Act. The requisition proceedings is, therefore, legal and valid. The contentions on this score is therefore overruled.

9. As regards the contention that the order of requisition is mala fide and the same has been made on a closed mind and in the absence of any public purpose it is evident from the order of requisition made under S. 3 of the said Act that the public purpose mentioned in the order is "establishment of a power distribution system." This undoubtedly is a public purpose. It has been stated in paragraph 2 of the application for vacating interim order sworn by Sri Bimal Kr. Bhattacharya, First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta, respondent No. 3 that portion of the disputed premises No. 2, Park Lane, was notified for acquisition under S. 4 of the Land Acquisition Act (Act 1 of 1894). This notification was published in the Calcutta Gazette Extraordinary on June 23, 1979 for a public purpose, that is, for construction of house of the Urdu Academy in Ward No. 6 of the Calcutta Municipality. The objection to the proposed acquisition was filed by the petitioner No. 1 and the same was heard under S. 5 (A) of the said Act. The objection was rejected and approval of the Government was granted. Subsequently the said notification was cancelled by the Land and Land Reforms Department as the said premises was no longer required for the said purpose. The Government after cancelling the said notification directed the respondent No. 3 to send a draft of the cancellation for being published in the Calcutta Gazette. Accordingly, the Land Acquisition Collector, respondent No. 3 cancelled the earlier notification dated June 23, 1979. The said notification, however, has not been published as yet. It has been further stated that as the demand for electricity in the Park Street area is increasing due to the construction of the tall buildings in that area it was considered necessary by the Government for setting up a distribution station to solve the present acute problem for which the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation (India) Ltd. approached the department of Power (Government of West Bengal) for establishment of a power station in that area. The power department on a consideration of all the aspects of the proposal of the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation (India) Ltd. recommended for requisition and acquisition of the said premises under Act II of 1948 for establishment of a power distribution station. Thereafter the power Department sent a proposal to the Land & Land Reforms department, the competent authority for requisition and acquisition of the said premises. It has been stated that in view of the extreme urgency for the establishment of the distribution station the order under S. 3 of the Land Requisition and Acquisition Act, 1948 was made in respect of the premises-in-question, that is, no. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta. It has also been stated that the earlier negotiation which were started at the instance of the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation (India) Ltd., respondent No. 6, for purchase of the premises failed owing to the adamant attitude taken by the respondent (petitioner) No. 1. The order of requisition has not been made mala fide but it has been made on a consideration of the public purpose for which the premises in question is required to be requisitioned. The said order of requisition has also not been made by the respondent No. 3 on a closed mind as tried to be contended. It has been, on the other hand, submitted that the particular premises is required for the purpose of setting up of a power distribution station to solve the acute problem of insufficient supply of electricity to the buildings which are being constructed in the area. There is neither any mala fide nor any absence of public purpose in making the order of requisition. Considering all these facts and circumstances there is no room for contending that the order of requisition is bad as there was no existence of any public purpose and there has been a colourable exercise of power by the respondent No. 3 in making the impugned order. This contention, therefore, cannot be sustained at all. The contention that the order of requisition made under S. 3 of the said Act is bad because the Land Acquisition proceedings were not withdrawn or abandoned is also devoid of any substance as I have already stated hereinbefore. The specified averments made in the application for vacating the interim order to the effect that the notification issued under S. 4 of the Land Acquisition Act for acquisition of this premises for construction of house of 'Urdhu Academy' had been cancelled and as such the said acquisition proceedings are no longer in existence at the time when the requisition order has been made. This position is also well known to the petitioner himself as will appear from the statements made in the letter demanding justice dated 20th October, 1981 which has been annexed as annexure I to the petition. In paragraph 4 of the letter it has been specifically stated that the acquisition proceedings was cancelled and abandoned by the Deputy Secretary, Government of West Bengal, Land and Land Reforms Department by order No. 7922—I-A (II)/I O/ 1079, dated July 10, 1981. Therefore, this contention has no legs to stand upon. The next contention raised on behalf of the petitioner that there is no formation of opinion as required under S. 3 (1) of the said Act inasmuch as the respondent No. 3 did not take into consideration the relevant materials in forming his opinion about the premises being required for a public purpose namely for setting up a distribution station for the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation, respondent No. 6 and as such the impugned order is wholly illegal, unwarranted and bad. I have already stated hereinbefore that in the writ application it has been specifically stated that there is acute shortage of the supply of electricity in the area and to meet the increasing demand for each day the respondent No. 6 made a proposal to the Government for requisition of premises No. 2, Park Lane, for setting up of a distribution station there and the power department after considering all aspects have found that there was an urgent necessity for requisitioning the land for the particular purpose which is undoubtedly a public purpose. Accordingly the order of requisition was made by the respondent No. 3. In these circumstances, in my opinion, it cannot be said that the opinion was formed by the respondent No. 3 on a consideration of extraneous materials and not on consideration of relevant and germane materials. In view of my above finding it is needless to consider the decision cited at the bar by the learned Counsel for the petitioner. It has been contended on behalf of the petitioner that previously in the notice issued under S. 4 of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 a portion of the premises was notified for acquisition for the purpose of construction of a house for 'Urdu Academy'. The Deputy Secretary, Government of West Bengal by its communication on 16th July, 1981, to the respondent No. 3 asked for requisition of 7 cottahs of land out of the lands of premises No. 2, Park Lane for setting up of a distribution station by Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation. Subsequently, however, another communication was sent by the Government requesting for requisition of the entire premises No. 2, Park Lane, Calcutta, for establishment of a power distribution station. This has been challenged as bad because only seven cottahs of land is necessary for construction of the power distribution station and as such it has been contended that the requisition order is bad as it purports to requisition the entire premises. This argument, in my opinion, cannot be sustained inasmuch as it is the authority concerned who is the fittest person to decide how much land would be required for the public purpose namely for the establishment of the distribution station of the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation (India) Ltd., respondent No. 6. This contention, therefore, is devoid of any merit. The last contention advanced on behalf of the petitioner is that the order under S. 3 (1) of the said Act is wholly bad, illegal and ultra vires inasmuch as no opportunity of hearing was given to the petitioner before the making of the order and/or before the order is made as the order has got civil consequences. The order impugned though an administrative order yet affects the civil rights of the petitioner and it has been submitted that the rules of natural justice, or, in other words, the principles of audi alteram partem will apply in this case and the person affected has to be given an opportunity of being heard before the order under S. 3 (1) is made. This being not done the impugned order is liable to be quashed and set aside. To deal with this contention properly it is necessary to set out the relevant provisions of S. 3 of the Land Requisition and Acquisition Act (Act II of 1948):—

"(1) If the State Government is of the opinion that it is necessary so to do for maintaining supplies and services essential to the life of the community or for providing proper facilities for transport, communication, irrigation or drainage, or for the creation of better living condition in rural or urban areas, not being an industrial or other area excluded by the State Government by a notification in this behalf, by the construction or reconstruction of dwelling places for people residing in such areas, the State Government may, by order in writing requisition any land and may make such further order as appear to it to be necessary or expedient in connection with the requisitioning:

Provided that no land used for the purpose of religious worship or used by an educational or charitable institution shall be requisitioned under this section. (1A) A Collector of a district, (an Additional District Magistrate or the First Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta,) when authorised by the State Government in this behalf, may exercise within his jurisdiction the powers conferred by sub-section (1). (2) An order under sub-section (1) shall be served in the prescribed manner on the owner of the land and where the order relates to land in occupation (of an occupier, not being the owner of the land, also on such occupier)."

The above section does not expressly provide for giving any opportunity of hearing before making the order of requisition under S. 3 (1) of Act. It is to be considered whether by implication it can be said that the rules of natural justice, that is, an opportunity of hearing to be given will apply to this case. In the case of Smt. Maneka Gandhi v. Union of India, AIR 1978 SC 597 the question arose whether impounding a passport in the interest of the general public under S. 10 (3) (c) of the Passports Act, 1967, is ultra vires of Art. 21 of the Constitution of India since it provides impounding a passport without any procedure as required by that Article or if there is some procedure prescribed under that Act it is wholly unreasonable and not in compliance with the requirement of that Article. It was held that a law depriving a person of his personal liberty and prescribing a procedure for that purpose within the meaning of Art. 21 has to stand the test of one or more of the fundamental rights conferred by Article 19 as well as Article 14 of the Constitution of India. It has been held in that connection that "natural justice is a great humanising principle intended to invest law with fairness and to secure justice and over the years it has grown into a widely pervasive rule affecting large areas of administrative action. Natural justice is only fair play in action. Fair play in action, demands that before any prejudicial or adverse action is taken against a person, he must be given an opportunity to be heard". It has been further observed by Bhagwati, J. who delivered the judgment of the Supreme Court that "the law must, therefore now be taken to be well settled that even in an administrative proceeding, which involves civil consequences, the doctrine of natural justice must be held to be applicable". In the above case though S. 10 (3) (c) of the Passports Act did not provide for giving any opportunity of hearing yet it was held that the principles of natural justice will apply and before making the order impounding a passport opportunity of hearing has to be given. In the case of Mohinder Singh Gill v. Chief Election Commr., New Delhi, AIR 1978 SC 851 at p. 881 para 75 it has been observed that "Fair hearing is thus a postulate of decision making cancelling a poll although fair abridgement of that process is permissible. It can be fair without the rules of evidence or forms of trial. It cannot be fair if appraising the affected and appraising the representations is absent. The philosophy behind natural justice is, in one sense, participatory justice in the process of democratic rule of law.

We have been told that wherever the Parliament has intended a hearing it has said so in the Act and the rules and inferentially where it has not specified it is otiose. There is no such sequatur. The silence of a statute has no exclusionary effect except where it flows from necessary implication. Article 32 vests a wide power and where some direct consequence on candidates emanates from its exercise we must read this functional obligation.

10. This decision has been referred to and relied upon in a recent pronouncement of the Supreme Court in the case of Swadeshi Cotton Mills v. Union of India (AIR 1981 SC 818 at pp. 831-32) It has been observed—While considering the provisions of S. 18-AA of the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act (65 of 1951) which provides that the Central Government on being satisfied that the persons in charge of the undertaking have brought about a situation likely to cause fall in production by committing any of the three kinds of acts specified in that provision, it may, by order direct the taking over of sick industry, it has been held that though there is no express provision for giving an opportunity of hearing and immediate action is required to be taken by making an order under S. 18-AA of the said Act, yet this does not exclude the application of the rules of natural justice. It has been further observed "In short, the general principle — as distinguished from an absolute rule of uniform application—seems to be that where a statute does not, in terms, exclude this rule of prior hearing but contemplates a post decisional hearing amounting to a full review of the original order on merits, then such a statute would be construed as excluding the audi alteram partem rule at the predecisional stage. Conversely, if the statute conferring the power is silent with regard to the giving of a pre-decisional hearing to the person affected and the administrative decision taken by the authority involves civil consequences of a grave nature, and no full review or appeal on merits against that decision is provided courts will be extremely reluctant to construe such a statute as excluding the duty of affording even a minimal hearing shorn of all its formal trappings and dilatory features at the pre-decisional stage, unless, viewed pragmatically, it would paralyse the administrative process or frustrate the need for utmost promptitude. In short, this rule of fair play "must not be jettisoned save in very exceptional circumstances where compulsive necessity so demands". The court must make every effort to salvage this cardinal rule to the maximum extent possible, with situational modifications. But to recall the words of Bhagwati J. in the case that it must however, remain, namely, that the person affected must have reasonable opportunity of being heard and the hearing must be a genuine hearing and not an empty public relations exercise."

11. In this case also the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act, 1951 does not expressly provide for giving an opportunity for hearing before the making of the order under S. 18-AA of the said Act. Moreover it has been provided that immediate action is necessary to be taken under the said section. In S. 3 (1) of the Requisition & Acquisition Act, of course similar provision has been made. In AIR 1971 SC 961. S. M. Nandy v. State of West Bengal the question that was referred to the Supreme Court under Art. 145 (3) of the Constitution was "Whether the West Bengal Land (Requisition & Acquisition) Act, 1948 is ultra vires the Constitution under Art. 19 (1) (f) read with Art. 19 (5). It has been observed: "It is difficult to hold that restrictions imposed by the impugned Act are unreasonable. Fair compensation has been provided for requisitioning, which is determinable by a Civil Court and ultimately by the High Court or the Supreme Court by regarding necessity for requisitioning it must necessarily be left to the State Government. It is true that there is no express provision to make a representation against an order of requisition but there is no bar to a representation being made after an order is served under S. 3 (2) of the Act. We have no doubt that if the representation raises a point which overrides the public purpose it would be favourably considered by the State Government or other Government authorities as the case may be." This judgment was delivered by a bench of five Judges including Hegde, J. Of course, in this case the question of applicability of the rules of natural justice was not specifically raised nor it was specifically considered. It will not be out of place to mention in this connection that Hegde, J. in the case of A. K. Kraipak v. Union of India (AIR 1970 SC 150) observed (at p. 154). "The dividing line between an administrative power and a quasi-judicial power is quite thin and is being gradually obliterated.....In a welfare State like India it is inevitable that the organ of the State under our Constitution is regulated and controlled by the rule of law. In a welfare State like India it is inevitable that the jurisdiction of the administrative bodies is increasing at a rapid rate. The concept of rule of law would lose its validity if the instrumentalities of the State are not charged with the duty of discharging their functions in a fair and just manner. The requirement of acting is judicially in essence is nothing but a requirement to act justly and fairly and not arbitrarily or capriciously."

The aim of the rules of natural justice is to secure justice or to put it negatively to prevent miscarriage of justice. These rules can operate only in areas not covered by any law validly made. In other words, they do not supplant the law of the land but supplement it."

12. Similar observation has been made by Hegde, J. in the case of Union of India v. J. N. Sinha, AIR 1971 SC 40. It has been observed by Hegde, J. that rules of natural justice are not embodied rules nor can they be elevated to the position of fundamental rights. Their aim is to secure justice or to prevent miscarriage of justice. These rules can operate only in areas not covered by any law validly made. They do not supplant the law but supplement it. If a statutory provision can be read consistently with the principles of natural justice then the court cannot ignore the mandate of the legislature or the statutory authority and read into the concerned provision the principles of natural justice. Following the decision of the Supreme Court in AIR 1971 SC 961 in S. M. Nandy's case it has been held in the case of Sushila Devi Fomra v. State of West Bengal, (1980) 84 Cal WN 661 that the West Bengal Land Requisition and Acquisition Act, 1948 does not contemplate the giving of notice to and hearing the person affected before making an order under S. 3 of the Act. Such a provision is not implicit in the Act. The only remedy available to the aggrieved person is that he is at liberty to make a representation to the authority concerned after the order is served under S. 3 (2). This judgment was delivered by A. N. Sen, C. J. and M. M. Dutt, J. In another Division bench decision reported in (1974) 78 Cal WN 397 Narendra Nath Tripathy v. State of West Bengal, A. C. Gupta, J. as His Lordship then was held that "though the statute does not contain any express provision requiring an opportunity to be given to the owner of the land to make a representation, such a provision should be deemed as implied. If, however, the statute has by necessary implication excluded the application of the principles of natural justice then the authorities would have no power to entertain any representation that may be made after the service of the order of requisition under S. 3 (2) of the Act. Unless of course the observation of the Supreme Court is construed not as an expression of opinion on the applicability of the principles of natural justice requiring the person affected to be given a hearing but as an expression of faith in the reasonableness of the executive Government." It was further held that as observed by the Supreme Court that there was no bar to make a representation after the order under S. 3 (1) of the Act was served on the owner or occupier of the land and as they had not done so they could not now make a grievance. In AIR 1972 SC 2656, Madan Gopal Agarwal v. District Magistrate, Allahabad the point for consideration was whether rules of natural justice is applicable in making an order under S. 3 of U. P. (Temporary) Accommodation Requisition Act, 1947 (25 of 1947) S. 3 of the Act reads:

"If in the opinion of the District Magistrate it is necessary to requisition any accommodation for any public purpose, he may, by order in writing requisition such accommodation and may direct that the possession thereof shall be delivered to him within such period as may be specified in the order provided that the period so specified shall not be less than 15 days from the date of the service of the order;

Provided also that no building or part of a building exclusively used for religious worship shall be requisitioned under this section, Provided further that no accommodation which is in the actual occupation of any person shall be requisitioned unless the District Magistrate is further of the opinion that suitable alternative accommodation exists for his needs or has been provided to him."

It was held that though the section does not contain an express provision for notice and hearing before the making of the requisitioning order, yet such a provision have to be read there by necessary implication. "The object of the provision is to requisition an immovable property. Requisitioning of the property deprives the owners of the property of the right to hold and enjoy the property as he likes. The right to hold and enjoy the property is a cherished right.....We find it difficult to assume that the legislature would have intended to deprive him of his cherished right without notice and hearing."

13. All these decisions cited hereinbefore, of course, present a great riddle and dilemma as to what would be the proper course to be followed. However, in view of the pronouncements of the Supreme Court in AIR 1971 SC 961 as referred to hereinbefore on this particular act which is binding on this Court as the law of the land, I am unable to hold that the impugned order made under S. 3 (1) of the said Act is illegal and bad as the same was not made without observance of the rules of natural justice. The petitioner may make his representation against the impugned order before the respondent No. 3 and if such representation is made the respondent No. 3 will consider and dispose of the same in accordance with law.

14. For the reasons aforesaid the Rule is discharged without any order as to costs. All interim orders are vacated. The two applications for variation of the interim order are also disposed of in terms of the order made hereinbefore.

Order accordingly.

In re: Ram Awatar Agarwal and others.

Application decided on 1-3-1982.

(A) Calcutta Municipal Act (33 of 1951), Ss. 414 (3), 560, 561 — Order of demolition of unauthorised structure can be straightway enforced — Giving of another notice to owner and occupier of premises before enforcement not necessary. (Constitution of India, Art. 226).

An order of demolition of unauthorised structures passed by the Commissioner under S. 414 (3) can be straightway enforced and it is not necessary that before the order is executed a further notice has to be given to the owner and occupier of the premises under Ss. 560 and 561 of the Act, as Ss. 560 and 561 have no application to an order made under S. 414 (3). (Para 11)

The provisions for service of the copy of the demolition order on the owner or the persons who are responsible for making such illegal construction, addition or alteration and also on the occupier of the premises which is proposed to be demolished or portion of which is proposed to be demolished and the remedy by way of appeal under S. 414A are the two remedies available under the Act against an order of demolition under Section 414 (3). Considering these provisions it cannot be said that the person affected was deprived of or was denied any opportunity of hearing. (Para 11)

(B) Calcutta Municipal Act (33 of 1951), Ss. 414 (3) Proviso, 5 (51), 187 — Word 'Occupier' — Connotation of — It only means an occupier at the time when demolition order is passed. (Interpretation of Statutes).

The word occupier as referred to in the proviso to sub-sec. (3) of S. 414 only mean an occupier at the time when the order of demolition is made by the Commissioner and does not include an occupier at the time when actually the order of demolition is going to be enforced or executed. To say that word 'occupier' includes an occupier at the time when the order of demolition is enforced will lead to a very anomalous position and it will on the other hand go to baffle the real purpose with which this provision was brought into the statute book. It would be opposed to well known principle of interpretation that an interpretation of a provision has to be such which leads to harmonious working of the provisions of the Act and which promotes the purposes envisaged in the Act, in other words, the object of the Act and not to frustrate or baffle the same. As such the order of demolition has to be served only on occupiers who occupy the unauthorised premises on the date of the order of demolition. However, mere non-entry of his name by an occupier in the assessment book kept by the Corporation would not disentitle him from being served with the order of demolition by virtue of Section 187 (3). AIR 1944 Cal 159 and AIR 1953 Cal 87, Foll. (Para 11)

Thus, where an order of demolition passed in respect of a building constructed in utter contravention of the provisions of the Act and the Rules was challenged on the ground of non-service of order of demolition on the tenants of the said building, but the tenants put forth nothing to disprove the specific averment made on behalf of the Corporation of Calcutta that all of them came to occupy the premises after the demolition order was made, and knowing fully well the order of demolition, none of the tenants was entitled to be served with the order of demolition. Sankar Das Banerjee, Dipankar Ghosh, Samarjit Gupta and T. K. Sen, for Petitioners.

ORDER:— This application is directed against three demolition orders passed by the Deputy Commissioner, Corporation of Calcutta for demolition of the unauthorised structure i.e. the 14 storied building at 174, Chittaranjan Avenue, Calcutta, on the ground that copies of the order made under S. 414 (3) of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951 were not served on these petitioners who are occupants of all these 13 floors of the aforesaid premises and also that there has been a non-compliance of the provisions of Sections 560 and 561 of the said Act. It has also been challenged that there has been a total violation of the principles of natural justice by refusing to give the petitioners who are seriously prejudiced and affected by the impugned orders of demolition dated 15-5-78 and 21-4-81 by not being given any opportunity of filing any objections against the purported orders and of denying any opportunity of hearing of their objections against those orders. On hearing orally the learned counsel for the petitioners an interim order was made on 17-2-82 to the following effect. The respondents including the Corporation of Calcutta and/or its officers and servants were restrained from taking any step towards demolishing the tenanted portion occupied by the petitioners as well as from disconnecting the water supply in respect of so far as the tenanted portion is concerned at No. 174, Chittaranjan Avenue, Calcutta till 22-2-82 and the petitioners were directed to file the application duly affirmed by Friday, Feb. 19, 1982 on serving a copy of the said application on Mr. Pradip Kumar Ghose, learned Advocate for the Corporation of Calcutta. The application was specially fixed for hearing on 19-2-82 at 2 P.M.

2. Thereafter the petitioners served a copy of the application that has been affirmed by them on the learned Advocate for the respondents. The interim order is continuing.

3. The petitioners who are about 60 in number claimed in this petition that they are occupying all the 13 floors except the first floor which is occupied by the Rajasthan Bank Ltd. as tenants under one Shyam Lal Agarwal who is admittedly the lessee from one Durga Devi Bhakat, the owner of the aforesaid premises. It has been further stated that as regards 10 to 13 floors of the said premises out of these petitioners 17 of them (not specified in the petition) are occupying as tenants in July 1981. It has also been stated that for the first time these petitioners came to know on 16-2-82 from the newspaper report that the building was going to be demolished. They tried to meet the lessee Shyam Lal Agarwal (respondent No. 11) on 16th February, 1982 but could not meet him and on 17th February, 1982 these petitioners however met the respondent No. 11 and they were informed that three purported orders of demolition were passed in gross violation of the principles of natural justice and in gross violation of the statutory provisions and out of these three demolition orders the first one related to demolition of ground floor to 6th floor of the said premises. They were also informed by the respondent No. 11 that the challenge thrown against the first demolition order became unsuccessful up to this Court and as regards the other two demolition orders challenge was made in two appeals being Appeals Nos. 63 and 64 of 1981-82 before the Building Tribunal and stay was obtained which is still in force. In this petition it has also been stated that one of the tenants i.e., petitioner No. 60 instituted a suit being T. S. No. 192 of 1982 in the City Civil Court, Calcutta on 5-2-82 challenging the demolition order and an interim order was obtained on an application under O. 39, R. 1, C.P.C. restraining the Corporation of Calcutta from proceeding with the work of demolition. The said order is in force even now.

4. On these grounds the instant application has been made and it has been submitted therein that the mandatory provision of S. 414 (3) has not been complied with, namely, no copy of the order of demolition passed by the Corporation has been served on any of the petitioners who are occupants of the said premises. It has also been submitted that there has been no non-compliance of the provision of S. 557 of the Calcutta Corporation Act, 1951 and in view of the stay order issued by the Building Tribunal against the demolition orders passed on 21-4-81 in respect of the demolition of 7th to 13th floors of the said premises the Corporation Authorities are acting wholly illegally in their attempt to proceed with the work of demolition of the aforesaid premises.

5. An affidavit in opposition has been affirmed on 25-2-82 by Shri Achinta Kumar Sarkar, Deputy Commissioner, Corporation of Calcutta, on behalf of respondents Nos. 1 to 6. It has been stated in para 4 of the said affidavit that according to the records of the Corporation of Calcutta the said premises is owned by one Smt. Durga Devi Bhakat, the recorded owner in the Assessment Register of the Corporation. She leased out the same to respondent No. 11 Shyam Lal Agarwal who has been recorded as an occupier as Karta of a Hindu undivided family in the Assessment Register maintained in the office of the Corporation of Calcutta. It has also been stated in para 5 of the said affidavit that none of the tenants i.e. the petitioner is recorded as occupier in the Assessment Register. The petitioners also did not apply for having their names recorded as occupiers in the Assessment Register. During the period of construction of the said building from time to time there has been constant posting of guards and/or police pickets and action has been taken by Municipal Officers with the help of police to arrest persons engaged in unauthorised construction and finally there was an order of demolition made on 15-5-78 when the building had been raised up to 6th storey. Any one who took possession of the building as tenant did so with full knowledge that the structure was unauthorised. In para 10 the unauthorised structures that has been made has been given in details and it appears that the entire structure from the ground floor to the 13th floor was constructed without any observance of the provisions of the said Act as well as the schedule 16 and other rules framed under the said Act. It has also been submitted that the drainage connection was obtained unauthorisedly in utter violation of the provisions of Rules 59 and 60 of Schedule 16 of the said Act and the building has been condemned by the Fire Service Advisor to the Government of West Bengal who found it to be patently fire hazard virtually a death trap in the event of a sudden outbreak of fire. A copy of the report of the said Fire Officer was annexed as annexure A to the affidavit in opposition. It has been stated in para 12 (1) that an appeal was preferred to the Building Tribunal by the respondent No. 11 against the first order of demolition dated 15-5-78 and similar appeals were also preferred by the respondent No. 11 against the two subsequent demolition orders both of which had been passed on 21-4-81. The appeal against the first demolition order was dismissed by the Building Tribunal on 29-5-81 against which an application under Article 226 of the Constitution of India was made before this Court and the same was dismissed by P. C. Borooah, J. on 22-7-81. Against the said order an appeal was taken before the Appeal Bench of this Court and the same also was dismissed on 16-11-81. Ultimately a special leave petition was taken before the Supreme Court of India and it was also dismissed on 15-2-82. It has been further stated in para 20 of the affidavit in opposition that the respondents denied that any one is occupying 10 to 13 floors of the said premises. It has also been denied that any of the petitioners was in actual occupation of the said premises either in 1977 or in 1978. The petitioners are put to the strict proof of this allegation. It has been said with all emphasis that none of the said petitioners was in occupation of the said premises either in 1977 or in 1978 and in fact no part of the said building was in habitable condition in the year 1977 or till 29th May, 1978 being the date of service of the order u/s. 414 (3) of the said Act. It has been further stated that the construction of 7th to 10th storeys were made between Sept. 1978 and Nov. 1979 and the construction of 11th to 14th stories were made between Nov. 1979 and Nov. 1980 and as such there could be no question of any one occupying the said building from 7th to 10th stories at the time when the order u/s. 414 (3) was made on 15-5-78.

6. In para 24 of the said affidavit it has been averred that the petitioners have not stated as to exactly when they had been in possession of the said premises. In any event they did so in violation of the provisions of Section 392 of the said Act. It has been further stated that the petitioners took possession long after the passing of the first demolition order which was made on 15-5-78 as at that time operation of the order of demolition remained stayed by the order of the Building Tribunal and no action could be taken to demolish the said structure.

7. An affidavit in reply has been filed affirmed by the petitioner No. 1 Ram Awtar Agarwal. In para 24 of the said affidavit it has been stated that the deponent categorically denied that none of the petitioners was in occupation of the said premises either in 1977 or in 1978 as alleged. It has also been denied that in fact no part of the said building was in habitable condition in the year 1977 or till 29-5-78 being the date of service of the order u/s. 414 (3) of the Act. It has been further stated that as regards construction of ground floor to 6th floor the petitioners have been duly informed by the occupiers of the ground floor and 2nd to 6th floor that the same was ready for occupation as early as in 1977. It has been further stated that as the petitioner No. 1 was interested for occupation either in the 7th or 8th floor immediately after completion of the same he took possession in the 8th floor and he disputed that the construction of 11 to 14 stories were made between November 1979 and November 1980.

8. Mr. Sankardas Banerjee, learned counsel and subsequently Mr. Dipankar Ghose, learned counsel appearing on behalf of the petitioners have submitted firstly by referring to S. 414 (3) of the said Act that the mandatory requirement of service of a copy of the order of demolition passed by the Commissioner, Corporation of Calcutta was not served on the petitioners who are occupiers of the premises. In this connection it has been further submitted that the Act does not envisage that an occupier whose name has been recorded in the Assessment Register kept by the Calcutta Corporation u/s. 187 is only entitled to have this notice by referring to the definition clause of the word 'occupier' in S. 5 (51) of the Calcutta Municipal Act. It has also been submitted in this connection that S. 187 (3) of the said Act even assuming for argument's sake that it applies to the case of an occupier whose name has been entered in the Assessment Book does not cover the case envisaged in S. 414 (3) i.e. it does not cover an order of demolition made under this provision. It has therefore been submitted that S. 414 (3) which is a provision giving a mandate on the Corporation Authorities to serve a copy of the order has to be followed and the Corporation cannot proceed with the work of demolition on the basis of the impugned orders without complying with this imperative provision of S. 414 (3). The second tier of Mr. Ghosh's submission is that since the provision of Section 414 (3) does not lay down any specific time or period when such an order is to be served therefore the order has to be served not on the date of passing of the order of demolition by the Commissioner of Corporation of Calcutta but on the date when the order is going to be executed. Mr. Ghosh further submits in this connection that there must be two opportunities. One when the order is passed and another opportunity when the demolition order is going to be actually executed. In this connection Mr. Ghosh referring to the provision of S. 560 and S. 561 of the said Act submitted with great persuasiveness that they are to be complied with viz. a further notice is to be given by the Corporation Authorities to the occupants even after service of the order u/s. 414 (3) giving them a reasonable period for carrying out the demolition order and if during that period any objection is filed by the occupants that has to be heard and decided and thereafter the order can be executed. It has therefore been submitted that the impugned attempts on the part of the Corporation of Calcutta to proceed with the demolition work on the basis of the demolition orders are not in accordance with law. Mr. Ghosh also cited a large number of decisions on the question that opportunity of hearing has to be given to a person whose rights are seriously affected by the impugned orders of demolition even if there is no specific provision to that effect in the Act itself unless the said opportunity of hearing is expressly excluded by the Act. Mr. Ghosh also submitted that the petitioners are all occupants of the premises in question and though their conduct may be very bad that does not in any way prejudice their rights to get remedy or redress. Lastly Mr. Ghosh contended that since there is an order of stay of operation of the order of demolition dated 21-4-81 and the said order is pending even now this Court will not permit the Corporation of Calcutta to proceed with the demolition work.

9. Mr. Pradip Kumar Ghosh, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the Corporation of Calcutta, has submitted in the first place that the entire building from ground floor to 13th floor was constructed by the lessee Shyamal Agarwal (respondent No. 11) without any compliance with the provisions of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951 as well as Schedule 16 providing for the manner of erecting new buildings and the other rules framed under the Act. It has been further submitted by Mr. Ghosh that all the three demolition orders were duly served on the recorded occupier in the Assessment Register kept by the Corporation of Calcutta i.e. respondent No. 11 and the respondent No. 11 challenged the first demolition order right up to the Supreme Court and became unsuccessful in his challenge. It has been further submitted by Mr. Ghosh that the building could not be occupied unless a certificate is issued u/s. 392 of the said Act and also no water connection could be given unless Rules 59 and 60 of Schedule 16 are complied with. The water connection that was taken wholly illegally and unauthorisedly and as such the same was disconnected against which two of the alleged tenant occupants and respondent No. 11 came up before this Court in an application under Art. 226 of the Constitution and the prayer for stay was not granted but a direction was given for supply of water by tanker lorry on payment of charges. For non payment of those charges the supply had been stopped and the said order had not been challenged before the Appeal Bench of this Court. It has therefore been submitted by Mr. Ghosh that no interim order regarding restoration of supply should be made by this Court as in that case there is a chance of conflicting orders by the Benches of this Court. It has been further submitted by Mr. Ghosh that the building is a condemned building and the first floor tenant Rajasthan Bank Ltd. came to occupy this building sometime in Sept. 1978. Before that no other person came to occupy as tenant of the said building. Mr. Ghosh also submitted that his above submission will be reinforced by the averments made in the petition as well as in the reply to the effect that no date was given as to when exactly each of these petitioners came to occupy the disputed premises. If the petitioners knowing fully well that the premises have been constructed without any compliance of the mandatory provisions of the Act and the rules framed thereunder occupied the premises then by their own conduct they should be deprived of any equitable relief from this Equity Court. Mr. Ghosh also submitted that right flows from the statute and non-observance of the statute in the manner of construction of a building does not entitle the petitioners who claim to be occupants of the building to have any right in respect of their such occupation in respect of the aforesaid premises. The application according to Mr. Ghosh is therefore liable to be dismissed.

10. To decide the important questions that have been raised in this writ application it is imperative to state the background and the circumstances under which the building was constructed and the Corporation Authorities ultimately passed the impugned orders of demolition on 15-5-78 and 21-4-81. The building existing on the premises in question was originally an old building which was five storeyed. It appears that respondent No. 11 after taking lease of the said building from one Smt. Durga Devi Bhakat, the owner of the said premises, submitted one plan for staircase and thereafter he brought a suit being Title Suit No. 1169 of 1977 in the City Civil Court in 1977 and obtaining a stay order the constructions were made without complying with the requirements of the provisions of the Act viz. by applying for sanction as required under the Act and Schedule 16 of the said Act for proceeding with the construction. It also appears that new construction being put up on each storey by demolishing the old structure and the entire building from ground floor to 13th floor has been constructed and there is not a whisper that at any point of time the owner or for that the lessee the respondent No. 11 has ever tried to follow or respect the mandatory provisions of the Act and schedule 16 by submitting a proper plan, getting the same sanctioned and then starting the work of construction. It also appears that from time to time the Corporation posted guards, police pickets and as appears from paragraph 12 of their affidavit in opposition arrests were made of persons engaged in making such illegal construction from time to time. But unfortunately the construction was carried on and all this action could not dissuade the respondent No. 11 Shyamlal Agarwal from going on with his illegal construction of this premises. It also appears that on 11-5-77 notice u/s. 416 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1951 was served on respondent No. 11 by the Commissioner asking him to stop the illegal construction. Again another notice was served on 25-7-77 u/s. 414 but in total defiance and/or contravention of those notices the work was carried on. Ultimately the Corporation was compelled to start demolition proceeding on 13-1-78 and on 15-5-78 the first order of demolition of structure from ground to 6th floor was made by the Deputy Commissioner, Corporation of Calcutta. This notice undoubtedly was served on respondent No. 11 Shyamlal Agarwal and he preferred an appeal u/s. 414A of the said Act before the Building Tribunal. Being unsuccessful he came up before this Court in an application under Article 226 of the Constitution of India and here also the application failed. Then he preferred an appeal and that appeal was also dismissed and ultimately a special leave petition was taken against the order of the appeal court before the Supreme Court of India and there also the leave petition was rejected by the Supreme Court on 15-2-82. In the meantime the respondent No. 11 and two of the tenants came up before this Court against the disconnection of water supply and a prayer for interim order was also made. Certain orders were passed which I have stated earlier by P. C. Borooah, J., whereby direction was given to the Corporation of Calcutta to supply water by water tankers on payment of charges. As the charges were not paid and it appears from the averments that a sum of Rupees 13,000 remaining due to the Corporation of Calcutta on this account water supply by tanker lorries was stopped. In the meantime another chapter began. A title suit has been filed in the City Civil Court, Calcutta by one of the petitioners on 5-2-82 which is before the passing of the order by the Supreme Court on the special leave petition and in that suit an order of stay was obtained as I have stated hereinbefore. This is the short background and chequered career of this case.

11. Now let me consider the legal arguments and/or submissions that have been advanced on behalf of the petitioners. S. 414 provides that the Commissioner if satisfied that the erection of any building has been commenced without obtaining any permission required to be obtained by or under this Act or is being carried on or has been completed otherwise than in accordance with the particulars on which such permission was based he may without prejudice to any action that may be taken under any other provision of this Act, by written notice require the person responsible to demolish such erection, alteration or addition, as the case may be, or to show cause why such erection, alteration or addition should not be demolished or the alteration should not be made. Sub-sec. (2) of the said section also provides that such a notice can be issued by the Commissioner notwithstanding the fact that the valuation of such building has been made under Chapter XI for the assessment of the consolidated rate. Sub-sec. (3) of the said section empowers the Commissioner that if the person responsible fails to demolish such erection, alteration, etc. the Commissioner may order the demolition of erection, alteration, etc. provided that a copy of the order shall be served upon the owner and the occupier thereof and no such action shall be taken until expiry of 30 days from the service of the said order. On a plain reading of this section it is abundantly clear that a duty is cast upon the Commissioner, Corporation of Calcutta, that before passing any order of demolition of any building the Commissioner is to be first satisfied that the work or construction in question has been commenced and/or completed without any permission which is necessary under the provisions of the Act and the construction has been made in utter violation of the terms of the permission granted in a case where such permission has been granted. Secondly, if the Commissioner is so satisfied then he will have to serve notice on the person responsible for doing such work to demolish such erection or alteration or to show cause why such erection or alteration should not be demolished. Thirdly, if the person responsible for such illegal construction or alteration fails to comply with the notice or fails to show cause then the Commissioner will make an order directing the persons responsible for such work to demolish the erection, alteration, etc. and the order has to be served upon the owner and his occupier and 30 days time will have to be given during which no action would be taken. The first argument of Mr. Ghosh, learned counsel for the petitioners, is that this order u/s. 414 (3) has got two parts. The first part contains the service of the order on the owner as well as on the occupier and the second part is after service of the order and objection raised to the said order and even appeal preferred u/s. 414A fails even then the Corporation cannot straightway enforce its order of demolition. Then the execution part begins and the Corporation has to give another notice asking him to show cause, in other words, giving him an opportunity of hearing and giving him some time so that the occupant is not inconvenienced. In this connection Mr. Ghosh has also referred to S. 560 and S. 561 of the said Act and submits that any requisition or order made by the Corporation under this Act or under any rule or bye-law a reasonable period has to be prescribed in the notice for carrying out such requisition or order and if any objection is filed u/s. 561 such objection has to be placed before the Commissioner for determination and pending determination of such objection the carrying out of the requisition or the order has to be stayed. It has been further submitted that sub-sec. (5) of S. 561 cannot be called in aid in support of his argument that in view of the specific provisions made in S. 414 (3) these provisions will not apply. I am unable to accept this construction of S. 414 (3) of the said Act read with Ss. 560 and 561 of the Act. In my opinion S. 414 (3) clearly enjoins that the copy of the order of demolition made by the Commissioner has to be served upon the owner and the occupier thereof and for a period of 30 days no action can be taken in pursuance of the order of demolition. This is the plain and simple meaning of the provisions of S. 414 (3) of the Act. Any owner or occupier on whom such a copy of the order is served has been further provided with a remedy by way of appeal u/s. 414A of the Act. So the Act clearly provides double remedy against an order passed u/s. 414 (3) of the Act and considering these provisions it cannot be said that the person affected was deprived of or, in other words, was denied any opportunity of hearing. Natural justice, as has been rightly submitted by Mr. Pradip Kumar Ghosh, is undoubtedly applicable in all cases where an order quasi-judicial or even administrative affecting rights of a party (sic) cannot be made without giving the party affected a reasonable opportunity of making representation against the order and without giving him a reasonable opportunity of hearing and this is exactly what was in the mind of the framers of this particular statute while making the provisions for service of the copy of the demolition order on the owner or the persons who are responsible for making such illegal construction, addition or alteration and also on the occupier of the premises which is proposed to be demolished or portion of which is proposed to be demolished. Not only that, a remedy by way of appeal u/s. 414A has been provided in the statute. In these circumstances I am unable to hold that before the order is executed a further notice has to be given u/s. 560 and 561 of the Act. Considering the case of this particular matter the order of demolition was served on the respondent No. 11 whose name was recorded as occupier and respondent No. 11 as I have stated hereinbefore challenged the order of demolition passed u/s. 414 (3) from the Building Tribunal up to the Supreme Court of India. Therefore, it cannot be said that these provisions do not provide for giving an opportunity of hearing. The other contention of Mr. Ghosh in regard to this that occupier as referred to in the proviso to sub-sec. (3) of Sec. 414 does not only mean an occupier at the time when the order of demolition was made by the Commissioner but it also includes an occupier at the time when actually the order of demolition is going to be enforced or executed. This, in my opinion, if accepted will lead to a very anomalous position and it will on the other hand go to baffle the real purpose with which this provision was brought into the statute book. Therefore, I am unable to accept this interpretation of Sec. 414 (3) of the said Act. It is well known principle of interpretation that an interpretation of a provision (sic) has to be given which leads to harmonious working of the provisions of the Act and which promotes the purposes envisaged in the Act, in other words, the object of the Act and not to frustrate or baffle the same. Sections 560 and 561 in my opinion apply in regard to other requisition or orders not provided in this Act or the rules specifically. Moreover these sections will apply to requisition or order made under this Act or under any rule or bye-law made thereunder, by written notice issued by a municipal authority or by any municipi-pal officer empowered u/s. 34 in this behalf, etc. Sec. 34 empowers the Commissioner to delegate to any municipal officer or servant any of his powers, duties or functions including those delegated to him u/s. 30 but not those conferred or imposed or vested in him by Sec. 414 (3), etc. So these Sections 560 and 561 have no application to an order made u/s. 414 (3) of the said Act. This will be evident from the provisions of S. 560 (2) and also from Section 561 (5) of the said Act. The other contention which is very material for determination of the question raised in this petition is whether the provision of Sec. 414 (3) has been complied with, in other words, whether copy of the order has been served on the occupants i.e. the petitioners or not. Undoubtedly as I have said already, the provisions of S. 414 (3) cast a duty on the Corporation to serve a copy of the order of demolition not only on the person responsible for making such illegal construction but also on the occupier of the premises and occupier has been defined in S. 5 (51) of the Act as to include not only any person for the time being paying, or liable to pay, to the owner the rent or any portion of the rent of the land or building in respect of which the word is used or for damages on account of the occupation of such land or building and also a rent free tenant. The definition is rather an inclusive definition not an exclusive definition. S. 187 provides for entry of names of occupiers in assessment books kept by the Corporation of Calcutta and sub-sec. (3) of the said section provides the consequences of any occupier having his name not recorded in the assessment register. It has been provided therein specifically that no occupier whose name has not been entered in the assessment book shall be entitled to object that any bill, notice of demand, warrant or other notice of any kind required by the Act to be served on the owner or occupier of any land or building has not been made out in his own name. Mr. Ghosh, learned counsel, has submitted that notice of demand, warrant, bill or other notice does not include an order as envisaged in Section 414 (3) of this Act. In my opinion there is substance in this contention and the decisions that have been placed on this point viz. 48 Cal WN 170: (AIR 1944 Cal 159) and AIR 1953 Cal 87 support the contention of Mr. Ghosh. The next question is whether the petitioners were in actual occupation of the premises at the time when the impugned orders of demolition were made. It appears from the averments made in the writ petition particularly in para 5 of petition and para 24 of the reply sworn by the petitioner No. 1 Ram Awtar Agarwal no date has been given as to when they came to occupy these floors of the disputed premises though the Corporation has categorically denied that any one of these petitioners came to occupy these floors before occupation of the premises as stated on oath by the Rajasthan Bank Ltd. in Sept., 1978. Furthermore, the petitioners have stated that out of them 17 have occupied 10 to 13 floors in July, 1981. It is also evident from annexure 'E' to the writ application made on behalf of Rajasthan Bank Ltd. that a letter was given by the City Architect, Corporation of Calcutta, on 6-7-81 stating therein that the demolition order was made and the same was made finally as the Tribunal dismissed the appeal filed by respondent No. 11 and Title Suit No. 408 of 1979 in the City Civil Court, Calcutta, challenging the said demolition order was also not proceeded with and a copy of the letter which was given to the Income-tax Department who was admittedly occupying 10 to 13 floors was given to them. It has been stated by the learned Advocate for the Corporation of Calcutta, Mr. Pradip Kumar Ghosh, that thereafter the Income-tax Department gave up possession of these four floors and they remained vacant. The petitioners have stated of course that out of them 17 came to occupy these floors in July, 1981. The question is can it be said in these circumstances that they are not aware that the building was illegally constructed and demolition orders were made and several proceedings were also brought by respondent No. 1? Therefore, in these circumstances sitting in an equity court I am unable to hold that these 17 tenants whose names of course have been carefully omitted to be mentioned specifically in the petition as well as in the affidavit-in-reply are entitled to be served with the order of demolition inasmuch as the order of demolition was passed long before their such alleged occupation of this premises viz. one on 15-5-78 and two others on 21-4-81. As regards the other petitioners there is no averment as I have said already specifying when they actually occupied their respective portions. Therefore, there is nothing to disprove the specific averment made on behalf of the Corporation of Calcutta that all these other petitioners came to occupy this premises knowing fully well the order of demolition and after the demolition order was made. Moreover, another thing which very much weighed with this Equity Court is if the respondent No. 11 constructs this tall building without any respect for the statutory provisions and without carrying the notice issued u/s. 416 of the Act and the steps taken by the Corporation for posting police pickets, guards from time to time stopping this illegal construction and sometimes arresting persons engaged in such illegal construction and thereafter all attempts being baffled when the building was thus wholly illegally constructed in utter contravention of the provisions of the statute and the rules framed thereunder the Corporation was compelled to make the order of demolition u/s. 414 (3) and serving the order duly on the respondent No. 11 who is in occupation according to the records of the Corporation and who fought for several years since 1978 till Feb. 15, 1982 can it be believed or can a reasonable person believe that these occupants knew nothing about this more so when two of the tenants already agitated against the disconnection of water supply and one tenant has already filed a title suit in the City Civil Court, Calcutta that they were not aware of and that they only became aware of that on 15-2-82 from the newspaper report. As an Equity Court this court cannot lose sight of the background, the facts and circumstances of this particular case to permit an illegal act to continue and this is certainly not in the interest of justice, fair play and equity.

12. Therefore, considering the facts and circumstances of the case and the conduct of the petitioners who claim to be occupants as an Equity Court I am not at all willing to interfere in this matter and to exercise my jurisdiction. This application is, therefore, summarily dismissed.

13. All interim orders are hereby vacated.

14. The application for Rajasthan Bank Ltd. is also rejected.

15. The prayer for stay of operation of this order is refused.

Application dismissed.

Biswanath Charit, Petitioner v. Damodar Patra and others, Opposite Parties.

Letters Patent Appeal No. 8 of 1974, D/- 3-2-1982.*

(A) Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act (32 of 1956), S. 8 — Powers of natural guardian under — Contract to sell suit property to "A" by mother of minors for legal necessity — No previous permission of Court sought — Contract is in contravention of S. 8 (2) and so not enforceable. (T. P. Act (1882), S. 53A). ILR (1972) 2 Cal 347 reversed on principle.

Defendant No. 1, the mother and as such natural guardian of minor defendants entered into an agreement with plaintiff "A" for self and on behalf of minors to sell the suit property for consideration by accepting an advance to meet certain antecedent debts during illness of her deceased husband and executed registered a Bainapatra stipulating that the mother having herself appointed the certificated guardian of minors would execute the deed of sale within six months and the plaintiff "A" was put into possession of suit property under a Kabuliat. But subsequently the minor defendants and the mother suffered a collusive compromise solenamah decree purporting to surrender possession of the suit land in favour of "B" and refused to execute the sale deed. Suit for specific performance of contract was filed by "A".

Held, that the contract between "A" and mother of minors on their behalf was not enforceable in law though it was competent for the mother to enter into and execute an agreement for sale for the benefit of the minors. (Para 9)

Such an agreement would not be void altogether but only voidable at the instance of the minor if it could be shown to be not for his benefit. But the mere fact that the agreement was not void would not by itself render it straightway specifically enforceable at the instance of the purchaser "A" by the natural guardian. It could have been so enforceable if, as the law stood before the natural guardian mother herself could have fulfilled the contract by executing the conveyance. But that power had since been made subject to the previous permission of the court. Complying with a decree for specific performance as made in the present case would constitute contravention on the part of the natural guardian of sub-section (2) of S. 8 of the Act and it is settled principle that no court should compel a person to contravene the law.

(Para 9)

The legal position is that such an agreement is enforceable but only upon a previous permission being obtained from the court. Where the natural guardian in exercise of his powers under subsec. (1) of S. 8 of the said Act enters into such an agreement for the benefit of the minor he by necessary implication enjoins himself to take the necessary permission from the court and then execute the conveyance which would not contravene in any manner sub-sec. (2) thereof. ILR 1972 (2) Cal 347 reversed on principle.

(Para 9)

(B) Letters Patent (Cal.), Cl. 15 — Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act (1956), S. 8 — Mother of minors, natural guardian agreeing to sell property to "A" for legal necessity without prior permission of Court — Subsequent compromise to transfer the property in favour of "B" to defeat the agreement with "A" — "B" obtaining decree on basis of that compromise — Compromise found to be collusive — "B" has no locus standi to challenge decree in favour of "A" though it was voidable at the instance of minors.

Bankim Banerjee and Pradipta Roy, for Petitioner; Robindra Nath Mitra and B. K. Pal, for Opposite Parties.

ANIL K. SEN, J:— This is an appeal under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent directed against a judgment and decree dated July, 13, 1971, passed by a learned single judge of this Court in an appeal from appellate decree No. 38 of 1964.* Defendant No. 8 is the appellant before us who lost throughout.

2. This appeal arises out of a suit for specific performance of a contract and injunction. The plaintiff/respondent instituted the suit on the allegation that defendant No. 1, the mother and as such natural guardian of minor defendant Nos. 2 to 7 entered into an agreement with the plaintiff for self and on behalf of the minors to sell the suit property for a consideration of Rs. 1,275/- by accepting an advance of Rs. 500/- to meet certain antecedent debts during the last illness of her deceased husband, the father of defendant Nos. 2 to 7 and executed and registered a Bainapatra on Dec. 12, 1960; it was stipulated in the agreement that defendant No. 1 having herself appointed the certificated guardian of the minors would execute the deed of sale within six months; that simultaneously the plaintiff was put into possession of the suit land on settlement under a Kabuliat dated 1st Pous 1367 B. S.; but it subsequently appeared that defendant Nos. 1 to 7 suffered a collusive compromise decree in Title Suit No. 578 of 1960 purporting to surrender possession of the suit land in favour of defendant No. 8 for defeating the plaintiff's right; that the defendants Nos. 1 to 7 thus not only refused to execute the sale deed but defendant No. 8 threatened to disturb plaintiff's possession of the suit land. Hence the plaintiff sued for specific performance of the contract for sale and for injunction restraining the defendant No. 8 from interfering with his possession of the suit property.

3. The defendant Nos. 1 to 7 filed a written statement denying the agreement but did not appear further to contest.

4. The suit was contested by defendant No. 8 who not only denied the agreement but further pleaded that such an agreement being contingent upon permission of the court and being otherwise invalid and void is not enforceable. He further claimed that in any event such an agreement is not enforceable against him.

5. The two courts on evidence concurrently found that defendants Nos. 1 to 7 did execute and register the agreement for sale which was for legal necessity and for the benefit of the minors and that the plaintiff was put into possession of the suit property on the basis of a settlement. Both the courts overruled the plea that the defendant No. 8 is a bona fide transferee for consideration without notice. The trial Court found the solemn decree which was entered into a few days after the plaintiff's agreement to be collusive. So far as the contract is concerned, the two courts held that it was competent for the natural guardian mother to enter into such contract made for the benefit of the minors and though it may be voidable at the instance of the minors, it is not otherwise void or invalid and is specifically enforceable when the minors are not coming forward to avoid it. It was so held on the authority of the decision of Privy Council in the case of Subrahmanyam v. Subba Rao, AIR 1948 PC 95.

6. Defendant No. 8 preferred the above second appeal and other points being concluded by the concurrent findings of the two courts below, the only point that was urged before the learned single Judge was that the law relating to the powers of a natural guardian under Hindu law having been changed on enactment of the Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956, the decision of the Privy Council relied on by the courts below can no longer apply and such a contract cannot be specifically enforced. It was further contended that on a proper construction of the agreement it should have been held to be contingent and as such not enforceable.

7. Both the points thus raised were overruled by the learned single Judge. On the first point the learned Judge held that by virtue of powers conferred by sub-section (1) of S. 8 of the Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956, it was competent for the natural guardian to enter into an agreement on behalf of the minors and for their benefit as done in the present case though subject to sub-section (3) thereof which entitles the minors to avoid the same if it is not for their benefit and as such is in contravention of sub-section (1). Hence it was held that the contract is valid and as such specifically enforceable. On the second point, the learned Judge upon construction of the agreement held in agreement with the courts below that the agreement to sell was not contingent upon permission being obtained from court it merely provided how the conveyance was to be executed by the guardian of the minors. The concurrent decree passed by the two courts below was thus affirmed and the second appeal was dismissed by the learned single Judge. Feeling aggrieved the defendant No. 8 has preferred this appeal after having obtained leave under Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent from the learned single Judge.

8. Mr. Banerjee appearing in support of this appeal has fairly conceded that on the terms of the agreement he cannot dispute the finding of the learned single Judge that the agreement in question cannot be said to be a contingent one. Mr. Banerjee has, however, strongly contended that the learned single Judge had failed to take note of the fact that Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956, having introduced material change by way of restricting the powers of the natural guardian to effect any mortgage or charge or transfer by sale, gift, exchange or otherwise the immovable property of the minor, no court could specifically enforce an agreement for sale said to have been executed by the natural guardian for and on behalf of the minor. Such a decree, according to Mr. Banerjee, would constitute contravention of S. 8 (2) of the said Act. Mr. Mitter appearing on behalf of the respondent has strongly contested the point thus raised by Mr. Banerjee and he has further contended that in any event the defendant No. 8 is not entitled to challenge the decree in view of the finding of the courts below that the solemnised decree in his favour was a collusive one.

9. The point raised by Mr. Banerjee appears to us to be of some importance. It must be remembered that the decision of the Privy Council in the case of Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakhruddin, (1912) 39 Ind App 1 stands revised to a great extent by the view expressed by the Privy Council in the later decision in the case of Subrahmanyam v. Subba Rao, 75 Ind App 115: (AIR 1948 PC 95) where the Privy Council approved the following principle enunciated by Pollock and Mulla, namely, "It is, however, different with regard to contracts entered into on behalf of a minor by his guardian or by a manager of his estate. In such a case it has been held by the High Courts of India, in cases which arose subsequent to the governing decision of the Privy Council that the contract can be specifically enforced by or against the minor, if the contract is one which is within the competence of the guardian to enter into on his behalf so as to bind him by it, and, further if it is for the benefit of the minor. But if either of these two conditions is wanting the contract cannot be specifically enforced at all." One must, however, remember that such was the principle enunciated and approved by the Privy Council at a time when under the Hindu Law the natural guardian of a Hindu minor had power in the management of his estate to mortgage or sell any part thereof in case of necessity or for the benefit of the estate. At that time, the limitations enacted in S. 29 of the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, were applicable to a guardian appointed or declared by the court and not to a natural guardian. But there has been a material change in the law in this regard introduced by the Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956. Sec. 8 of the said Act has rendered the powers of the natural guardian substantially the same and subject to the same limitations as are imposed on the powers of a guardian declared or appointed by a court under the Guardians and Wards Act. Sub-sec. (2) has taken away the independent power of alienation originally possessed by the natural guardian under the Hindu Law and forbids mortgage or charge or transfer by sale, gift, exchange or otherwise or even lease for a term exceeding 5 years or for a term extending one year beyond the date on which the minor will attain majority, any part of the immovable property of the minor except with the previous permission of the court. Reflex of such a change on a claim of specific performance of a contract for any transfer coming within that sub-section appears not to have been considered by the courts below. We feel no hesitation in agreeing with and accepting the view that it was competent for the natural guardian to enter into and execute an agreement for sale as in the present case for the benefit of the minors and such an agreement will not be void altogether but only voidable at the instance of the minor if it can be shown to be not for his benefit. But in our view the mere fact that the agreement is not void would not by itself render it straightway specifically enforceable at the instance of the purchaser by the natural guardian. It could have been so enforceable if, as the law stood before, the natural guardian himself could have fulfilled the contract by executing the conveyance. But that power has since been made subject to the previous permission of the court. Complying with a decree for specific performance as made in the present case would constitute contravention on the part of the natural guardian of sub-section (2) of S. 8 of the Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, and it is settled principle that no court should compel a person to contravene the law. The matter can be looked at from another angle, namely, that even where the court grants such a decree and the natural guardian executes the conveyance in terms of that decree, that transfer can be set at naught at the instance of the minor merely on the ground that such transfer is in contravention of sub-section (2). No court is expected to pass such an infructuous decree. But the question still remains what would happen to such an agreement, particularly when as has been found in the present case the agreement is within the competence of the natural guardian and is for the benefit of the minor. Would it remain an agreement not enforceable in law? In our view the legal position is that such an agreement is enforceable but only upon a previous permission being obtained from the court. Where the natural guardian in exercise of his powers under sub-section (1) of S. 8 of the said Act enters into such an agreement for the benefit of the minor he by necessary implication enjoins himself to take the necessary permission from the court and then execute the conveyance which would not contravene in any manner sub-section (2) thereof. The decree in such a case, therefore, should be in terms similar to the one as the Supreme Court indicated in the case of Messrs. Chandnee Widyavati Madden v. Dr. C. L. Katial, AIR 1964 SC 978. The decree must direct the natural guardian to seek the necessary permission from the court as contemplated by sub-section (6) of S. 8 and such permission being obtained to effect the conveyance.

10. Though such is the legal position and though the decree as drawn up is not strictly in the said terms when the court directed straightway the defendants Nos. 1 to 7 to execute and register in favour of the plaintiff the deed conveying the suit property yet we are not inclined to interfere with such a decree due to intervening circumstances. More than 21 years have passed since the agreement for sale was entered into. The minors have all ceased to be minors and though more than 3 years have lapsed since their attainment of majority they have not avoided the contract. As a matter of fact they are themselves parties to this suit and they have not contested. In such a situation it will be futile on our part now to modify the decree and direct the natural guardian to seek for necessary permission of the court under sub-section (2) of S. 8 of the Hindu Minority and Guardianship Act, 1956. We also find great substance in the objection raised by Mr. Mitter, namely, upon the findings of the two courts of fact, the defendant No. 8 has no locus standi to challenge the decree since the decree he obtained on compromise from the other defendants had been adjudged to be collusive.

11. In the result, we dismiss this appeal without, however, any order for costs.

B. C. CHAKRABARTI, J.:— I agree.

Appeal dismissed.

(A) West Bengal Taxation Laws (2nd Amendment) Act (20 of 1977), Pre. — West Bengal Urban Land Taxation Act (8 of 1976), S. 4 — Buildings within any category of urban agglomeration of W.B. — Imposition of uniform tax — Amendment Act of 1977 is unconstitutional (Constitution of India, Arts. 14, 285 — Urban Land Ceiling and Regulation Act (1976), Sch. I, Entry 15).

West Bengal Urban Land Taxation Laws (2nd Amendment) Act, 1977 in so far as it amends West Bengal Urban Land Taxation Act, 1976 is unconstitutional and void. Under the Act tax at uniform rate has been sought to be enforced for all buildings situated within any category of urban agglomeration in West Bengal without considering the year of construction, the yield, the capacity to yield income, the use and potentiality of the building, and other circumstances which may appropriately be taken into consideration. (Para 2)

In Sch. I of the Urban Land (Ceiling and Regulation) Act, 1976 various urban agglomerations in different States of India have been mentioned. Entry No. 15 of the said Sch. I enumerates the three urban agglomerations in the State of West Bengal and different areas have been brought within the urban agglomeration and both municipal, non-municipal areas have been included within such urban agglomeration. Many of the areas included in the urban agglomeration in West Bengal are comparatively small places and not developed towns and cities. They are also not equally important from the standpoint of trading and/or commercial activities. The said areas are also not industrial towns. It is quite evident that the potentiality to earn rent from the buildings situated in various units of the urban agglomeration in West Bengal as referred to in the Entry No. 15 of Schedule I, is not the same. In the circumstances, the imposition of tax on building situated within the said urban agglomeration under 1977 Act cannot be held to be reasonable, (Para 2)

(B) West Bengal Taxation Laws (2nd Amendment) Act (20 of 1977), Pre. — Constitutionality of Act — Act not imposing unreasonable restriction to hold building within urban agglomeration — It cannot, therefore, be said to be violative of Art. 19 of the Constitution. ORDER:— In the instant Rule the petitioners have asked for appropriate writs commanding the respondents not to give any effect to the West Bengal Taxation Laws (2nd Amendment) Act, 1977, in so far as the same amends the former Act in the matter of payment of land tax or urban land tax by the petitioners in respect of the properties as set out in the writ petition. The petitioners contend that the provisions of the said West Bengal Taxation Laws (2nd Amendment) Act, 1977 is ultra vires Arts. 14 and 19 of the Constitution. The petitioners contend that the West Bengal Urban Land Taxation Act, 1976 and the West Bengal Taxation Laws (2nd Amendment) Act, 1977 in so far as the latter Act amends the former Act and in particular S. 4 thereof makes hostile discrimination offend Article 14 of the Constitution, inasmuch as the tax sought to be imposed by way of amendment is arbitrary and exorbitant without making any provision for passing any liability to or sharing of the same by the tenants. The said Acts, according to the petitioners, will ultimately deprive the petitioners of their capacity to hold and earn profits and income from the property. It is contended by the petitioners that the Act imposes tax not only on the building but on the area of the land occupied by such building and the land appurtenant to such building.

There is no attempt at classification in the provisions of the Act and such lack of classification has created a gross inequality and the Act is also discriminatory in nature and such discrimination is also hostile. The petitioners further contend that the provisions of the Act bear no reasonable nexus with the object the Act seeks to achieve and the levy of urban tax ought to have been based upon some real and substantial distinction bearing a reasonable and just relation to the object sought to be attained. The petitioners contend that for determining the quantum of tax, a flat rate is sought to be imposed and the sole test for such imposition of tax is the area of land occupied by any building and the land appurtenant to such building. The Act has been made applicable in the entire State of West Bengal and whether the building is situated in a large industrial town or in any insignificant village but falling within the same category of urban agglomeration, the tax is sought to be determined by the land occupied by the building and the land appurtenant to such building. It does not depend upon the nature of the structure, the town and locality in which the building is situated, the economic rent which may be obtained from the building, the cost of the building and other related circumstances which may appropriately be taken into consideration in any rational system of taxation of buildings. The buildings which are dissimilarly situated and are unequal have been treated on equal basis. According to the petitioners there is total lack of classification when such classification was necessary, expedient and reasonable in the facts and circumstances of the case. The petitioners contend that although it is a common knowledge that old buildings and buildings situate in a less important place do not fetch as much profit or rent as new buildings or buildings situate in a more important place of business fetch. By the impugned provisions, a flat rate is sought to be imposed for all buildings situated within any category of urban agglomeration irrespective of their date of construction and irrespective of the situation of such agglomeration from the commercial point of view. In support of the said contentions, Mr. Gupta, the learned counsel appearing for the petitioners has relied on a decision of this court made in the case of State Bank of India v. State of West Bengal reported in 1979 (1) Cal LJ 363; (1979 Tax LR NOC 133 (Cal)). In the said decision, the vires of the West Bengal Multi-storeyed Building Tax Act, 1975 was under challenge. In the said case, the vires of the said Act on the ground of Art. 14 was also agitated. It has been held by this Court in the aforesaid decision that the West Bengal Multi-storeyed Buildings Tax Act is a tax on multi-storeyed building in West Bengal and the Act is not a legislation to control multi-storeyed building or anything like that. It has also been held that if the tax in question ignores the vital factors which are germane for imposition of tax on buildings and lands, then the Act in question will suffer from the vice of inequality. Under Ss. 2 (b) and 2 (c) read with S. 3 of the said Multi-storeyed Buildings Tax Act, all multi-storeyed buildings i.e. building on any land in an urban area consisting of five storeys and above have been subjected to the levy of tax at uniform rate without taking into consideration the area where the multi-storeyed building has been constructed, the year of construction, the yield and capacity to yield income, their use and potentiality. To treat all the multi-storeyed buildings of five storeys alike would be to treat unequals in their essential features as equals in the burden of taxation. The act is, therefore, ultra vires, void and unenforceable. Mr. Gupta contends that for the selfsame reasons, the West Bengal Taxation Laws (2nd Amendment) Act, 1977 in so far as it amends the former Act is also unconstitutional and the same offends Art. 14 of the Constitution. Mr. Gupta submits that 'Tax at uniform rate has been sought to be enforced without considering the year of construction, the yield, the capacity to yield income, the use and potentiality of the building.'

2. Mr. Mondal, the learned counsel appearing for the State, however, submits that the provisions of both the Acts are not similar and as such the decision made in the case of State Bank of India v. State of West Bengal is not applicable to the facts and circumstance of the case. Mr. Mondal submits that the tax has been sought to be imposed at flat rate only within the urban agglomeration and not on other buildings. He submits that buildings situated at urban agglomeration have some distinctive features and as such tax has been sought to be imposed at flat rate on such buildings. It is, therefore, not correct to contend that unequals have been treated as equals. I am, however, unable to accept the said contention of Mr. Mondal. "In Sch. I of the Urban Land (Ceiling and Regulation) Act, 1976 various urban agglomerations in different States of India have been mentioned. Entry No. 15 of the said Sch. I enumerates the three urban agglomerations in the State of West Bengal and different areas have been brought within the urban agglomeration and both municipal, non-municipal areas have been included within such urban agglomeration. Many of the areas included in the urban agglomeration in West Bengal are comparatively small places and not developed towns and cities. They are also not equally important from the standpoint of trading and/or commercial activities. The said areas also are not industrial towns. It is quite evident that the potentiality to earn rent from the buildings situated in various units of the urban agglomeration in West Bengal as referred to in the Entry No. 15 of Sch. I, is not the same. In the circumstances, the imposition of tax on building situated within the said urban agglomeration cannot be held to be reasonable." By no stretch of imagination, the potentiality to fetch rent of a building within the limits of the Calcutta Corporation will be the same as of a similar building situated in Banupur or Panpur, or Narayanpur or Deulpara etc. etc. although all the said places find place in Entry No. 15 of Sch. I comprising the urban agglomeration in the State of West Bengal. It does not however appear that the Act has imposed any unreasonable restriction to hold the building within the urban agglomeration and it cannot, therefore, be said that the Act is violative of Art. 19 of the Constitution. The Rule, therefore, succeeds and is made absolute upon a declaration that the "West Bengal Urban Land Taxation Laws (2nd Amendment) Act, 1977 in so far as it amends West Bengal Urban Land Taxation Act, 1976 is unconstitutional and void."

3. There will be no order as to costs in this Rule.

4. The petitioners will be entitled to withdraw the sum deposited by them in terms of the interim order passed by this Court on 20th March, 1978.

5. Let the operation of the judgment be stayed for a period of four weeks from date as prayed for by Mr. Mondal appearing for the State-respondents.

Order accordingly.

Where on a suit for ejectment and arrears of rent being filed on 11-12-1975 against a tenant who was a monthly tenant according to Bengali calendar on ground that he did not pay rent from Baishakh 1380 B.S. and the rent from Baishakh 1380 B.S. to Jaishtha 1382 B.S. fell in arrears the tenant filed an application on 9-2-1976 under S. 17 (1) for permission to deposit the rent of Poush 1382 B.S. with interest and another application under S. 17 (2) for determination of arrears of rent and invited the attention of the Court to treat the deposits made with the Rent Controller as rents of the suit premises from Baishakh 1380 B.S. to Agrahayan 1382 B.S. as rents already paid. As the tenant invited the Court to treat the rent deposited with the Rent Controller as valid deposits, it would be necessary for the Court to determine whether or not the said deposit of rent with the Rent Controller was valid. The determination of this question is connected with the determination of the rent payable by the tenant.

When the defendant had deposited the admitted arrear and along with it he had filed an application under S. 17 (2), in dealing with the application it would be necessary to determine whether the deposits made with the Rent Controller are valid deposits or not. ORDER:— This application is at the instance of the defendant Vikam Chand Kothari challenging the order dated Dec.

14, 1978 by which the learned Munsif, First Court, Krishnagar, rejected the defendant's application under S. 17 (2) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act. The plaintiff-opposite party Upendra Nath Sarkar instituted Title Suit No. 363 of 1975 on Dec. 11, 1975 in the First Court of Munsif, Krishnagar against the petitioner for ejectment and arrears of rent. The plaintiff's case was that the defendant was a monthly tenant under the plaintiff on a monthly rental of Rs. 57/- according to Bengali calendar. The defendant did not pay rent from Baishakh 1380 B.S. and the rent from Baishakh 1380 B.S. to Jaishtha 1382 B.S. fell in arrears. The plaintiff also required the suit premises for his own occupation. The defendant appeared on Feb. 9, 1976 and filed two applications on that day, one under S. 17 (1) of the Premises Tenancy Act, praying for permission to deposit the rent of Poush 1382 B.S. with interest and the other under S. 17 (2) for determination of the defendant's arrears of rent.

2. The learned Munsif dismissed the application under S. 17 (2) holding that the application was a misconceived one and it was not maintainable.

3. The defendant has challenged the said decision of the learned Munsif in the present proceeding before this Court. The learned Advocate for the petitioner has argued that the learned Munsif has failed to exercise his jurisdiction as he did not state the ground on which he held the application to be a misconceived one. There was thus failure to exercise jurisdiction. The learned Munsif raised the question whether the rents deposited by the defendant with the Rent Controller were valid deposits but he did not come to any finding regarding the same. The impugned order is not sustainable in law and the same should be set aside and the learned Munsif should be directed to dispose of the defendant's application in accordance with law.

4. The learned Advocate for the plaintiff-opposite party has contended that according to the defendant there was no dispute regarding the rate of rent and there were no arrears. In the circumstances, the defendant could not file an application under S. 17 (2) of the Premises Tenancy Act. It has been argued that there must be a bona fide dispute and in the absence of any such dispute the defendant had no right to file an application under S. 17 (2) of the Premises Tenancy Act. The learned Advocate for the opposite party has contended that if the defendant has deposited the rent in time he will get the benefit and the same will be determined at the time of trial.

5. On Feb. 9, 1976 the defendant filed an application under S. 17 (1) of the Premises Tenancy Act for permission to deposit the rent for Poush 1382 B. S. with interest. On the same date, the defendant filed an application for determination of the defendant's dues under S. 17 (2) and for deposit of rent under S. 17 (1) of the Premises Tenancy Act. In this application the defendant stated that he had deposited with the Rent Controller all rents up to Agrahayan 1382 B. S. and there was no arrear of rent outstanding except that of Poush 1382 B. S. for the deposit of which the defendant had applied. The defendant further stated that the Court might determine the defendant's arrears of rent after treating the deposits made with the Rent Controller as rent of the suit premises for the period from Baishakh 1380 B. S. to Agrahayan 1382 B. S. as rents already paid and permit the defendant to deposit Rs. 57/- towards rent of 1382 B. S. with interest. The learned Munsif has rejected the application under S. 17 (2) on the ground that it is a misconceived one and not maintainable.

6. The learned Advocate for the petitioner contends that there was a question whether the deposit of rent with the Rent Controller was valid or not and as such the learned Munsif should have determined what amount was payable by the defendant. The learned Advocate for the plaintiff contends that the application must be a bona fide one as laid down in the decision reported in (1958) 62 Cal WN 830. In the instant case, there is no dispute regarding the rate of rent. The defendant stated that he was not a defaulter and he had already deposited the rent with the Rent Controller up to the period of Agrahayan 1382 B. S. The only prayer of the defendant was to permit him to deposit the rent for Poush 1382 B. S. with statutory interest.

7. The question is whether the defendant raised any dispute as to the amount of rent payable by the application under S. 17 (2). In the case of Hindusthan Industrial Company v. Chandiprasad More, ((1975) 79 Cal WN 1017) it has been held that an application under S. 17 (2) of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act must have three elements : (a) There must be a dispute raised as to the amount of rent payable; (b) the tenant must make deposits of all admitted arrears of rent within the statutory period; (c) the said deposits, if any, must be made along with an application praying for determination of the amount of rent payable. The defendant, in the instant case, has invited the attention of the Court to treat the deposits made with the Rent Controller as rents of the suit premises from Baishakh 1380 B. S. to Agrahayan 1382 B. S. as rents already paid. The point thus arises whether this application of the defendant should be considered to be an application under S. 17 (2). Section 22 of the Premises Tenancy Act deals with the question under what conditions rents deposited under S. 21 should be considered to have been validly deposited under that Section for purposes of clause (i) of sub-sec. (1) of S. 13. Section 22 (3) lays down that if the rent is deposited within the time mentioned in sub-sec. (1), and does not cease to be a valid deposit for the reason mentioned in sub-sec. (2), the deposit shall constitute payment of rent to the landlord as if the amount deposited has been valid legal tender of rent if tendered to the landlord on the date fixed by the contract for payment of rent when there is such a contract, or, in the absence of any contract on the 15th day of the month next following that for which rent is payable. In the case of Hindusthan Industrial Co. (supra) it has been held that in order to get the protection under S. 17 in its main part it is necessary for a tenant to re-deposit the rent so invalidly deposited with the Rent Controller or at least raise a dispute and have an adjudication under S. 17 (2) thereof.

8. It thus appears that as the tenant invited the Court to treat the rent deposited with the Rent Controller as valid deposits, it was necessary for the Court to determine whether the said deposit of rent with the Rent Controller was valid. The determination of this question is connected with the determination of the rent payable by the tenant. According to S. 17 (3), if the tenant fails to deposit or pay any amount referred to in sub-section (1) or sub-sec. (2) or sub-sec. (2A) within time, the tenant's defence against delivery of possession is liable to be struck out. So also, in order to get the benefit under S. 17 (4), the question of making deposit or payment as required by sub-sec. (1), sub-sec. (2) or sub-section (2A) will arise. The defendant has deposited the admitted arrear and along with it he has filed an application under

S. 17 (2). In dealing with this application it would be necessary to determine whether the deposits made with the Rent Controller are valid deposits or not.

9. In the result, the Rule succeeds and it is made absolute. The impugned order is set aside. The learned Munsif will dispose of the defendant's application under S. 17 (2) of the Premises Tenancy Act in accordance with law. There will be no order as to costs.

Order accordingly.

Civil P. C. (5 of 1908), O. 39, Rr. 1 and 2 and S. 115 — Suit for declaration that order of suspension of plaintiff was illegal and for permanent injunction — Plaintiff is entitled to temporary injunction if he makes out good case for going to trial — Refusal by Courts below without considering whether plaintiff had good prima facie case — High Court will interfere in revision.

In a suit for declaration that the order of suspension of the plaintiff by the authorities was illegal and for permanent injunction restraining the authorities from proceeding further with the order of suspension, the plaintiff would be entitled to temporary injunction for maintaining status quo till the disposal of the suit if he establishes that he has a good case for going to trial and the suit itself would become infructuous if temporary injunction as prayed for is refused. Refusal by the Courts below to grant temporary injunction without looking into the prima facie case of the plaintiff whether there were good grounds to challenge the legality or otherwise of the order of suspension constitutes material irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction justifying interference by the High Court in revision under S. 115. Bholanath Sen, Nitish Bhowmick, Mirza Md. Faruque, for Petitioner; Tapash Chandra Roy, Sunit Kr. Panja, for Administrator and the School; Arun Prokash Sircar and Pulak Ranjan Mondal, for the Board.

ORDER :— This application for revision arises out of an order passed by Sri B. K. Dutta, Additional District Judge, 8th Court, Alipore, affirming the order dated 25th Sept. 1980 passed by the Munsif, 5th Court, Alipore, whereby the plaintiff's application for temporary injunction was rejected.

2. The petitioner as plaintiff commenced a suit being title suit No. 408 of 1980 in the court of Munsif 5th Court at Alipore for a declaration that the appointment of Mr. B. K. Biswas O. P. No. 1 dated 16-5-1980 by the President, West Bengal Board of Secondary Education as Administrator was illegal and void and for a further declaration that the order of suspension of the plaintiff petitioner issued by O. P. No. 1 on 11-8-1980 was also void and illegal. There was also a prayer for permanent injunction restraining the O. Ps. from proceeding further with the order of suspension dated 11-8-1980 and from interfering in any way with the function of the petitioner as the Headmaster of the said school.

3. In the same line there was an application for temporary injunction under Order 39, Rr. 1 and 2 of the Civil Procedure Code read with S. 151 of the Code. It was stated in the plaint that Barisha Vivekananda High School was upgraded and recognised by the Board on 1st of January, 1968. The petitioner is said to be the founder and approved Headmaster of the School. On the complaint made by the rival party enquiries were made into such complaint many a time during 1977-78. On 14-5-1979 the Managing Committee was superseded and one Sri P. K. Chatterjee was appointed Administrator by the Board. The present petitioner was charge-sheeted by him on 21-3-1980 and 26-3-1980. But both the charges were ultimately dropped.

4. On transfer of Sri P. K. Chatterjee, Sri B. K. Biswas, O. P. No. 1 was appointed as Administrator on 13-5-1980. But he took over charge from Sri P. K. Chatterjee on 25-7-1980. Mr. Biswas also issued charge-sheet on 11-8-1980 against the petitioner which is said to be a verbatim reproduction of the previous charge-sheet issued by the Administrator on 4-2-1980.

5. Along with the order of charge-sheet the Administrator issued an order of suspension with immediate effect. This very order of suspension has been challenged to be illegal and invalid.

6. Learned Munsif on hearing both sides and on consideration of the affidavits sworn by the parties was pleased to reject the petitioner's application for temporary injunction and vacated the ad interim order of injunction granted earlier on 25-9-1980. The petitioner thereafter came in appeal before the learned District Judge, 24 Paraganas. This was registered as Misc. Appeal No. 567 of 1980. This appeal as stated earlier was dismissed by the learned Additional District Judge.

7. It is against this order of dismissal of the said miscellaneous appeal the petitioner has come up in revision. Mr. Bholanath Sen, learned counsel for the petitioner, drawing my attention to Rule No. 28 (9) (VIIa) of the Board of Secondary Education, argues that a teacher or an employee can be suspended where such suspension is in the interest of the Institution. He also places the charge-sheet Annexure E to the application filed in this court wherein the order of suspension was made in the following lines:

"As the charges to be enquired into against Sri Mondal are very serious in nature involving the Head of the teaching staff of the school the undersigned considers it necessary that pending the enquiries Sri Mondal should be placed under suspension and therefore the undersigned hereby placed Sri Mondal under suspension with immediate effect". Thus it is argued by Mr. Sen that the order of suspension was made as it was considered necessary by the Administrator. There is nothing to show that such suspension was in the interest of the Institution. Mr. Tapas Chandra Roy, learned counsel for the O. P. 1 on the other hand contends that order of suspension in the interest of the institution need not be noted in the order of suspension itself. It is a matter of satisfaction to the issuing authority. The order of suspension would not have been issued had that not been in the interest of the Institution. So, this is a debatable point which should be decided in trial.

8. On the materials on record it is contended by Mr. Sen that the plaintiff/petitioner was successful in establishing that there was a prima facie case for going to trial. Reference to the decision in American Cyanamid Co. v. Ethicon Ltd. reported in (1975) 1 All ER 504 was made to show that there was no rule of law that the court was precluded from considering whether, on a balance of convenience, an interlocutory injunction should be granted unless the plaintiff succeeded in establishing a prima facie case or a probability that he would be successful at the trial of the action. All that was necessary was that the court should be satisfied that the claim was not frivolous or vexatious i.e. that there was a serious question in the trial.

9. Mr. Arun Prokas Sircar learned Advocate for the W. B. Board of Secondary Education, O. P. No. 4 adopts the arguments advanced by Mr. Ray. Both of them contend that this court of revision would not interfere with the concurrent findings of both the courts below. They are also of the view that the temporary injunction refused by both the courts should not (sic) be refused by a court of revision. Reliance is placed on the decision in the case of Municipal Corporation of Delhi v. Suresh Chandra Jaipuria, reported in AIR 1976 SC 2621. It is held therein by the Supreme Court that the interference by the High Court with the concurrent findings was unjustified as the court had overlooked the principle governing interference under S. 115 of the Civil P. C. Reliance is also placed on the decision in the case of the Managing Director, Hindusthan Aeronautics Ltd. Bangalore, Hyderabad v. Ajit Prasad Tarway reported in AIR 1973 SC 76. The Supreme Court held therein that the High Court should not interfere even if the order is right or wrong or in accordance with law or not unless it has exercised the jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity. In this case there has been material irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction as the courts below did not look into the prima facie case of the petitioner whether there were good grounds to challenge the legality or otherwise of the order of suspension.

10. Mr. Ray lastly contends that civil court had no jurisdiction to entertain a suit of this nature. The dispute as to the jurisdiction should be taken at the earlier stage. It would not appear that such objection had ever been raised in the courts below. Anyway, Mr. Ray relies on the decision in the case of The Premier Automobiles v. Kamalakar Shantaram Wadke reported in AIR 1975 SC 2238 to show the principles on which a civil court under S. 9 of the Code can assume jurisdiction. On the basis of this decision it is contended that if the dispute does not relate to enforcement of any right under the law of the Secondary Education Board of West Bengal, in that case the remedy would lie in the civil court. According to him, the provision for appeal has been provided in the statute itself, under R. 22. Reliance is also placed on the decision in the case of V. P. Gindroniya v. State of Madhya Pradesh, reported in AIR 1970 SC 1494. He specially draws my attention to paragraphs 6, 7 and 8 of the report at p. 1496. The sum and substance of his contention is that as the provision for appeal has been provided in the statute itself the civil court has been ousted of its jurisdiction to entertain a suit of this nature. It should not be overlooked that the present suit was instituted for certain declaration and the validity of the order of suspension has been challenged on the ground of non-compliance with the statutory rule. In the context of the matter the petitioner cannot be said to have chosen a wrong forum. Anyway, these matters require due consideration on the evidence to be adduced by the parties. As the point of jurisdiction was not questioned earlier, I do not propose to bind the lower courts by making any observation at this stage. This much only can be said that the plaintiff has been successful in establishing that he has a good case for going to trial. Again the suit itself would become infructuous if an order of injunction as prayed for is refused.

11. Thus, on hearing of arguments of all the parties concerned and on consideration of entire facts and circumstances of the case and materials on record what I propose to suggest is that all the parties would maintain status quo till the disposal of the suit filed by the plaintiff/petitioner.

12. This revisional application is thus disposed of and the Rule is also disposed of. There will be, however, no order as to costs.

Order accordingly.

Stamp Act (2 of 1899), Ss. 12 (1) (a) and 63 — Stamp Rules, 1925, R. 17 — Government of West Bengal Notification No. 6714 AST dated 18-7-1941 — Share transfer deed — Company refusing to register transfer inter alia for non-cancellation of adhesive stamps — Company cannot be said to have violated R. 17 of the Rules for attracting penalty under S. 63 — The transferor or the transferee should have initially cancelled the stamps.

Under S. 12 (1) (a) of the Stamp Act and the W. B. Government Notification either the transferor or the transferee was bound to initially cancel the adhesive stamps affixed on the share transfer deeds before presenting them along with the share scrips to the company for registration of the transfer. Where the company refused to register the transfer on the ground inter alia that the adhesive stamps affixed on the deeds were not cancelled, the company could not be held to have violated R. 17 of the Stamp Rules requiring it to cancel such stamps by perforation or otherwise and penalised under S. 63 of the Act. (Paras 6, 7)

Gautam Chakraborty, for Petitioner;
Shyamal Sen, for Respondents.

ORDER :— One D. L. Sen, a shareholder of the petitioner Calcutta Landing & Shipping Co. Ltd. (hereinafter 'the company') sold 9 shares of the said Company to one Phani Bhusan Sarkar, who applied to the company for registration of the said shares and deposited the original share scrips for necessary registration. The Company did not register the transfer on the ground that the signature of the transferor on the transfer deed did not tally with the specimen signature of the transferor maintained by the Company and also because the Adhesive Stamp on the Transfer Deed was not cancelled. Phani Bhusan Sarkar preferred an appeal against the decision of the company Law Board under S. 111 of the Companies Act, 1956. After hearing the contention of the Company, the Company Law Board by an order dated June 18, 1979 accepted the company's contention but referred the matter to the Collector of Stamps, Calcutta for adjudication of duty, penalty etc. under the provisions of the Indian Stamp Act.

2. On January 29, 1980 the company received a Notice bearing Memo No. 6 RS dated January 24, 1980 along with a copy of order dated July 17, 1979 passed by the Collector of Calcutta to the effect that the Company was directed to pay a penalty of Rs. 50/- under Sec. 63 of the Indian Stamp Act as the Company had failed to cancel the Adhesive Stamp as required under Rule 17 of the Indian Stamp Rules, 1925 read with Government of West Bengal Notification No. 6714 AST dated 18-7-1941. A copy of the order dated July 17, 1979, which is annexed to the petition and marked with the letter 'C', is the subject matter of challenge in this Rule.

3. I have heard Mr. Gautam Chakraborty, appearing on behalf of the Company and Mr. Shyamal Sen, appearing on behalf of the respondents.

4. Section 12 (1) (a) of the Stamp Act reads as follows :

"12 (1) (a). Whoever affixes any adhesive stamp to any instrument chargeable with duty which has been executed by any person shall, when affixing such stamp, cancel the same so that it cannot be used again;"

5. The Government of West Bengal Notification dated 18-7-1941 which amended R. 17 of the Indian Stamp Rules, 1925 and which was referred to by the Collector in the impugned order reads as follows :—

"'Share Transfer' stamps affixed to deeds of transfer of shares, shall, before effect is given to the transfer by the joint stock company concerned, be cancelled by the Company by means of a punch which can perforate either the word "cancelled" or an abbreviation thereof, namely, "canceled" or "cancelled" or the initials of the company, in sufficient prominence to render the Stamps permanently unfit for reutilisation even though the stamps were previously cancelled in accordance with Section 12 of the Indian Stamp Act, 1899. In case a company fails so to cancel the share transfer stamps as provided by this Rule the Company shall be liable to the penalty prescribed by S. 63 of the Indian Stamp Act, 1899."

6. Reading the aforesaid section of the Indian Stamp Act together with the Notification, it is clear that the initial cancellation of the adhesive stamp on the share transfer deed has to be done either by the transferor or the transferee before the transfer deed along with the share scrip is presented to the Company for registration of the transfer. After this is done, then the duty is cast on the Company under the aforesaid Notification to perforate the stamp which has already been cancelled. As the initial cancellation was not done in the instant case, the company rightly refused to register the shares and the Collector erred in holding that the Company had committed an offence by not perforating the stamp in accordance with the aforesaid Notification.

7. In the circumstances, I make the Rule absolute and quash the impugned order dated 17-7-1979. There will be no order as to costs.

Petition allowed.

RAMENDRA MOHAN DATTA, J. :—

This is an application under S. 5 of the Limitation Act, 1963 for condonation of delay in filing the appeal from the order of the Court below passed on Jan. 7, 1981.

2. The matter relates to the trust estate created by Raja Debendra Nath Mullick by the deed of trust dated 28th Feb., 1919. It is a public charitable trust. The trust comprises of, inter alia, the premises No. 17 Sooterkin Lane, Calcutta now known as 22, Parulla Sarkar Street. The object of the trust amongst other is for the eradication of leprosy. It is in respect of this trust estate that the order appealed from has been passed by the Court below in favour of a member of the settlor's family for his personal benefit. The Official Trustee of West Bengal is one of the trustees in respect of the said trust estate of Raja Debendra Nath Mullick. The Official Trustee wants to prefer the appeal herein but is late in doing so by a few days due to default or laches on the part of the dealing assistant.

3. The respondent herein is Lal Chand Mullick. Lal Chand Mullick is a member of the family of the settlor. It appears that he is already a tenant under the appellant Official Trustee in respect of several premises of the said trust estate, namely, premises Nos. 12A to 12F Justice Manmatha Mukherjee Road, 22, Prafulla Sarkar Street and 2 and 2/1 Srinath Babu Lane, Calcutta. The respondent pays a monthly rent of Rs. 707/- to the appellant in respect of the said premises of which he is a tenant including the premises No. 17, Sooterkin Lane now known as 22, Prafulla Sarkar Street, Calcutta.

4. It is stated that the said premises No. 22 Prafulla Sarkar Street is absolutely separated from the land measuring approximately 1100 sq. ft. lying adjacent thereto and numbered as 22/1A, Prafulla Sarkar Street and the tenancy of the respondent Lal Chand, in respect of the said Premises No. 22, Prafulla Sarkar Street, has nothing to do with the said premises No. 22/1A, Prafulla Sarkar Street, Calcutta. The respondent, however, claims that the said premises No. 22/1A, Prafulla Sarkar Street is included in his tenancy under the appellant. The Official Trustee by his letter dated 20th Nov. 1978 stated that the said premises No. 22/1A, Prafulla Sarkar Street is not included in the tenancy of the said premises No. 22, Prafulla Sarkar Street, Calcutta. The relevant part of the said letter being Annexure 'A' to the said petition is set out below :

"To

Sri Lal Chand Mullick,
25/1A, Debendra Mullick St.,
Calcutta.

Dear Sir,

With reference to your letter dt. 26-10-1978 I have to state that you are a tenant of the premises Nos. 12A to F, Justice Manmatha Mukherjee Road, 22, Prafulla Sarkar Street and 2 and 2/1 Srinath Babu Lane at a rent of Rs. 707/- p. m. The premises No. 22/1A, Prafulla Sarkar St. is not included in the tenancy of this office. As such the question of giving permission by the Official Trustee to construct a building on the land at 22/1A, Prafulla Sarkar St. does not arise at all.

Yours faithfully,

Sd/- A. K. Ghosh,

Official Trustees of West Bengal."

5. On or about 5th Dec. 1980, the application herein was made on behalf of Lal Chand Mullick for an order on the following prayers:

"(a) leave be granted to your petitioner to construct a four storeyed building at the vacant land measuring about 1100 square feet at premises No. 22/1A, Prafulla Sarkar Street, Calcutta at the costs and expenses of the petitioner and according to the proposed plan annexed hereto subject to the compliance of all appropriate laws relating thereto including Calcutta Municipal Act.

(b) The Official Trustees of West Bengal to grant a lease of the said proposed four storeyed building to be constructed at premises No. 22/1A, Prafulla Sarkar Street, Calcutta to the petitioner for a period of 99 years from the date of completion of the construction of the said proposed building with power to the petitioner to sub-let the said building as a part and/or as a whole.

(c) Upon execution of the said Deed of Lease for 99 years in favour of the petitioner, the petitioner do execute a deed relinquishing all rights, title and interest of ownership of the said building in favour of the said Raja Debendra Mullick Trust except as mentioned in the said Deed of Lease to be executed in terms of prayer (b) above.

(d) The petitioner do pay an increased rent of 15% over and above the present rent payable by the petitioner in respect of the said proposed building on and from the date of completion of construction of the said proposed building;

(e) Leave be given to the petitioner to construct 2 floors over and above the existing structure at premises No. 22, Prafulla Sarkar Street, Calcutta, at the cost and expenses of the petitioner.

(f) The Official Trustee of West Bengal do grant a lease of the said proposed two floors to be constructed over and above the existing structure at the premises No. 22, Prafulla Sarkar Street, Calcutta to the petitioner for a period of 99 years from the date of completion of the construction of the said proposed two floors with power to the petitioner to sublet the said floors as a part and/or as a whole.

(g) Upon execution of the said Deed of Lease for 99 years in favour of the petitioner, the petitioner do execute a Deed relinquishing all right, title and interest of ownership of the said two floors in favour of Raja Debendra Mullick Trust except as mentioned in the said Deed of Lease in terms of prayer (f) above.

(h) The petitioner do pay an increased rent of 20% over and above the present rent payable by the petitioner in respect of the said two floors from the date of completion of construction of the said floors.

(i) Leave be given to your petitioner to carry out the general and essential repairs to the premises No. 22, Prafulla Sarkar Street, Calcutta and the costs for such repair be paid by the Official Trustee of West Bengal to your petitioner out of the funds in his hands.

(j) Cost of and incidental to this application be paid by the Official Trustee of West Bengal to the petitioner.

(k) Further and other order and/or orders be passed direction and/or directions be given as will afford complete relief to your petitioner."

6. The Official Trustee filed an affidavit and opposed the said prayers. The learned Judge after hearing the parties passed an order on 7th Jan. 1981 inter alia, directing certain terms to be included in the lease to be executed between the parties and certain directions were given by the said order. The order is set out in full as follows :

"It is ordered that the said petitioner be at liberty to construct a four storeyed building at the vacant land measuring about one thousand one hundred square feet at the premises No. 22/1A, Prafulla Sarkar Street, Calcutta, at the said petitioners own costs and expenses according to the plan annexed to the said petition subject to the compliance of all appropriate laws and subject to the sanction of the plan by the Corporation of Calcutta and it is further ordered that the said Official Trustee of West Bengal do grant a lease of the said proposed four storeyed building to be constructed at the said premises No. 22/1A, Prafulla Sarkar Street, Calcutta to the said petitioner for a period of ninety-nine years from the date of completion of construction of the said building with power to the said petitioner to sublet the proposed building in part or as a whole. And it is further ordered that upon execution of the said deed of lease for ninety-nine years in favour of the said petitioner the said petitioner shall execute a deed of relinquishment of all his right, title and interest of ownership in the said building in favour of the Raja Debendra Mullick Trust except as mentioned in the said deed of lease to be executed as aforesaid and it is further ordered that the said petitioner do pay an increased rent of twenty-five per cent over and above the present rent payable by the said petitioner in respect of the said proposed building on and from the date of completion of construction of the proposed building and that the lease to be executed between the parties shall also include escalation term of such rent at intervals of every eleven years by five per cent and it is further ordered that the said petitioner be also at liberty to construct two floors over and above the existing structure at premises No. 22, Prafulla Sarkar Street, Calcutta, at the costs and expenses of the said petitioner and that lease be given by the Official Trustee of West Bengal abovenamed of the said proposed two floors to be constructed over and above the existing structures at the said premises No. 22, Prafulla Sarkar Street, Calcutta, to the said petitioner for a period of ninety-nine years only from the date of completion of the construction of the said proposed two floors with powers to the said petitioner to sublet the said floors as a part and/or as a whole and it is further ordered that upon execution of the deed of lease in respect of the said two floors to be constructed as aforesaid for ninety-nine years in favour of the said petitioner, the said petitioner shall execute a deed of relinquishment of all his right, title and interest as owner of the said two floors in favour of Raja Debendra Mullick Trust except as mentioned in the said deed of lease and it is further ordered that the said petitioner do pay an increased rent at twenty-five per cent over and above the present rent payable by the said petitioner in respect of the said two floors from the date of completion of construction of the said two floors with escalation of rent at intervals of every eleven years by five per cent and it is further ordered that the said petitioner be at liberty to carry out the general and essential repairs to the premises No. 22, Prafulla Sarkar Street, Calcutta and that the costs for such repairs as aforesaid shall be paid by the said Official Trustee of West Bengal to

And it is further ordered that the said petitioner do also bear the increased corporation rates and taxes in respect of the proposed new building as also of the proposed two floors to be constructed on the old building and that both the shares of such taxes shall be paid by the said petitioner. And it is further ordered that the costs of and incidental to this application assessed at Rupees three hundred and forty be paid by the said Official Trustee of West Bengal to the said petitioner and it is further ordered that the said Official Trustee do also retain and pay his own costs of and incidental to this application out of the funds in his hand and it is further ordered that the Official Trustee of West Bengal do act on a copy of the minutes of this order signed by an officer of this Court being produced before them."

7. It prima facie appears that, on the face of it, the said order suffers from certain infirmities being contrary to the provisions of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act and the said order, if allowed to stand, would be highly prejudicial to the interest of the trust estate as would appear from the minutes of the meeting of the Official Trustee held on 2nd Aug., 1979 which is set out as follows:—

"Meeting held in the Chamber of Official Trustee, West Bengal.

Present:— 1. Sri Roxhomay Mullick

2. Sri Balaj Chand Mullick, representing Sri Durga Charan Mullick,

3. Sri Ajit Kumar Ghosh— Official Trustee.

Official Trustee requests the members present to consider the question of effecting repair to premises No. 22, Prafulla Sarkar Street as requested by Sri Lal Chand Mullick in his letter dated 18-4-79. The members present state that the Official Trustee should not take up the repairs at this stage. They also state that Sri Lal Chand Mullick is utilising the buildings for his own benefit by way of collecting rent from persons inducted by him as tenants in the said buildings. In the circumstances they request the Official Trustee to enquire what amount of rent Sri Lal Chand Mullick is realising from the alleged sub-tenants. Because in terms of the deed rent realised and for any income derived from the buildings should go for charities and that in no case such income should be utilised by any beneficiary for his personal gain. They also request Official Trustee to write to Sri Lal Chand Mullick to supply the names of the persons inducted in all the buildings under his tenancy and the rents paid by such tenants.

Official Trustee states that in his letter dt. 5-7-79 Sri Lal Chand Mullick has sought the permission by Official Trustee for erecting two more floors over the premises No. 22, Prafulla Sarkar Street. The members present are not agreeable to such proposal at the present moment.

There being no other item to be discussed. The meeting ended at 1 p.m. Engaged one hour from 12 Noon to 1 P.M.

Sd/- A. K. Ghosh

Official Trustee of West Bengal.
2-8-79."

The Official Trustee sent a copy of the said Minute to Sri Lal Chand Mullick by his letter dated 10-8-79, a copy whereof is set out as follows:

"Sri Lal Chand Mullick,
25/1A, Debendra Mullick Street,
Calcutta-700073.

Dear Sir,

With reference to your letter dated 18; 4-7-79 I have to enclose herewith a copy of the minutes of the meeting held on the 2nd Aug. 1979 in my Chamber with the present senior male members of the family of the settlor of the above-mentioned trust,

Yours faithfully,

Sd/- A. K. Ghosh
Official Trustee of
West Bengal.

Thereafter, the Deputy Official Trustee by his letter dated 27-10-79 addressed a letter to Lal Chand Mullick to the following effect:

"To

Sri Lal Chand Mullick,
25/1A, Debendra Mullick St.,
Calcutta-700073.

Trust Raja D. N. Mullick Charitable Fund.

Re: Premises No. 22, Prafulla Sarkar Street, 12A, Justice Manmatha Nath Mukherjee Road, 2 and 2/1 Sri Nath Babu Lane, Calcutta.

Dear Sir,

Please refer to this office letter No. 2969 dated 19-8-79 with which a copy of the minutes of the proceedings of the meeting held on 2-8-79 was sent to you. But no report as to the names of the sub-tenants of the above-mentioned premises and rents paid by them to you has yet been received in this office.

I am directed to request you to send the aforesaid report to this office without further delay.

Yours faithfully,

Sd/- R. N. Mitra,

Dy. Official Trustee of West Bengal.

8. From the above, it appears that even though it was decided in the meeting of the Official Trustee that the prayers of Lal Chand Mullick should not be granted in the interest of the estate yet he pursued the matter and ultimately got the order from the Court below. It appears that the senior male members of the family of the settlor were duly consulted by the Official Trustee and the said members objected to the grant of said prayers of Lal Chand and their complaint was recorded that Lal Chand was utilising the building for his own benefit by way of collecting rent from persons inducted by him as tenants in the said buildings. The names of the sub-tenants were called for but he neither replied thereto nor did he supply those names. In this background he obtained the order from the Court below and the Official Trustee decided that the appeal has to be preferred and sent instructions to the advocate on record to put in a requisition on Jan. 21, 1981. That was after 13 days of the passing of the order. So at the very initial stage the applicant lost 13 days from the period of limitation. On 20th Feb., 1981 the Official Trustee went on leave and joined his office from leave on Mar. 21, 1981. In the meantime on Mar. 2, 1981, the order was completed and drawn up and on Mar. 5, 1981 the certified copy was made ready for delivery by the Department. Accordingly, after deducting the period of time requisite, the time to file the appeal expired on Mar. 22, 1981. The present petition was made ready on Apr. 7, 1981 and on 8th Apr., 1981 it was moved before us.

9. The total period of delay was for about 17 days and the explanation that is required to be given under S. 5 of the Limitation Act is in respect of the period from 22nd Mar., 1981 till 8th Apr., 1981. We gave an opportunity to the applicant Official Trustee to file a supplementary affidavit for explaining the delay for the said period. Pursuant thereto an affidavit has been filed by the Official Trustee as also by the dealing assistant. It appears that the affidavit-in-reply was also filed by the dealing assistant, Bishnu Prasad Mullick on May 5, 1981. Bishnu Prasad Mullick affirmed the supplementary affidavit on May 21, 1981 in addition to the affidavit already affirmed by him on April 7, 1981, giving further facts as to what had happened to him for which the Official Trustee could not file the appeal in time. The further affidavit as directed by this Bench was affirmed by the Official Trustee himself also on 21st May, 1981.

10. From the order as drawn up it does not appear that the Official Trustee used any affidavit-in-opposition before the Court below but only engaged an advocate to appear on his behalf. But actually such an affidavit was filed by the said Bishnu Prasad Mullick. It appears that the learned Judge gave certain directions in addition to the prayers made by the petitioner. The effect of the order, prima facie, appears to be that although the Official Trustee did not consent to the subletting of the premises yet by the Court's directions and orders the same was allowed. It is contended that such directions and orders are contrary to the interest of the estate and the provisions of the West Bengal Premises Tenancy Act, 1956. The allegation of the Official Trustee as against the respondent Lal Chand is that he has illegally sublet the said premises No. 22, Prafulla Sarkar Street, to various persons without the consent of the Official Trustee. The said fact of illegality in subletting the said premises was pointed out at the meeting held on 2nd Aug., 1979 to the Official Trustee by the senior members who are also trustees, namely, Durga Charan Mullick and Rohomoy Mullick. A copy of the said minutes of the meeting was sent to Lal Chand. By a subsequent letter the Deputy Official Trustee also required Lal Chand to furnish the names of the sub-tenants but no reply was received in the office of the Official Trustee in respect thereto.

11. Prima facie, there is a clear picture of illegality in respect of the transaction which is highly prejudicial to the interest of the trust estate. It is highly prejudicial to the interest of the public at large for whose cause the income of the estate has to be spent. Instead, by by-passing the orders of the Official Trustee, Lal Chand has been trying to make use of the profits of the estate for his own benefit by depriving the members of the public in respect thereto. In this proceeding we are not to question how he became a tenant and how he started subletting the same tenanted portion and realising rent for his own use to the detriment of Trust estate. We are now concerned with the proposed tenancy that is sought to be created by the order passed by the Court below. At this stage it is not necessary to make any further comment on the order passed herein except to say that this is a fit case where the Official Trustee should have an opportunity to file the appeal in the interest of the trust estate and in the interest of the public in general.

12. Looking at the background of this case and the facts as disclosed herein, it appears to us that everything is being sought to be legalised, in spite of opposition, by obtaining orders from the Court and in this matter it seems that the dealing assistant has undoubtedly lent a helping hand in allowing the time to file the appeal to pass by. The explanation that he has given is absolutely hopeless. He came to the office but at the same time did not think of looking into this urgent file. His excuse was that he had to go to Alipore Court and from there he had to go back home because of his father's illness. In other words, he was going to office but not looking after his office work entrusted with him. This is nothing but a deliberate attempt on his part to pass over the time for preferring the appeal. He did not bring it to the notice of the Official Trustee as to what was happening in the matter and that the time to prefer the appeal was expiring. He did not even bring it to the notice of the Deputy Official Trustee so that he could come forward and attend to the matter in the absence on leave of the Official Trustee. It is true that no allegation has been made against the dealing assistant to implicate him but it is quite apparent that full advantage has been taken of the absence on leave of the Official Trustee. During the leave taken by the Official Trustee it is not expected that the Official Trustee would always be conscious about the position of each and every file. A big office is being maintained for the purpose of enabling him to know about the urgent matters by putting up the files before him. It appears that his attention was not drawn to the fact that the appeal was going to be barred by limitation. Before going on leave, on 16-2-81 the Official Trustee instructed the dealing assistant Bishnu Prasad Mullick to contact the Advocate on record who had already been instructed to take steps for obtaining the certified copy of the said order dated 7th Jan., 1981 so that the appeal might be preferred against the said order. The said dealing assistant however contacted the Advocate-on-Record of the appellant, Shri K. K. Basu to take necessary steps on the matter only on March 6, 1981. It is stated that from 7th March, 1981 the said dealing assistant could not join his duties as his father became seriously ill and had to go on leave till 18th March, 1981. This again is very significant. If he was on leave somebody else should have been made aware of the position and the file should have been handed over to another dealing assistant with proper instructions or at least that should have been brought to the notice of the Deputy Official Trustee. Even after joining his office he had to go back home to attend to his ailing father and as such he could not contact the Advocate-on-record until 1st April, 1981. That is the explanation with regard to the said period. That was the reason why he could not be aware of the fact that the certified copy was obtained in the meantime, until 1st April, 1981. It is said that on the next day, i.e. 2nd April, 1981, the Official Trustee was told by the said dealing assistant that the dealing assistant came to know that the certified copy in the above matter was obtained by his Advocate-on-record on 17-3-81. In the petition it is stated that immediately thereafter, that means, after 2nd April, 1981, the Official Trustee instructed the Advocate-on-record to brief the counsel for drafting a memorandum of appeal and a petition for condonation of delay in filing the above appeal. 3rd Apr., 1981 was a Bandh day in West Bengal and as such no counsel could be briefed on that day. On 4th April, 1981, counsel could be briefed to draft the necessary petition and memorandum of appeal and the same was returned by the said counsel on 6th April, 1981 to the Advocate-on-record. On 7th April, 1981 the papers were made ready for filing all this will appear from the petition filed by the Official Trustee.

13. The affidavit-in-reply has been filed by Bishnu Prasad Mullick on behalf of the Official Trustee. In the said affidavit he was reiterated the statements made in the petition.

14. As already observed we directed further affidavits to be filed and pursuant thereto both the Official Trustee and Bishnu Prasad Mullick filed separate affidavits. It is necessary to record Bishnu Prasad's own version of how he failed to perform his duties. He said therein that he had to go to Alipore Court everyday from 18th March, 1981 to 31st March, 1981 in connection with Execution Case No. 3 of 1962. The said Execution case in Alipore Court involved sale of mortgage property for realisation of decretal dues of the mortgage of the Administrator General of West Bengal amounting to Rs. 3,00,000. The auction sale was being conducted by the learned District Judge, Alipore. He had to appear in the Alipore Court for giving instructions to the Advocate appearing on behalf of the Administrator General. At one stage there was talk of compromise and settlement for payments by instalments and the lawyers engaged in the matter specifically directed the deponent to apprise them of all the facts and circumstances of the case. During that period he used to go back home from Alipore Court after taking steps therein as he was in a very disturbed state of mind and as such there was no scope for him to contact the Advocate-on-record during the said period. The deponent said that he received the information that the certified copy was obtained by the Advocate-on-record on 17th March, 1981. He came back to the office to inform the Official Trustee about the said fact but he had to go to Writers Building in connection with some official work. The said fact could not be communicated to the Official Trustee. On the 2nd April, 1981 he informed the Official Trustee about the said fact that the certified copy had already been obtained by him when he was directed immediately to take steps for preparing the appeal and, accordingly, necessary instructions were sent to the Advocate-on-record on that day.

15. In the further affidavit filed by the Official Trustee it is stated that he was on leave with effect from 20th Feb., 1981 to 19th March, 1981 and he joined his duties on Monday, the 21st March, 1981. 20th March, 1981 was a holiday on account of Doljatra festival. 21st March, 1981 was a Saturday and the office closed at 2 P.M. Much work could not be done except disposing of certain important files and certain routine business. 22nd March, 1981 being a Sunday the office was closed. He stated that on or before going on leave he instructed the dealing assistant Bishnu Prasad Mullick who was looking after the matter to contact the Advocate-on-record to take steps for obtaining the certified copy of the order dated 7th Jan., 1981 so that the appeal might be preferred against the said order. According to the Official Trustee the dealing assistant contacted the Advocate-on-record on several occasions up to 6th March, 1981 but from 7th March, 1981 he could not join his duties and went on leave on the ground of his father's illness. He joined his duties on 18th March, 1981 and had to go to Alipore Court from office almost every day in connection with Execution Case No. 3 of 1962 till 31st March, 1981 during which period he had to go back home from Alipore Court after taking necessary steps as his father was lying ill and as such even though the Official Trustee had earlier instructed him to contact the Advocate-on-record he could not do so during the said period. The Official Trustee was informed of the fact of obtaining the certified copy by the Advocate-on-record on 17th March, 1981 by the said dealing assistant on 2nd April, 1981. Immediately, he gave instructions to take necessary steps so that the appeal could be filed.

16. We are satisfied that from 2nd April, 1981 till the appeal was made ready on 7th April, 1981 the explanation is satisfactory.

17. With regard to the period from the expiry of the period of limitation till 1st April, 1981 the explanation does not appear to be quite satisfactory. The question before us is whether the said delay in filing the appeal should be condoned or not. The principle has been laid down in several decisions of the Supreme Court, particularly, in Ramlal v. Rewa Coalfields Ltd., AIR 1962 SC 361. The matter relates to a public charity in which public in general is interested and it appears that the public charity has undoubtedly suffered and has been suffering when placed in charge of a dealing assistant whose conduct has been sufficiently highlighted hereinabove to show in what way he has caused tremendous prejudice and hindrance to the filing of this appeal. It appears that full advantage has been taken of the absence of the Official Trustee on leave from Feb. 21, 1981 to Mar. 20, 1981 and the time was allowed to pass. We are of the view that the Official Trustee is not guilty of negligence or inaction in respect of the said period of delay and in a situation like this we should not go to the extent of saying that he is responsible for the acts of his employees. It is not the trustee but the trust itself which would otherwise suffer the consequences.

18. In the facts and circumstances of this case, should this Court stick to the strict procedural principles and allow the illegality to be perpetrated by refusing this application for the delay of a few days due to such unusual circumstances and cause prejudice to the interest of the general public and of the said trust estate?

19. In my opinion, in the special facts and circumstances of this case, as stated hereinabove, the delay from the expiry of the date of preferring the appeal till 1st Apr. 1981 should be condoned. In a few later decisions the Supreme Court has relaxed the principle to some extent considering the special facts and circumstances of such case. In this connection reference may be made to the decision in the case of Sarpanch, Lonand Gram Panchayat v. Ramgiri Gosavi, reported in AIR 1968 SC 222. Accordingly, in this case, since there are special considerations in condoning the delay, after careful consideration, we have come to the conclusion that the delay for the said period should be condoned.

20. We have gone into the facts and analysed the same in details for the purpose of indicating how in a specially ingenious manner in spite of opposition from the seniormost male members of the family of the Settlor and the minutes of the meeting of the Official Trustee, copy whereof was sent to Lal Chand, a situation has been created where the court could appear to be helpless and would be bound to dismiss an application of this nature. It is no doubt true that the dealing assistant is not supposed to be highly paid employee under the Official Trustee but the way he has acted in this matter does not appear to be above-board. He has to be cautioned for his future actions in dealing with other Estate matters as well. It is because of him that so many others have been faced with embarrassment. Accordingly, even though it might cause hardship to him financially yet we are constrained to order that he must bear a portion of the cost of this application personally to the extent of a sum of Rs. 100/- (Rupees one hundred) and the same would be payable within a month from the date hereof. The balance of the cost of this application would be borne and paid by the Official Trustee from out of the funds of the trust estate in his hands, such cost is assessed at a total sum of Rs. 250/-. We make it clear that this token cost has been awarded against the dealing assistant, Bishnu Prasad Mullick, so that in future he might be more mindful about his duties and might discharge the same with full responsibility attached to his post.

21. The delay is accordingly condoned in terms of prayer (a) of the application and leave is given to file the memorandum of appeal after condoning the delay. Stay of operation of the order dated 7th Jan. 1981 is to continue for a Week in order to enable the Official Trustee to take necessary action in the matter. The Department will accept the Memorandum of Appeal if it is filed by Friday next. The Department do act on a signed copy of the minutes of this order. There will be an order accordingly. The Official Trustee will retain his cost from out of the funds of the estate in his hands. The Official Trustee and all parties do act on a signed copy of the minutes of this order.

Civil Rule No. 3633 (W) of 1974, D/- 30-4-1981.

Court-fees Act (7 of 1870), S. 19-H (3) — Collector must give notice and hear petitioner for probate on due opportunities being given before making proper valuation of property — Held Collector having not taken such steps acted without jurisdiction. (1975) 79 Cal WN 961, Rel. on. (Para 10)

Cases Referred : Chronological Paras (1975) 79 Cal WN 961 8

Shakti Pada Chatterjee, for Petitioner; Ashok Kumar Sengupta with Tapan Kumar Sengupta, for the State.

ORDER:— In this Rule, which was obtained with a corresponding interim order on 21st June, 1974, the petitioner, Trambaklal Dayalal Kothari, has impeached certain orders made by the Probate Deputy Collector, being Respondent No. 1, and the particulars whereof would be available from the facts stated herein-after.

2. One Umedlal Dayalal Kothari also known as Umedlal D. Kothari died at premises No. 18, Priya Nath Mullick Road, Bhowanipur at Calcutta on 19th June, 1963 and the petitioner in this Rule applied for probate of the last Will and testament of the said deceased in this Court and it has been stated that such probate was granted by this Court in its Original Side. Such probate order was made on 13th Aug. 1964. It was the case of the petitioner that at the time of making the application for the grant of probate as mentioned above, on or about 9th Sept. 1973, the petitioner, who incidentally was a brother of the deceased along with one Himatlal Umedlal Kothari, the son of the deceased, affirmed and filed the Affidavit of Assets showing the value of the estate as left at Rs. 2,57,097.25 paise. The said valuation has been mentioned in paragraph 2 of the petition. It has further been stated that the Probate Duty of Rs. 11,299/- was paid to the Court, at the time of grant of Probate, on due calculation, and the High Court had accepted the valuations as made, to be correct.

3. Thereafter, the Respondent Probate Deputy Collector, issued letters informing that enquiries into the matter of payment of Probate Duty, would be initiated and as such, the said officer wanted to see the original Probate Estate Duty Assessment papers and balance sheet, apart from other records. It is the case of the petitioner that the original Probate and audited balance sheet for the relevant periods, were shown and on or about 17th July, 1973, it was informed that the estate duty assessment had not been completed and as such, the same should not be filed. It has been alleged now, that in spite of the aforesaid facts, the officer concerned ex parte assessed the valuation of the estate, in terms of the notice dated 16th Feb. 1973 and increased the valuation of the estate by Rs. 240,980/- (provisional) and asked the petitioner to amend the valuation and also to pay Rs. 14,735.15 paise. It has of course been stated that the above notice was cancelled and a fresh notice dated 15th Jan. 1974, was issued, whereby the petitioner was asked to amend the valuation by raising the sum of Rs. 2,40,980/- and to pay a sum of Rs. 14,735.15 paise, on account of additional stamp duty in terms of S. 19-H (3) of the Court-fees Act, as amended and also to deposit Rs. 2,473.50 paise by way of penalty under S. 19G of the said Act.

4. Section 19H (3) lays down that the Collector within the local limits of whose revenue jurisdiction the property of the deceased or any part thereof is, may at any time inspect or cause to be inspected, and take or cause to be taken copies of the record of any case in which application for probate or letters of administration has been made, and if, on such inspection or otherwise, he is of opinion that the petitioner has under-estimated the value of the property of the deceased, the Collector may, if he thinks fit, require the attendance of the petitioner (either in person or by agent) and take evidence and inquire into the matter in such manner as he may think fit, and, if he is still of opinion that the value of the property has been under-estimated, may require the petitioner to amend the valuation. S. 19G postulates that where too a court-fee has been paid on any probate or letters of administration in consequence of any mistake, or of its not being known at the time that some particular part of that estate belonging to the deceased, if any executor or administrator acting under such probate or letters, does not, within six months after the discovery of the mistake or any effects not known at the time to have belonged to the deceased, apply to the said authority and pay what is wanting to make up the court-fee which ought to have been paid at first on such probate or letters, he shall forfeit the sum of one thousand rupees and also a further sum at the rate of ten rupees per cent on the amount of the sum wanting to make up the proper court-fee.

5. It has been contended by the petitioner that the officer concerned, had no power in law, to ask him to amend the valuation and the notice in question was illegal, inoperative, without jurisdiction and bad in law. In fact, it has been stated that an objection to the notice, by a letter was filed and having no response to the said letter and on receipt of the repeated reminders from the Probate Deputy Collector concerned, for the sums as mentioned above, failing which steps for realisation would be taken, another objection by the petitioner, through his lawyer was filed on or about 23rd Feb. 1974, challenging the order as passed or made by the Probate Deputy Collector, the particulars whereof have been mentioned hereinbefore. This letter, it has also been stated, was not appropriately replied to, and on such, the learned lawyer of the petitioner, met the Probate Deputy Collector concerned on diverse dates, when it has been stated that he was assured that due intimation would be sent. It has been stated that even in spite of the above fact, the officer concerned, by his letter of 19th Apr. 1974, again asked for the payment. It is the case of the petitioner that having received further reminders for the payment of sums as mentioned above, his lawyer, saw the officer concerned on 4th June, 1974, when also, he was informed that as no notice informing the date of hearing of the concerned objection petition has been received by the petitioner or his Lawyer, the said objection petition has been impliedly rejected. As such, the petitioner has stated, that his learned Lawyer wrote another letter to the officer concerned, for necessary redress of his grievances. It has been categorically claimed by the petitioner that in making the ex parte rejection of the petition or in not considering the objection duly, the authority concerned, acted without jurisdiction, illegally, unlawfully and erroneously, apart from being in violation of principles of natural justice.

6. There was an application dated 28th Feb. 1977, for continuation of the interim order as made, in terms of the provision of S. 58 (3) of the Constitution (42nd Amendment) Act, 1976 and such application was allowed on 14th Sept. 1977. While allowing such application, directions were given for filing of affidavit in the main Rule. Even in spite of such directions, duly given, no affidavit-in-opposition has been filed in this proceeding. Mr. Sengupta, appearing for the answering respondents, produced the records and stated that since his clients had not filed the necessary affidavit-in-opposition in time, he will put forward his argument on the basis of the records.

7. There is no doubt the issue of the probate by this Court in its Ordinary Original jurisdiction. The Will of the executor as such, was probated on 13th Aug. 1964 and in 1971, the notice for necessary valuation was issued and in 1974, the ex parte order, as alleged was made, increasing the valuation. The order, making or directing the payment to be made, which the petitioner has claimed to be ex parte one, was dated 15th Jan. 1974 and the same has been annexed as Annexure-B to the petition. The whole question in the instant case would be and that too, on the basis of the pleadings as filed and the argument as advanced, whether the Probate Deputy Collector, was required to give any notice and hear the petitioner, before making valuation of the property.

8. In fact, Mr. Chatterjee, appearing in support of the Rule, claimed that the respondent, Probate Deputy Collector, before coming to his conclusion regarding the valuation of the enhancement of the same should have given the petitioner, an opportunity of being heard. In support of such submissions, Mr. Chatterjee referred to the determinations in the case of Gauri Nath Shastri v. State of West Bengal, (1975) 79 Cal WN 961. In that case, a point arose as to whether under S. 19A of the Court-fees Act, 1870, it was the duty of the Collector, to give notice and hear the petitioner for probate, before making valuation of property and the effect of a threat by the Collector concerned, to impose penalty in case of failure to pay deficit of stamp duty, was also concerned. In that case, it has been observed that S. 31 (3) of the West Bengal Court-fees Act, 1970 corresponding to S. 19H (3) of the Court-fees Act, 1870, cast a duty on the Collector, to give an opportunity to the petitioner for probate, to produce evidence and be heard, before the Collector can require the petitioner to amend the valuation made by him. It has further been observed that S. 31 (3) of the West Bengal Court-fees Act, 1970 contemplates three well defined stages. First, after the Collector has been served with a notice of an application for probate by the Court in which the application is made, it is incumbent upon him to hold an enquiry by inspection or otherwise of the property and records in the said application. If on the materials examined by him, the Collector forms the opinion that the petitioner has underestimated the value of the property of the deceased, then the second stage is reached: he must then require the attendance of the petitioner and enquire into the matter. At this stage, there are two portions, one, as to the manner of the inquiry, which is left to the discretion of the Collector, but a duty is cast upon him to hold an enquiry after giving notice to the petitioner, then, the third stage is that, if after such hearing and enquiry or giving notice to the petitioner, the Collector is still of opinion that the valuation of the property has been underestimated, he must require the petitioner, to amend the valuation to the satisfaction of the Collector. If the petitioner fails to amend the valuation as required by the Collector, the Collector must, under Section 31 (4), move the Court within the prescribed time, to hold an enquiry into the true value of the property, thereafter, the Court should, under S. 31 (5), hold an enquiry as to the true value of the property and the Collector is party to the said application. It has also been observed that S. 31 (6) and (7) of the Act lay down the procedure and finality of the decision and finding of the Court.

9. These apart, in the case as cited, it has been laid down, that a complete procedure for the determinations of the true value of the property, in respect of which an application for probate is made, has been laid down under S. 31 and a duty is cast upon the Collector to hear the petitioner, who is charged with under valuation. It has also been observed that it is no part of the duty of the Collector, to assess the true valuation of the property and ask the petitioner to pay the duty on such valuation and impose penalty on the failure of the petitioner to pay the same. It is only after the true value of the property is determined by the Court, on the application of the Collector and the failure of the petitioner, to pay the deficit stamp duty on such valuation, that a penalty can be imposed under S. 33.

10. As stated hereinbefore, the probate was granted by this Court in another jurisdiction and at that time, no exception regarding valuation was raised or taken by the Probate Deputy Collector. Such authority has certainly, the right to see that revenue does not suffer by any machination of a claimant and as such, such authority, certainly has the right to initiate and enquire into the valuation and to arrive at a conclusion, as to whether proper valuation has been made or there has been under-valuation of the property of the deceased. But, before such decision is arrived at, not only, in terms of the determinations of this Court as mentioned above, but also in terms of the intrinsic requirements of the statute, the Probate Deputy Collector, in the instant case, was required to hear the petitioner on due opportunities being given, so that, he could have satisfied that the valuation as made, was due and proper. Such steps not having admittedly been taken in this case, the Rule in my view, should succeed. As such, the Rule is made absolute. There will be no order as to costs.

11. This will not now prejudice the respondents concerned, to make appropriate valuation of the property of the deceased and to come to a definite conclusion about the valuation of the same, after duly hearing the petitioner and opportunities to him, to establish his case.

Ordered accordingly.

Assam Fixation of Ceiling on Land Holdings Act (1 of 1957) (Before amendment by Act 18 of 1976), Ss. 7 (3) and 7 (2) — Appeal lies against order under Section 7 (2) — Hence it must be communicated to objector — Final order and final statement in S. 7 (2) have different meanings. Ori. Order No. 71 of 1980 (Cal), Reversed.
(Para 1)

S. C. Bose, R. N. Bajoria and D. K. Dhar, for Appellants; S. N. Tagore, for Respondents.

BANERJEE, J.:— This appeal at the instance of the company arises out of an order passed by the Hon'ble single Judge discharging the Rule taken out by the petitioners. The Hon'ble single Judge held inter alia that because of the Assam Fixation of Ceiling on Land Holdings Act, 1956 (as amended by Act XVIII of 1976) the right of appeal having been taken away, the application cannot succeed. The Assam Fixation of Ceiling on Land Holdings Act, 1956 came into force on 16th of Jan., 1957. It appears that on 24th of March, 1971 the tea garden of the company came within the A. F. of C. on L. H. Act. After the said date the petitioners filed return under R. 5 (1) of the Rules framed under the Act. It appears that the petitioners filed return as contained in Rule 1 on 7th of April, 1972. On 21st of Sept., 1972 a draft statement was published and the petitioners filed an objection much beyond the prescribed time under S. 7 (2) of the Act on 25th Jan., 1973. Be that as it may, the respondents gave the petitioners, appellants herein, hearing under S. 7 (2) of the said Act and on 5th July, 1973 the petitioners were communicated the final statement and the said communication was made to the Manager of the garden as also to the company having its registered office at Calcutta. The allegations, as contained in the petition, in material particulars have not been denied in the affidavit filed by the respondents, inasmuch as, it is admitted dates as hereinbefore given and that after the belated objection was made, hearing was given to the petitioners-appellants under S. 7 (2) and final order was passed under S. 7 (3) of the Act. It is further admitted that no communication was made in 1973 regarding the order passed under S. 7 (2) of the Act. Before the amendment in 1976, under S. 7 (3) of the Act of 1956 any person aggrieved by an order of the Collector under the foregoing sub-section, may, within 30 days of the order prefer an appeal to the State Government. Mr. Bose on behalf of the petitioners-appellants contended that as the final order was not communicated to the petitioners, the petitioners' right of appeal, as contained in S. 7 (3) of the Act, could not be availed of. What was communicated to the petitioner by the order dated 5th July, 1973 was one which is final statement and not the final order. On reading the Act (un-amended) in particular S. 7, it is clear that there is distinction between the order under S. 7 and the statement which is also contained in the said Act. It appears from the analysis of S. 7 of the Act that after the draft statement is made and objection is filed and thereafter this objection is to be heard by the competent authority, final order is to be passed by the competent authority and this final order must be communicated to the petitioners or objector and thereafter the objector has right of appeal. After the appeal is disposed of the draft statement under S. 7 (6) of the Act will become final and order will be made regarding the filing of statement and that will have to be published in the office mentioned in sub-sec. (2) of the Act. Therefore, this final order and final statement must be given two different meanings in view of the fact that two different words have been used in two different contexts. In that view of the matter, it appears admittedly that no final order was served on the petitioner-appellants at all. This is also clear as Mr. Tagore has stated that it is not possible for them to say that the final order passed under S. 7 (2) of the Act was served on the petitioners. Mr. Tagore, however, contended in consideration to Mr. Bose's argument that unless final order is served the right of appeal becomes nugatory. Mr. Tagore further contended that in the four corners of the statute no question of service of notice of the final order on the petitioner is contemplated nor is there such a contingency from the rules framed under the Act. It appears to us, however, that if the petitioner has right to appeal, as rightly said by Mr. Bose, which the petitioner had when order was passed and unless the said order is served, no appeal can be preferred. Mr. Tagore contended that it was the duty of the petitioners to know the date of the final order. It must be stated that S. 7 (2) of the Act provides for hearing by administrative authority, and not a judicial tribunal; but the administrative authority acting quasi-judicially must serve the order which may be passed under S. 7 (2) of the Act against which an appeal lay. It is futile to argue that such an order need not be served, otherwise it is given to the officer concerned who passed the order in file of the Government without serving the same to the petitioners as in the present case and thereby taking away the valuable right of appeal to the State Government. In view of the fact that the final order has not been served on the petitioners the application must succeed to that extent.

2. This appeal is therefore allowed and the judgment and order passed by the Hon'ble single Judge are set aside. The final statement published without service of order which was made final order under S. 7 (2) of the Act on the petitioners therefore cannot stand. The respondents will be at liberty to serve the final order on Mr. Bose's client as soon as practicable and dispose of the matter in accordance with law. We make it clear that we have not gone into the question of retrospective operation of the amendment of the A. F. of C. on L. H. Act, 1976 in this case or the effect of the said Act on the right of appeal. We also make it clear that Mr. Bose wanted to raise the question of ultra vires of violation of Art. 14 of the 1976 Act. But as we have not allowed him to urge this point at this stage and decided this case as the Act stood in 1973, the above question is left open.

3. The respondents are directed to communicate the final order passed in 1973 as soon as practicable.

4. There will be no order as to cost in this appeal.

5. Preparation of formal decree in this appeal is dispensed with.

B. N. MAITRA, J.— I agree.

Appeal allowed.

(A) Hindu Succession Act (30 of 1956), S. 23 — Applicability — Applies even if Hindu dies intestate leaving one male heir and one female heir. (General Clauses Act (1897), S. 13 (2)).

In view of S. 13 (2) of the General Clauses Act, though S. 23 of the Hindu Succession Act speaks of male heirs, it applies even if a Hindu intestate has left surviving him a male heir and a female heir. Where a Hindu owner of a dwelling house dies intestate leaving a son and a married daughter, the female heir (daughter) cannot ask for partition of house unless male heir (her brother) chooses to divide it or asks for its partition. A. Banerjee and R. Ghose, for Appellant; J. K. Banerjee, for Respondent.

B. N. MAITRA, J.:— The present suit for partition was filed by one Maya Dutta, daughter of Radha Raman Das alias Radha Charan Das, a Hindu governed by the Dayabhaga School of Hindu Law. He was the owner of the disputed property, being premises No. 3B Collins Street, Calcutta. The defendant, Surjya Kumar Das, is her brother. On the 4th April, 1969, she instituted the Suit No. 964 of 1969 against her brother in this Court for a declaration that she and her brother belonged to a joint family governed by the Dayabhaga School of Hindu Law and she was the sole and absolute owner of the premises No. 3B Collins Street, Calcutta, and for other reliefs. Ultimately, the parties came to terms and a decree was passed that the parties were governed by the Dayabhaga School of Hindu Law and they were absolute owners of the disputed property to the extent of a moiety share each. In view of the strained relations between them, it has become inconvenient for her to enjoy the property. She called upon her brother to effect an amicable partition. Her brother did not do so and hence the suit for partition and accounts.

2. The defendant filed a written statement alleging, inter alia, that the plaintiff was out of possession for more than twelve years and so, she could not ask for partition without paying ad valorem court fees. The parties were governed by the Mitakshara School of Hindu Law.

3. The learned Judge of the City Civil Court accepted the plaintiff's version and overruled the defendant's contention regarding the provisions of S. 23 of the Hindu Succession Act. He stated that though the previous Suit No. 964 of 1969 was compromised, it was not registered and hence, that decree had no value in the eye of law. The claim for accounts was not allowed. He held that the parties had moiety share each and, a preliminary decree for partition was passed. The propriety of this decision has been challenged by the defendant in this appeal.

4. It has been contended on behalf of the appellant that the decision of the learned Judge is erroneous because he has stated that S. 23 of the Hindu Succession Act can have no application unless the previous owner left more than one male heir. In this case, the previous male owner, viz., Radha Raman, left only one son and one daughter and hence, the provisions of S. 23 of the Act were out of the way. This decision is incorrect. The defendant is the only daughter of Radha Raman and only sister of the defendant-appellant. So, according to the provisions of S. 23 of the Act, she cannot ask for partition.

5. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondent has stated that the provisions of S. 23 of the Hindu Succession Act will apply and the decision of the learned Judge in this respect is correct.

6. It has already been indicated that the prayer for accounts was negatived. This has not been challenged. So, the first question arises about the interpretation of S. 23 of the Hindu Succession Act. This section says that where a Hindu intestate has left surviving him both male and female heirs specified in clause I of the Schedule and his property includes a dwelling-house wholly occupied by the members of the family, then notwithstanding anything contained in this Act, the right of any such female heir to claim partition of the dwelling house shall not arise until the male heirs choose to divide their respective shares therein; but the female heir shall be entitled to a right of residence therein.

7. The proviso to that section says that where she is the daughter, she will have a right of residence only if she is unmarried or she has been deserted by or has separated from her husband or is a widow. In this case, the plaintiff is not unmarried or has not been deserted by or has been separated from her husband or is a widow, within the meaning of the proviso to S. 23 of the Act.

8. The provisions of S. 23 of the Act were considered by a Bench of this Court. In the case of Arun Kumar Sanyal v. Gnanendra Nath Sanyal reported in 79 Cal WN 305: (AIR 1975 Cal 232), it has been stated that S. 23 of the Act makes it clear that the object of this section is prevention of fragmentation or disintegration of a family dwelling house at the instance of the female heirs to the hardships and difficulties to which the male heirs may be put.

9. The learned Judge of the City Civil Court states that S. 23 of the Act speaks of male heirs. In other words, that section will apply if a Hindu dies intestate leaving more than one male heir. But that court completely overlooked the provisions of S. 13 (2) of the General Clauses Act, which says that in all Central Acts and Regulations unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context, words in the singular shall include the plural and vice versa. In the present Central Act, viz., Hindu Succession Act, there is nothing repugnant in the subject or context. It has been stated in that Bench case that a Hindu may die leaving a son and a number of daughters. If at the instance of any such daughter, the dwelling house is allowed to be partitioned against the wish of the son, he may be put to great hardship. We, therefore, hold that the decision of the learned Judge in this respect is incorrect and the plaintiff (daughter of Radha Raman) cannot ask for partition unless the male heir of Radha Raman (plaintiff's brother) asks for partition of such dwelling house.

10. Then about the observations of the learned Judge that since the previous compromise decree in Suit No. 964 of 1969 was not registered, in view of the case in AIR 1937 All 282, this compromise decree has no value according to the provisions of S. 17 of the Indian Registration Act. Here also, the learned Judge was completely oblivious of the exception engrafted in sub-section (2), clause (vi) of Section 17 of the Indian Registration Act. That clause (vi) of sub-section (2) of S. 17 of the Indian Registration Act indicates that notwithstanding anything in cls. (b) and (c) of sub-sec. (1) of Sec. 17, no question of registration arises in respect of any decree or order of a court except a decree or order expressed to be made on a compromise and compromising immoveable property other than that which is the subject-matter of the suit or proceeding. In the case of Nathram v. Latif in 39 Cal WN 485: (AIR 1935 Cal 478), it has been stated that that clause (vi) applies to a consent decree by which the property in question was dealt with and so it does not require any registration. It has already been indicated that the subject-matter of that suit of 964 of 1969, which was decreed on compromise, was 3B Collins Street, Calcutta, and that is also the subject-matter of the present litigation. In the cases in AIR 1954 SC 82 and AIR 1954 SC 352 it has been stated that such decision operates as estoppel, not as res judicata. So, no further discussion on this is called for because that compromise decree operates as estoppel and plaintiff's title cannot be challenged.

11. Then about the point that the plaintiff was not in actual possession of the disputed property for more than twelve years and so, the suit was not maintainable without paying ad valorem court-fees. This matter is concluded by several Bench decisions of this Court. In the case reported in 46 Cal WN 561: (AIR 1942 Cal 180) presided over by Sir R. C.

Mitter, it has been stated that in a partition suit, it is essential that a plaintiff should be in possession at the date of the suit either actually or constructively. If he is at the material time in possession of a part of the joint property or if he be not in actual possession of any part of the joint property, but his co-sharer (defendant) is in possession and there is no ouster, the suit is maintainable on a payment of court-fee of Rs. 15 because his co-sharer's possession will constructively be his possession. The same view has been taken by Venkat Ram Iyer, J. in the case reported in AIR 1956 SC 548. There is no ouster or of adverse possession. Moreover by the compromise decree in the Suit No. 964 of 1969, moiety shares of the parties were declared. Hence the question of non-maintainability of the suit does not arise.

12. Now the most important question arises, what is to be done in this suit. It has already been held that S. 23 of the Act applies. Consequently, a female heir, viz., the plaintiff, who is the daughter of Radha Raman, cannot ask for partition, unless her brother (defendant) chooses to divide the dwelling house in question. Until such partition is made by the defendant-respondent, she will have to wait to get her share in the property. No further relief can be claimed. This disposes of all the points that may be raised in this appeal.

13. The appeal is allowed. The judgment and decree appealed against be hereby set aside. It is hereby declared that the parties have a moiety share each in the property in question. But in view of the provisions of S. 23 of the Hindu Succession Act, the plaintiff's claim for partition is dismissed for the present.

14. The parties will bear their own costs.

15. At present, it has been contended on behalf of the appellant that the tenant, who resided in a portion of the house, has surrendered his lease. An application has been filed to that effect. The application be kept on the record.

BANERJEE, J.:— I agree.

Appeal allowed.

ORDER:— The judgment debtor filed an application praying for cancellation of the auction sale regarding the disputed property held on the 5th December, 1977. His allegation was that a preliminary decree for partition was passed and then an appeal filed. This Court issued a Rule staying the further proceedings of the preliminary decree. An interim order was later made absolute. Meanwhile, the decree holder opposite party filed execution and auction purchased the property. The prayer is for cancelling that sale on the ground that the sale held in the case in the face of stay of further proceedings of the preliminary decree, was void and was liable to be set aside.

2. The decree holder opposite party filed an objection.

3. The learned Munsif rejected the application. Hence this revisional application.

4. It has been contended on behalf of the petitioner that law in this respect is well-settled after the Supreme Court decision of Mulraj v. Murti Raghunathji reported in AIR 1967 SC 1386 at p. 1388. It has been stated that an order granting a stay of the execution of the decree against which an appeal has been filed takes effect only from the date when the order is communicated. The interim order passed by this Court is dated 1st June, 1977. The Rule was made absolute on 1st June, 1978. The sale was held on the 5th December, 1977, that is, after the Rule was issued and the interim order passed. The execution proceeding is only a continuation of proceeding under the decree and is not an independent proceeding. If further proceedings of the preliminary decree have been stayed, that order includes a stay of the execution case as well. Hence the sale is liable to be cancelled.

5. The learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the O.P. has referred to the decision of Kabiruddin v. Debi Singh reported in AIR 1935 Nag 16 at page 17 to show that under cl. (3) of R. 5 of O. 41 of Civil P. C. no order for stay of an execution case can be made unless certain conditions are fulfilled, one of which is the furnishing of security. No security was furnished here and hence the execution case was not stayed. The case of Nena Ojha v. Sarbhoo Dutt Ojha in AIR 1921 Pat 328 at page 329 has been cited to show that proceedings held in pursuance of a preliminary decree are proceedings in the suit and not in execution. Since only the further proceedings of the preliminary decree were stayed and no stay order was passed regarding the execution case, the prayer for cancellation of the same cannot be allowed.

6. Order 41, R. 5 (1) of the Civil P. C. shows that an appeal shall not operate as a stay of proceedings under a decree or an order, nor shall execution of the decree be stayed because an appeal has been filed. That Rule is divided into two parts, one regarding stay of proceedings under a decree and another regarding execution of such decree. According to cl. (3) of R. 5, no order for stay for execution can be made unless security is furnished and certain conditions are fulfilled. But there are no such limitations when proceedings under the decree are stayed and not the execution case. O. 41, R. 5, cl. (1) refers both to stay of proceedings and of execution of the decree. In this case, only the proceedings of the preliminary decree and not of the execution case, were stayed. Regarding a sale of such nature, the principles of the cases in (1943) 47 Cal WN 186 : (AIR 1947 Cal 319), (1953) 57 Cal WN 205 : (AIR 1953 Cal 467) and AIR 1953 Cal 116 may be referred to. In the case of Bissesswari v. Horrosunder reported in (1897) 1 Cal WN 226, it has been stated that an order staying execution of a decree against which an appeal is pending is in the nature of a prohibitory order and hence, it takes effect only when it is communicated. If the property is sold before such order is communicated to the court holding sale, such sale is not void and is not a nullity. The Supreme Court has stated that this view is correct. The Supreme Court has further stated that in case of a stay order, as opposed to an order of injunction, the court to which the stay order is addressed does not lose jurisdiction to deal with the execution unless it has knowledge of stay. Even after the order of stay is brought to the court's notice, it has power to set aside proceedings taken between the time when stay order was issued and the time when it was brought to its notice, if it is asked to do so and it considers that it is necessary to take recourse to such action. As stated before, the interim order passed by the Court, that the further proceedings of the preliminary decree be stayed, was communicated to the court below on the 18th June, 1977. But that was an order passed in the suit itself and not regarding the execution of the decree. Consequently, the order passed staying the further proceedings of the preliminary decree cannot include also a stay of the execution case as well. The submissions made on behalf of the petitioner cannot be accepted. The sale held in execution of the decree was therefore a valid one and not a nullity.

7. The Rule is, therefore, discharged. There will be no order as to costs.

Rule discharged.

Civil Rule No. 10836 (W) of 1981, D/-24-9-1981.

(A) Constitution of India, Art. 226 — Locus standi — Aggrieved person — It need not be shown that his individual or personal rights are affected.

In order to maintain an application for a writ in the nature of Mandamus or in the nature of Certiorari or for any other order or directions under Art. 226 of the Constn., it is not sole test to be satisfied that the person making an application must show that any of his individual or personal rights either conferred by part III of the Constn. or by any statute have been infringed illegally by the purported action on the part of the statutory authority. If a person is shown to have a genuine grievance by an action or inaction of the authority to discharge his public duties enjoined upon him by the Act, in that case such person will be an aggrieved person having locus standi to maintain an application for a writ in the nature of Mandamus and or Certiorari against the purported action or inaction on the part of such public authority. In the instant case the impugned notice issued under S. 106 of the T. P. Act terminating the tenancy of the respondents Nos. 6 & 7 now transposed to the category of petitioners has undoubtedly affected the petitioners inasmuch as on the basis of the agreement of sale they have been inducted into the management of the Tea Estate by the lessors, i. e. the transposed petitioners. The petitioners in such a case are aggrieved persons and the application at their instance is therefore maintainable though their proprietary interest has not been affected by the impugned notice and order of the Collector taking possession of the Tea Estate. It is pertinent to refer in this connection that the lessors who are respondents Nos. 6 & 7 to the petition have been transposed to the category of the petitioners and as such it is no longer open to the State to contend that this application is not maintainable as the petitioners' legal rights have not been affected by the impugned notice terminating the tenancy and the impugned order of the Collector taking possession of the Tea Garden.

(C) Transfer of Property Act (4 of 1882), S. 106 — Service of notice on tenant — Effect.

The effect of service of a notice under S. 106 on the tenant is an expression of a desire to terminate the tenancy of the tenant after expiration of the period of notice. This does not mean that after service of notice under S. 106 though the tenancy is determined the tenant can be evicted and or removed from the land under his occupation by the lessor forcibly. The lessor must take recourse to due process of law for ejectment of the tenant, AIR 1924 PC 144, AIR 1961 SC 1570 and AIR 1968 SC 620, Foll.

R. N. Mitra, Samarjit Gupta, for Petitioners; Amal Kr. Dutta, Alok Kr. Ghosh and Soumen Ghosh, for Respondents; A. P. Chatterji and H. N. Das, for the State,

ORDER :— This application is at the instance of the petitioners M/s. Dutta & Associates, a partnership firm and one of the partners of the said firm Shri Gour Pada Dutta challenging the legality and validity of the notice issued under S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act determining the lease in favour of the respondents Nos. 6 & 7 Shri Om Prakash Agarwall and Shri Ajit Kr. Agarwall, subsequently transposed as petitioners, granted by the Government in respect of the Tea Garden named Rungneet Tea Estate (Darjeeling) as well as the notice intimating that possession of the said tea garden has been taken over by the Collector, Darjeeling with effect from 15th of April, 1981 on the failure of the lessee to execute long term lease on payment of the Government dues by 14th April, 1981 as required in the said notice under S. 106 of the T. P. Act. The challenge was thrown on the ground that the notice of termination issued under S. 106 of the T. P. Act was not in accordance with law and as such it did not terminate the lease in favour of the petitioners' vendors and/or assignors, the respondent Nos. 6 and 7 (the transposed petitioners) and the notice of the Collector taking possession of the said tea estate forcibly by executive fiat was wholly illegal and unwarranted.

2. The salient facts of the case as appeared in the averments made in the writ application are as follows. The petitioner No. 1 which is a registered partnership firm having its registered office at Dutta Bhawan, P. O. Siliguri, District Darjeeling, entered into an agreement for sale of Rungneet Tea Estate situated within the District of Darjeeling with the lessors of the said Estate Shri Om Prakash Agarwall and Shri Ajit Kr. Agarwall, the respondents Nos. 6 & 7 for purchase of the said Tea Estate. The said agreement was executed on 29th of March, 1977. On the basis of the said agreement the petitioner firm became entitled to carry on business of the said Tea Estate and to run the management of the said Tea Garden on their own account and they would be liable for all statutory and non-statutory liabilities and costs and expenses etc. relating to and/or arising out of or concerning the said Tea Estate or the business thereof. The petitioner firm was given delivery of possession of the said Tea Estate by the erstwhile owners, the respondents Nos. 6 & 7 (transposed petitioners), since 1977 and since then the petitioner firm was seized and possessed of the said Tea Estate and have been carrying on the business of growing and manufacturing of tea therefrom till the Collector, Darjeeling took possession of the same in April, 1981. It has been stated that the petitioner firm duly paid the consideration money to the lessors, respondents Nos. 6 & 7, for purchase of their leasehold interest and they have also invested a considerable sum of money for the improvement of the said Tea Estate by purchase of manure and pesticides and also for purchase of new plantation in the said Tea Estate. It has also been stated that since 1977 all the plants, machineries, stocks and stores, buildings, furniture, fixtures and fittings of the Tea Estate belonged to the petitioner firm and the petitioner firm used and enjoyed the said Tea Estate without any hindrance or objection, from any quarter. It is stated that the petitioner firm, on the basis of the said agreement, applied for licence for manufacturing of tea in the said Tea Garden to the Superintendent, Central Excise, Darjeeling, to the knowledge and consent of the Government and licence was issued in their favour on 6th April 1977 authorising them to manufacture tea for a period of 3 years ending on 31st December, 1979 in the said Rungneet Tea Estate. This licence has been annexed as annexure 'A' to the petition. It also appears that the State Government by Order No. 6774-L. Ref. D/- 30-5-62 declared under S. 6 (3) of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act that 405.78 acres of land was retainable by the tea garden for its purpose. The rent under sub-sec. (3) of S. 42 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act for the aforesaid area declared retainable was determined on 18-9-74 at Rs. 3635.74 annually; road and P. W. cesses were assessed at Rs. 109.08 each and education cess at Rs. 345.42 paise. It also appears that on 28th of Mar., 1977, the Additional Deputy Commissioner, Darjeeling, respondent No. 3, intimated Shri Om Prakash Agarwall, the respondent No. 6, that the Government had no objection to their handing over the Rungneet Tea Estate by lease or any other form which they might deem proper to M/s. Dutta & Associates (Petitioners), Tea planters and traders, Siliguri. It has also been stated therein that formal sale agreement would not be entered into by the respondents Nos. 6 & 7 with the petitioners till permission for sale had been taken by them from the Additional Deputy Commissioner, Darjeeling. This permission, it has been stated, will only be given if arrears of land revenue and cesses are paid by them. A copy of this letter was sent to the Superintendent, Central Excise, Darjeeling with a note that the Government had no objection to M/s. Dutta and Associates taking over the management of the garden. This has been annexed as annexure 'A' to the affidavit-in-reply on behalf of the petitioner on 24th June, 1981. On 8th Sept., 1977, the petitioner sent a letter to the Deputy Secretary, Land Utilisation and Land Revenue, Government of West Bengal praying for allowing the petitioner to pay the arrears of land revenue on quarterly instalments basis and also for giving necessary permission for transfer of the said Tea Estate in favour of the petitioners by the lessors, the respondents Nos. 6 & 7. This has been annexed as annexure B to the affidavit in reply sworn on behalf of the petitioner. The respondent No. 6 also on 26th of Nov., 1977, addressed a letter to the Additional Deputy Commissioner, Darjeeling, stating that he and his brother, the respondent No. 7 who are the owners of Rungneet Tea Estate have entered into an agreement on 9th of Mar., 1977 for sale of the said Tea Estate to M/s. Dutta and Associates, the petitioners, and requested him to settle the matter of payment of arrear and current land revenue of the said Tea Estate in instalments with the representatives of M/s. Dutta & Associates and also to accept the payment of such land rent for which they did not have any objection since it was to be borne by them. A copy of this letter has been annexed as annexure B to the petition. On 26th December, 1977 the petitioner sent another letter to the Additional Deputy Commissioner, Darjeeling, making a similar request for permitting them to pay on quarterly instalments of one year all arrears of revenue. This letter is also annexed as annexure B to the Affidavit-in-reply. The Additional Deputy Commissioner, Darjeeling, sent a letter on 10th Feb., 1978 to the petitioner No. 1, stating that the lease could not be transferred in full or in part of the Tea Garden without the formal sanction of the Collector as per lease condition in clause No. 13 in reply to the letter of the petitioner dt. 24th June, 1978, requesting the Additional Deputy Commissioner, Darjeeling, to intimate whether any prior permission from authority was necessary for transfer of the Tea Garden. On 29th of Mar., 1978, the petitioner sent a letter to the Additional Deputy Commissioner, Darjeeling intimating that they be permitted to pay the arrears of land revenue by instalments in the manner already applied for by them. This has been annexed as annexure B to the affidavit-in-reply. On 20th of June, 1979, a letter was sent by the Additional Deputy Commissioner, Darjeeling, to the Manager, Rungneet Tea Estate, Darjeeling intimating that in spite of repeated reminders they had not executed the long term lease of 30 years on payment of requisite number of instalments of rents and cess. It has been further stated therein that if they fail to tender payment of Government dues the following consequences would follow:

(1) Certificate proceedings will be instituted, for recovery of Govt. dues if not already instituted,

(2) The Concession or remission of interest on arrear rent and cesses will automatically be withdrawn.

(3) Credit facilities so far given by the various Banks and other agencies will be advised to be stopped.

3. The petitioner sent a reply to the said letter on 20th of Aug., 1979 stating inter alia that as the rent payable by them in respect of the said Tea Garden had been finally determined and the said determination had been communicated to them, they could not take any steps in that respect. It was also stated therein that they be permitted to pay arrear rents by instalments and as such they requested the Additional Deputy Collector, Touzi department, Darjeeling to intimate them about the total amount of Govt. dues for the said Tea Estate in order to enable them to make payment of the said Tea Estate at an early date. This letter was annexed as annexure D to the petition. No reply was given to the said letter by the respondents and on 7th Oct., 1980, a notice has been issued on the proprietor, Rungneet Tea Estate, Darjeeling, Dutta and Associates, Tea Planters and Traders intimating that the lease of the Tea Garden shall stand determined on the expiry of the current year of tenancy namely on the expiry of 14th of April, 1981 and they are requested to make over peaceful possession of the said Tea Garden to the Junior Land Reforms Officer, Special Land Reforms Circle or Executive Magistrate immediately on the expiry of the 14th April, 1980 failing which they will be deemed as trespassers and will also be liable to pay mesne profits till they are evicted in due course of law besides arrears of rent. On 1st of Nov., 1980, the Manager of the petitioner firm sent a letter to the Collector, Darjeeling requesting him to arrange for renewal of the lease in their favour of Rungneet Tea Estate having Touzi No. 32F and to advise them accordingly. On 18th of April, 1981, the Collector of Darjeeling by a notice addressed to the proprietor/Manager, Rungneet Tea Estate, P. O. Darjeeling has intimated that he does hereby take over possession of the Tea Garden known as Rungneet Tea Estate with effect from 15th April, 1981 as they failed to execute long term lease on payment of the Govt. dues by 14th April, 1981 as required in the notice served upon them under S. 106 of the T. P. Act.

4. It is against the impugned notice issued under S. 106 of the T. P. Act and also the notice issued by the Collector, Darjeeling dt. 16th April, 1981 taking over possession of the Tea Garden from 15th April, 1981 this instant writ application was made and a Rule was obtained. There was also an interim order to the effect that the respondents were permitted to maintain status quo as on 28th April, 1981 as regards possession of the petitioner in respect of the said Tea Estate. This interim order was for a period of 10 days with liberty to pray for extension of the interim order with notice to the respondents.

5. The instant application for extension of the interim order as well as the Rule was taken up for consideration with the consent of learned Advocates of both the parties.

6. An affidavit-in-opposition has been sworn by Sri Ranjit Guha, Assistant Secretary, Land and Land Reforms Department, Government of West Bengal on 4th Aug., 1981. In Para. 5 of the said affidavit it has been stated that by order dt. 30-5-62 the State Govt. declared that an area of 405.78 acres of land in respect of Rungeet Tea Garden was retainable for its purpose. It was also stated therein that the rent of the said land declared retainable in the Tea Garden was determined on Sept. 18, 1974 at Rs. 3635.74 annually road and P. W. Cesses and education cesses were also determined by the authorities concerned. In para. 6 of the said affidavit it has been said that the tenants of the Tea Garden within the meaning of Clause 1 of Schedule F to the W. B. Estates Acquisition Rules, 1954 (hereinafter referred to as the said Rules) should have paid the land revenue and cesses at the above rate from 15th April, 1955 up to the current year of payment. The said recorded tenants neither did pay the aforesaid land revenue and cesses at the above rates nor did they conclude any lease in Form I appended to Sch. F of the said Rules. According to Rule 4 of the said rules, the intermediary shall hold land comprising a Tea Garden only on the terms and conditions set out in Sch. F appended to the said Rules. On the recorded tenants having not paid the aforesaid revenue and cesses and also not having concluded the lease in Form I appended to Sch. F the recorded tenants should be deemed not to have retained the land comprising the Tea Garden concerned which had vested in the State under S. 4 of the W. B. Estates Acquisition Act, 1953. In the circumstances, alleged transfer of the Tea Garden by the recorded tenants to the petitioner is void ab initio and non est and has no validity in the eye of law since the alleged transferors had no authority to transfer the vested land of the Government. It has also been submitted that, in the eye of law the petitioners are nothing but trespassers. In Para. 8 of the said affidavit it has been further averred that the petitioner firm had no right, title and interest in the Garden. Therefore the question of informing him about the payable amount of rent does not arise. Sri Om Prakash Agarwall was duly informed by the Collector for payment on account of rent and cesses as determined under the W. B. Estates Acquisition Act in due time but without any response from his end. It has also been stated in Para. 10 of the said affidavit that the petitioner firm was never the owner of the tea garden nor was the firm a lessee in respect of the same. The petitioners had no authority to run and manage the tea garden. It has been further stated in para. 11 of the said affidavit that no land revenue and cesses were ever paid in respect of the tea garden in question since 1955-56, i. e., from the date of vesting and no lease was executed for the garden in terms of Cl. 1 of Sch. F to the said Rules or at all. It has been further stated in the said affidavit in para. 14 that the respondents had no right and title to the tea garden, in view of the fact that they not having paid the rent and land revenue and cesses settled under S. 42 (2) of the Act and not having concluded any lease with the Govt. in terms of Cl. 1 of Sch. F to the said Rules, the respondents 6 and 7 must be deemed not to have retained the land comprised in the tea garden. As such any agreement made in respect of the tea garden with the petitioners by the respondents Nos. 6 and 7 is not valid. It has also been stated in Para. 16 of the said affidavit that no approval was ever granted to the petitioners to become a sub-lessee or assignee or transferee of any lease granted by the respondent Nos. 2 and 3. It has been further submitted that as a matter of abundant caution the petitioners though have no right or title to possess the property still the Collector, Darjeeling served a notice under S. 106 of the T. P. Act on the petitioners. The petitioners therefore are trespassers in the eye of law and the petitioners were not entitled to any notice under S. 106 of the T. P. Act as there was no valid and subsisting lease either in favour of the petitioners or their assignors. It has been further stated that the possession of the Tea Garden was taken over in accordance with law. The other portion of the affidavit are not necessary or relevant for the purpose of determination of this rule and as such they are not mentioned hereinbefore.

7. An affidavit-in-opposition was also affirmed by Sri Anil Kumar Dutta a permanent employee of the Tea Board of India, the respondent No. 4 stating inter alia that one Mr. B. L. Tamang, Amin, ADC's office went on 16-4-1981 with Collector's notice for serving on either to the proprietor or the Manager of Rungneet Tea Estate but both the Manager and the proprietor of the Garden were not present. The Assistant Manager who was found in the factory expressed his inability to receive the notice as he had no authority. Thereafter Sri Rai and other workers came to the office and the Collector's notice was pasted in the notice Board by Mr. Tamang in the presence of the persons therein. The possession of the Garden was thus taken over by the Government and the same was handed over by Sri B. L. Tamang, the representative of the Collector to the officer on special duty of the Tea Corporation and thereafter on the same day the certificate of possession was signed by the Additional Deputy Commissioner, Darjeeling on behalf of the Government and the authorised representative of Tea Corporation, Darjeeling. It has been stated that the Tea Development Corporation, the respondent 4, has spent considerable sum of money in the shape of payment of wages of workers and the staffs and also for purchase of coal, tea chests necessary for carrying on the tea business in the said tea garden.

8. Mr. Rabindra Nath Mitra, the learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the petitioners submitted in the first place that the impugned notice under S. 106 of the T. P. Act, which was addressed to the Proprietor, Rungneet Tea Estate, Dutta and Associates is not a proper and valid notice as contemplated under S. 106 of the Act for two reasons: firstly, the notice does not terminate the tenancy of the respondents Nos. 6 and 7 with the end of the year of the tenancy as the lease commenced on and from 1st day of April, 1948 and therefore the end of year of the tenancy will be 31st March, of the year in which the lease is terminated. In this case as the notice was given on 10th Oct., 1980, terminating the tenancy of the expiry of the 14th April, 1981, the notice, it is submitted, is not a valid notice terminating the tenancy. Secondly, the lease was not terminated as no notice under S. 106 of the T. P. Act was served on respondents Nos. 6 and 7. It has been next submitted that the provisions of S. 111 (g) of the T. P. Act, cannot be invoked as no notice was given expressing the lessee's intention to determine the lease by forfeiture for violation of any terms of the lease. It has been next submitted that even assuming for argument's sake that the notice under S. 106 of the T. P. Act has been validly issued terminating the tenancy of the respondents Nos. 6 and 7 still then the respondents cannot take possession forcibly as has been done in this case without bringing an action for eviction of the tenants in accordance with law. As this has not been done, it has been therefore submitted that the notice issued by the Collector, Darjeeling, that possession of the Tea Garden has been taken over by executive fiat is wholly illegal and arbitrary and such taking over of possession is liable to be set aside. It has been further submitted that the cause of terminating the tenancy is the non-payment of arrear rents as appears from the notice under S. 106 of the T. P. Act served by the Collector. The petitioner or for that matter the respondents Nos. 6 and 7 (transposed petitioners) being willing to pay the arrear rents the notice is waived and possession cannot be taken on the basis of this notice.

9. Mr. Arun Prakash Chatterjee, learned Standing Counsel appearing on behalf of the State respondents Nos. 1 to 3 has submitted that petitioners 1 and 2 who claimed to be managing the tea estate on the basis of an agreement of sale executed in their favour by the respondents Nos. 6 and 7, the lessees of the tea estate in question, have no locus standi to maintain this writ application as having no legal right in respect of this tea garden and the impugned notice under S. 106 of the T. P. Act and the impugned order taking possession of the said tea estate by the Collector, Darjeeling do not, in any way, affect their right, title or interest in the said tea garden. It has also been submitted by Mr. Chatterjee, the learned Standing Counsel, that an agreement of sale does not create any title or interest in the property unless a deed of sale has actually been executed in favour of the petitioners by the Agarwalla, the respondents 6 and 7 now transposed as petitioners Nos. 3 and 4. Therefore, this writ application at the instance of the petitioners is not maintainable. Mr. Chatterjee has next contended that the petitioners being not a tenant the notice under S. 106 of the T. P. Act was not required to be served on them for terminating the tenancy. It has also been submitted that the tenancy of the lessees, the transposed petitioner Nos. 3 and 4 ended already by not exercising the option for renewal of the lease and by non-payment of rent. No notice, according to Mr. Chatterjee is necessary to be served for terminating the tenancy as required under S. 106 of the T. P. Act and the impugned notice under S. 106 of the T. P. Act is unnecessary. Mr. Chatterjee has submitted next that the leasehold interest of the petitioners Nos. 3 and 4, the lessees under the Government, vested in the State on the issuance of notification under S. 4 of the W. B. Estates Acquisition Act. Under S. 6 (i) (f) of the said Act the Tea Garden in question, i. e., Rungneet Tea Estate was retained by the intermediaries, respondent Nos. 6 and 7, and there has been a determination under S. 6 (3) of the Act by the appropriate authority determining that an area of 405.78 acres of land are retainable by the tea estate for the purpose of the Tea Garden etc. It has been submitted that after the date of vesting of the intermediary interest of the respondents Nos. 6 and 7 in the said Tea Estate in the State of West Bengal they became direct tenants under the State of West Bengal, the respondent No. 1 only in respect of land determined under S. 6 (3) of the W. B. Estates Acquisition Act to be retainable. Under R. 4 of the W. B. Estates Acquisition Rules 1954 the intermediary having not paid the land revenue as determined by the concerned authorities and having not executed any lease in form No. I appended to Sch. F to the said Rules the recorded tenants should be deemed not to have retained the lands comprising the tea garden concerned and his interest vested in the State under S. 4 of the Act. It has also been submitted that by such non-payment of rent and non-execution of any lease in form No. I the tenancy automatically came to an end. There was no illegality on the part of the State to take possession of the tea garden and more so when such possession was taken without any opposition from the side of the respondents Nos. 6 and 7 or from their managers after terminating their tenancy by the impugned notice under S. 106 of the T. P. Act. It has, therefore, been submitted that in these circumstances the argument that the possession of the Tea Estate has been taken by the executive fiat without taking recourse to the due process of law is not sustainable and decisions cited to that effect are not also applicable in this case. This Rule, therefore, it is submitted, is liable to be discharged.

10. Mr. Amal Kumar Dutta, the learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the Tea Development Corporation, the respondent No. 4, submitted that the petitioners 1 and 2 did not acquire any right, title or interest in the said tea estate as the Government did not grant permission for assignment of the lease and/or for transfer of the leasehold interest of the leasehold interest of the respondent Nos. 6 and 7 in favour of the petitioners. It has also been submitted that on the basis of the alleged agreement of sale they did not acquire any right, title or interest in the said property and as such they are not competent to challenge the impugned notice under S. 106 of the T. P. Act as well as the order issued by the Collector taking possession of the tea garden. It has been further submitted that the tenancy of the respondents Nos. 6 and 7 was duly determined by the notice under Section 106 of the T. P. Act and possession was taken peacefully of the said tea estate by the Collector and the same was handed over by him to the Tea Development Corporation on 16th April, 1981. The Manager employed by the petitioners has been employed as managers in respect of the tea gardens by the Tea Development Corporation, respondent No. 4 and as such it has been submitted by Mr. Dutta that for suppression of material facts the rule shall be discharged. Some decisions were cited at the Bar on this score.

11. Mr. Soumen Ghosh, learned Advocate appearing on behalf of the respondents Nos. 6 and 7 submitted that respondents Nos. 6 and 7 were the lessees in respect of the Tea Garden under the Govt. and in accordance with the provisions of S. 6 (2) proviso of the W. B.

Estates Acquisition Act they shall be deemed to be tenants on the same terms and conditions as embodied in the lease granted in their favour. It has been further submitted that in Cl. 10 (I) of the Indenture of Lease it has been specifically provided that the lessee shall be entitled to renewal of lease for a further period of 30 years and subsequent renewals for similar periods in perpetuity. Therefore this lease in favour of his clients continues and cannot be taken to be determined by efflux of time or on failure on the part of the respondents Nos. 6 and 7 to execute the lease in the prescribed form No. 1 of Sch. F appended to the W. B. Estates Acquisition Rules as the same is not applicable to this case. It has also been submitted by Mr. Ghosh that the respondents Nos. 6 and 7 on receiving consideration from the petitioners executed an agreement of sale in their favour in respect of this Tea Estate and handed over the management of the Estate the purpose of running of the Tea Estate as well as of manufacture of tea in the said Estate to the petitioners. The final deed of sale could not be completed because of the non-grant of permission by the Collector, Darjeeling to the said transfer. After the close of argument an application was filed by the respondents Nos. 6 & 7 for transposing them to the category of the petitioners in the main writ petition on 2nd Sept., 1981. The said application was heard on 16th of Sept., 1981 and was allowed. Accordingly, the respondents Nos. 6 & 7 were transposed to the category of petitioners.

12. It is pertinent to consider the preliminary question raised as to the maintainability of this rule at the instance of the petitioners 1 and 2 who, it is submitted, having acquired no right, title and interest in the Tea Estate in question are not competent to maintain this application as the impugned notice under S. 106 of the T. P. Act and the order of the Collector, Darjeeling taking possession of the garden do not, in any way, impinge upon any of their legal rights. As such they have no locus standi to come before this writ court. Of course, in coming before the writ court with an application for a writ in the nature of Mandamus or for certiorari or for any other proper writ or order one has to satisfy the court that he has a legal right which is a judicially enforceable right and this right has been affected by an order made by the public authority to his prejudice. This has been observed in AIR 1977 SC 276 M. S. Jain's case. This view, however, has been widened by the latter pronouncement of the Supreme Court in AIR 1966 SC 828 Venkateswara Rao v. State of Andh Pra and in AIR 1976 SC 578 at p. 581 Jasbhai Motibhai Desai v. Basir Ahmed in para. 12 where it has been held that in order to have the locus standi to invoke certiorari jurisdiction, the petitioner should be an "aggrieved person" and in a case of defect of jurisdiction, such a petitioner will be entitled to a writ of certiorari as a matter of course, but if he does not fulfil that character, and is a 'Stranger', the Court will in its discretion, deny him this extraordinary remedy, save in very special circumstances. This takes us to the further question: Who is an "aggrieved person"? And what are the qualifications requisite for such a status? The expression "aggrieved person" denotes an elastic, and, to an extent, an elusive concept. It cannot be confined within the bounds of a rigid, exact and comprehensive definition. At best, its features can be described in a broad tentative manner. Its scope and meaning depends on diverse variable factors such as the content and intent of the statute of which contravention is alleged, the specific circumstances of the case, the nature and extent of the petitioner's interest, and the nature and extent of the prejudice or injury suffered by him. English Courts have sometimes put a restricted and sometimes a wide construction on the expression "aggrieved person". However, some general tests have been devised to ascertain whether an applicant is eligible for this category so as to have the necessary locus standi or 'standing' to invoke certiorari jurisdiction.

13. Following this decision this Court has held in Re: Monoranjan Maity v. District School Board decided on 31-3-1981: (1981 Lab IC NOC 179) that in order to maintain an application for a writ in the nature of Mandamus or in the nature of Certiorari or for any other order or directions under Art. 226 of the Constn. it is not sole test to be satisfied that the person making an application must show that any of his individual or personal rights either conferred by Part III of the Constitution or by any statute has been infringed illegally by the purported action on the part of the statutory authority. If a person is shown to have a genuine grievance by an action or inaction of the authority to discharge his public duties enjoined upon him by the Act, in that case such person will be an aggrieved person having locus standi to maintain an application for a writ in the nature of mandamus and/or Certiorari against the purported action or inaction on the part of such public authority. In this case undoubtedly the impugned notice issued under S. 106 of the T. P. Act terminating the tenancy of the respondents Nos. 6 and 7 now transposed to the category of petitioners has undoubtedly affected the petitioners inasmuch as on the basis of the agreement of sale they have been inducted into the management of the said Tea Estate by the lessors, i. e., the Agarwalla, the transposed petitioners. The petitioners in such a case are aggrieved persons and this application at their instance is therefore maintainable though their proprietary interest has not been affected by the impugned notice and order of the Collector taking possession of the Tea Estate. It is pertinent to refer in this connection that the lessors who are respondents Nos. 6 and 7 to the petition have been transposed to the category of the petitioners and as such it is no longer open to the State to contend that this application is not maintainable as the petitioners' legal rights have not been affected by the impugned notice terminating the tenancy and the impugned order of the Collector taking possession of the said Tea Garden. Therefore this contention raised on behalf of the State respondents by the learned Standing Counsel is devoid of any merit and hence it is overruled.

14. The next question that poses itself for consideration is whether the notice under S. 106 of the T. P. Act is a valid and proper notice duly terminating the tenancy of the transposed petitioners. To effectually deal with this question it is necessary to consider in this connection what is the nature of the tenancy, that is, whether the transposed petitioners, that is, Om Prakash Agarwalla and Ajit Kumar Agarwalla, the admitted lessees in respect of the Rungneet Tea Estate were holding over under Section 116 of the T. P. Act or not. In the instant case the lease was entered between the Government of West Bengal with the assignor of the transposed petitioners on 24th of Nov., 1948 for a term of 30 years from the 1st day of April 1948. There is also a clause giving option to the lessee to have renewal of this lease for a period of 30 years and to renewals for similar period for perpetuity subject to the rules and the terms and conditions of this lease and to such clause as the Govt. may from time to time found it necessary to add on the renewal of a lease etc. This has been mentioned in sub-cl. III (I) of Cl. 10 of the Indenture of lease. According to the said terms the lease expired on 31st March, 1978 and the notice of termination of lease was issued by the Collector, Darjeeling only on 7th Oct., 1980 terminating the tenancy. Therefore, it is evident that the transposed petitioners, that is, the Agarwallas have been in possession of the said Tea Estate as a tenant after the determination of the term of the lease. It has been submitted by Mr. Mitra, learned Advocate, appearing on behalf of the petitioners that the lessees remained in possession in accordance with the terms of the renewal clause as tenant on the same terms and conditions as embodied in the Indenture of lease and they are not continuing in possession as a tenant from year to year that is holding over under S. 116 of the T. P. Act. This submission of Mr. Mitra, in my opinion, has to be upheld in view of the decision of this Court in (1964) 68 Cal WN 1036 : (AIR 1965 Cal 55) Satadal Basini v. Lalit Mohan De the facts of which are in pari materia with the facts of this case. It has been observed that when a tenant under a 20 years' lease with a renewal clause, continues his possession after expiry of the said lease his continuance of possession will be deemed to be under the renewal clause though there will not be any express exercise of the said renewal. His rights in the leasehold land would be deemed to have flowed from the registered lease for 20 years and such cases will be outside the mischief of clause of section 2 (5) of the Calcutta Thika Tenancy Act. In the instant case the lease expired on 31st March, 1978 but the Agarwallas, that is, transposed petitioners, remained in possession of the property on the basis of the renewal clause though the option was not expressly exercised. Therefore the possession of the lessors that is the Agarwallas after the expiry of the term of the lease is on the basis of the renewal clause, that is, on the terms and conditions as mentioned in the registered lease for 30 years. It cannot be said that they were holding over the said Tea Garden under the provisions of Section 116 of the T. P. Act.

15. Therefore the transposed petitioners are continuing in possession as tenants on the said same terms and conditions as specified in the Indenture of lease under the Government of West Bengal. It is next to be considered what is the effect of the service of a notice terminating the tenancy of the transposed petitioners by the impugned notice issued by the Collector, Darjeeling on 7th of Oct., 1980. S. 111 (h) of the T. P. Act provides that a lease of immovable property determines on the expiration of a notice to determine the lease, or to quit, or of intention to quit, the property leased, duly given by one party to the other. This provision brings into operation the requirement of S. 106 of the T. P. Act which specifically provides for determination of lease of immovable property for agricultural and manufacturing purposes in the absence of a contract by 'six months' notice expiring on the end of the year of the tenancy. The effect of service of a notice under S. 106 on the tenant is an expression of a desire to terminate the tenancy of the tenant after expiration of the period of notice. This does not mean that after service of notice under S. 106 of the T. P. Act though the tenancy is determined the tenant can be evicted and/or removed from the land, in this case the Tea Garden under his occupation by the lessor, that is, the Government of West Bengal forcibly and the lessor through the Collector of Darjeeling cannot take possession of the Rungneet Tea Estate without taking recourse to due process of law for ejectment of the tenant, that is, the transposed petitioners, from the Tea Garden as has been done in this case. It has been tried to be submitted on behalf of the State that after termination of the tenancy of the lessees, that is, Agarwallas, the State of West Bengal is competent to take possession of the Tea Garden from the Agarwallas who are no better than trespassers after the termination of the tenancy and the Collector, Darjeeling, has rightly taken over possession of the Tea Garden known as Rungneet Tea Estate with effect from 15th April, 1981 on the lessees's (Transposed petitioners) failure to pay Govt. dues by 14th April, 1981 as required by the notice under S. 106 of the T. P. Act. In the case of Midnapur Zemindari Co. Ltd. v. Naresh Narayan Roy, (1924) 51 Ind App 293 at p. 293 at p. 299 : (AIR 1924 PC 144), it has been observed that in India persons are not permitted to take forcible possession; they must obtain such possession as they are entitled to

through a Court. The plaintiff was not entitled to get possession by ousting his then co-sharers, Robert Watson & Co, from possession of lands which they were entitled to hold in common as co-sharers. "The Supreme Court in the case of Bishan Das v. State of Punjab, (AIR 1961 SC 1570) observed that the petitioners who were alleged to have built a Dharmasala, temple and shops out of the funds of the joint family consisting of himself and the petitioners in 1909 on Govt. lands with the permission of the authority for the benefit of the travelling public, could not be forcibly dispossessed from the same by the Sub-Divisional Officer and possession of the same could not be handed over to the Municipal Committee, Barnala by executive fiat without taking recourse to due process of law. It has been further held that the Dharmasala, temple and shops could not be treated as belonging to the State irrespective of the question whether the trust created was of a public nature. A trustee even of a public trust can be removed by an executive fiat. This view has been reiterated in a subsequent decision of the Supreme Court in AIR 1968 SC 620 at p. 623 in paragraphs 10 and 13 where it has been held that possession cannot be taken forcibly without recourse to due process of law. A lessor is not entitled to use force to throw out his lessee. Therefore, the order of the Collector, Darjeeling dt. 16th April, 1981 taking over possession of the Tea Garden known as Rungneet Tea Estate with effect from 15th April, 1981 is wholly illegal, bad and unwarranted. Another question requires to be considered in connection with the validity of the notice under S. 106 is whether the impugned notice dt. 7th Oct., 1980 issued by the Collector, Darjeeling determining the lease of the Tea Garden in favour of the transposed petitioners on the expiry of 14th April, 1981 is a valid and proper notice according to the provisions of S. 106 of the T. P. Act or not. I have already mentioned hereinbefore that the tenancy on the basis of the Indenture of the lease entered between the parties on 24th Nov., 1948 for a period of 30 years undoubtedly expired on 31st March, 1978, as the lease is for agricultural purposes 6 months' notice was required to be served on the lessee as has been done in this case. This notice has to terminate the tenancy on the expiry of 6 months with the end of a year of the tenancy. The meaning of the words "year of the tenancy" was considered by a Special Bench of this Court in (1960) 64 Cal WN 641 Indian Iron and Steel Co. Ltd. v. Baker Ali where it was held that a year of the tenancy means a year or a period of twelve months according to the calendar of the particular tenancy, starting with its date of commencement or any anniversary thereof. 'A year of the tenancy' in the first instance, a period of twelve months according to the Calendar, governing the particular tenancy commencing with the date of commencement of the said tenancy according to the said calendar. In this case the tenancy commenced from the 1st April, 1948. Therefore the impugned notice dt. 7th Oct., 1980 as mentioned in annexure E to the petition terminating the tenancy of the transposed petitioners on the expiry of the 14th April, 1981 being not a 6 months' notice expiring with the end of the year of the tenancy is invalid and as such the tenancy has not been duly terminated by the said notice and the lease had not been determined in accordance with the provisions of S. 111 (h) of the T. P. Act. Therefore, the tenancy has not been determined by a notice under S. 106 of the T. P. Act. As the transposed petitioners, that is, the lessees are continuing in possession on the basis of the renewal clause as embodied in the Indenture of lease on the terms and conditions mentioned therein such a tenancy cannot be validly terminated under provisions of S. 111 (h) of the T. P. Act as there has been no determination of the period mentioned in the renewal clause. In such circumstances the tenancy being not validly determined the argument of the learned Standing Counsel that the Government or for that the Collector, Darjeeling by issuance of an order dt. April 16, 1981 as mentioned in Annexure D to the petition has validly taken over possession of the Tea Garden known as Rungneet Tea Estate with effect from 15th April, 1981 and handed over possession of the same to respondent No. 4, the Tea Development Corporation is wholly without any substance and not sustainable in law.

16. It has been submitted on behalf of the petitioner that the notice under S. 106 of the T. P. Act is bad as the transposed petitioners, that is, the lessees, were holding the disputed tea garden on the basis of the renewal clause on the terms and conditions embodied in the lease deed and as such the provisions of S. 106 of the T. P. Act are not applicable to this case and the impugned notice does not determine the tenancy. In this regard reference has been made to a decision of the Supreme Court in AIR 1931 SC 1550, Smt. Shanti Devi v. Amal Kumar Banerjee. In this case there was a registered lease in respect of a cinema theatre known as Santi House at Sainthia in the district of Birbhum for a term of four years with a covenant of two renewals of three years each. In 1970 an ejectment suit was brought on the ground that the lease had expired by efflux of time and also pleaded in the alternative that he had sent a notice for determining his tenancy under S. 106 of the T. P. Act. The deponent pleaded that no notice was served on him. The Court below held that the lease was validly determined by a notice to quit and decreed the suit. The High Court reversed that decision of the trial Court as well as of the lower Appellate Court by holding that service of notice under Section 106 of the T. P. Act on the defendant had not been proved and, as such the suit was not maintainable. It was held by the Supreme Court that the lease being for a definite term and, therefore, expired by efflux of time by reason of S. 111 (a) of the Transfer of Property Act, The determination of the tenancy by notice under S. 106 of the said Act was not necessary as there was no allegation by the deponent that he was holding as a tenant under S. 116 of the Act. In this case also the lessees have been possessing the tea garden on the basis of the renewal clause and as such there has been no determination of the lease by efflux of time. Moreover, the notice under Section 106 of the T. P. Act terminating the tenancy was not a valid notice as has been held hereinbefore. This notice therefore, did not determine the lease and the tenancy subsists,

17. It was tried to be contended on behalf of the respondent No. 4 by Mr. Amal Kr. Dutta, learned Advocate that the writ application should be dismissed for suppression of material facts as it has been stated in the petition that the possession of the Tea Garden were still with the petitioners and all the workers of the Tea Estate were employed as the workers of the Tea Estate as usual on 27th April, 1981 when this application was affirmed and moved and on the basis of this averment an interim order of maintaining status quo on that day as on 24-8-81 was obtained. In support of this submissions he referred to some decisions of this Court. I am not inclined to accept this submission for the simple reason that there was no material suppression of facts in the writ application and the interim order was not obtained on its basis by misleading the Court. On the other hand, there is a specific averment in para. 22 of the petition that on 16th April, 1981 the petitioner was served with the impugned notice informing that the respondent No. 2 took over the possession of the Tea Garden with effect from 15th April, 1981. In the circumstances, it cannot be said that there has been a material suppression of facts.

18. In the reasons aforesaid the contentions raised on behalf of the petitioner having succeeded the Rule succeeds and is made absolute.

Let a writ of Mandamus be issued commanding the respondents to forbear from giving effect or further effect to the notice mentioned in annexure E to the purported petition D/- 10th Oct., 1980 as well as the impugned order of the Collector, Darjeeling D/- 16th April, 1981 as mentioned in annexure G to the petition.

Let a writ of Certiorari be issued directing the respondents to quash and cancel and set aside the impugned notice as well as the impugned order mentioned hereinbefore.

There will, however, be no order as to costs.

Respondent No. 4 is hereby directed to hand over possession of the Tea Estate, locally known as Rungneet Tea Estate, to the petitioners in course of a week from today.

The prayer for stay is refused.

Rule made absolute.

S. K. Kundu, for Appellants; S. C. Roy, for Respondent.

CHITTATOSH MOOKERJEE, J.:— Upendra Nath Das was a resident of Paharpore Road, Garden Reach, 24 Parganas. On 11th Jan., 1970 Upendra died. He had married twice. His first wife had predeceased Upendra. Three sons and one daughter begotten by his first wife and also his second wife, Sarala Bala, four sons and two daughters, who were issues of his second marriage were alive at the time of the death of Upendra. Sarala Bala Dasi, the widow of Upendra, had filed an application in the court of the learned District Judge, 12th Court, 24 Parganas for granting probate to the last will and testament of Upendra dt. 3rd Jan., 1970. The testator by the said alleged will had purportedly provided that after his death his second wife, Sarala Bala, Panchugopal, Rabindra and Sibnath, his three sons by his second wife, would get his property at Z-143, Paharpore Road, Garden Reach in equal shares and in absolute right. Sarala Bala was enjoined to perform the marriages of the two minor daughters out of the income of the property and, if necessary, by selling some properties. His surviving sons and daughters by his first wife were not given any legacy under the will of Upendra. Sarala Bala was appointed as the executrix of the will of Upendra.

2. The present appellants who were sons of Upendra by his first wife, had entered caveat, inter alia, contending that the will in question was a forged one and that at the material time Upendra had no testamentary capacity and that the will was not duly executed and attested. Thereupon, the court below followed the procedure of contentious cases.

3. The learned Additional District Judge, 11th Court, Alipore upon consideration of the evidence has decreed the suit in favour of the plaintiff and has directed that Sarala Bala be granted probate to the last will of Upendra Nath Das. Being aggrieved thereby, the appellants have filed the present appeal.

4. In our view, the learned Additional District Judge has erred in law in approaching from a wrong legal standpoint the question whether the propounder had satisfactorily proved that the disputed will was duly executed by Upendra and was attested according to law. The learned Additional District Judge also wrongly placed the burden of proof upon the defendants to establish that Upendra had no testamentary capacity or that he did not execute the will. It has been the consistent view of the courts that as the case of proof of other documents so in the case of proof of wills it would be idle to expect proof with mathematical certainty. The test to be applied would be the usual test of the satisfaction of the prudent mind in such matters. But there is one important feature which distinguishes will from other documents. Unlike other documents the will speaks from the death of the testator, and so, when it is propounded or produced before a court, the testator who has already departed the world cannot say whether it is his will or not; and this aspect naturally introduces an element of a solemnity in the decision of the question as to whether the document propounded is proved to be last will and testament of the departed testator. Ordinarily when the evidence adduced in support of the will is disinterested, satisfactory and sufficient to prove the sound and disposing state of the testator's mind and his signature as required by law, Courts would be justified in making a finding in favour of the propounder. In other words, the onus on the propounder can be taken to be discharged on proof of the essential facts. There may, however, be cases in which the execution of the will may be surrounded by suspicious circumstances. The presence of such suspicious circumstances naturally tends to make the initial onus very heavy and unless it is satisfactorily discharged, the courts would be reluctant to treat the document as the last will of the testator. A propounder of the will has to prove the due and valid execution of the will and if there are any suspicious circumstances surrounding the execution of the will, the propounder must remove the said suspicions from the mind of the court by cogent and satisfactory evidence (vide the observations of Gajendragadkar, J. in H. Venkatachala Iyengar v. B. N. Thimmajamma, AIR 1959 SC 443, Purnima Debi v. Khagendra Narayan Deb, AIR 1962 SC 567 and Ramchandra Rambox v. Champabai (AIR 1965 SC 354)). The judicial decisions have also laid down that all the circumstances which would be regarded as suspicious cannot be precisely defined or exhaustively enumerated. That would be a question of fact in each case. Appearance of the signature, the condition of the testator's mind at the relevant time, the nature of the dispositions made in the will which appear to be unnatural, improbable or unfair, are some of the examples of suspicious circumstances which the court would insist being removed before the document could be accepted as the last will of the testator. When a propounder takes a prominent part in the execution of the will, the same may be treated as a suspicious circumstance attending the execution of the will.

5. In our view, the plaintiff had failed to remove the suspicious circumstances surrounding the execution and attestation of the will of Upendra. Although, according to the statements made in the alleged will, Upendra was aged 77 and was still active and sound in body and mind, it has transpired that Upendra was seriously ill and it had appeared to the propounder. Sarala Bala, that her husband might die. D.W. 1, Prabhat Das, who was an attesting witness, stated that at the relevant time Upendra was unconscious. According to Anath, D.W. 3, a son of Upendra, his father had died as a result of asthma and attack of cold. He was under medical treatment and Sarala Bala admitted that Upendra had executed the will lying on his bed and as his fingers trembled, he did not sit up and sign but put his left thumb impressions in the document. P.Ws. 1 and 2 claimed that sitting in his bed Upendra had affixed his thumb impressions. The propounder and her witnesses denied the evidence on the defendants' side that at the material time Upendra was unconscious and had no mental capacity. It is also admitted that the will was executed and registered on 3rd Jan., 1970 and on 11th Jan., 1970 Upendra had died. The plaintiffs did not examine the physician who had been treating Upendra during his last illness. Thus, they did not give any medical evidence about the physical condition and the state of mind of Upendra at the time of the alleged execution of his will.

6. There were other suspicious circumstances regarding the due execution and attestation of the will by which the surviving sons and daughters of Upendra begotten through his first wife were excluded from inheritance. The court below itself has observed that the provisions of the will were unnatural. There was no evidence to establish the allegation made in the alleged will of Upendra that his sons by his first wife had beaten him and that they had ill-treated Upendra and his second wife. Sarala Bala the second wife of Upendra, in her evidence did not make any such allegation of misbehaviour or ill-treatment against the sons of Upendra by his first wife. Panchanan Chakraborty, P.W. 2 who was described as a neighbour and had attested the will had deposed that he had asked Upenbabu as to why he was not giving property to his sons by his first wife. Upendra allegedly told Panchanan that as they had misbehaved with him and had assaulted him, they had been disinherited. But Panchanan, P.W. 3, admitted that he had not seen Upendra being assaulted or being admitted into a hospital. Therefore, the purported reasons given in the will for excluding Upendra's sons by his first wife were not established and the provisions in the will appeared to be unnatural.

7. The facts and circumstances relating to the preparation of the will of Upendra were also very suspicious. Abdul Karim Ali (P.W. 1) who was previously a Mukteer and now an advocate had allegedly drafted the will of Upendra and he had also attested the left thumb impressions of Upendra in the will. P.W. 1, Abdul Karim Ali, claimed that he practised in the criminal court since 1957.

Previously, he had no acquaintance with Upenbabu (meaning the testator). According to P.W. 1, Prabhat Das, a relation of Upenbabu had contacted him. Although Prabhat Das was an attesting witness to the will, he deposed as a witness in the case on behalf of the defendant. Sarala Bala, the second wife of Upendra, P.W. 2, however, claimed that her husband told her about one month before his death that he would execute a will. She claimed that she had arranged for drafting and registration of the will. She herself went to court and arranged for registration of the will. Although she denied that he had instructed P.W. 1 to prepare the will she claimed that on the date of the registration she had called P.W. 1. She had paid the fees of P.W. 1 and also had borne the expenses of the registration of the will. She called P.W. 1 to draft the will. She told P.W. 1 that Upendra will execute his will in their favour and not in favour of her sons by his first wife. Thus, Sarala Bala, P.W. 2, herself stated that she had taken a leading part in the matter of drafting and registration of will under which she was one of the beneficiaries and she was also the executrix of the will. Further, there were serious contradictions between the evidence of P.W. 1 and P.W. 3 as to who had instructed P.W. 1 to draft the will of Upendra. P.W. 1, Abdul Karim Ali, did not mention that it was Sarala Bala who had approached and had given him instructions and also paid his fees.

8. The evidence of P.W. 1 about the drafting and the execution of the will does not appear to be trustworthy. P.W. 1 claimed that according to Upen's instruction received at the latter's house, he had drafted the will and the draft was typed. The draft of the will or the notes made by P.W. 1 were not produced in the court below. There was no explanation for their non-production. P.W. 1 could not even recall the name of the typist who had typed the draft and the final copy of the will. According to P.W. 1, one Kundu used to type his papers. Ratan Gopal Kundu who had signed as the typist of the said will was not examined as a witness. In the absence of any explanation an adverse presumption ought to be drawn up for not examining him. P.W. 1 claimed that he went to Upen's place with the typed draft. But in cross-examination he admitted that the drafted will was handed over to Prabhat Das for explaining the same to Upendra. In his examination-in-chief, P.W. 1 had stated that the will was executed in the presence of witnesses, Registrar and the other witnesses. He had then stated "on that day I did not read over and explain the document to Upendra again". But during his cross-examination, PW 1 claimed that he had read over the document to the executant at the time of execution. The other witnesses of the plaintiff do not corroborate him. Thus, there was no reliable evidence that either the draft will or the final copy of the same were even read over and explained to Upendra.

9. Another very suspicious circumstance was, that, although Upendra was admittedly a literate person, the Will was not signed by him. But at the right hand corner of each page of the will there were the alleged left thumb impressions of Upendra attested by PW 1, Abdul Karim Ali. Upendra had neither signed nor affixed his left thumb impression below the concluding sentence of the will. Although it was recited therein ".....in sound health, in good faith, in full possession of senses, without other request on my own accord, I do sign, execute duly according to law his will in the presence of the witnesses after acquainting myself of all the contents of this will and having the same read over". PW 1, Abdul Karim Ali and PW 2, Panchanan Chakraborty, deposed that the fingers of Upendra trembled. He could not sign and put his left thumb impressions on the document. We have already observed that the propounder did not examine the medical practitioner who had been treating Upendra during his last days. It would not be prudent to place reliance upon the evidence adduced on the side of the propounder regarding the circumstances under which Upendra could not sign the will but only put his left thumb impression. PW 1 has admitted that he did not endorse the said fact in the document nor did he advise that Upendra should be medically examined before his will was executed by putting left thumb impression of Upendra.

10. Another curious fact about the execution of the will was that although PW 1 had attested the left thumb impression of Upendra appearing in each page of his alleged will, PW 1 did not attest the left thumb impression of Upendra said to have been affixed at the time of the presentation of the will before the District Registrar on commission. The said left thumb impression was attested by Prabhat Das, DW 1, who, according to PW 1, had approached him for drafting Upen's will. DW 1, Prabhat was an attesting witness and his affidavit was annexed to the application for probate. Prabhat, DW 1, in his evidence in court, however, stated that Upen, who was his paternal uncle, had lost his senses before his death. For 15 days he had remained senseless. He could not move his limbs and could not also speak. No doubt, Prabhat Das, DW 1, appeared to be an extremely unreliable person and hardly any reliance can be placed upon his testimony. But at the same time, we find that the will of Upendra was attested by witnesses upon which no reliance can be placed and the alleged presentation of the will for registration was also made with the help of such an unreliable person. The onus of proof was upon the plaintiff and, therefore, in this state of evidence we are bound to say that the plaintiff has not removed the suspicions attaching to the execution and attestation of the will of Upendra and the registration thereof. When the court's conscience is not satisfied, the probate applied for ought to be refused.

11. In the facts of this case the court below was not justified in observing that the document being registered, the onus was on the opposite party (meaning the defendants) to prove that the testator had no testamentary power at the time of the execution. The Supreme Court in Purnima Debi v. Khagendra Narayan Deb AIR 1962 SC 567 observed that if a will has been registered, that is a circumstance which may, having regard to the circumstances, prove its genuineness. But the mere fact that a will is registered will not by itself be sufficient to dispel all suspicion regarding it where suspicion exists, without submitting the evidence of registration to a close examination. If the evidence as to registration on a close examination reveals that the registration was made in such a manner that it was brought home to the testator that the document of which he was admitting execution was a will disposing of his property and thereafter he admitted its execution and signed it in token, thereof, the registration will dispel the doubt as to the genuineness of the will. But if the evidence as to registration shows that it was done in a perfunctory manner, that the officer registering the will did not read it over to the testator or did not bring home to him that he was admitting the execution of a will or did not satisfy himself in some other way (as, for example, be seeing the testator read in the will) that the testator knew that it was a will the execution of which he was admitting, the fact that the will was registered would not be of much value. Registration may take place without the executant really knowing what he was registering.

12. In the instant case, there were serious discrepancies in the evidence of PWs 1 and 2 regarding the presentation of the will for registration. PW 1 falsely claimed that he had presented the will on behalf of Upen for registration before the District Registrar. According to the endorsement in the Will, the will was presented by Upen, who had affixed his left thumb impression and the same was attested by Prabhat, D.W. 1, and not by P.W. 1, Abdul Karim Ali. There was also material discrepancy in the evidence of P.W. 1 and P.W. 2 regarding the time of registration. According to the endorsement made in the will, it was presented for registration at 2 P.M. of 3rd Jan., 1973. According to P.W. 1, the will was registered at about 4 or 5 P.M. Panchanan Chakraborty, P.W. 2, claimed that he was called at about 12-30 P.M. to attest the will. When he went there, P.W. 1, Prabhat Das, Panchu, Upen's wife, one unknown person and a chap-rashi were present. The left thumb impressions, according to P.W. 2, were put on the document at about 4 P.M. At the same time, P.W. 2, deposed that Upen put his left thumb impressions on the will at 1 P.M. and that the will was not registered in his presence. During cross-examination P.W. 2 claimed that 2/3 days later he came to know that the will had been registered. If the evidence of P.W. 1, Abdul Karim Ali, is to be believed immediately after its execution and the attestation, the will was presented for registration. Therefore, we fail to understand how P.W. 2, Panchanan, could claim that the will was not registered in his presence. In the absence of any evidence on this behalf the trial Court was not justified in observing that the unknown gentleman mentioned by P.W. 2, was the District Registrar. Further, there was no endorsement in the will that the same had been read over and explained to Upendra and that it was brought home to him that the document of which he was admitting execution was a will. There was also no evidence that the Dist. Registrar had satisfied himself that the executant knew that the document was a will,

Therefore, we conclude that the registration of the will appeared to have been done in a perfunctory manner and that therefore registration of the will was not of much value. The District Magistrate was not examined as a witness in the case and he did not endorse upon the will that the same had been read over and explained to the executant. Therefore the Court below was wrong in holding that the will was executed in the presence of the District Registrar.

13. In our view, there were other material infirmities in the matter of execution and attestation of the will. Panchanan, P.W. 2, was described as a neighbour of the deceased Upendra. But he admitted that he had no intimacy with Upen. He could not say how many sons and daughters Upen had by his first wife or by his second wife. According to P.W. 2 himself, at about 12-30 P.M. he was called to attest the will and he did (not?) claim any prior knowledge about Upendra's intention to make a will or about the preparation of the draft. Therefore, he appeared to be a chance-witness. In view of the other contradictions mentioned hereinbefore the presence of P.W. 2 at the time of the execution of the will was not believable. Monoranjan Das, who was one of the four attesting witnesses, was not examined as a witness in the case and no explanation was given by the plaintiff for his non-examination. We have also noted that Prabhat Das, who, according to P.W. 1, took a leading part in the making of the will of Upendra had deposed in court as the defendants' witness. We have already observed that P.W. 1, Abdul Karim Ali, did not appear to be a trustworthy witness. Although he claimed to have both attested the left thumb impressions of Upen and also affixed his signature as a witness in the will. His name appears as the last attesting witness. It may be further pointed out that P.W. 1 materially contradicted P.W. 2 when he stated that the left thumb impressions were put at the time of the execution of the will and the District Registrar was present when the will was executed. All the witnesses and P.W. 1 himself signed in the presence of the District Registrar. The court below was not justified in overlooking these contradictions by observing that the contradictions related to facts of which P.W. 1 spoke from his memory. In our opinion, these contradictions strike at the root of the evidence of P.W. 1.

14. For the foregoing serious infirmities, we conclude that the plaintiff had failed to prove that at the date of the execution of the alleged will, Upendra had testamentary power and that with full knowledge of its contents Upendra had consciously executed the same. Due attestation of the will has not been also proved. The suspicious circumstances surrounding the preparation of the will and its execution and attestation have not been removed by the plaintiff. In these circumstances, the plaintiff was not entitled to obtain probate of the alleged will of Upendra.

15. We, therefore, allow this appeal, set aside the judgment and decree of the trial court and dismiss the suit. In the circumstances of the case, each party would bear their respective costs throughout.

16. No order is passed on the application. The application is disposed of without any order as to costs.

ORDER:— Sarda Debi, the plaintiff, instituted this suit against Pacific Garments the defendant, on or about the 29th of June, 1981, claiming, inter alia, a decree for Rs. 52,937.50 P. interest and costs.

2. The plaintiff's cause of action as appearing from the plaint is, inter alia, that the plaintiff lent and advanced to the defendants, a sum of Rs. 50,000 by a cheque dated the 8th April 1980, solely for the purpose of the business of the defendant. It was agreed that the defendant would repay the said sum with interest at the rate of 15% per annum.

3. On or about the 2nd Jan., 1981, the defendant made over to the plaintiff a cheque for Rs. 50,000 on Canara Bank towards repayment of the said loan. The said cheque was dishonoured by non-payment.

4. The present application of the plaintiff is on a summons dt. the 24th Aug., 1981 returnable on the 1st Sept., 1981 the plaintiff prays that a final judgment be passed against the defendant for the amount claimed in the suit with interest and costs.

5. It is a matter of record that the summons was served on the Advocate on record of the defendant on the 25th Aug. 1981. On the returnable date i.e. the 1st Sept. 1981 the defendant appeared and the matter was adjourned till 15th Sept. 1981. Directions were given for filing of affidavits within the adjourned date. Thereafter the matter was adjourned from time to time. Several directions were obtained in the meantime extending the time for filing of affidavits. The matter was finally heard on the 18th Nov., 1981.

6. Madhushri Gupta, a partner of the defendant has affirmed an affidavit on the 24th Nov. 1981, which has been filed in opposition to this application. It is admitted in this affidavit that the plaintiff had lent and advanced to the defendant the said sum of Rs. 50,000. It is also admitted that the defendant issued a cheque in full and final settlement of the dues of the plaintiff, which was dishonoured. It is, however, alleged that the defendant was informed by the plaintiff of such dishonour, the defendant paid to the plaintiff Rs. 50,000 in cash without receipt. It is alleged further that the said payment was made in cash on the promise of the plaintiff to grant a proper receipt which the plaintiff failed to do.

7. In a further affidavit affirmed on the 25th Nov. 1981 Madhushri Gupta alleges that the plaintiff is a regular and professional money-lender without holding a valid licence under the Bengal Moneylenders' Act. It is contended that, as such, the transaction is illegal, null and void and not binding on the defendant. It is contended further that the application is otherwise not maintainable.

8. At the hearing, learned Advocate for the defendant reiterated the aforesaid contentions of the defendant and also submitted that this application of the plaintiff was not maintainable inasmuch as the plaintiff's summons was not made returnable after giving seven clear days after service of the said summons as required under R. 4 of Chap. XIII A of the Rules of the Original Side of this Court. Learned Advocate contended further that under R. 46 of Chap. XXXVIII of the said Rules the Court no doubt has power to enlarge or abridge the time appointed by the said Rules, but so far as the enlargement is concerned the same might be allowed after the expiration of the time. But so far as the abridgement of time was concerned, the same could only be decided initially and not after the summons had been returned.

9. In support of her contentions learned Advocate for the defendant cited Province of Bengal v. Midnapore Zamindari Co. Ltd., reported in AIR 1945 Cal 341 where a Division Bench of this Court held that the terms of S. 80 of the Code of Civil Procedure were imperative and admitted of no exception or implication and non-compliance of the provisions of the said section would be fatal to the suit and that a suit filed before the expiry of the period of notice must be held to be premature.

10. Learned Advocate for the plaintiff has contended to the contrary. He submitted that in the instant case there was no question of the plaintiff holding a licence at the time when the loan was advanced inasmuch as the said loan was a commercial loan and at the material time the Bengal Moneylenders' Act had not been extended to cover commercial loans. The Bengal Moneylenders' Act was amended sometime in Feb. 1981 after which, commercial loans were brought within the purview of the said Act.
